

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. THE considerations to be attended to in the construction of a work like the present, are—that it should be a faithful and correct epitome of the several Cases of which it purports to give the substance;—that it should contain ALL THE CASES determined within the period of time which it professes to embrace;—that the period at which it commences should be judiciously determined upon;—and that the arrangement should include both the analysis of science, and the technicality of practical habit, so as to suit, with equal readiness, every branch of a profession which has almost every grade of intellectual acquirement.

The execution of the first of these requisites I must submit to the candour of the Profession, with this remark alone, that I have taken every pains and care to render the work in this respect as perfect as possible.

With respect to the Cases admitted, it is right to observe, that, from the period determined upon as a commencement, every reporter has been included without any partiality or undue preference. As the leading object was to make the work useful as a Common Law Digest, I have inserted ALL the Cases determined in the several Courts of Common Law, both in Banc and at Nisi Prius, and the Court of Bankruptcy; and also the Crown Cases reserved: and, with the view of extending its general usefulness, I have made a very full selection of all such determinations in the House of Lords and the several Courts of Equity as appeared to me to be of value in general practice. Besides this, there will be found collected many important notes of Cases, which are taken from the best modern treatises, and which are not elsewhere reported; and the Cases determined in the Court of King's Bench in Ireland, reported by Messrs. Alcock & Napier.

As the enactments of the Legislature have of late made such important alterations in the state of the law, and as so many of the recent cases turn entirely upon the language of the Statutes, it appeared to me that the work could not be considered as at all complete without an abridgment of those enactments; I have, therefore, added, under the proper heads, the Statutes in more or less of an abridged form; but as far as it was possible to do so, I have retained the words of the Legislature.

The year 1756,—the time at which Lord Mansfield became Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench,—was fixed upon as the period of commencement, because only from that period have the Reports been systematically brought down in a regular series to the present time. It presented also an æra, which, besides being of great importance in the view of the lawyer, was so remote, as to bring within the scope of the work many decisions on the first principles and general rules of law, which, having been then clearly defined, are but slightly alluded to in the later reporters; and at the same time so recent, as to avoid the introduction of the old Cases, which, however learned, are not new, either from statutory alteration, or from the changes wrought by time, so much the object of practical reference. I should, however, remark, that, although this is the period from which the Digest professes to commence, yet, wherever any of the cases in a book of Reports were within the time, I have taken the whole of them.

The work has been entirely recast since the former edition, so as to get the Cases upon the same subject under one head. The effect has been not so much an alteration of arrangement, as the accomplishment of the object which was originally in view, but which the necessary difficulty of a first attempt rendered imperfect. There is one alteration which perhaps I should notice:—I have considered the titles PLEADING and PRACTICE as including the whole course of an action at law; to the latter I have allotted all the proceedings previous to the declaration, and again subsequent to the issue; and, to the former, the proceedings from the declaration to the issue, whether connected with what is usually denominated Pleading strictly, or what is more commonly considered as Practice. This change from the usual course enabled me to bring more fully under one view all the Cases connected with the several minor branches of the proceeding: a reference to the head VENUE will sufficiently, I think, show the effect produced.

In the TABLE OF NAMES OF CASES, for the sake of compression, the Cases have been indexed only once.

The Cases published during the time the work has been in the press, down to the present date, have been introduced by way of ADDENDA, where also will be found a few cases inadvertently omitted in their proper places in the body of the Digest.

I cannot omit acknowledging the obligation I am under to my friend, Mr. J. Collyer, of the Equity Bar, for the additional value he has given to the work, by his preparation of the title "WILL."

S. B. HARRISON.

ABATEMENT.

- I. OF ACTION.—See ACTION.
- II. OF PROCEEDINGS IN BANKRUPTCY.—See BANKRUPT.
- III. OF NUISANCES.—See CASE—WAY.
- IV. PLEAS IN.—See PLEADING.

ACCESSORIES.—See CRIMINAL LAW.

ACCIDENT.

- I. LIABILITY IN CONSEQUENCE OF.
- II. TO SERVANTS.—See MASTER AND SERVANT.
- III. TO PAUPERS.—See POOR.

I.—LIABILITY IN CONSEQUENCE OF.

A merely accidental involuntary trespass may be justified. Beckwith v. Shordike, 4 Burr. 2092.

If, in the prosecution of a lawful act, an accident, which is purely so, arises, no action can be supported for an injury arising therefrom. Davis v. Saunders, 2 Chit. 639.

But it seems otherwise where any blame is imputable, though a person be innocent of any intention to injure; as, if he drives a spirited horse improperly, or uses imperfect harness, and the horse takes fright and kills another. Wakeman v. Robinson, 8 Moore, 63; 1 Bing. 213.

The court of C. P., however, refused to grant a new trial, although the judge, after summing up the evidence, told the jury that the defendant was liable even though the accident was unavoidable, and no blame was imputable to him, omitting to direct them to consider whether the accident was unavoidable or not. Id.

Where A., by the wrongful act of B., loses his presence of mind, and, in consequence, runs into danger, and receives an injury from the act of B.:—Held, that the latter is not protected by a warning given to A. immediately before the accident; and that an action would lie for the injury sustained. Wooley v. Scovell, 3 M. & R. 105.

In an action of trespass for injury done to a horse by a pony and chaise running against it, it was sworn, on the part of the defendant, that his wife was holding the pony by the bridle, and a showman came by and frightened the pony, who ran off with the chaise:—Held, that, if true, this was a good defence on a plea of not guilty. Goodman v. Taylor, 5 C. & P. 410. Denman.

ACCOMPLICE.—See CRIMINAL LAW.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

Accord without satisfaction cannot be pleaded alone to a deed. Parker v. Ramsbottom, 5 D. & R. 138; 3 B. & C. 257.

Where to a declaration in assumpsit by the assignees of a bankrupt to recover 1000*l.* had and received by the defendant before the bankruptcy, he pleaded, that, on an account stated between him and the bankrupt before the bankruptcy, the former was found to be indebted to the bankrupt in the sum of 400*l.*, for which said sum of 400*l.* the bankrupt drew a bill of exchange upon the defendant, payable to him or his order, which the defendant accepted for and on account of the said several promises in the declaration mentioned, and returned it to the bankrupt, whereby the defendant became, and was, and still is, liable to pay the said sum of 400*l.* to the bankrupt or his order, or to his assignees or their order: and the plaintiff replied, that, before the bankruptcy, the bill became due, and was presented to and refused payment by the defendant, who still refused to pay the same to the assignees:—Held, on a general demurrer to the replication, that the defendant's plea was no answer to the action, as it was pleaded to the whole of the demand, and the giving a bill for 400*l.* was not a legal satisfaction of 1000*l.*, being the amount of the debt claimed. Thomas v. Heathorne, 3 D. & R. 647; 2 B. & C. 477; and see Rowles v. Lusty, 4 Bing. 428; 1 M. & P. 102.

So, where the defendant pleaded a payment in discharge and satisfaction, and the plaintiff replied a writ sued out before such payment, the plea was held bad on demurrer, because it did not allege the payment to have been made in discharge of the costs and damages as well as of the promises, and it appeared upon the record that the plaintiff had still a cause of action unsatisfied. Francis v. Crywell, 1 D. & R. 546; 5 B. & A. 886.

An account stated is no plea to the demand of a debt of the same nature. Roades v. Barnes, 1 Burr. 9; 1 Ld. Ken. 391; S. C. nom. Rolls v. Barnes, 1 W. Black, 65; S. P. Adderly v. Evans, 1 Ld. Ken. 250.

A note of hand cannot be pleaded in bar to an action upon simple contract, though a bond may; but not one bond to another. Id.

A bill taken for an antecedent debt without indorsement, proving bad, the antecedent debt may be resorted to. Otherwise, if the bill is discounted without indorsement, and no antecedent debt. Ex parte Blackburne, 10 Ves. jun. 206.

B. and C. being jointly indebted to A., the latter sued B. alone. He remonstrated upon the hardship of the case, alluded to circumstances which would probably reduce the plaintiff's demand if he gained a verdict, and proposed to put an end to the action by paying part of the debt, and the costs of suit. This was acceded to, and a receipt given for the sum paid, which was stated to be for debt and costs in that action. A. afterwards sued C.:—Held that the composition above mentioned did not operate as a discharge of the whole debt, but only to relieve B., and, therefore, it was no defence for C. Walters v. Smith, 2 B. & Adol. 889.

A. and B., brothers, were principal and surety in an annuity bond. By an agreement afterwards executed by them and a third brother, for the settlement of their affairs and the determination of their mutual claims, an apportionment of property was made among the three, and the annuity bond was declared to be B.'s (the surety's) debt:—Held, that this agreement (whether subsequently acted upon or not) was a binding accord between A. and B., and that B.'s administrator, having been obliged to pay arrears of the annuity, could not recover them from A. Cartwright v. Cooke, 3 B. and Adol. 701.

ACCOUNT.

In an action of account, nothing can be pleaded before auditors contrary to what has been pleaded to the action, and been found by verdict: therefore, where defendant, charged as surviving bailee of goods delivered to him and his co-bailee to be merchandized, and to render an account, goes to issue upon the question, whether, upon his delivering over the goods to the deceased bailee, his concern in the trust thereof ceased, and the issue is found against him, he cannot afterwards plead before auditors, that he delivered the goods to his co-bailee with the plaintiff's consent; for, this might have been given in evidence on the issue. Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 73, 94.

Two principal officers of the court of K. B. were appointed auditors, on motion, after judgment of quod computet. Smith v. Smith, 2 Chit. 10; S. P. Archer v. Pritchard, 3 D. & R. 596.

The rule to appoint auditors is absolute in the first instance. Archer v. Pritchard, 3 D. & R. 596.

The defendant cannot pay money into Court. Anon. Bull. N. P. 128. Willes. See Tomkins v. Wiltshire, 1 Marsh. 115; 5 Taunt. 431.

1. BY AND AGAINST WHOM MAINTAINABLE.

1. Judicial Persons.

An action lies against the judge of an ecclesiastical court, who has acted beyond the jurisdiction of the court: as, where a party was excommunicated for refusing to obey an order of the ecclesiastical court, which it had no authority to make, or where the party had not been previously served with a citation or monition, nor had due notice of the order. Beaurain v. Scott, 3 Camp. 388. Ellenborough.

An action was held not to lie against the vicar-general of the bishop for excommunicating plaintiff for contumacy, in not taking upon him administration of an intestate's effects, to whom plaintiff was next of kin, and had intermeddled with the goods, &c., although the citation by which plaintiff was cited was void, by reason that it required him to appear and take administration, &c., without leaving him an option to renounce it, and the proceedings thereupon had been set aside upon appeal; for, the vicar-general had jurisdiction over the subject-matter, viz. the granting administration, and there was no malice. Ackerley v. Parkinson, 3 M. & S. 411.

No action will lie against the judge of a court of record (a coroner), for an act done by him in his judicial capacity. Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611; 9 D. & R. 657.

Where a sheriff issues a warrant of execution in his judicial character, as judge in a county court, he is not liable in an action, for the act of the bailiff. Tinsley v. Nassau, M. & M. 52; 2 C. & P. 582. Best.

Therefore an action will not lie against a sheriff, where his bailiff took the goods of a wrong person under a warrant issued by him in his judicial character. Id.

The steward of a court-baron is a judicial officer, and an action will not lie against him where his bailiff by mistake took the goods of B. under a precept commanding him to take in execution the goods of A. Holroyd v. Breare, and Same v. Holmes, 2 B. & A. 473.

The court of Chancery will stay proceedings in an action against its officers, where the question to be tried is, how far they have conducted themselves with propriety in the execution of its orders. Ex parte Clarke, 1. Russ. & Mylne, 563.

If the judgment of commissioners of appeal in certain cases be declared final by statute, their judgment cannot be questioned in an action of trespass. Radnor (Earl) v. Reeve, 2 B. & P. 391.

2. Justices.

An action will not lie against a magistrate for any thing done under a conviction, unless there is an entire want of jurisdiction. Fawcett v. Foulis (Bart.) 7 B. & C. 394; 1 M. & R. 102.

Nor for any thing done by him in the discharge of his duty, unless he be made acquainted with every fact necessary to enable him to determine when called upon to act. Pike v. Carter, 10 Moore, 376; 3 Bing. 78.

Thus, an action of trespass does not lie against justices acting upon a complaint made to them on oath, by the terms of which they have jurisdiction; though the real facts of the case might not have supported such complaint; if such facts were not laid before them at the time by the party complained against, having notice of such complaint, and being properly summoned to attend. Lowther v. Radnor (Earl), 8 East, 113.

If a person be charged on oath before a magistrate, with an offence amounting to felony, and he issues his warrant; and, on the party being brought before him, the charge is substantiated, and the offender is committed to prison, the magistrate committing is not liable in trespass for false imprisonment, although the charge turns out to be unfounded. Mills v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242; 6 Bing. 85.

Where, therefore, a party was charged under the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 19, with having maliciously cut down a tree adjoining a dwelling-house, and was committed to prison as a felon; and the party laying the information did not prosecute:—Held, that the magistrate was not liable in trespass although it appeared on the face of the depositions upon which the person was committed, that he was the occupier of the land on which the tree grew. Id.

An action does not lie against justices of peace, for refusing a licence to keep an inn or an ale-house. Bassett v. Godschall, 3 Wils. 121.

Two magistrates having, at a landlord's request, given possession of a dwelling-house as deserted and unoccupied, pursuant to the 11 Geo. 2. c. 19, s. 16, the judges of assize of the county, on appeal, made an order for the restitution of the farm to the tenant, with costs. The latter brought an action of trespass for the eviction, against the magistrates, the constables, and the landlord:—Held, that the proceeding before the magistrates was an answer to the action on behalf of all the defendants. Ashcroft v. Bourne, 3 B. & Adol. 684.

A single magistrate is not liable to pay for the expenses incurred in preparing plans for a county jail advertised for by the sessions of which he was one. Tuck v. Ruggles, 5 Esp. 237. Mansfield.

By an act of parliament for rebuilding a bridge, justices of peace were empowered to contract for its erection, and the contractor was to give sufficient security for the due performance of his contract to the clerk of the peace; and the justices were empowered to appoint superintending justices at a general quarter sessions. The expenses of rebuilding the bridge were to be charged on the county rates, and all actions or proceedings at law, to be prosecuted or defended in pursuance of the act, were to be brought in the name of the clerk of the peace, who should be deemed the plaintiff or defendant, and be reimbursed all such costs and expenses as he should have paid, out of the money arising by virtue of the act. The superintending justices at the general sessions covenanted by deed with the plaintiff, who undertook to rebuild the bridge, that the justices or the treasurer of the county should pay him a certain sum by instalments, until the bridge was completed. In an action of covenant brought against such justices by the plaintiff for non-payment of two of the instalments:—Held, that they were not individually liable; and that his remedy was by action against the clerk of the peace. Allen v. Waldegrave, 2 Moore, 621.

3. Foreign States and Governments.

Quere, whether a foreign sovereign can sue in a municipal court of this country. Barclay v. Russell, 3 Ves. jun. 431.

A bill in the court of Chancery cannot be maintained by a sovereign prince in India against the East India Company, for an account of monies, &c. paid. Nabob of Arcot v. East India Company, 4 Bro. C. C. 180.

Quere, whether a foreign state not acknowledged by this country can maintain a suit here for stock vested in trustees by the former government. Dolder v. Huntingfield, 11 Ves. jun. 283.

A foreign state may sue in the court of Chancery; but, where a bill was filed by "The Government of the State of Colombia and Don M. I. Hurtado, a citizen of that state, and minister plenipotentiary from the same to the court of his Britanic Majesty, and residing at 33, Baker Street, Portman Square, in the county of Middlesex, a general demurrer was allowed to the bill, because the description of the plaintiff did not enable the defendants to know upon whom process was to be served, in case a cross bill were filed. Colombian Government v. Rothschild, 1 Sim. 94.

4. Government Officers.

It is clear that a suit may be maintained against a public officer, having in his hands money issued by government for the use of an individual, for the recovery of such money. Priddy v. Rose, 3 Mer. 102.

But an action cannot be maintained against the secretary at war, by a retired clerk of the war office, for his retired allowance, on the grounds that the secretary is only chargeable in his public and official character; and that an action cannot be maintained against him as such, for any thing done by him in that character, although it may amount to a breach of employment; as it would tend to expose him to an infinite number of actions, to be brought by any persons who might suppose themselves aggrieved; although he may have received the money applicable to such specific purposes. Gidley v. Palmerston (Lord) 7 Moore, 91; 3 B. & B. 275.

An action of trespass and false imprisonment lies in England by a native Minorquin, against a governor of Minorca, for an injury committed by him in Minorca. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161.

An officer appointed by government, treating as an agent for the public, is not liable to be sued upon contracts made by him in that capacity. Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 172.

Nor even when contracting by deed, on account of government, is he personally answerable. Unwin v. Wolsely, 1 T. R. 674. See Thompson v. Pearce, 1 B. & B. 25.

In one case, however, a person entering into a charter party in his own name, on the behalf of government, was held to be personally liable. Cunningham v. Collier, 4 Dougl. 233.

No action lies against the commander of a British ship of war for seizing and detaining a vessel on suspicion of her being hostile prize: though he afterwards dismiss her without libelling her in the court of Admiralty; and though he detain her partly on suspicion of matters which are merely causes of forfeiture if she is British. Faith v. Pearson, 6 Taunt. 439; 2 Marsh. 133; 4 Camp. 357; Holt, 113.

If a ship be seized as forfeited under the Navigation Act (12 Car. 2, c. 18), by a governor of a foreign country belonging to Great Britain, the owner cannot maintain trespass against the party seizing, although the latter do not proceed to condemnation; for, by the forfeiture, the property is divested out of the owner. Wilkins v. Despard, 5 T. R. 112.

5. Public Commissioners, &c.

Where the acts of commissioners, appointed by a paving act, occasion a damage to an individual without any excess of jurisdiction on their part, the commissioners, or paviers acting under them, are not liable to an action. British Cast Plate Glass Manufacturers v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 794.

Where a company has been intrusted by the legislature with the execution of a power from which mischief may result, it is bound to take especial precaution to guard against such mischief, and in default is responsible in damages. Weld v. Gas Light Company, 1 Stark. 189. Ellenborough.

An action may be maintained against an incorporated water works company, where workmen employed by persons who contract with the company to lay down pipes for conducting water through a public street, do the work in a negligent manner, whereby an individual passing along the street receives an injury. Matthews v. West London Water Works Company, 3 Camp. 403. Ellenborough.

An action lies against the commissioners under a paving act for raising the street, and thereby injuring plaintiff's houses. Leader v. Moxon, 3 Wils. 461.

Clerks to commissioners, under a lighting and paving act, intrusted with the conduct of public works, are not liable in damages for an injury occasioned by the negligence of artificers and labourers employed under their authority. Hall v. Smith and Billington v. Same, 9 Moore, 226; 2 Bing, 156.

Where trustees, under the general Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, by improving the course of a public road, had effected a consequential injury to a private individual whose estate abutted on the road:—Held, that they were not liable to an action, it appearing that they had not exceeded the authority given them by the statute. Bolton v. Crowther, 4 D. & R. 195; 2 B. & C. 703.

The trustees of a public road, who were empowered and required by act of parliament to place lamps along the road, if they should think necessary, and to make contracts for the cleansing of the road, and to take a night toll for the purpose of enabling them to light and watch the same, were held not liable in an action upon the case for an injury suffered by an individual in crossing the road at night, by falling over a heap of scrapings left on the road side after cleansing the road, without any lights. Harris v. Baker, 4 M. & S. 27.

Trustees of a turnpike road are not liable in damages for any injury occasioned by the negligence of contractors, or others employed under them in the performance of public works on the road, unless they personally interfere in the management of the works. Humphreys v. Mears, 1 M. & R. 187.

Quære, what degree of personal interference would be sufficient to render them so liable. Id.

One who, in the exercise of a public function, without emolument, which he is compellable to execute, acting without malice, and according to his best skill and diligence, and obtaining the best information he can, does an act which occasions consequential damage to a subject, is not liable to an action for such damage. Sutton v. Clarke, 6 Taunt. 29; 1 Marsh. 429: and see Miller v. Seare, 2 W. Black. 1141.

By a turnpike act, trustees were appointed with authority to cut drains in lands adjoining the roads, making reasonable satisfaction to the owners thereof. By the same act it was provided that all actions for any thing done in pursuance of the act, should be brought within six months after the doing of the thing complained of. A drain was cut by an order signed by a competent number of trustees and according to the plan of a surveyor, in land adjoining the plaintiff's, by which the latter was overflowed. An action was brought against one of the trustees only, more than six months after the act done and the first injury sustained, but within six months after a subsequent injury accrued:—Held, first, that the action, if it could have been supported at all, was well brought against the defendant only; but, secondly, that the trustees, having acted to the best of their skill and with the best advice, were not answerable for the damage which had accrued. Id.

The acting commissioners for making a brook navigable, with power to borrow money, &c. employed the plaintiff to do different parts of the works, and such of the commissioners as were present at the several meetings made orders relative thereto. Every one of them was present at some of the meetings, but no one was present at all the meetings. The fund proving deficient,—Held, all the acting commissioners were personally liable to pay plaintiff. Horsley v. Bell, Amb. 778.

6. Other public persons.

Under an act of 50 Geo. 3, c. 149, by which the trustees are empowered to sue and be sued in the name of their treasurer for the time being, where the trustees have been changed since the cause of action accrued and new treasurers have been appointed since the change, an action can be maintained in the name of the new treasurers; the act of parliament providing that actions may be brought by the treasurer for the time being, and that they shall not abate or be discontinued by his death or removal, and that the treasurer for the time being shall always be deemed plaintiff or defendant in every action. Whitmore v. Wilks, M. & M. 214. Tenterden. Rule for new trial refused. Id.

Plaintiff, clerk to commissioners of paving, drew up a contract for paving, of which contract defendant, the contractor, was, by agreement, to pay the expense: defendant offered to execute the contract, but refused to pay plaintiff's charges, as unreasonable; plaintiff refused to allow the contract to be executed until his charges were paid. Under an act authorizing the commissioners to sue by their clerk:—Held, that he could not sue as such clerk for these charges. Curling v. Johnson, 10 Bing. 89; 3 M. & Scott.

If certain commissioners under a private act of parliament may sue and be sued by their clerk, it is not necessary at the trial of an action brought in the name of the clerk, to prove that he sues by their authority. Truwhitt v. Depree, 2 C. & P. 557. Abbott.

If a builder do work at an intended hospital on the order of the physician and surgeon, they being announced to deliver lectures there, and being members of the provisional committee, such builder is not bound to look solely to the funds of the hospital for payment, but may sue the persons who gave the orders, unless he was distinctly informed that the dealing was to be on the terms of looking for payment to the funds of the hospital only. Pink v. Scudamore, 5 C. & P. 71. Tindal.

The subscribers who attend a committee for managing the concerns of an hospital, are liable to the creditors of the hospital; and the proper question for the consideration of the jury is, whether the defendant had so acted as to induce the plaintiff to believe that he was to look to the defendant and the other members of the committee for payment. Burls v. Smith, 5 M. & P. 735; 7 Bing. 705.

No action on the case lies by the bailiff of a liberty,—such, as the honor of Pontefract, in the county of York,—who has the execution and return of writs therein, against a party for suing out a writ of capias with a non omittas clause, without a prior writ of latitat first issued, and a return made, upon an allegation that it was wrongfully, injuriously, and deceitfully caused to be issued by him, to the damage of the bailiff in his office. Carrett v. Smallpage, 9 East, 330.

In trespass, for throwing down a stack of chimneys, and thereby damaging plaintiff's house, defendant may justify that he was a fireman, and that the chimneys were in danger of falling on a public footpath, the adjoining house having been burnt down. Dewey v. White, M. & M. 56. Best.

II.—FOR WHAT MAINTAINABLE.

1. Judgments and Decrees.

Judgments and Decrees of Superior Courts.—If an action be brought on a judgment, which is irregular, the whole proceedings may be set aside in one rule. Barlow v. Kaye, 4 T. R. 688.

Action on a judgment may be stayed on payment of the sum recovered, and costs, without interest, although the defendant absconded for seven years since the judgment. Thomas v. Edwards, 2 Anst. 558.

In an action on a judgment obtained in an action on a former judgment, execution shall be stayed after the third judgment, on the defendant paying into court the debt and costs recovered on the second. Simpson v. Stone, 2 W. Black. 785.

But the action of debt on a judgment is not to be favoured. Biddleston v. Whitel, 1 W. Black. 507.

An action is not maintainable on a decree in equity for the payment of interest on purchase-money and the costs of a bill for a specific performance. Carpenter v. Thornton, 3 B. & A. 52.

Nor on a mere interlocutory order. Fry v. Malcolm, 4 Taunt. 705; S. P. Biddle v. Dowse, 9 D. & R. 404.

Judgments of Foreign Courts.—An action is not maintainable on a colonial judgment, unless it appear that the defendant was regularly served with process, and had an opportunity of defending the suit, even although it appear to be the practice of that court not to give a personal notice. Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192; 1 Camp. 65.

For, the law will not raise an assumpsit upon such a judgment obtained by default against a party who, upon the face of the proceedings, appeared only to have been summoned by nailing up a copy of the declaration at the courthouse door; it not appearing that he had ever been present in the colony, or subject to the jurisdiction of the colonial court at the time the suit commenced and afterwards, although, by a law of the colony, if a defendant be absent from the island, and without an attorney, manager, or overseer there, such mode of summoning him shall be deemed a good service. Id.

An action will not lie in the courts of Westminster upon a judgment of a foreign court, unless it clearly appear by the transcript of the proceedings that the defendant was subject to the jurisdiction of the foreign court, and that the judgment pronounced against him was final, and for a definite sum. Obicini v. Bligh, 1 M. & Scott, 477; 8 Bing. 335, overruling Malony v. Gibbons, 2 Camp. 504.

Semble, that a decree of a vice-admiralty court, called an "interlocutory," is in effect final; and that such a decree, requiring a party to pay a certain sum, may be enforced in the courts at Westminster. Id.

Quære, whether a judgment obtained in a prize court by the agent of a foreign power, against a native of this country, can be enforced here by the personal representative of such agent? Id.

An action is maintainable without declaring upon or proving the cause of action upon which judgment was given. Crawford v. Whittal, 1 Dougl. 4, n.; Lofft, 154.

Or the ground of the judgment. Walker v. Witter, 1 Dougl. 1.

Unless the contrary be shown, the court will presume that the decision in a foreign judgment is consonant to the justice of the case. Arnett v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353; 11 Moore, 209; 2 C. & P. 88.

An action of debt will lie upon the decree of a colonial court of equity, for the balance of an account between partners. And, in such an action, the court will look at the substance, without regarding the form of the proceedings upon which the decree is founded. Henley v. Soper, 2 M. & R. 153; 6 B. & C. 16.

In assumpsit on two judgments recovered in the supreme court of Jamaica, copies of the judgments, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, and certified by him to be true copies, accompanied by a certificate of a notary public of his being clerk of the said court, and by another certificate of the governor, under the seal of the island, that the person so certifying was a notary public, were held to be inadmissible evidence to prove the judgments. Appleton v. Braybrook, (Lord), 6 M. & S. 34.

A foreign judgment cannot be questioned in the courts of Chancery in this country. Therefore, a bill for a discovery and a commission to examine witnesses abroad, in aid of the plaintiff's defence to an action brought in this country on a foreign judgment, is demurrable. Martin v. Nicolls, 3 Sim. 458.

In covenant to indemnify plaintiff from all debts due from the late partnership of plaintiff, defendant, and D. B., and from all suits, &c.: proof, on a copy of the proceedings in a foreign court in a suit there instituted against the late partners for the recovery of a partnership debt, in which a decree passed against them for want of answer, per quod a sequestration issued against the plaintiff's estate, and he was obliged to pay the debt, &c. was held to be conclusive against defendant: and that defendant was not at liberty to show that the proceedings were erroneous. Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 M. & S. 20.

Assumpsit will not lie on a decree of a foreign court whereby the defendant is ordered to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiff on a certain day, first deducting thereout the defendant's costs to be taxed by the proper officer, where the defendant's costs have not been taxed either at his own request or upon an ex parte proceeding at the instance of the plaintiff. Saddler v. Robins, 1 Camp. 253. Ellenborough.

To render a foreign judgment void, on the ground that it is contrary to the law of the country where it was given, it must be shown clearly and unequivocally to be so. Becquet v. Mac Carthy, 2 B. & Adol. 951.

Where the law of a British colony required that, in a suit instituted against an absent party, the process should be served upon the king's Attorney-General in the colony; but it was not expressly provided that the Attorney-General should communicate with the absent party: Held, that such law was not so contrary to natural justice as to render void a judgment obtained against a party who had resided within the jurisdiction of the court at the time when the cause of action accrued, but had withdrawn himself before the proceedings were commenced. Id.

Upon the effect of judgments in foreign courts, see Phillips v. Hunter (in error), 2. H. Black. 40.

Judgments of Irish and Scotch Courts.]—An action of assumpsit lies in the English superior courts on a Scotch judgment of horning against a Scotchman born, for a debt contracted in Scotland. Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686; 1 M. & P. 663.

Assumpsit lies upon a judgment recovered in Ireland since the Union, as such judgment is not a record in England. Harris v. Saunders, 6 D. & R. 471; 4 B. & C. 411.

Quære, whether in an action upon an Irish judgment the grounds of such judgment are examinable by the courts here. Guinness v. Carroll, 1 B. & Adol. 459.

Judgments of Inferior Courts.]—An action of debt lies upon a judgment of nonsuit in an inferior court. Murray v. Wilson, 1 Wils. 316.

No action will lie in the court of C. P. to recover costs ordered to be paid by a rule of an inferior court, in the course of a suit there, notwithstanding the defendant shall not be liable to an attachment of the inferior court by being resident out of its jurisdiction. Emerson v. Lashley, 2 H. Black. 248.

2. General Equitable Jurisdiction.

Quære, whether one court of equity will prevent a party from suing in another court of equity. Jackson v. Leaf, 1 J. & W. 229.

It does not follow of course, that, because a plaintiff has a defence at law, he cannot come into a court of equity for relief. Campbell v. French, 2 Cox, 366.

A court of equity will not interfere in favour of a party who omits to avail himself of his legal remedy in due time. Drewry v. Barnes, 3 Russ. 94.

3. What destroys a Right of Action.

A right of action once vested can only be destroyed by a release under seal, or by the receipt of something in satisfaction of the wrong done. Willoughby v. Backhouse, 4 D. & R. 539; 2 B. & C. 821; S. P. Sells v. Hoare, 8 Moore, 451; 1 Bing. 401; 1 C. & P. 28.

Acceptance of a less, cannot be a satisfaction in law of a greater sum than due: nor can it operate as an extinguishment of the original cause of action, though accompanied by a conditional promise to pay the residue when of ability. Fitch v. Sutton, 5 East, 230; 1 Smith, 415.

In actions on the case, satisfaction made to the plaintiff pending the suit, takes away the plaintiff's remedy. Bird v. Randall, 1 W. Black. 388.

And, if the plaintiff, in an action against several, accept satisfaction from one, and drop the action, it seems he cannot afterwards sue the others. Dufresne v. Hutchinson, 3 Taunt. 117.

One of three joint covenantors gave a bill of exchange for part of a debt secured by the covenant on which bill judgment was recovered: Held, that such judgment was no bar to an action of covenant against the three, such bill not being averred to have been accepted as satisfaction, nor to have produced it in fact. Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East, 251.

A judgment by cognovit against one of the makers of a joint and several promissory note, and a levy of part under a fi. fa. is no discharge of the other. Ayrey v. Davenport, 2. N. R. 474.

A rule of court giving specific relief in a case where, by law, the party is not entitled to two different remedies, is a bar to an action for the same cause. Cameron v. Reynolds, Cowp. 406.

In an action for money had and received, if the defendant shew a deed of assignment of the money to himself, and a receipt indorsed, it is a good discharge, notwithstanding circumstances of suspicion. Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141.

If A. be indebted to B. and pay such debt to the attorney of a person suing A. in B.'s name, but without his authority, A. is notwithstanding obliged to pay B. again; and A.'s remedy is against the attorney, though such attorney conceived that he was acting at the time under the real authority of B. Robson v. Eaton, 1 T. R. 62.

A. having, in a compromise with a person who, by pretending to be his executor, had received a debt due from B. to A., allowed such debt, cannot afterwards sue B.: but otherwise, if the action be commenced before the compromise. Jones v. Booth, 2 Esp. 600. Eyre.

To an action on the case for unskilfully doing work, it is no defence that the defendant recovered in a former action for work and labour, which was the same for the unskilfulness of which the action is brought. Sintzenick v. Lucas, 1 Esp. 43. Kenyon.

But, where it was agreed between A. and B. that A., for certain commission, should ship a cargo of wheat of a specific quality, at a foreign port, for B., in England, and the wheat was found, upon its arrival, to be of an inferior quality, for which breach of the agreement, B. recovered damages against A. in an action:—Held, that A. could not afterwards maintain an action against B. for the commission, as his claim there-to might have been given in evidence in the former action, in reduction of damages. Kist v. Atkinson, 2 Camp. 63. Ellenborough.

If a plaintiff deposit a negotiable instrument on which he is suing, at the same time giving notice of the action, he does not thereby part with his right of action; and, if the depositary sues on the same instrument, the court of C. P. will not, at the instance of the defendant, stay the proceedings in the first action. Semb. that the court would restrain the depositary from suing on the instrument, on the ground that he, receiving it with notice of the suit then pending, must be considered as having consented that the first action shall proceed. Marsh v. Newell, 1 Taunt. 109.

The terms of compromise of a suit and an action, agreed upon out of court, and afterwards disregarded, cannot be enforced on a motion in the suit. Forsyth v. Manton, 5 Madd. 78,

4. Defence arising after Action brought.

Matter of defence arising after action brought cannot be pleaded in bar of the action generally, and therefore cannot be given in evidence under the general issue. Lee v. Levy, 6 D. & R. 475; 4 B. & C. 399; 1 C. & P. 553, 675.

But matter of defence arising after the action brought may be given in evidence, if it happen before plea pleaded, in cases where the special matter might be given in evidence under the general issue. Sullivan v. Montague, 1 Dougl. 106.

In actions by bill in the King's Bench, the defendant might, under the general issue, give in evidence matter (amounting to accord and satisfaction of the debt or damages and costs) which occurred after the issuing of the latitat and before declaration; and such matter was an answer to the action. Wornwick v. Benwick, 10 B. & C. 676.

5. Former Recovery.

In what cases.]—Quære, whether a replevin suit in an inferior court can be pleaded in bar to trespass in C. P. White v. Willis, 2 Wils. 87.

Where in an action of assumpsit improperly brought against an administratrix, she pleaded in abatement, that others were jointly liable, which she failed to prove, in consequence of which the plaintiff recovered a verdict with one shilling damages:—Held, that such a verdict did not amount to satisfaction, so as to bar the plaintiff from recovering against the other contractors. Godson v. Smith (Bart.), 2 Moore 157.

One personal action not going on to judgment, is no bar to another for the same cause. Hitchin v. Campbell, 2 W. Black. 831; 3 Wils. 304; Loft. 208.

Unless judgment be had on the merits. Id.

The having included a demand in a declaration for another cause of action, to which the evidence was confined on a writ of inquiry, and on which only the verdict was taken, will not prevent the plaintiff from bringing another action for the demand to which the evidence and verdict did not apply. Seddon v. Tutop, 6 T. R. 607; 1 Esp. 401.

It is no bar to an action for goods sold, that the plaintiff had in a previous action of assumpsit recovered one demand from the same defendant, and in which he might have recovered the present demand, but it was not made a subject of inquiry in the first action. Id.

Aliter, if the present demand were inquired into in the former action. Id.

A. brought an action for an attorney's bill against B., but only recovered a small sum for money lent, as there had been no bill delivered:—Held, that A. might recover the amount of the attorney's bill in another action, brought after the bill was delivered, although this was a part of his demand in the first action; and that it was not necessary that he should have been nonsuited in the first action, to entitle him to bring the second. Heming v. Wilton, 5 C. & P. 54. J. Parke.

If assignees of a bankrupt have brought an action, and have attempted to prove one item of their demand, and fail, because they could not prove an act of bankruptcy sufficiently early, they cannot bring another action for that claim which they could not before succeed in; and the record in the former action is evidence in the second action, without being pleaded, though not conclusive, as an estoppel. Stafford v. Clark, 2 Bing. 377; 9 Moore, 724; 2 C. & P. 403.

A. advances to B. 875*l.* bank stock, for which B. executes a bond condition for the replacing the stock on a day certain, and the payment to A. of all dividends, bonuses, and profits, which would have arisen from the same in the meantime. B. makes default. A. recovers judgment with damages assessed upon both breaches:—Held, that the plea of judgment recovered is a good bar to a sci. fa.: and that A. is not entitled to further dividends, &c. after verdict, whatever delay there may be in his suing out execution. Saville v. Jackson, M'Clel. 377; 11 Price, 343; 13 Price, 715.

The withdrawing a juror by consent of the parties, is no bar to a future suit on the same cause of action. Sanderson v. Nestor, R. & M. 402. Abbott.

Discharging a jury by consent does not terminate the suit, but is the same, in this respect, as withdrawing a juror: and where the plaintiff, instead of going on with such suit, brought a new action for a cause admitted to be the same, the court stayed the proceedings, but would not grant the defendant his costs of the latter suit. Everett v. Youells, 3 B. & Adol. 349.

If a plaintiff discontinue an action stayed in another court by a consolidation rule, and commence an action against the same defendant for the same cause in C. P., the court will stay proceedings until after the trial of the cause mentioned in the consolidation rule. Parkin v. Scott, 1 Taunt. 565.

The court of K. B. stayed proceedings in an action of trespass, because the plaintiff had before brought replevin and recovered damages for the same cause of action. Lamb v. Nutt, 1 Tidd's Prac. 572.

A landlord sued his tenant for rent, and on the money counts, and gave particulars on the count for money had and received for a quantity of stone quarried and carried away by the defendant. At the trial he took a general verdict, but for the amount of the rent only. The plaintiff brought another action against the defendant in case for quarrying and carrying away the stone, and a few days before the trial of the first action, delivered a particular in the second action for the same stone, exactly corresponding with the particular delivered on the count for money had and received in the first action:—Held, that the recovery in the first action was no bar to the plaintiff's recovering in the second. Hadley v. Green, 2 C. & J. 374; 2 Tyr. 390.

A promissory note for 100*l.*, on the face of it payable on demand, was given to the trustee of a building society to secure certain instalments, fines, and interest. The payee having sued upon the note, took a cognovit for the instalments then due, and costs, which were afterwards paid; and he gave a receipt as for debt and costs in the action:—Held, that he could not maintain another action on the note for instalments which subsequently became due. Siddall v. Rowcliffe, 1 C. & M. 487.

The plaintiff declared against the defendant in assumpsit, as the acceptor of a bill of exchange. The declaration also contained counts for goods sold, work and labour, and the common money counts. The defendant suffered judgment by default, upon which the plaintiff signed interlocutory judgment for want of plea, and the judgment was entered generally to the whole declaration. The plaintiff afterwards obtained a rule to compute principal and interest on the bill, and taxed his costs, and signed final judgment accordingly. After taxation, the plaintiff entered a nolle prosequi, as follows, namely, that he would not further prosecute his suit as to the promises and undertakings in the second and subsequent counts of the declaration; therefore, as to such promises, let the defendant be acquitted, &c.:—Held, that such entry was in effect a remittitur of the damages after judgment; and, therefore, that plaintiff was precluded from suing the defendant again for the original cause of action on the common counts. Bowden v. Herne, 5 M. & P. 756.

Pleadings.—In a plea of former recovery in K. B., it is not sufficient to state that a judgment was recovered in the Court of the Bench, for these words apply only to the court of C. P., and cannot be construed to extend to the court of K. B. Mill v. Pollon, 1 Moore, 19; 7 Taunt. 271.

A plea of judgment recovered in a plea of trespass on the case on promises to the damage of the defendant, is bad on general demurrer. Id.

To a plea in an action of debt on a judgment recovered, that, after the recovery of the judgment, the plaintiff sued out a ca. sa. against the defendant, by virtue of which writ the sheriff took and arrested the defendant, and had him in custody for the debt and damages, concluding with a verification; the plaintiff, in his replication, protested that no such writ had been sued out and delivered to the sheriff; and that the sheriff did not, under and by virtue of any such writ take the defendant:—Held sufficient, as such an allegation is traversable, it being matter of law connected with fact. Saville v. Jackson, M'Clel. 377; 11 Price, 343; 13 Price, 715.

Where a plea to a declaration of assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, stated that the plaintiff had sued the defendant in an inferior court for the same causes of action in the declaration mentioned, and that the defendant recovered against the plaintiff by the judgment of that court, and that such judgment still remained in full force; and the plea proceeded to set out the declaration in the court below, in which it was not stated that the goods were sold, or that the consideration for the promise arose within the jurisdiction of that court; and plaintiff in his replication alleged that both he and the defendant, at the time of levying the plaint in the court below, and the latter obtaining judgment, resided out of the jurisdiction of that court; and that the cause of action arose out of such jurisdiction:—Held, on special demurrer, that the replication was sufficient, on the ground that the proceedings in the court below were coram non iudice, and altogether void. Briscoe v. Stephens, 9 Moore, 413; 2 Bing. 213.

Where plaintiff sued his steward in an inferior court for 4000*l.*, which was a less sum than he knew to be due to him upon the final investigation of the defendant's accounts, and upon judgment by default verified 3,400*l.* only:—Held, upon a plea of judgment recovered in answer to a second action in K. B. for the balance due, that the plaintiff was concluded by the action brought in the inferior court. Bagot (Lord) v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 87; 3 B. & C. 235; 5 D. & R. 719; 3 B. & C. 772.

A judgment obtained by defendant in the colonial courts cannot be pleaded by way of estoppel to a declaration in this country for the same cause of action, unless it is shown that the judgment so obtained would be final and conclusive in the colonies. Plummer v. Woodburne, 7 D. & R. 25; 4 B. & C. 625.

A plea of a former recovery for the same offence, to a penal action, must set out that the plaintiff in the former action had priority of suit, or it will be bad on demurrer. Jackson v. Gising, Bull. N. P. 197.

To an action of indebitatus assumpsit for the value of goods, a judgment for the defendant in trover for the same goods may be pleaded in bar by means of proper averments. Hitchin v. Campbell, 3 Wils. 304: but see 2 W. Black. 779, 827; Lofft, 208.

Declaration by the assignees of a bankrupt for goods sold by the bankrupt, alleging promises made to him before his bankruptcy; also upon an account stated with the plaintiffs as assignees: plea, a former action brought by the bankrupt, upon the same promises, before his bankruptcy, and still pending:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea was bad; first, because the former action could not be brought upon the account stated with the plaintiffs as assignees; secondly, because the assignees could not continue the former suit even if they wished it. Biggs v. Cox, 7 D. & R. 409; 4 B. & C. 920.

6. Another Suit depending.

The court of K. B. will not stay the proceedings on the ground of the pendency of another action for the same cause against the defendant jointly with another person, except in a case of oppression or vexation. Soutter v. Dunston, 1 M. & R. 508.

If such a case is made out, they will interfere in a summary manner, or allow the party to plead in abatement, notwithstanding the four days have expired—semble. Id.

Where separate actions were brought against several persons for the same debt, who (if at all) were jointly liable, the defendant in one action having paid the debt and costs in that action, the court stayed the proceedings in the others, without costs. Carne v. Legh, 6 B. & C. 124; 9 D. & R. 126.

A suit pending in England, is not a good plea in bar to a subsequent suit in the plantations for the same matter. Bayley v. Edwards, 3 Swan. 703.

III.—NOTICE OF ACTION.

1. To Magistrates.

By stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, it is enacted, that no writ shall be sued out against, nor any copy of any process at the suit of a subject shall be served on, any justice of the peace, for any thing by him done in the execution of his office, until notice in writing of such intended writ or process shall have been delivered to him or left at the usual place of his abode, by the attorney or agent for the party who intends to sue or cause the same to be sued out or served, at least one calendar month before the suing out or serving the same; in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained the cause of action which such party hath or claimeth to have against such justice; and on the back of which notice shall be indorsed the name of such attorney or agent, together with the place of his abode.

A magistrate is entitled to notice of action under the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 1, when he acts as a magistrate, though what he does is not strictly within the scope of his office. Bird v. Gunston, 2 Chit. 459; 4 Dougl. 275; S. C. not S. P. Hull. on Costs, 240.

So, where he acts upon a subject matter of complaint, over which he has authority, but which arises out of his jurisdiction. Prestidge v. Woodman, 2 D. & R. 43; 1 B. & C. 12: S. P. Graves v. Arnold, 3 Camp. 242.

If a justice acts, believing that his jurisdiction extends to the subject matter in question, he is entitled to notice of action, though it may turn out, on investigation, to be a case over which no justice of the peace has jurisdiction. Jones v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 654; 3 B. & C. 762; 1 C. & P. 459, 669.

Quære, whether deputy justices of the peace are entitled to notice of action. Id.

If a person claims a right to act as a justice, he is entitled to notice of action, although the ground on which the plaintiff goes is a denial of such right. Id.

But, in an action against a person for the penalty given for acting as a magistrate without a proper qualification, the defendant is not entitled to notice of action. Wright v. Horton, Holt, 458; 1 Stark. 400; 2 Chit. 25; 6 M. & S. 50.

Justices are not protected by the statute in acts done under colour and pretence of their office. Anon. Lofft, 243.

The lord of the manor, who is also a justice of the peace, is entitled to notice of an action brought against him for taking away a gun in the house of an unqualified person, for, it will be presumed that he acted as a justice. Briggs v. Evelyn (Knt.), 2 H. Black 114.

Where the mayor of an antient borough, in which he was also a justice of the peace, took a fee of 4*s.* from a publican resident within the borough for renewing his annual license, although it appeared that for fifty-seven years a similar fee had been uniformly received by the mayor for the time being, from every publican within the borough applying to have a license:—Held, that such fee was illegal, and that the defendant was not entitled to notice of an action to recover it back, as the fee could not be taken by him by virtue or in execution of his office as a justice of the peace. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729.

One magistrate committing the mother of a bastard to custody for not affiliating the child, is entitled to the notice required by the statute, though, by the stat. 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, jurisdiction over the subject-matter is committed to two magistrates. Weller v. Take, 9 East, 364.

If A. be indicted for felony, and the judge who tries the cause order the justice before whom the information was laid to retain the goods in his possession until it appears who is entitled to them, it is not necessary to give such justice a notice previously to commencing an action against him for the conversion of them. Licet v. Reid, Peake, 35. Kenyon.

All persons acting under a justice's warrant, and within his jurisdiction, are within the protection of the stat. 24 Geo. 2. Jackson's case, Loft, 249.

The 2 Geo. 3, c. 28, which gives an additional protection to the justices in cases of actions brought against them for any thing done in pursuance of that act, but which does not require notice of action, does not deprive them of their right to the notice required by the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, which requires notice in cases of actions brought against justices for any thing done in execution of their office. Therefore, where in an action against a magistrate under the 2 Geo. 3, c. 28, the plaintiff proved service of a notice not perfectly conformable with the requisites of the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, and was thereupon nonsuited:—Held, that the nonsuit was right. Rodgers v. Broderip, 9 D. & R. 194.

In trespass against a justice for taking goods, the plaintiff cannot recover more than the value stated in his notice of action. Stringer v. Martyr, 6 Esp. 134. Macdonald.

The month in a notice begins with the day on which the notice is served. Castle v. Burdett, 3 T. R. 623.

A notice of action against a magistrate, under 24 Geo. 2 c. 44, is sufficient to warrant a writ, and proceeding against the magistrate and a constable jointly. Jones v. Simpson, 1 C. & J. 174; 1 Tyr. 32.

And where the notice stated the nature of the writ intended to be sued out, and also the cause of action; and a writ was sued out and served, but afterwards discontinued; and, within the time allowed by the statute, another writ ejusdem generis was sued out and served, in which another person was joined as defendant: the court, after verdict, held that the notice was sufficient. Id.

2. To Excise and other Officers.

An excise officer is entitled to notice under 23 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 30, before an action is brought against him for an act not warranted by his official capacity, if done bona fide in the supposed execution of his duty. Daniel v. Wilson, 5 T. R. 1.

Quere, what is a sufficient notice under this statute. Wood v. Folliott, 3 B. & P. 552, n.

A notice is not necessary in an action against a revenue officer to recover back money paid to release goods which had been seized as forfeited, but were not so in fact. Irving v. Wilson, 4 T. R. 485.

Nor in assumpsit to recover the amount of an excessive charge made by the defendants as collectors, on a distress for arrears of taxes, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 70. Umpelby v. McLean, 1 B. & A. 42.

It is necessary in assumpsit for money had and received against an excise officer, to recover duties received by him after the act imposing them is repealed, and he has paid them over to his superior. Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 553.

Notice of action for an excessive levy is not necessary to be given to a sheriff, under the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 70, where he has levied arrears of taxes under the statute 48 Geo. 3, c. 141, No. 5. par. 2. Copland v. Powell, Moore, 400; 1 Bing. 369.

A statute enacted that no plaintiff should recover in any action commenced against any person for any thing done or performed in execution or under the authority of the act, unless notice thereof, in writing, should be previously given twenty-eight days before the commencement of the action:—Held, that a notice was necessary in those cases only in which the party against whom the action was brought had reasonable grounds for supposing that the thing done by him was done in execution of or under the authority of the act. Cook v. Leonard, 6 B. & C. 351; 9 D. & R. 339.

The stat. 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 184, directs that the West India Dock Company shall be sued in the name of their treasurer, and extends the protection of the stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, for privileging justices of the peace in actions brought against them as such, to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, acting under this act beyond the limits of the city; and directs that "no action shall be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance or under colour of this act, until after 14 days' notice in writing, or after tender of amends," &c.:—Held, that the treasurer of the Company is a person within the protection of the said clause, and, being sued for an act done by the company which induced an injury to the plaintiffs, is entitled to such notice before the action brought. The notice is necessary in actions for trespasses or torts, but quere whether in assumpsit. Wallace v. Smith, 5 East, 114; 1 Smith, 346.

Notice of action is required by a penal statute on the commencement of a suit, so as to subject the plaintiff or his agent to an attachment for misbehaviour previous to the suing out of the writ. Gordon v. Powis, 2 W. Black. 781.

In an action against excise officers, the notice of action must be proved in the first instance, before any other evidence is given. Johnson v. Lord, M. & M. 444. Tenterden.

The owner of property arresting a person, in the bona fide belief that he was acting in pursuance of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 28, is entitled to the notice of action required by s. 41 of that statute. Beechy v. Sides, 4 M. & R. 634; 9 B. & C. 806.

Defendant, as fenreeve, having the care of certain lands over which the plaintiff was making a road, asked him by what authority he acted; the plaintiff said, by authority of the magistrates, but did not exhibit any warrant; whereupon the defendant apprehended and took him before a magistrate:—Held, that defendant was entitled to notice of action under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41, although the plaintiff was not committing a malicious injury. Wright v. Wales, 5 Bing. 336; 2 M. & P. 613; 3 C. & P. 96.

Defendant entered plaintiff's house in search of S., against whom he had a warrant signed by the commissioners of the Southwark Court of Requests. S. was not in the house:—Held, that defendant, as acting in pursuance of the Court of Requests' Act, 46 Geo. 3, c. 87, s. 21, was entitled to notice of an action of trespass. Cook v. Clark, 10 Bing. 19; 3 M. & Scott.

The 136th section of the 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, requiring twenty-one days' notice of action, applies to the case of an action brought against a contractor for the removal of dust, &c. appointed by the commissioners of sewers for the city of London, for an alleged trespass, in seizing a cart supposed to contain dust, beating the horse, and assaulting and imprisoning the driver. Breedon v. Murphy, 3 C. & P. 574. Tenterden.

3. Form.

A notice of action under statute 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, must specify the sort of writ or process intended to be sued out, as well as the cause of action. Lovelace v. Curry, 7 T. R. 631.

It need not specify the form of action to be brought. Sabin v. De Burgh, 2 Camp. 196. Ell.

Where the notice given was of an action on the case for false imprisonment and assault, and the action brought was for trespass and false imprisonment:—Held, not sufficient. Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631, n.

It is not necessary to name all the parties meant to be included in the action, or to express whether the action is intended to be joint or several. Bax. v. Jones, 5 Price, 168.

A notice of action to magistrates is not vitiated by being in the form of a declaration, and unnecessarily ample, if it express the cause of action with sufficient clearness. Gimbert v. Coyney, M'Clel. & Y. 469; and see Robson v. Spearman, 3 B. & A. 493.

If the notice of action against a magistrate for wrongful distress under a conviction, states the person to whom the warrant is directed, it must state it correctly: therefore, when the warrant was directed to the constable of H., and the notice stated that it was directed to J. B.:—Held, that the notice was insufficient. Aked v. Stocks, 4 Bing. 509; 1 M. & P. 346.

The notice of action, in case, against bricklayers, for negligence in repairing a public sewer, is not to be construed with the same strictness as is generally required in pleading, provided there is a sufficient cause of action shown upon the face of it: therefore, a notice under a local act, "that the defendants made, altered, repaired, cut, dug, worked, and enlarged the sewer in so negligent, incautious, unskilful, improvident, and improper a manner, that the plaintiff's premises fell, and were greatly damaged, weakened, and destroyed," is a sufficient notice, though the proof was, first, that the defendants had not propped and shored up the plaintiff's house in the progress of the work; and, secondly, that the immediate cause of the injury was the falling of other houses, which drew the plaintiff's after them. Jones v. Bird, 1 D. & R. 497; 5 B. & A. 837.

But a notice, under an act of parliament, against a toll-gate keeper, "for demanding and taking of the plaintiff toll for and in respect of certain matters and things particularly mentioned and exempted from the payment of toll in and by a certain act of parliament intituled &c. is too uncertain," and bad. Freeman v. Line, 2 Chit. 673.

Notice of action against a custom-house officer, "for breaking the plaintiff's house in C. Street, in the parish of G." is not a sufficient description of the plaintiff's place of abode within the stat. 23 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 30, and 24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 47, s. 35. Williams v. Burgess 3 Taunt. 127.

A separate notice to each of several persons intended to be sued in trespass, is sufficient to found a joint action against all of them, for acts committed in pursuance of an act of parliament, which provides that no plaintiff shall recover in an action for any thing done in pursuance thereof, without notice to the defendant or defendants of such intended action, although none of the other persons who are afterwards joined in the action are named in the notice to either of them. Agar v. Morgan, 2 Price, 126.

A letter from the plaintiff's attorney, declaring that he is instructed to take legal proceedings unless goods are delivered up, is not sufficient notice of action. Lewis v. Smith, Holt, 27. Gibbs.

One person acted as clerk to two bodies of public officers. A notice of action required by the statute was given him, addressed to him as clerk to the one body, the cause of action arising under the authority of the other body:—Held, that the notice was insufficient. Hider v. Dorell, 1 Taunt. 383.

Quære, whether, in an action against excise officers for a seizure, the notice of action properly describes the plaintiffs as of their place of business, the statute requiring it to state their place of abode. Jackson v. Lord, M. & M. 444. Tenderden.

4. Signature.

Where a notice is given to a magistrate under stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, it is sufficient, in indorsing the attorney's name, to put the initial only of his Christian name. Mayhew v. Locke, 2 Marsh. 377; 7 Taunt. 63.

It is sufficient, if signed by a firm of two attorneys who are partners, and are employed by the plaintiff: and if it be signed T. & W. A. W. this is good, though the Christian name of one is T. A., and of the other W. A., if there was no other firm of the same surname in the same place at which the notice bore date. James v. Swift, 6 D. & R. 625; 4 B. & C. 681; 2 C. & P. 237.

A description of the attorney, as of a place in "London," when in fact the place is in Westminster, is fatal. Stears v. Smith, 6 Esp. 138. Ellenborough.

In a notice of action to a magistrate, the residence of the plaintiff's attorney was described as of Half-moon Street, Piccadilly, London. Quære, whether it was sufficient, Half-moon Street being in the county of Middlesex. Mills v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242; 6 Bing. 85.

And when signed thus—"given under my hand at Durham, the 11th day of, &c. Richard Ratcliffe, attorney for, &c.:" it was held insufficient. Taylor v. Fenwick, 3 B. & P. 553, n.; 7 T. R. 635, n.; 3 Dougl. 178.

An indorsement with the name of the plaintiff's attorney, and the words, "of Birmingham," as describing the place of his abode:—Held, sufficient. Osborn v. Gough, 3 B. & P. 551.

So, of "Bolton-en-le-Moor," Crooke v. Curry, 1 Tidd's Prac. 28.

Seemle, that, before an attorney can sign a notice of action, he must have regularly taken out his certificate. Sabin v. De Burgh, 2 Camp. 196. Ellenborough.

It is sufficient if the name be in the body instead of on the back of the notice. Crook v. Curry, 1 Tidd's Prac. 28.

5. Service.

Under 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, the notice must be delivered to the magistrate himself, or left at his last place of abode. Castle v. Burditt, 3 T. R. 623.

The notice in writing required by 57 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 40, to be given to the bishop previously to the commencement of an action for penalties for non-residence, is not properly served by leaving it in the hands of the registrar or deputy registrar of the diocese: such notice must be left at the registry office. Vaux v. Vollans, 1 Nev. & M. 307.

The notice need not be served by the attorney who sues it out. Vaux v. Vollans, 1 Nev. & M. 307.

The motion under Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, s. 49, that sticking up a notice may be deemed a good service, where the defendant's residence is unknown, is absolute in the first instance. Bridger v. Austin, 1 M. & Scott, 520; 1 Dowl. P. C. 272.

IV. PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

Plaintiff.—A party cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in an action at law; and therefore, where plaintiff sued as executor, and defendant pleaded that the promises were made jointly with plaintiff, the court held it a good plea in bar. Moffat v. Van Mullinger, 2 Chit. 539; S. P. 2 B. & P. 124, n.: and see Lloyd v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 484.

To an action of covenant by tenants in common for not repairing a messuage; plea, that the lessee, after the demise to him, and before the breach complained of, had purchased the interest of one of the lessors, whereby the lessee became tenant in common of the premises with the plaintiffs:—Held, ill on general demurrer, and that the action was properly brought. Gates v. Cole, 5 Moore, 554; S. C. nom. Yates v. Cole, 2 B. & B. 660.

Assumpsit by A., B., and C., against D. as one of the indorsers of a promissory note drawn by E. in favour of C., D., and (himself) E., then in partnership, and by them indorsed to A., B., and C.:—Plea in bar, that C., one of the plaintiffs, was liable as an indorser together with D.:—Held, good on special demurrer. Mainwaring v. Newman, 2 B. & P. 120.

Different plaintiffs who have different rights may each sue the same defendant in respect of separate injuries, though arising out of one transaction. Knight v. Legh, 4 Bing. 589; 1 M. & P. 528.

Quære, if money be paid by two persons for the benefit of a third, whether they ought to bring a joint action for the whole sum, or separate actions for the sum each has advanced. May v. May, 1 C. & P. 44: and see Id. 336. See also Osborne v. Harper, 5 East, 225. Brand v. Boulcott, 3 B. & P. 235.

The criterion by which the property of the joinder or nonjoinder of parties to a covenant in an action for breaches is to be ascertained, is the nature of the interest of the covenantees. If the interest be several, the action may be several; if joint, it must be joint; and the terms or language of the covenant do not control that principle. James v. Emery, 5 Price, 529; 2 Moore, 195.

Where several persons, jointly interested, agreed to horse a coach, each of them one stage, on the road from L. to B., and that, in case of default, one of them should sue the defaulter for a penalty, which should be divided among the non-defaulters:—Held, that an action might be maintained on the agreement, against a defaulter, by the party so appointed to sue, and that the others need not join in the action. Radenhurst v. Bates, 3 Bing. 463; 11 Moore, 421.

An action cannot be maintained jointly by two plaintiffs, where the wrong done to one is no wrong done to the other. Where, therefore, an action was brought and a verdict obtained by two plaintiffs against a defendant for a malicious arrest, the declaration alleging, by way of special damage, the false imprisonment of both as well as the expenses incurred by them, the court ordered the judgment to be arrested. But the jury, having by their verdict confined the damages to the expenses which the plaintiffs had been jointly put to in procuring their liberty, the court ordered the postea to be amended. Barratt v. Collins, 10 Moore, 446.

A landlord demised to three jointly, and two of them, without his consent, assigned their interest to the other; the landlord having distrained the goods of the plaintiff on the premises for rent:—Held, that a joint action would lie against the three for money paid by him to redeem the goods so taken by the landlord as a distress. Exall v. Partridge, 8 T. R. 308; 3 Esp. 8.

Two of three persons who were jointly and severally bound in a bond of indemnity to the sheriff, in a matter in which they are severally interested, cannot, after having paid the whole, join in an action against the third for contribution. Kelby v. Steel, 5 Esp. 194. Ellenborough.

The several members of a club, associated for the purpose of buying coals, and dividing them in proportion amongst themselves, cannot maintain separate actions for penalties against the seller. Everett q. t. v. Tindall, 5 Esp. 169. Ellenborough.

The dippers at Tonbridge Wells all join and with their husbands bring an action against the defendant for exercising the business of a dipper, not being duly appointed and approved according to a private statute:—Held, a good joinder of action. Weller v. Baker, 2 Wils. 414.

So a herald and pursuivant at arms may maintain a joint action for work and labour in making out a pedigree, both having been on duty when the order was given, although only one of them was applied to by the defendant. Townsend v. Neal, 2 Camp. 190. Ellenborough.

Where one of several plaintiffs dissents to bringing the action, the court will not interpose, unless upon a suggestion of fraud. Emery v. Mucklow, 10 Bing. 23; 3 M. & Scott.

Defendants.—In all actions on contracts, the plaintiff is obliged to sue all the contracting parties; but in actions for torts, he may sue all the parties implicated, or any one of them. Scott v. Godwin, 1 B. & P. 67; S. P. Sutton v. Clarke, 6 Taunt. 29; 1 Marsh. 429.

The same plaintiff may bring separate actions against several parties, in respect of the same injury, where he does not obtain adequate redress in the action against the party first sued. Morris v. Robinson, 5 D. & R. 35; 3 B. & C. 196.

In trespass against several, the plaintiff can only recover against all for matters in which all are jointly implicated. Aaron v. Alexander, 3 Camp. 35. Ellenborough.

So in trover. Nicholl v. Glennie, 1 M. & S. 588.

Joint contractors must be all sued, although one has become bankrupt and obtained his certificate; and if not sued, the others may plead in abatement. Bovill v. Wood, 2 M. & S. 23; 2 Rose 155: and see Hawkins v. Ramsbottom, 6 Taunt. 179. But see 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, ss. 3, 9, 10.

By a local act for the government of the poor of the parish of G., the churchwardens and overseers, and nine guardians and directors, or any five or more of them, were empowered to contract for the supply of the poor with provisions, and the parochial funds were directed to be paid into the hands of a treasurer, who was to apply the money under the orders of the governors and directors. Where the plaintiff contracted with the governors and directors for supplying the poor-house with goods, and acted under the orders of the churchwardens and overseers:—Held, that the latter were personally liable, and that the plaintiff was not bound to join the governors and directors in the action. Lambert v. Knott, 6 D. & R. 122.

Where a party of several persons dine together at a tavern, they are jointly liable for the whole expense, and not merely each for his own share. Forster v. Taylor, 3 Camp. 49. Ellenborough.

In an action, if it appear that the plaintiff has once given credit to A. he cannot afterwards shift his claim, so as to charge B. or any other person. Leggat v. Reid, 1 C. & P. 16. Park. And see Taylor v. Britton, Id. Garrow.

V. FORM OF ACTION.

1. Account or Assumpsit.

Assumpsit as well as account lies to recover the balance of a banker's account, however voluminous it may be. Tomkins v. Willshear, 5 Taunt. 431; S. C. nom. Tomkins v. Wiltshire, 1 Marsh. 115.

And merely the length of the account forms no objection to the action. Arnold v. Webb, 5 Taunt. 432, n. Dampier.

But ruled at Nisi Prius, that, upon a running account current between a merchant and a broker, an action of account should be brought instead of assumpsit. Scott v. McIntosh, 2 Camp. 238. Ellenborough.

2. Assumpsit or Case.

The plaintiff may waive a tort or trespass, and bring indebitatus assumpsit where it is for the benefit of the defendant. Feltham v. Tyrrell, Lofft, 207, 261. S. C. nom. Feltham v. Terry, Cowp. 419.

The master of an apprentice who has been seduced from his service to work for another person, may waive the tort, and bring an action of indebitatus assumpsit for work and labour done by his apprentice, against the person who tortiously employed him. Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112.

Where the plaintiff's apprentice deserted from his ship, and went on board the defendant's, and secreted himself until the ship sailed, when he discovered himself to the defendant, who carried him to H., to which place he worked his passage, receiving his food; and during their passage to H. the plaintiff's and defendant's ships were within hail, but defendant did not make known to plaintiff that he had the apprentice on board; and on the arrival of the defendant's ship at H. the apprentice wished to leave her, but defendant persuaded him to remain, promising him either wages, or clothes and pocket-money, under which persuasion the apprentice sailed with him to E., and did duty as one of the crew, but received no wages, or clothes, or pocket-money:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to waive the tort, and bring assumpsit against defendant for the work and labour of his apprentice, and to recover a reasonable compensation for the services of the apprentice from H. to E. Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & S. 191.

Assumpsit lies instead of trover for the value of goods where there was a lawful taking, but an unlawful detaining. Hitchin v. Campbell, Loft. 208; 3 Wils. 304; 2 W. Black, 779, 827.

Where goods are taken in execution and sold under a warrant of distress, grounded on a conviction which is afterwards quashed, the owner may waive the tort, and bring an action for money had and received. Feltham v. Terry, Cowp. 419; S. C. nom. Feltham v. Tyrell, Loft. 207, 261.

A. was left in the possession of a refuse spar, produced from a lead mine, situate in land demised to B., (as tenant from year to year), and paid rent for the spar to B.'s landlord, and exercised dominion over it by disposing of it as his property; C. from time to time entered upon the land and carried away portions of the spar, for the value of which A. brought an action of assumpsit: after a verdict, finding that B. had an interest in the spar, and had not surrendered it to his landlord:—Held, that the latter could not convey such a title to A. as would enable him (supposing his possession was clearly established) to waive the tortious taking and bring assumpsit for the value of the spar, in the absence of an express contract of sale, though the tenant had never disturbed his possession. Lee v. Shore, 2 D. & R. 198; 1 B. & C. 94.

Two several firms, respectively carrying on the business of bankers in the same country town, were in the habit of changing notes and securities with each other, and settling their balances by a prescribed mode. One of the firms became bankrupt; and at the time of the act of bankruptcy each firm had in their possession notes and securities of the other to nearly the same amount. The provisional assignee of the bankrupt firm being apprized of this fact, presented and obtained payment of the notes of the solvent firm, partly at their bank, and partly at the house of their agents in London, who did not know the situation in which the parties stood: Held, that the solvent firm might sue the provisional assignee for the amount of the notes in assumpsit for money had and received, though the conduct of the latter savoured of tort. Edmeads v. Newman, 2 D. & R. 568; 1 B. & C. 418.

If the miller to a vendor of corn receive an order from such vendor to deliver a quantity of flour to the vendee, and actually deliver a part under several sub-orders from the agent of the vendee, and afterwards refuse to deliver the remainder, on the ground of his having no more of the vendor's flour in his possession, the vendee may maintain trover against him, and will not be put to bring a special action of assumpsit on an implied promise to deliver the whole. Smith v. Cook, 2 C. & P. 276. Best.

In an action against three, wherein the plaintiff declared that they had the loading of a hogshead of the plaintiff's, for a certain reward to be paid to one of them, and a certain other reward to the other two, and that the defendants so negligently conducted themselves in the loading, &c., that the hogshead was damaged:—Held, that the gist of the action was the tort, and not the contract out of which it arose; and, therefore, that on plea of not guilty, the two being acquitted, judgment might be had against the third, who was found guilty. Govett v. Radnige, 3 East, 62.

In case for a deceit in a warranty made by two upon a joint sale by both, of sheep, their joint property, the plaintiff cannot recover upon proof of a contract of sale and warranty by one only, as of his separate property; the action, though laid in tort, being founded on the joint contract alleged. Weall v. King, 12 East, 452.

Assumpsit lies for the value of a lamb belonging to the plaintiff, drove to London and sold by the defendant, unless it has been stolen, in which case trover is the only proper remedy. Simpson v. Gisting, Bull. N. P. 131.

In an action on the case, against the proprietors of a stage coach, to recover damages for an injury sustained by a passenger, in consequence of their coachman having upset the coach on which he was riding, the declaration may be framed in case, for a breach of duty by the negligence of the defendant's servants; and proof of a contract is not necessary to support such action, as against common carriers, as they may be sued in trespass on the case for the injury, as arising ex delicto: and such actions are not necessarily to be considered quasi ex contractu, or founded on contract; and therefore, if framed in case, the rules of pleading as applicable to case prevail, and not such as apply to contracts. Brotherton v. Wood (in error), 6 Moore, 141; 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

Therefore, a verdict recovered against some of several defendants, in an action against them all, was held to be consistent with the form of action in trespass on the case, and that it was not in substance an action bottomed on contract, but might be supported against some of the defendants, by proof of the injury sustained by the plaintiff; although a verdict of not guilty was found for the others. Brotherton v. Wood (in error), 6 Moore, 141; 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

3. Assumpsit or Covenant.

Where parties contract by deed, but the defendant does not execute it, the plaintiff may sue in assumpsit, notwithstanding the deed. Sutherland, v. Lishnan, 3 Esp. 42. Eldon.

But where a ship was let to freight by charter-party, a clause in the deed, that "it was thereby covenanted and agreed by and between the said parties, that forty days should be allowed for unloading and loading again," &c. was held to raise an implied covenant on the part of the freighter not to detain the ship for loading and unloading, &c. beyond the forty days; and if he detain her for any longer time, the owner's remedy is covenant and not assumpsit, as upon an implied new contract. Randal v. Lynch, 12 East, 179; S. C. not S. P. 2 Camp. 352.

Assumpsit lies where a sealed charter-party was afterwards altered by parol, where the subsequent parol contract was distinct from, and not inconsistent with the contract by deed; being anterior to it in point of time and execution. White v. Parkin, 12 East, 578: and see Davies v. Hawkins, 3 M. & S. 488.

The plaintiffs having contracted by charter-party sealed to let a ship, then in the Thames, to freight to the defendants for eight months, to commence from the day of her sailing from Gravesend on the voyage there stated, and having covenanted that she should sail from the Thames to any British port in the English Channel, there to load such goods as the freighters should tender, and sail to the West Indies, and bring back a return cargo to London, afterwards agreed by parol with the defendants, that the ship, instead of loading at some port in the Channel, should load in the Thames, and that the freight should commence from her entry outwards at the custom-house:—Held, that this subsequent parol contract was distinct from, and not inconsistent with the contract by deed, being anterior to it in point of time and execution, and might therefore be enforced by action of assumpsit. Id.

So where the plaintiff covenanted to sail from London to Gibraltar, and there to deliver an outward cargo, and receive from the agents of the freighter at Gibraltar, or at Malaga, Cadiz, or Seville, as should be ordered by the agents at Gibraltar, such goods as they might load on board for the homeward cargo, and that the vessel should return direct to the port of London, and deliver the homeward cargo; and the agents at Gibraltar ordered the plaintiff to proceed to Cadiz, at which place other agents directed by parol that the homeward cargo should be delivered at Liverpool instead of London:—Held, that the plaintiff having delivered the cargo at Liverpool could not recover the freight, the substitution by parol of Liverpool for London being inconsistent with the covenant contained in the charter-party, Thomson v. Brown, 1 Moore, 358; 7 Taunt. 656.

Where a cargo consisting of oranges had been materially damaged through the improper conduct of the captain, who was also a part owner of the vessel, and the freighters brought an action on the case against him and his copartners, for negligence in the conveyance of the goods:—Held, that such action was well brought, although the captain had entered into a charter-party under seal with the freighters, by which he engaged to convey the cargo to its port of destination; it not appearing from that instrument that he possessed any other character or interest than that of commander or master. Leslie v. Wilson, 6 Moore, 415; 3 B. & B. 171.

Assumpsit lies upon an express promise, for the amount of a balance struck on a partnership account, though there was a covenant between the parties to account. Moravia v. Levy, 2 T. R. 483, n.

Where two enter into articles of partnership for seven years, in which is a covenant to account yearly, and to adjust and make a final settlement at the expiration of the partnership, and they dissolve the partnership before the seven years are expired, and account together, and strike a balance which is in favour of the plaintiff, including several items not connected with the partnership, and the defendant promises to pay it, an action of assumpsit lies on such express promise. Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479.

A servant who has contracted with a feme covert by deed, and performed the stipulated service, may have an action of assumpsit against the husband. White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176; 1 Esp. 200.

A tenant under a lease cannot maintain assumpsit on an implied promise, for money paid under a distress by a superior landlord: the remedy is covenant, on the express contract. Schlenker v. Moxey, 5 D. & R. 747; 3 B. & C. 789; S. C. not S. P. 1 C. & P. 178.

Quære, if B. assign the lease of a house to A. by deed, subject to certain covenants, and A. take possession, whether B.'s remedy for a breach of the covenants is by an action of covenant, though A. never executed the deed. Hawkins v. Sherman, 3 C. & P. 459.

Assumpsit or case, not covenant, will lie by lessee against his assignee, who had afterwards assigned his interest to another person, for breaches of covenant in the original lease, for which the lessor had recovered against the lessee. Burnett v. Lynch, 8 D. & R. 368; 5 B. & C. 589; but see Jones v. Hill, 7 Taunt. 392; 1 Moore, 100.

A. covenants by deed to do work for B., the remuneration to be fixed by C.—C. fraudulently awards that nothing is due. A. cannot sue B. in assumpsit. Churchill v. Day, 3 M. & R. 71.

In an action for money had and received, the defendant, as an answer to the action, put in one part of a deed of covenant, executed by the plaintiff, whereby the defendant covenanted to pay over all monies received by him on account of the plaintiffs; notice having been given to the plaintiffs to produce the counterpart of this deed:—Held, that the defendant's having possession of the plaintiff's part of the deed, was presumptive evidence that he had executed the counterpart; and that this was equally a ground of nonsuit, whether the counterpart had been lost or not. East India Comp. v. Lewis, 3 C. & P. 358—Tenterden.

4. Assumpsit or Debt.

In an action for money lost by stock-jobbing, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, the plaintiff declared in assumpsit instead of debt; the court allowed the declaration to be amended by changing its form to debt. Billing v. Flight, 2 Marsh. 124; 6 Taunt. 419: and see Billing v. Pulley, 2 Marsh. 125, n.; 6 Taunt. 422.

Where a surety bound with his principal for the payment of money by instalments, takes a bond as a security, he cannot maintain an action of assumpsit. Toussaint v. Martinant, 2 T. R. 100.

But the assignee of a Scotch bond may maintain an action of assumpsit here against the obligor, in his own name. Innes v. Dunlop (Bart.), 8 T. R. 595.

5. Debt or Case.

A navigation act (34 Geo. 3, c. 53) empowered a company to sue for calls "by action of debt or on the case":—Held, that an action on the case in tort lay. Huddersfield Canal Com. v. Buckley, 7 T. R. 36.

6. Covenant or Case.

Case, in nature of waste, will lie against a tenant for years after the expiration of his term, as well as covenant, for the breach of those contained in his lease. Kinlyside v. Thornton, 2 W. Black. 1111.

Case (not covenant) lies by the assignor against the assignee of a lease, assigned by deed-poll, upon his implied duty to perform the covenants in the original lease, although the assignor has, by the assignment, parted with all his interest; and although assumpsit might lie, case was the better form of action for the injury sustained by the assignor in consequence of the assignee's breaches of covenant. Burnett v. Lynch, 8 D. & R. 368; 5 B. & C. 589.

7. Case or Trespass.

(a) Generally.

Upon this point the distinction is, that where the injury is immediate from an act of force done by the defendant, the remedy is in trespass; where the injury is only consequential to an act before done by the defendant, then an action on the case lies. Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 593; 5 Esp.

18: S. P. Day v. Edwards, 5 T. R. 648; Lotan v. Cross, and Covell v. Laming, 1 Camp. 498.

Trespass lies for originally throwing a squib, which, after having been thrown about in self-defence by other persons, at last put out the plaintiff's eye. Scott v. Shepherd, 2 W. Black. 892; 3 Wils. 403.

The captain of a merchant ship is liable in trespass, for procuring a mutinous seaman to be flogged and imprisoned in a foreign port by the local authorities, if he took an active part in the proceedings, and did not merely leave the local authorities to act as they thought fit. Aitken v. Bodwell, M. & M. 68—Tenterden.

A master is not liable in trespass for the wilful act of his servant, done without his direction or assent; but he is liable to answer for any damage arising from the negligence or unskilfulness of his servant acting in the course of his employ. McManus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106: and see Brucker v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659.

A stable-keeper, who lets horses on hire, which are injured by the defendant having driven a cart against them, should bring case for the injury, and not trespass. Hall v. Pickard, 3 Camp. 187—Ellenborough.

But if his own servant have the care of the horses, he may maintain trespass. Dean v. Branthwaite, 5 Esp. 35—Ellenborough.

Where injury is occasioned by the carelessness and negligence of the defendant, the plaintiff is at liberty to bring an action on the case, notwithstanding the act be immediate, so long as it is not a wilful act. Williams v. Holland, 10 Bing. 112.

Trespass lies for procuring by awe, fear, and influence, and contrary to his own inclination, a sovereign, independent, absolute prince to imprison the plaintiff. Rafael v. Verelst, 2 W. Black. 983, 1055.

If A. states positively to the commander of a pressgang that B. is liable to the impress service, who in truth is not so, and B. in consequence of this information is impressed, A. is liable to an action of trespass and false imprisonment at the suit of B. Flewster v. Royle, 1 Camp 187—Ellenborough.

(b) Injuries by Carriages and Cattle.

Where one accidentally drives his carriage against another's the remedy is trespass, and not case; the injury being immediate upon the act done, though he were no otherwise blameable than in driving on the wrong side of the road on a dark night. Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 593; 5 Esp. 18.

An action on the case, stating that the defendant's servant wilfully drove against the plaintiff's carriage, whereby it was damaged, cannot be supported, and the court will arrest the judgment after verdict. Savignac v. Roome, 6 T. R. 125.

An action on the case for a personal injury, in consequence of the negligent, careless, and improper driving of the horse and chaise of the defendant against the plaintiff:—Held to have been proper in form; although the evidence proved that the act was violent, and the injury which resulted, immediate. Graham, B., dissentiente. Lloyd v. Needham, 11 Price, 608.

An action on the case, and not an action of trespass, is the proper remedy for an injury done to the plaintiff's carriage by the servant of the defendant negligently driving his carriage against it. Morley v. Gaisford, 2 H. Black. 442.

It is a direct trespass to injure the person of another by driving a carriage against a carriage wherein such person is sitting, although the last-mentioned carriage be not the property nor in the possession of the person injured. Hopper v. Reeve, 7 Taunt. 698; 1 Moore, 407.

A declaration in case for driving a cart against the plaintiff's horse with force and violence alleging it to have been done "by and through the mere negligence, inattention, and want of proper care" of the defendant:—Held good, on demurrer for not being in trespass. Rogers v. Imbleton, 2 N. R. 117.

But a plaintiff cannot declare in case for so furiously driving a cart, that by the improper conduct of the defendant it was driven with great force against the plaintiff's carriage, per quod the loss happened, his proper remedy being trespass. Day v. Edwards, 5 T. R. 648.

Trespass is also the proper remedy for killing the plaintiff's horse, though the injury arose from negligence. Sheldrick v. Aberly, 1 Esp. 55—Kenyon.

A declaration in case, against three proprietors of a stage coach, stated that the coach was under the care of the defendants, and that through their negligence the coach ran against the plaintiff, and injured him; the evidence was, that one of the defendants was driving when the accident happened; the jury found that the accident was occasioned by his negligent driving: Held, that the plaintiff might maintain case against all the proprietors. Semble, that he might have maintained trespass against the one who was driving. Moreton v. Harden, 6 D. & R. 275; 4 B. & C. 223.

Where a master and servant are together in a vehicle, and an accident occurs, from which an immediate injury ensues, the master is liable in trespass and not case, although the servant was driving, and not only no evidence is given on the part of the plaintiff of any interference on the master's part, but the evidence on the part of the defendant distinctly negatives any interference; so that the mere presence of the master with the servant will constitute him a trespasser, if the act of the servant amount to a trespass. Chandler v. Broughton, 1 C. & M. 29.

(c) Injuries to Ships.

If one ship run against another by the negligence of the pilot, while the owner is on board; the remedy against the owner is an action on the case, and not trespass. Huggett v. Montgomery, 2 N. R. 446.

But it was held, at Nisi Prius, that trespass would lie where the defendant was himself at the helm. Covell v. Laming, 1 Camp. 497—Ellenb.

If A. wilfully run his vessel against B.'s, and damage ensues, B. may bring trespass; but if A. so negligently steer his vessel that it run foul of B.'s, then case is the proper action. Ogle v. Barnes, 8 T. R. 188.

A declaration in case for sinking a boat, which, after averring a nonfeasance as the cause, stated the defendant to have acted with great force and violence in accomplishing the injury:—Held sufficient, on error brought because it should have been trespass, and not case, and because the two actions were mixed. Turner v. Hawkins, 1 B. & P. 472.

If one of a ship's crew does a wilful act of injury to another ship, without any direction from or privity of the master, trespass cannot be maintained against the master, although he was on board at the time. Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568.

The proper remedy for taking an excessive distress is case upon the statute of Marlbridge, 52 H. 3, c. 4. Hutchins v. Whitaker, 2 Ld. Ken. 204; S.C. nom. Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 581.

Even though the tenant had tendered the rent due to his landlord before the distress was levied. Branscomb (Lady) v. Bridges, 2 D. & R. 256; 1 B. & C. 145; 3 Stark. 171.

Case lies, as well as trespass, for an excessive distress after tender of the rent due. Holland v. Bird, 10 Bing. 15.

A tenant, tendering his rent after distress taken, but before it is impounded or removed, may maintain trespass for a subsequent removal of the distress. Virtue v. Beasley, 1 M. & Rob. 21—Parke.

Trespass will not lie for merely an irregular distress. Messing v. Kemble, 2 Camp. 115—Ellen.

The true construction of stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19, § 19, is, that an action of trespass or case must be brought with reference to the nature of the irregularity. Id.

But trespass will lie for continuing on the premises, and disturbing the plaintiff's possession after the time allowed by law. Winterbourne v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 117; 11 East, 395; S. P. Etherington v. Popplewell, 1 East, 139.

And trespass, and not case, is the proper remedy for taking goods under an irregular distress since the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, § 19. Wallace v. King, 1 H. Black. 13.

Case is not maintainable for detaining cattle distrained damage feasant, where a tender of sufficient amends was made after the impounding. Sheriff v. James, 8 Moore, 334; 1 Bing. 341: and see Anscomb v. Shore, 1 Taunt. 261; 1 Camp. 285, 290.

Where goods are distrained which are not liable, an action of trover may be brought by the owner without a demand and refusal. Ward v. Ventom, Peake's Add. Cas. 126—Kenyon.

(e) Tortious Legal Proceedings.

Where a justice of the peace maliciously grants

a warrant against a person without any information upon a supposed charge of felony, the remedy against the justice is trespass, and not case. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225.

Upon an imprisonment under a warrant for felony after an acquittal, of which the defendant had notice, the proper action is trespass, and not case. Webb v. Allen (in error), 1 Anst. 261.

Trespass lies against the attorney who had sued out the ca. sa. against the defendant, and delivered it himself to the officer, who by his order arrested him thereon. Barker v. Braham, 2 W. Black. 866; 3 Wils. 368: and see Rogers v. Popkin, 2 Stark. 404.

But case, and not trespass, lies, for falsely, maliciously, and without any probable cause, procuring the warrant of a magistrate to search the premises, and apprehend the person of the plaintiff on suspicion of felony, and thereby causing his premises to be searched and his person imprisoned. Elsee v. Smith (in error), 1 D. & R. 97; 2 Chit 304.

If A., having been robbed, suspect B. to be guilty, and take him and deliver him into the charge of a constable present, B. (if innocent) may maintain trespass against A. Stonehouse v. Elliott, 6 T. R. 315: 1 Esp. 272.

(f) Crim. Con. and Seduction.

An action for debauching plaintiff's daughter, per quod servitum amisit, is an action of trespass, Woodward v. Walton, 2 N. R. 476.

Quære, whether an action for criminal conversation is in its nature an action of trespass or on the case. Macfadzen v. Olivant, 6 East, 387; 2 Smith, 486.

Where a declaration for seducing plaintiff's daughter was framed in trespass, but omitted the words "with force and arms:"—Held, that the objection was cured by verdict. Parker v. Bailey, 4 D. & R. 215.

The declaration for crim. con. held in effect to be in case, not trespass. Cook v. Sayer, 2 Ld. Ken. 371.

(g) Other Cases.

Both case and trespass will lie for a voluntary waste committed by a tenant holding over after the expiration of a regular notice to quit. Burchell v. Hornsby, 1 Camp. 360—Ellenborough.

An action on the case, and not trespass, is the proper remedy for nailing a board so as to overhang the plaintiff's close. Pickering v. Rudd, 4 Camp. 219; 1 Stark. 56—Ellenborough.

So, for the continuance of an act (as driving holds-fast) for which trespass lies, and in which form of action the plaintiff has before recovered. Lawrence v. Obee, 1 Stark. 22—Ellenborough. & C. not S. P. 3 Camp. 514.

Where the plaintiffs, who were employed as contractors to complete a navigable canal, erected a dam composed of wood and earth, with the consent of the owner of the soil:—Held, that they might maintain trespass against the defendants as wrong-doers for breaking and destroying the same, and that an action on the case would not lie. Dyson v. Collick, 1 D. & R. 225; 5 B. & A. 600

VI.—ELECTION OF ACTION.

The court of C. P. will not compel a party, who has proceeded both by indictment and action for the same assault, to make his election upon which he will rely. Jones v. Clay, 1 B. & P. 191: S. P. Murphy v. Cadell, 2 B. & P. 137.

A person who has preferred an indictment for an assault, from which he did not suffer any personal injury, and has succeeded in it, and has received from the treasury a portion of the fine imposed upon the defendant, is not entitled, in an action against the same defendant to recover more than nominal damages. Jacks v. Bell, 3 C. & P. 316—Tenterden.

The plaintiff being indicted for felony, sued a banker for money the plaintiff had paid him, which was surmised to be the produce of the felony; the Court of C. P., on application, will give time to plead in a month after the trial of the indictment. Deakin v. Praed, 4 Taunt. 825.

After an acquittal of the defendant upon an indictment for a felonious assault upon the plaintiff by stabbing him, the plaintiff may maintain trespass to recover damages for the civil injury, if he be not shown to have colluded in procuring such acquittal. Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 409.

A plaintiff was put to his election where suing in the Court of Chancery, and in a foreign court of law. Pieters v. Thompson, Coop. C. C. 294.

Where a vessel is seized and returned forfeited for smuggling, and the seizing officer also prosecutes in the Admiralty as for a prize, the Court of Exchequer will not make him elect. Att. Gen. v. Appleby, 3 Anst. 863.

VII.—ABATEMENT OF ACTION.

1. By Death of Parties.

What Proceedings abate.—Where the cause of action is money due, or a contract to be performed, gain or acquisition by the labour or property of another, or a promise by a testator expressed or implied, the action survives against the executor; otherwise, if it be a tort, or arises ex delicto, supposed to be by force, and against the peace. Hambly v. Trott, Cowp. 375.

An action for libel abates by the death of the plaintiff after the signing of interlocutory judgment, and execution of a writ of inquiry, but before the next day in bank. Ireland v. Champneys, 4 Taunt. 384.

The stat. 17 Car. 2, c. 8, which enacted, that in certain cases a suit shall not be abated by the death of either party between verdict and judgment, does not apply to cases of nonsuit. Dowbiggen v. Harrison, 10 B & C. 480.

The plaintiff, being nonsuited, obtained a rule nisi for a new trial: afterwards, and before the rule came on for argument, the defendant died:

Held, that the suit did not thereby abate. Bull v. Price, 5 M. & P. 10; 7 Bing. 237.

If an ejectment be against two, and one die after issue joined, but before trial, the death must be suggested on the roll; but the judgment need not say quod querens nil capiat per billam against the dead defendant; and it is not to be for a moiety only, but that he recover his term. Far v. Denn, 1 Burr. 362.

Where husband and wife commenced an action for money lent by the wife before marriage, and she died pending the action:—Held, that it thereby abated, and that defendant could not afterwards have judgment as in case of nonsuit. Checchi v. Powell, 6 B. & C. 253; 9 D. & R. 243.

The 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 11, § 7, applies to writs of error, and therefore a writ of error does not abate by the death of one of several plaintiffs in error. Clark v. Rippon, 1 B. & A. 586.

A writ of error was brought in K. B. in the life of King George I. but was not argued till after the accession of King George II. when the judgment was affirmed: on a writ of error in parliament this judgment was reversed: it being held that the first writ of error (the king being the sole plaintiff in the cause), was absolutely abated. Armagh (Archbishop) v. Att. Gen. 3 Bro. P. C. 507.

Though a writ of error abate by the death of the plaintiff in error, before it be returned and certified, yet execution cannot afterwards be issued on the judgment without the leave of the court. Kinnaird (Lord) v. Lyall, 7 East, 296; 3 Smith, 280.

Therefore the court refused leave for the plaintiff below to issue a test, fi. fa., tested in the last term on the return day of the original fi. fa., which was after the allowance and service of the writ of error. Id.

Where an action is brought on a judgment recovered in K. B., and after the judgment the defendant brings a writ of error, and obtains a rule to stay proceedings in the mean time, and the plaintiff dies before judgment affirmed, the court will not permit judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc. Bates v. Lockwood, 1 T. R. 637.

Death before Judgment.—Where the defendant died before the time given to plead expired, and judgment was signed after with process thereon: Held irregular. Wallop v. Jewin, 1 Wils. 315.

The death of the defendant between the commission-day and day of trial is not a ground for setting aside a verdict for the plaintiff. Jacobs v. Miniconi, 7 T. R. 31.

If a defendant die on the night before the trial of a cause at the sittings in term, a verdict obtained in such cause, and the judgment entered up thereon, will be set aside upon application to the court. Taylor v. Harris, 3 B. & P. 549.

Where a plaintiff dies after verdict but before judgment, it must be entered as of the term, the plaintiff having lived over the day in bank. Barker v. Steers, 1 Ld. Ken. 378.

If the plaintiff die after verdict for the defendant, and the defendant does not enter up judgment within two terms after the verdict, the Court of C. P. have no authority to permit it to be entered up afterwards nunc pro tunc. Copley v. Day, 4 Taunt. 702.

Where, at the Spring Assizes, 1826, a cause was referred, a verdict having been taken for the plaintiff, subject, as to damages, to an award, and the arbitrator published his award, which, in the Michaelmas term following, was set aside; after which, in Hilary term, plaintiff obtained a rule nisi to issue execution, unless the defendants would consent again to refer the cause, which rule was discharged:—Held, the plaintiff having died in Sept, 1826, that the court had no power to grant an application made in Hilary term, that judgment might be entered up as of the Michaelmas term preceding. If the plaintiff die after verdict for him, and no judgment is entered up within two terms after the verdict, the court will not interfere, and permit it to be entered nunc pro tunc, where laches are imputable to the party interested in the judgment. Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 368.

If a defendant die pending the argument on a point reserved, on which judgment of nonsuit is afterwards given, his representatives are entitled, upon application to the court, to enter up the judgment of the term next after the trial, that they may get the costs of the nonsuit. Toulmin v. Anderson, 1 Taunt. 385.

Proceedings allowed by the court to be carried on by consent after the plaintiff's death since the first day of term after verdict, and the judgment to be entered as in his lifetime. Pond v. King, 1 Wils. 124.

Where a plaintiff dies after a verdict, and before the day in bank, although the judgment be right, yet a sci. fa. must be awarded before execution. Earl v. Brown, 1 Wils. 302.

A verdict was taken for the plaintiff in Hilary term, 1832, by consent, subject to a reference: the arbitrator made an award in favour of the plaintiff after the expiration of Easter term; the defendant having died in the meantime; on motion made in the following Michaelmas term, the court allowed judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc, as of Trinity term, notwithstanding more than two terms had elapsed since the verdict was taken. Miller v. Spurrs, 2 M. & Scott, 730.

An executor may, under the stat. 17 Car. 2, c. 8, s. 1, enter up judgment on a verdict obtained by his testator in an action for libel. Palmer v. Cohen, 2 B. & Adol. 966.

Death after Judgment.—A judgment may be entered up for a defendant as of the term when pronounced if he was then alive, though he may have died afterwards. Norwich (Mayor) v. Berry, 4 Burr. 2277; S. C. not S. P. 1 W. Black. 696.

A cognovit was given on the 8th Feb. in Hilary term, with a defeazance for payment on the 1st April ensuing, and defendant died in Hilary vacation, before 1st April:—Held, that a judgment entered up on the 10th April, in Hilary vacation, after defendant's death, was regular, as relating to the first day of Hilary term. Calvert v. Tomlin, 5 Bing, 1; 2 M. & P. 1.

Defendant in Execution.—Where a defendant has been once charged in execution:—Held, that upon the death of the plaintiff, his executors were not bound to revive the judgment by sci. fa, or to charge the defendant in execution de novo. King v. Millet, and Combrune v. —, 1 Tidd's Prac. 370.

The Court of C. P. will discharge a defendant out of custody in execution after the plaintiff's death, if it appear that the next of kin do not intend to take out administration on service of the rule nisi on the next of kin. Parkinson v. Horlock, 2 N. R. 240.

So that court will discharge a defendant out of custody, who is in execution at the suit of a plaintiff some time since deceased, on whose part no will has been proved, nor any administration granted; and whose family, on notice of a motion for the above purpose, declines interfering. Broughton v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 176.

But they refused to discharge a defendant out of custody in execution at the suit of a plaintiff, although the application was not made until eighteen months after the death of the latter; it appearing that he had appointed executors who were still alive, and had not assented to the discharge. Dunsford v. Gouldsmith, 8 Moore, 145.

The plaintiff having charged the defendant in execution, died; the defendant's wife took out administration to the plaintiff; then the court ordered the defendant to be discharged out of custody, saying, that the plaintiff's attorney had no lien on the judgment for his costs. Pyne v. Erle, 8 T. R. 407.

Where administration had been taken out to the plaintiff's effects, the court refused to discharge a defendant out of custody in execution, after the death of the plaintiff, although the administratrix and his assignees (he having also become bankrupt) disclaimed all interest in the action, having merely sued as a trustee. Fothergill v. Watton, 1 M. & P. 743; 4 Bing. 711.

The administratrix being herself competent to discharge. Id.

2. By Bankruptcy.

Between interlocutory and final judgment, the plaintiff became a bankrupt and sued out execution in his own name, and the Court of K. B. refused to set aside the proceedings, as an action does not abate by the plaintiff's becoming a bankrupt. Waugh v. Austen, 3 T. R. 437.

But the proper course is for the assignees to proceed to final judgment in his name, and then sue out a sci. fa. to make themselves parties in order to have execution. Hewitt v. Mantell, 2 Wils. 372.

So where he becomes bankrupt pending a suit in error. Kretchman v. Beyer (in error), 1. T. R. 463.

The plaintiff, after judgment and a writ of error allowed, having become a bankrupt, his assignees cannot sue out a sci. fa. in their own names, to compel an assignment till some judgment be given, and then it must be done immediately; but they should go on with the writ of error in the bankrupt's name till judgment. Kretchman v. Beyer (in error), 1 T. R. 463.

By the bankruptcy of the plaintiff pending an account, the suit is abated. Williams v. Kinder, 4 Ves. jun. 387.

Where there are two plaintiffs, and one of them only becomes bankrupt, the bill may be dismissed upon the usual motion. Caddick v. Mason, 1 Simon, 501.

Proceedings shall not be stayed because the defendant had become bankrupt. James v. Penrice, Lofft, 65.

Where a plaintiff became bankrupt after interlocutory judgment, and writ of inquiry awarded, which was executed in his own name, it was held good without suing out a sci. fa. at the suit of his assignees. Bibbins v. Mantel, 2 Wils. 358.

Where a plaintiff was discharged after verdict, under an insolvent act:—Held, by K. B., that his assignees might make use of his name in entering up judgment and taking out execution. Abbis v. Barnard, 2 Tidd's Prac. 967.

Where a plaintiff replied bankruptcy to part of the defendant's plea and demurred as to the rest, upon which there was a joinder in demurrer; the defendant could not avail himself of the bankruptcy to deprive plaintiff of his judgment on demurrer. Davis v. Penton, 9 D. & R. 369.

To an action of debt on an Irish judgment, the defendant pleaded that the judgment was entered up on a warrant of attorney given to the plaintiff to secure payment of a bond: that after the bond and warrant of attorney were given, and before the judgment was entered up, the plaintiff became bankrupt, and the debt in question was vested in his assignee, who had brought an action on the judgment before that commenced by the plaintiff, and that the same was still depending:—Held, that the plaintiff was the person by whom the judgment ought to have been entered up, though after his bankruptcy; that in so doing, and in bringing the action, he might be considered as a trustee for his creditors; and the pendency of the other action as here pleaded was no defence. Gwinness v. Carroll, 1 B. & Adol. 459.

3. By Marriage of Feme Sole.

When a woman is sued as a feme sole, and between process and appearance marries:—Held, on error brought, that the writ did not abate. Anon. Lofft, 27.

After interlocutory judgment against a feme upon a contract she marries; yet the plaintiff may proceed to judgment and execution against her, without joining the husband by scire facias; and a capias ad satisfaciendum against her following the judgment is, at all events, regular, though the plaintiff had notice of the marriage before. Cooper v. Hunchin, 4 East, 521; 1 Smith, 282.

Ejectment against a feme sole who married before trial, and verdict and judgment against her by her original name:—Held, that it was regular to issue an habere facias possessionem and fi. fa. against her by the same name, though the fi. fa. was inoperative. Doe d. Taggart v. Butcher, 3 M. & S. 557.

And the Court refused to set aside the writ of execution, because the husband was not joined. Id.

1. ON MOTIONS AND RULES.

1. How intituled.

(a) Generally.

Names of Parties.—In affidavits to show cause against a rule, the christian as well as surnames of all parties, plaintiffs as well as defendants, must be inserted in the title. Fores v. Diemar, 7 T. R. 661; 2 East, 182: S. P. Noel v. —, 1 Smith, 457.

So an affidavit in support of a rule to set aside the service of a writ for irregularity, in an action against three persons, must be intituled with the names of all the defendants. Anon. 1 Chit. 728, n.

An affidavit intituled in the name of the plaintiff against "B. and another," as defendants, was held defective, as it should have described such defendants. Doe d. Spencer v. Want, 2 Moore, 722.

So affidavits intituled "A. B. and others against C. D." (without setting out the names of all the plaintiffs in the cause) cannot be read in showing cause against a rule; but the court will not make the rule absolute with costs upon such an objection. Bullman v. Callow, 1 Chit. 727.

The intituling of an affidavit by describing the plaintiff, as "gent. one, &c." the plaintiff not being an attorney, does not vitiate the affidavit, but the description may be rejected as surplusage. Reeves v. Crisp, 6 M. & S. 274.

Affidavits intituled in a cause, without giving the plaintiff the addition of "assignee," cannot be used in a cause where the plaintiff sues as assignee. Wright v. Hunt, 1 Dowl. P. C. 457.

Where in an affidavit the plaintiff in the title was styled "assignee," without further explanation, it was held bad. Steyner v. Cottrell, 3 Taunt. 377.

In a non-bailable action against two, one defendant may, before declaration, well style his affidavits "in a cause of A. against B., who is sued with C." Mackenzie v. Martin, 6 Taunt. 286.

If a plaintiff join several defendants in one common process, one upon whom it is regularly served applying before declaration to set it aside, may intitle his rule and affidavit in a cause of the plaintiff against himself only. Dand v. Barnes, 6 Taunt. 5; 1 Marsh. 403.

If affidavits which require a title be put in without, the court cannot take any notice of them though the counsel on the other side do not wish to take the objection. Owen v. Hurd, 2 T. R. 644.

Name of Court.—In C. P. a rule was discharged, because the affidavit on which the rule nisi was obtained was not intituled in any court, the words "in the" only being prefixed. Osborn v. Tatum, 1 B. & P. 271.

Affidavits not intituled in K. B., and sworn before a commissioner, &c., without stating him to be a commissioner of that court, cannot be read; but those sworn in court, or before a judge of the court, though not intituled "In the King's Bench," may be read. Rex v. Hare, 13 East, 189; and see Howard v. Brown, 4 Bing. 393.

An affidavit on a motion was intituled in the "Common Place:"—Held, sufficient. Rolfe v. Burke, 12 Moore, 298.

Now by a late rule, an affidavit sworn before a judge of any of the courts of K. B., C. P., or Exchequer, shall be received in the court to which such judge belongs, though not intituled of that court, but not in any other court, unless intituled of the court in which it is to be used. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq. H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 288; 1 M. & Scott, 415; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 168; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh N. S. 593.

Criminal Informations.]—All affidavits on motions for leave to file criminal informations must not be intituled; and if they are they cannot be read. Rex v. Robinson, 6 T. R. 642.

Nor need the affidavits produced on showing cause against a rule. Rex v. Harrison, 6 T. R. 60.

Seemle, that such affidavits might or might not be intituled. Id.

But all affidavits made after the rule is made absolute, must be intituled. Rex v. Robinson, 6 T. R. 642.

Other Cases.]—In moving for a rule nisi for a certiorari the affidavit must not be intituled in any cause. Ex parte Nokro, 1 B. & C. 267.

Where a motion is made in a cause removed to K. B. by writ of error, the affidavit must be intituled in the cause in error, and not in the original cause. Gandell v. Rogier, 7 D. & R. 259; 4 B. & C. 862.

An affidavit to verify a plea pluis darrein continuance, which refers to the plea which was intituled in the cause, was held sufficient without being itself specially intituled. Prince v. Nicholson, 1 Marsh. 70; 5 Taunt. 323.

In entering up judgment on an old warrant of attorney, the affidavit may be properly intituled in a cause. Sowerby v. Woodroffe, 1 B. & A. 567; 1 Chit. 315 (a); and see 1 B. & A. 568, n. And see also WARRANT OF ATTORNEY, where all the cases are collected.

2. By whom made.

An affidavit of merits must appear to have been made either by the party himself, or his attorney or agent. Morris v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 97.

And it cannot be sworn to by a third person. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Chit. 732.

But it may be made by the managing clerk to the defendant's attorney, who may know more of the cause than the attorney himself. Anon. 1 Smith, 61.

Held also, in C. P. that any person other than the defendant making an affidavit of merits, must show in his affidavit that he is either the defendant's attorney or his managing clerk. Neesom v. Whytock, 3 Taunt. 403.

An affidavit of merits to set aside a judgment is sufficient, if sworn by the agent of the country attorney, on information and belief, if the facts are uncontradicted. Johnson v. Popplewell, 2 Tyr. 715.

It is not a sufficient objection to an affidavit that the party who made it was convicted of perjury, unless such conviction was followed by judgment. Lee v. Gansell, Cowp. 3.

Nor is a conviction for conspiracy. Park v. Strockley, 4 D. & R. 144.

3. Contents.

Certainty required.]—Where the meaning is plain, mere ungrammatical construction will not vitiate. Anon. Lofft, 274.

Nor are clerical errors and bad spelling sufficient ground of rejection. Bromley v. Foster, 1 Chit. 562.

Such as "defendant" instead of "deponent," or "court" instead of "office," where the meaning is clear; otherwise, where the mistake leaves the meaning doubtful. Anon. 1 Chit. 562, n.

But an affidavit stating that deponent served a party with a "true," omitting the word "copy," of the declaration in ejectment, is bad. Id.

That an affidavit is so framed that perjury could not be so assigned thereon, is a defect not to be cured by waiver. Watson v. Walker, 1 M. & Scott, 437.

In the statement of a particular date in an affidavit, where that date is essential, it must be stated positively. Willes v. James, 1 Dowl. P. C. 498.

In the Exchequer, an affidavit of the service of a rule, by which it is not intended to bring the party into contempt, need not state that the original rule was shown at the time of service. Farnstone v. Taylor, 2 Y. & J. 30.

Name and Addition of Deponent.]—The addition of every person making an affidavit shall be inserted therein. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Ex., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 593.

It is not sufficient in an affidavit by the defendant in a cause, to describe him as the above named defendant, without any other addition. Lawson v. Case, 1 C. & M. 481.

It is not necessary that an affidavit made by the defendant in the cause, stating his abode and styling him defendant, should also contain the addition of his degree. Anon. 6 Taunt. 73.

An affidavit made in this country to verify the handwriting of a British vice-consul abroad, before whom an affidavit of debt was made, must contain the addition of the deponent. Thurlet v. Faber, 1 Chit. 465, 721.

Affidavit of Merits.]—An affidavit that the defendant is advised and believes he has a good defence to the action, will not satisfy the condition of a rule which requires him to swear to a good defence "on the merits." Pringle v. Marsack, 1 D. & R. 155.

An affidavit of merits must be a belief of good defence on the merits. Westerley v. Kemp, 1 Tyr. 261.

An affidavit by the defendant's attorney, that he had laid the defendant's case and evidence before counsel, who had advised that he had a good defence, is not a sufficient affidavit of merits. Crosby v. Davies, 1 Price, P. C. 61.

Irrelevant and impertinent Matter.]—Where affidavits contain irrelevant matter, the court will direct the Master to ascertain what parts are material to bring the question in dispute before the court, and, in his taxation to allow costs to the parties making the affidavits for such parts only as are material, and to the opposite party the costs occasioned by the irrelevant matter. Cassen v. Bond, 2 Y. & J. 531.

If affidavits are made to run to a very impertinent and unnecessary length, the Court of Exchequer will make the party filing them pay a proportionate part of the costs. Ex parte Henllan, 7 Price, 594.

Affidavits containing general slanderous statements injurious to the character of bail, cannot be received. Sanderson's Bail, 1 Chit. 676.

4. Before whom, and where sworn.

Commissioners.]—No commission for taking affidavits in the Court of King's Bench can be issued to any person practising as a conveyancer, unless such person be also an attorney or solicitor of one of the Courts at Westminster; and no such commission can issue without an affidavit, made by the person intended to be named therein, that he is not, and doth not intend to become a practising conveyancer; and that he is an attorney or solicitor duly enrolled in one of the said courts, and hath taken out his certificate for the current year. Reg. Gen. K. B. H. T. 3 & 4 Geo. 4, 2 D. & R. 438; 1 B. & C. 288.

And attorneys and solicitors duly enrolled, and practising in any of the courts of Great Sessions in Wales, or in either of the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster, or Durham, must be comprised within the above rule of Hilary term, 3 & 4 Geo. 4, in like manner as attorneys or solicitors of the courts of Westminster. Reg. Gen. K. B. E. T. 4 Geo. 4, 2 D. & R. 870; 1 B. & C. 656.

An affidavit of the acknowledgment of bail is properly sworn before a commissioner, for the purpose of taking bail. Anon. 2 Y. & J. 101.

Party's own Attorney.]—No affidavit of the service of process shall be deemed sufficient, if made before the plaintiff's own attorney, or his clerk. Reg. Gen. K. B. C. P. & Ex. H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 288; 1 M. & Scott, 415; 3 B. & Adol. 374; 2 C. & J. 168; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 593.

An affidavit to ground a motion for a rule nis cannot be sworn before the attorney for the party, or his partner; and a rule obtained on such an affidavit will be discharged with costs. Batt v. Vaisey, 1 Price, 116.

The court will in no case issue an attachment against a party at the suit of another, where the affidavits on which the motion is founded are sworn before the agents of the prosecutor. Rex v. Wallace, 3 T. R. 403.

But an affidavit sworn before a commissioner employed as clerk to the attorney in a cause, in his character of clerk to the commissioners for the sale of the land-tax is good. Goodtitle d. Pye v. Badtitle, 8 T. R. 638.

An affidavit stating that the defendant had been discharged under an Insolvent Debtors' Act, cannot be sworn before his own attorney in the cause. Jenkins v. Mason, 3 Moore, 325.

If a rule be obtained on affidavits of a party, sworn before his own attorney in the cause, the Court of Common Pleas will discharge it with costs. Hopkinson v. Buckley, 8 Taunt. 74.

Affidavits of the service of declarations in ejectment may be sworn before the attorney in the cause. Doe d. Cooper v. Roe, 2 Y. & J. 284.

Where an agent in town, or an attorney in the country, is an attorney on the record, an affidavit sworn before the attorney in the country shall not be received, and an affidavit sworn before an attorney's clerk shall not be received in cases where it would not be receivable if sworn before the attorney himself; but this rule shall not extend to affidavits to hold to bail. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Ex., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 593.

Before this rule; if the agent in town was the attorney on the record, it was no objection to an affidavit of the party, that it is sworn before his own attorney in the country. Read v. Cooper, 5 Taunt. 89; 2 Rose, 127.

Before the late alteration in the Court of Exchequer, by which the court is thrown open to all attorneys, it was held that the rule, that affidavits should not be sworn before the attorneys of the parties, was not to be construed literally as applying only to the attorney whose name appeared on the record in that court, which must have been one of the four attorneys of the court, but included the immediate attorney or solicitor for the party. Cooper v. Archer, 12 Price, 149.

Where an affidavit has been sworn before the plaintiff's attorney, it is necessary to have an affidavit of that fact: the Court of Exchequer will not reject it merely because it appears on the face of it to have been sworn before a person of the same name as the plaintiff's attorney. Hodgson v. Walker, Whitw. 62.

Held also, that it formed no objection to an affidavit, that an attorney before whom it had been sworn in the country had been the legal adviser of one of the deponents, and had in London, told the party really interested in the cause in which the affidavit was sworn, that he intended to move the court in that particular cause; in which, however, he was not the attorney upon the record. Williams v. Hockin, 8 Taunt. 435.

Sworn Abroad.]—The courts will take cognizance of affidavits sworn before foreign magistrates, if properly authenticated to them. Dalmer v. Barnard, 7 T. R. 251.

The courts, by the courtesy which subsists between the two countries, take judicial notice that so great an officer as the chief justice of a superior court in Ireland is competent to administer an oath, and therefore will be satisfied with a mere verification of his handwriting. French v. Bellew, 1 M. & S. 302.

Affidavits sworn before a justice of the peace in Scotland are admissible in a cause in K. B. if the handwriting of the justice be authenticated. Turnbull v. Morton, 1 Chit. 463, 721.

An affidavit made by a defendant in a suit in the equity side of the court of Exchequer Chamber, sworn before a magistrate in Scotland, permitted to be read. Ellis v. Sinclair, 3 Y. & J. 273: but see Hyde v. Whitfield, 19 Ves. jun. 344.

It is no objection to an affidavit sworn in Scotland, that is taken before a justice of the peace, and not before a lord of session. Watson v. Williamson, 1 Dowl. P. C. 607.

By stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 42, s. 42, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, the superior Courts of Common Law and Equity at Westminster, and the several judges of the same, shall have the same power to grant commissions for taking affidavits in Scotland and Ireland as they had in the counties of England.

5. Jurat.

Time and Place of swearing.—An affidavit must state in the jurat the day on which it was sworn. Dee v. Roe, 1 Chit. 228.

If the month be omitted in the jurat, in a proceeding against a prisoner in custody, it is defective, and cannot be amended. Wood v. Stephens, 3 Moore, 236. And see Anon. 1 Chit. 562, n.

In C. P. it is no objection that no place was mentioned in the jurat. Symmers v. Wason, 1 B. & P. 105.

Affidavits in answer to a rule for a mandamus sworn before a commissioner, must contain the place where sworn, otherwise they cannot be read. Rex v. W. R. of Yorkshire (Justices), 3 M. & S. 493.

In a criminal proceeding for perjury in an affidavit the jurat is not conclusive as to the place of swearing, and evidence as to the real place of swearing the affidavit may be given in contradiction to the jurat. Rex v. Emden, 9 East, 437.

A palpable mistake in an affidavit, as the wrong year in the jurat, used in support of an application to the court, is not an insurmountable objection to the motion, as the court will permit the error to be amended by a supplemental affidavit. Cooper v. Archer, 12 Price, 149.

But where such negligence occurs, they will visit it on the party to the consideration of the question of costs. Id.

Where there is a defect in the jurat on which to found a rule nisi, it cannot be used; nor will time be given, except in cases of bail. Anon. 2 Chit. 20.

An erasure over the jurat is not such a defect. Atkinson v. Thompson, 2 Chit. 19.

Several Deponents.—In every affidavit sworn in K. B. or before any judge or commissioner thereof, and made by two or more deponents, the names of the several persons making such affidavit shall be written in the jurat; and no affidavit shall be read or made use of, in any matter depending in that court, in the jurat of which there shall be any interlineation or erasure. Reg. Gen. K. B. M. T. 37 Geo. 3, 7 T. R. 82: S. P. Anon. 2 Chit. 19.

So in the Exchequer the names of all the deponents must be written in the jurat, or the affidavit will not be received. Reg. Gen. Exch. T. 1 Geo. 4; 8 Price, 501.

And in that court, it must appear by the jurat, that all the deponents have been sworn. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Price, 338.

But the deponents need not be severally named in the jurat as having been sworn (as is required in K. B.), but it is sufficient if it express that it was sworn by all the deponents. Anon. 2 Price, 1.

Illiterate Persons.—Where any affidavit is taken by any commissioner of K. B., made by any person who, from his signature, appears to be illiterate, the commissioner shall certify or state in the jurat that the affidavit was read in his presence to the party making the same, and that such party seemed perfectly to understand it; and also, that the said party wrote his signature in the presence of the commissioner. Reg. Gen. K. B. E. T. 31 Geo. 3, 4 T. R. 284.

So it must be certified in the jurat of affidavits made in the Exchequer by illiterate persons, that the deponent understood the affidavits, and signed them in the presence of the commissioner taking the same. Reg. Gen. Exch. H. T. 40 Geo. 3, 8 Price, 504.

And that the affidavit was read to and understood by the deponent, in the presence of the officer of the court, or person administering the oath. Reg. Gen. Exch. T. T. 1 Geo. 4, 8 Price, 501.

6. How filed.

Affidavits which ought to have been filed a week before Hilary Term, may be read with leave of the court, on showing cause on the second day of the term, though filed after the specified time. Hoar v. Hill, 1 Chit. 27.

So, where no particular time is prescribed for filing affidavits on which cause is shown, they may be sworn and filed at any time before showing cause, though after the day appointed by the rule. Tilley v. Henry, 1 Chit. 136.

Affidavits which were required by an enlarged rule to be filed a week before the commencement of the term, may, under circumstances, be used by leave of the court, although they were not filed within the time specified in such rule. Harding v. Austin, 8 Moore, 523.

Where on a motion to set aside an award, the affidavit of the arbitrator was not filed within the time limited by the court, they refused to allow its being read. Clesby v. Peece, 8 Moore, 524, n.

Upon an enlarged rule, the affidavits must be filed before showing cause, although it be not so expressed in the rule of enlargement. Barker v. Richardson, 1 Y. & J. 362.

Affidavits to be used on a special application, in the Exchequer, must be filed one clear day before such application is made; and where notice of a motion is necessary, the filing of the affidavit must be mentioned at the foot of the notice. Reg. Gen. Ex. H. T. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, 9 Price, 88.

When an affidavit has been read and filed, it becomes a record of the court, and cannot be taken off the file. Beal v. Langstaff, 2 Wils. 371.

7. How used.

[See In re Gellebrand, 1 D. & R. 121.]

Though affidavits have been used, and a motion made thereon, they may be again referred to in support of a fresh motion. De Woolf v. —, 2 Chit. 14.

But when there was a stamp on affidavits, it was held that in showing cause against a rule which had been previously heard before a judge at chambers, the same affidavits could not be used, unless they were re-sworn and re-stamped. Chitty v. Bishop, 4 Moore, 413. And see Atkins v. Reynolds, 2 Chit. 14.

Nor could an affidavit, having only one stamp, be used in more than one cause. Anon. 3 Taunt. 469.

An affidavit made after a rule to show cause granted, is not admissible. Ditchett v. Tollett, 3 Price, 257.

No office copy of an affidavit can be received or read in the Exchequer, unless it has been previously examined and signed by the attorney or clerk in court making the same, or his accredited agent. Reg. Gen. Exch. E. T. 2 Geo. 4, 9 Price, 298.

The court of Exchequer will not hear affidavits in reply on a rule to show cause. Shaw v. Mansfield, 7 Price, 709.

If that court open a rule which has been made absolute on the usual affidavit of service, in order to give the other party an opportunity of showing cause, they will not hear affidavits sworn after the day on which the rule had been made absolute. Tripp v. Bellamy, 5 Price, 384.

An affidavit, more than a year old, cannot be used on moving for a rule. Burt v. Owen, 1 Dowl. P. C. 691.

No objection can be made in showing cause to a rule in the Exchequer, arising out of an affidavit, which is not referred to in the rule nisi. Naylor v. Eagar, 2 Y. & J. 90.

I. AGENCY GENERALLY.

Brokers and Factors.]—A person who, for brokerage and hire, negotiates and concludes bargains for stock, is a broker in point of law. Jansen (Bt.) v. Green, 4 Burr. 2103.

The character of broker differs materially from that of factor; the former is not trusted with the possession of the goods, nor ought he to sell in his own name; but the latter, from its being usual for him to make advances upon the goods, has a special property in, as well as a general lien upon them; and may sell in his own name; and his principal will be bound by all the consequences of such sale, of which the right of setting off a debt due from the factor is one. Baring v. Carrie, 2 B. & A. 137.

London Brokers.]—It seems that a stock broker is liable to pay to the chamberlain of London, for the benefit of the corporation, the annual duty of 40s. directed by stat. 6 Anne, c. 16, s. 4, to be received by the chamberlain from every broker. Rex v. London Court of Request Commissioners, 7 East. 292.

A ship broker, or one who obtains on commission freight and passengers for vessels, is not a "broker" within the statutes regulating the admission of brokers for the city of London. Gibbons v. Hale, 12 Moore, 539; 4 Bing. 301.

A broker in the city of London may maintain an action on a contract, or sustain a proof for a debt arising out of transactions as a merchant, although such transactions are in contravention of the regulations under which he derives his office, and to the condition of the bond which he executes, and to the oath which he takes on his appointment under the statute. Not however if the debt or contract arises out of a transaction in which he has acted both as broker and principal, that being void upon principles of common law. Ex parte Dyster, 2 Rose, 349; 1 Mer. 155.

A sworn broker of the city of London is in the nature of a public agent; and, therefore, in an action against him for negligence in making a contract, the court will, on motion, compel him to produce his books for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to inspect them and take a copy of the contract. Browning v. Aylwin, 9 D. & R. 801; 7 B. & C. 204.

In one case it was held that a London broker might refuse to allow his employer to inspect his contract book; and it is no breach of his bond, if he at the same time add, it shall be produced at the proper time, and does produce it afterwards before a court of aldermen. London (Mayor) v. Brandon, Holt, 438; 2 Stark. 14,—Ellenb. Rule to set aside a nonsuit refused.

Nor is it a breach of his bond to employ a person who is not a sworn broker. Id.

Nor if he mistake the quantity of goods he had bought, where he derived no advantage from such mis-statement, though it was the cause of considerable loss to his principal. Id.

A broker is authorized from a previous course of dealing between himself and his principal, on an approval of a purchase by the latter, to make out a contract note in his own name, without inserting that of his principal; and, under such circumstances, does not violate the bond and oath imposed on him by the regulations of the city of London, provided he make an entry in his book in the name of his principal. Kemble v. Atkins, 1 Moore, 6; 7 Taunt. 260; Holt, 427.

It is the duty of a sworn broker of the city of London to charge his principal only the cost price of articles purchased for him, in addition to his commission, and the principal having averred in an action of assumpsit, that the broker had charged him a greater price than the cost price which the plaintiff had paid: Held, that it was sufficient proof of such averment to produce a running unsettled account between the parties, by which it appeared that the principal had paid more than the amount of the overcharges, although on the whole account, and when the balance, at a subsequent period, was struck, the principal was indebted to the broker in a sum far exceeding such overcharges. Procter v. Brain, 2 M. & P. 284; 3 C. & P. 536.

Quære, whether in such an action it is competent for the broker to show, that in some of the transactions he acted as a principal, it being contrary to the duty and oath of a broker so to act. Procter v. Brain, 2 M. & P. 284; 3 C. & P. 536.

Appointment of, and giving Authority.—An agent need not be authorized in writing. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. jun. 250.

Wherever a specific appointment of an agent is necessary, a subsequent recognition of acts done by him in that capacity is better even than a previous authority. Per Best, in Jones v. Wright 5 Bing. 533; 2 M. & P. 120.

So, a subsequent ratification by a principal of a contract by an agent is equivalent to a previous authority. Maclean v. Dunn, 1 M. & P. 761; 4 Bing. 722.

Where, therefore, a broker made a contract in writing for the sale of goods, not being authorized by one of his principals at the time, but to which the latter afterwards assented:—Held, that the broker was an agent duly authorized to bind his principal under the statute of frauds. Id.

Where A. accepted bills for the accommodation of B., and B. deposited title deeds of A's. with C., the holder of the bills, as security for their payment, a letter from A. to C., referring to the existence of the debt, and saying, "the security you hold is a great deal more than you hold acceptances for on my account, my real account is not more than half you hold, but you have full security for all and more":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment of the security to the full amount of bills, though B. had no direct authority to pledge. Ex parte Skinner, 1 Deac. & Chit. 403.

Whatever the duty of an agent requires him to do in the business of his employers, must be presumed so to be done with their knowledge and direction. Ex parte Machul, 1 Rose, 447.

An agent has authority to settle for a loss where he has been authorized to underwrite a policy. Richardson v. Anderson, 1 Camp. 43, n.—Ellenborough.

A broker who is employed to sell goods for a person, and who agrees for the sale of them, at the same time giving both to the purchaser and his employer a sale-note, is to be considered as the agent of both parties. Rucker v. Cammeyer, 1 Esp. 105.—Kenyon.

II.—DUTY OF AGENT.

1. To devote entire personal Attention.

An agent cannot employ himself for a third person when he has agreed to give up the whole of his personal services to his principal. Thompson v. Havelock, 1 Camp. 527—Ellenborough.

A traveller, about to set up business on his own account, may solicit orders from his master's customers, provided the orders he takes at the time are for his master. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732—Kenyon.

A broker cannot, without the assent of his prinprincipal, delegate his authority. Henderson v. Barnwell, 1 Y. & J. 387.

A factor has no right to send away goods to another person, when they have been consigned to him for sale at a particular place, though he is unable to sell them there. Catlin v. Bell, 4 Camp. 183—Ellenborough.

A., employed by the defendant to transport goods to a foreign market, delegates the entire employment to the plaintiff, who performs it without the privity of the defendant:—Held, that there was no privity between them, and, therefore, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover his charges, or those of his agents, from the defendant, although the latter had not paid the amount to A. Schmaling v. Tomlinson, 1 Marsh. 500; 6 Taunt. 147; and see Cull v. Backhouse, 6 Taunt. 148, n.; and Guy v. Gore, 2 Marsh. 273.

So a defendant having contracted with a surveyor, who ordered goods from the plaintiff for the use of the defendant's house, was held not to be liable for them. Bramah v. Abingdon (Lord), 15 East, 66.

2. To account.

If goods are consigned to a factor for sale on commission, the law will raise a contract to account for such as are sold, to pay over the proceeds, and to deliver the residue unsold on demand: but an action does not lie against him for not accounting, till after demand made of an account. Topham v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 572.

If the declaration in an action to recover the price of goods sent for sale on commission, allege that the defendant sold but did not account to the plaintiff, he must prove that a sale actually took place; and it will not be presumed, even at a distance of twelve months after the delivery of the goods. Elbourn v. Upjohn, 1 C. & P. 572—Best.

The first duty of an agent is to be constantly ready with his accounts, and neglect in this is a ground for charging him with interest. Pearse v. Green, 1 J. & W. 135.

A steward is bound to account periodically, though not called on. Ormond (Lady) v. Hutchinson, 13 Ves. jun. 53, 92.

Where notice is given by a party to his agent, in a particular adventure, that another person is jointly interested with him in the adventure, this prima facie imposes upon the agent the necessity of accounting with such other person for his share of the adventure. Killock v. Greg, 4 Russ. 285.

But this obligation ceases to exist, if the transactions show that it was the intention of such other person, and of the party originally interested in the adventure, that the agents should account solely with the latter. Id.

A. had long employed B. as his steward, professional adviser, and general confidential agent; disputes having arisen between them, an agreement was entered into between B. and a clergyman acting on behalf of A., by which a gross sum was to be paid to B. in lieu of all his claims, but no accounts or vouchers were rendered or produced by A., nor was any bill of costs deliver ed; that agreement will not protect B. from rendering an account to his principal. Jenkins v. Gould, 3 Russ. 385.

If an agent does not render his accounts within a reasonable time, he must bear the costs of a suit instituted to have the accounts taken; and it will not be any excuse for him, that he offered to pay on account a gross sum, which, it turns out, would have covered all that was due from him. Collyer v. Dudley, 1 Turn. & Russ. 421.

Where an account between principal and agent was settled from loose papers, the agent having kept no regular books, after his death, liberty was given to surcharge and falsify upon allegation of errors since discovered. Hardwick (Lord) v. Vernon, 4 Ves. jun. 411.

3. To pay over monies.

An agent to receive particular monies is bound to pay the same over to his principal, notwithstanding the claims of third persons. Nicholson v. Knowles, 5 Madd. 47.

A book-keeper in Smithfield market must pay money he has received for the sale of some beasts to the vendor, and cannot retain it for the private debt of the salesman employed by the vendor. Good v. Jones, Peake, 177—Kenyon.

A. drew bills in favour of B. in India, upon the E. I. Co. in London, which the latter accepted: C., as the agent of B., indorsed the bills to D. and E., under the supposed authority of a power of attorney from B., which the E. I. Co. had inspected: D. and E. indorsed the bills to their bankers and agents, F. & Co., with instructions to present them for payment when due. F. & Co. indorsed the bills, presented them for payment when due, received the money, and paid it over to their principals, D. and E. The power of attorney from B. did not authorize C. to indorse the bills, and B. having died, his administrator recovered the amount of them from the E. I. Co., as the acceptors. The latter now brought assumpsit against F. & Co., upon an alleged undertaking by them that they were entitled to receive payment of the bills. The jury found, specially, that the plaintiffs paid the bills, not on the faith of the indorsement by the defendants, but on the faith of the power of attorney, and that the defendants received the money as agents, and paid it over to their principals before they knew that the first indorsement by C. was unauthorized: Held, that the action could not be maintained against these defendants. E. I. Comp. v. Tritton, 5 D. & R. 214; 3 B. & C. 280.

A. being a stranger, deposits, for a particular purpose, in the hands of B., a country-banker at J., the sum of 800*l.* in local bank notes; 635*l.* of which had been issued by C. at D.; B. transmits the whole of the notes immediately to C. and is credited with the amount in account by the latter, who re-issues the notes, and stops payment:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover the whole amount of the notes from B. as cash received by the latter to his use. Gillard v. Wyse, 7 D. & R. 523; 5 B. & C. 184; and see Price v. Holbeck, 2 Doug. 654.

Where the holder of a bill of exchange, who held it in trust for plaintiff, sued the drawer, and pending that suit became bankrupt, and his assignees afterwards brought an action against the drawer in the bankrupt's name; in which action, the sheriff having been guilty of an escape on meane process, the assignees recovered against the sheriff, in an action for the escape, damages to the amount of the bill: Held, that the plaintiff might maintain money had and received against the assignees for the damages so recovered, allowing them the costs and expenses. Dissentiente Lord Ellenborough. Randall v. Bell, 1 M. & S. 714.

Assumpsit for money had and received will not lie against a mere money bearer, to recover the money he had received and paid over. Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 213; 2 Rose, 110.

Where the plaintiff, in a declaration of assumpsit, stated that in consideration that he would employ the defendant (an annuity-broker) to invest and lay out the plaintiff's money in the purchase of an annuity, the defendant undertook to invest it on good and valid security; and assigned for breach, that he laid it out on a bad, invalid, and fraudulent security; and the defendant pleaded non assumpsit infra sex annos, and actio non accrevit infra sex annos, on which issue was joined, and it was proved that the consideration money was paid over to the grantor, and the annuity paid by the hands of the defendant to the plaintiff for six years afterwards, when the grantor became bankrupt and the security failed; subsequently to which the defendant's managing clerk promised that the plaintiff should be paid, which promise the defendant afterwards recognised: Held, that the plaintiff could not recover for money had and received, the money having been paid over to the grantor; nor on an account stated, as there was no existing antecedent debt between him and the defendant. Whitehead v. Howard, 5 Moore, 105; 2 B. & A. 372.

A., with a view to accommodate B., lent him a bill drawn by himself, upon, and accepted by C., who had effects of A. in his hands; B. indorsed it to D., who indorsed it over; the day before the bill became due, B. paid the amount to A., who, on hearing that C. had failed, gave B. a check for the amount of the bill, and sent him with it to D. to enable him to pay the bill when due; four days after that time, A. learning that payment had not been demanded, desired D. not to pay the bill, as no notice of non-payment had been given by the holder, and offered to indemnify him; notwithstanding this, D. afterwards paid the bill:—Held, first, that D. paid the bill in his own wrong; secondly, that A. was entitled to recover back the money paid into the hands of D. by B. in an action for money had and received. Whitfield v. Savage, 2 B. & P. 277.

If a person employed by shipowners as their agent effect a policy of insurance, and represent himself as the principal to the brokers, who cause such insurance to be effected:—Held, that if the brokers receive the amount of the loss from the underwriters and pay it over to the agent, they are not liable to the owners in an action for money had and received, although part of the money was paid to the agent after they were informed of his having acted in that capacity. Bell v. Jutting, 1 Moore, 155.

Money deposited with an agent, and expended by him in illegal disbursements, cannot be recovered from him by the principal, if the principal was at the time aware of the illegal disbursements, or if he subsequently assented to them. Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & Rob. 265—Alderson.

4. Not to deal with Principal.

[See ATTORNEY—TRUSTEE for dealings by them.]

Where a person placed himself under the advice of a dealer in English and foreign funds, and the latter advised purchases and sales of stock, and it afterwards appeared that these purchases and sales were merely nominal transfers and re-transfers of the dealer's own stock, the difference being settled in account, it was held that the court of equity rightly interfered to compel an account between the parties, and to set aside the transactions that had taken place, on the ground that the dealer stood in a situation of advantage which equity will not allow to an agent in dealing with his principal. Rothschild v. Brookman, 2 Dow & Clarke, 188; 5 Bligh, N. S. 165; 3 Simon, 153.

An agent employed by a young man to sell a reversionary legacy shall not be permitted to be purchaser thereof himself at an under value: and nothing shall amount to a confirmation of such a transaction, until the vendor be fully apprized that he might be relieved against the original transaction if he chose to impeach it. Crowe v. Ballard, 2 Cox, 253.

If an agent, employed to purchase an estate, becomes the purchaser for himself, he is to be considered as a trustee for his principal. Lees v. Nuttall, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 53.

Bill to set aside the lease of a farm granted to a steward by his employer, dismissed with costs; although the lease was for a term longer than usual on the estates, and was granted at the solicitation of the steward, on an agreement made before the subsisting lease had expired, and at a rent lower than offered to the steward on behalf of the occupying tenant; it appearing that the rent to be paid by the steward had been fixed by a surveyor named for that purpose by the employer, on a valuation made in the manner usual with that surveyor; and the offer of higher rent being known to the employer before he executed the lease. Selsey (Lord) v. Roades, 2 Sim. & Stu. 41.

III.—POWER AND AUTHORITY OF AGENTS.

1. Statute as to dealing with Agents.

Persons intrusted for the purpose of consignment or sale with goods, and who shall have shipped them in their own names, and persons in whose names goods shall be shipped by others, shall be deemed the true owners thereof, so far as to entitle the consignees to a lien thereon in respect of money or negotiable securities advanced or given by them to or for the use of the persons in whose names the goods are shipped, wards pledged the gums for a valuable consideration to defendant, handing over to him the transfer order of plaintiffs, together with a transfer order from himself, and afterwards, and before the bills became due, became bankrupt:—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to maintain trover against defendant for the gums. Boyson v. Coles, 6 M. & S. 14.

Where A. and B., having agreed to purchase cottons on their joint account, directed their brokers to purchase the same, and purchases having been made, warrants or orders for delivery were made out in the names of the brokers, and the cottons were left in their custody as the brokers of A.; and immediately after the purchases, B. paid A. one half of the value; and after considerable purchases had been made, the brokers were informed that B. had an interest in the goods purchased; and A., after this, directed the brokers to procure him a loan on the security of the warrants, and C. advanced money by discounting bills drawn by A. upon the brokers, as a security for which the whole of the warrants were deposited with C. by the brokers; and while they were so deposited, the latter received directions, both from A. and B., to make a division of the goods held on their joint account, which they did, by appropriating specific warrants to each party, and which division was approved of by both; and before the bills became due, the brokers were directed by A. to get one-half renewed, which C. agreed to do, and discounted fresh bills; and the brokers then left in the hands of C., as a security for the money thus advanced, the warrants belonging to B.; C., however, not then knowing that B. had any interest in them:—Held, that the second pledge was the pledge of a specific chattel belonging to B. which the brokers had no authority to make, and, consequently, that trover was maintainable against C. Barton v. Williams, 5 B. & A. 395; M'Clel. & Y. 406; S. C. in error nom. Williams v. Barton, 3 Bing. 139; 10 Moore, 596.

The defendants, as brokers for B. & Co. effected two purchases of seed, both of which were paid for by B. & Co., and left in the defendants' warehouses for the purpose of re-sale; the first was made on account of B. & Co., and the other for the plaintiffs, resident abroad, and by their express order; but the invoices of both were made out in the name of B. & Co., who did not inform the defendant that the latter purchase was not made on their account:—Held, that the defendants having made advances to B. & Co., could not retain possession of the seed against the plaintiffs, on the ground that a factor has no authority to pledge the goods of his principal. Guichard v. Morgan, 4 Moore, 36.

Held, that where a factor had pledged the goods of his principal, the latter might recover the value of them in trover against the pawnee, on tendering to the factor what was due to him, without any tender to the pawnee. Daubigny v. Duval, 5 T. R. 604.

So also, he might maintain trover after demand and refusal without tendering the duplicate. Pest v. Baxter, 1 Stark. 472—Ellenborough.

If bills indorsed in blank be deposited with a banker to be received when due, and he raise money upon them by pledging them, trover will not lie on his bankruptcy. Collins v. Martin 1 B. & P. 648; 2 Esp. 520.

Afterwards held, that the pawnee for a valuable consideration, who claimed under the tortious act of the broker, had no right to retain the goods against the principal in trover for the amount of the lien which the broker had on the goods, for a balance due from the principal at the time of such pledge, the lien being personal and not transferable by such tortious act of the broker. M'Combie v. Davies, 7 East, 5; 3 Smith, 3.

Where a foreign merchant consigned goods to his correspondent in London, who pledged them with a factor as and for his own property, and received the amount in advance, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the factor was liable to the foreign merchant in trover for the goods. Duclos v. Ryland, 5 Moore, 518, n. And see Craven v. Ryder, 2 Marsh, 127; 6 Taunt. 433; Holt, 100.

Where the consignee of goods from abroad authorized a factor to indorse the bills of lading for the purpose of sales, and the factor indorsed them to H. & Co. (who knew that the latter was a mere agent), with authority to them, first, to effect sales, and secondly, to reimburse themselves out of the proceeds for a sum of money which they advanced upon the credit of the goods; and before the authority of the factor (who immediately afterwards stopped payment) was countermanded, H. & Co. sold the goods by auction.—Held, that H. & Co. were not liable to the original consignee in trover for the goods. It seems, however, that they would be liable for money had and received to the use of the rightful owner of the goods. Stiernel v. Holden, 6 D. & R. 17; 4 B. & C. 5; R. & M. 219.

Where foreign merchants consigned goods, on their own account and risk, to a commission agent in this country, for sale only, and in the letter of advice wrote, "We expect that you will send us some remittances on account of the proceeds consigned to you, though they be not yet sold, as is customary, in order to encourage us thereby to send you more frequent consignments," and the agent pledged the goods for advances to himself, he being in embarrassed circumstances:—Held, that the shipper's letter to the agent did not amount to an authority to pledge the goods. Queiroz v. Trueman, 5 D. & R. 192; 3 B. & C. 342.

When A., without the authority of B., pledges his property with C., and B. brings a joint action of detinue against A. and C., the jury in such a case, if they are satisfied that B. held out A. as a person authorized to pledge his property for the purpose of raising money, may find a verdict for both defendants. Garth v. Howard, 5 C. & P. 346—Tindal.

4. As to Sale of Goods.

An agent cannot sell the goods of his principal without authority; but such authority to sell may be implied from circumstances. Thus, where a London agent was employed by his prinprincipal in the country to import goods from abroad, and send them to their destination, and by the bill of lading the goods were deliverable "to order or assigns," and indorsed in blank by the shipper, and the agent, being allowed to retain possession of the bill of lading for five months, sold the goods without any authority for that purpose:—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether the principal had not, by his conduct, enabled his agent to hold himself out to the world as a person having authority to sell, and thereby to convey title to the vendee. Dyer v. Pearson, 4 D. & R. 648; 3 B. & C. 38.

A purchaser of hemp lying at a wharf, had it, at the time of his purchase, transferred in the wharfinger's books into the name of the broker who effected the purchase for him, and whose ordinary business it was to buy and sell hemp:—Held, that this gave the broker an implied authority to sell it, and that his sale and receipt of the money bound his unknown principal. So, if it had been transferred into the names of the principal or broker. Pickering v. Busk, 15 East, 38.

In order to avoid a sale made by a broker, it may be shown that, by the custom of that particular trade, the authority of the broker expired with the day on which it was given. Dickinson v. Lilwell, 4 Camp. 279; 1 Stark. 128—Ellenborough.

So, by the custom of London, where goods are sold by a broker to be paid for by bill, the vendor has a right to annul the contract within a reasonable time, if he is dissatisfied with the sufficiency of the purchaser. But the intimation of his dissent must be made as soon as he had an opportunity of making inquiry; and five days were considered too long. Hodgson v. Davies, 2 Camp. 533—Ellenborough.

Where a purchase is made by an agent, he is not a special agent, if he has any discretion to exceed the sum ordered to be given by his principal; and, if he have such a discretion, the principal is bound by his contracts, though they exceed the sum which he is ordered by his principal to give. Hicks v. Hankin, 4 Esp. 114—Heath.

Brokers in the usual habit of buying and paying for, and of selling and receiving the value for sugars on speculation, in their own names, and upon their own judgment, for their principal; sometimes, when the market was low, under an unlimited authority as to quantity and price; at other times under special instructions to buy; but guided from time to time by special instructions to sell, and limited in respect to price, and advised from time to time by their principal as to the probable rise or fall of the market; but keeping only a general account with their principal of the sums advanced to and received for him, without accounting separately for each particular lot purchased and re-sold; may bind him by a re-sale of a particular parcel of sugars before purchased and paid for in their own names, and lodged in their own warehouse, though sold under the price directed by their principal, for whom they received the money, but afterwards failed: the general authority of the brokers to sell, so as to bind their principal in respect of the purchaser, being to be collected from their general dealing, and not merely from their private instructions as to the particular parcel of goods. Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400.

An agent authorized to sell goods, has, in the absence of advice to the contrary, an implied authority to receive the proceeds of such sale. Capel v. Thornton, 2 C. & P. 352—Tenterden.

If a person employed as the agent of another in the sale of any property, has notice that what he is about to sell is not his principal's, and he yet continues to sell, he is personally liable for the produce of the sale. Hardacre v. Stewart, 5 Esp. 103—Ellenborough.

If a factor sell goods as a principal, and the buyer has no notice of his being only a factor, the real principal is bound so far, that the buyer may, in an action against him for the price, set off a debt due to him from the factor. George v. Claggett, 2 Esp. 557—Kenyon.

And the court refused a new trial. 7 T. R. 359. S. P. Rabone v. Williams, 7 T. R. 360, n.

Otherwise, if, before they are all delivered, or any part of them paid for, the purchaser is informed that they belong to a third person. Moore v. Clementson, 2 Camp. 22—Ellenborough.

If goods are sold by a broker without disclosing his principal, the purchaser is justified in paying him in a different manner from that stipulated for by the terms of the contract. Aliter where the principal is disclosed at the time of sale. Blackburn v. Scholes, 2 Camp. 343—Ellenborough.

Where a broker who had sold goods for plaintiff to defendant, made an arrangement with plaintiff unknown to defendant, altering the time of payment:—Held, that the plaintiff had thereby taken the broker as his debtor, and had discharged the defendant. Thorton v. Meux, M. & M. 43—Abott.

The circumstance of persons selling goods being described in the catalogue of sale as sworn brokers, is not sufficient notice to the purchaser that they are only agents, to prevent him from dealing with them as principals. Id.

Goods sold by a broker for a principal not named, upon the terms as specified in the usual bought and sold notes, (delivered over to the respective parties by the broker) of "payment in one month, money," may be paid for by the buyer to the broker within the month, and that by bill of exchange accepted by the buyer, and discounted by him within the month, though having to run a longer time before it was due. But, where the buyer was also indebted to the same broker for another parcel of goods, the property of a different person, and he made a payment to the broker, generally, which was larger than the amount of either demand, but less than the two together, and afterwards the broker stopped payment, such payment ought to be equitably apportioned as between the several owners of the goods sold, who are only respectively entitled to recover wards pledged the gums for a valuable consideration to defendant, handing over to him the transfer order of plaintiffs, together with a transfer order from himself, and afterwards, and before the bills became due, became bankrupt:—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to maintain trover against defendant for the gums. *Boyson v. the difference from the buyer. Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36.

If the seller of goods, knowing at the time that the buyer, though dealing with him in his own name is in truth the agent of another, elect to give the credit to such agent, he cannot afterwards recover the value against the known principal; but, if the principal be not known at the time of the purchase made by the agent, it seems that when discovered, the principal or the agent may be sued at the election of the seller; unless where, by the usage of trade, the credit is understood to be confined to the agent so dealing; as particularly in the case of principals residing abroad. Patterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62.

A., a foreign merchant, employs B. to purchase goods on commission; the vendors (with the knowledge that the purchases were made on account of A.) make out the invoices to B., and take in payment his acceptances payable at six months:—Held, amongst other things, that there was no contract of sale as between A. and B. Seymour v. Pychlau, 1 B. & A. 14.

Parol evidence of a broker may be admitted, to show that a sale of goods was made to a third person, for whom the buyer acted as agent, although the bought note and invoice were made out in the name of the buyer. Wilson v. Hart, 1 Moore, 45.

At the time of making a contract of sale, the party buying the goods represented that he was buying them on account of persons resident in Scotland, but did not mention their names, and the seller did not inquire who they were, but afterwards debited the party who purchased the goods: Held, that the seller might afterwards sue the principals for the price. Thompson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78; 4 M. & R. 110.

The plaintiffs purchased, by order of T. & Co. of Ryder, to whom they were known as brokers, 110 bales of cotton. The contract was regularly entered on the plaintiffs' books as a purchase and sale by brokers, and brokerage charged to both parties. Bought and sold notes were delivered not disclosing the names of principals, but charging brokerage to both. T. & Co. and Ryder were not known to each other as concerned in the dealings. The plaintiffs paid Ryder for the cottons, and handed them over to T. & Co. with a bill of parcels in their own names:—Held, that the plaintiffs were principals in the purchase of Ryder, and the sale to T. & Co. Kilby v. Wilson, R. & M. 178—Abbott.

When an agent is authorised, from a previous course of dealing between himself and his principal to do so, he may, on an approval of a purchase by the latter, make out a contract note in his own name, without inserting that of his principal, provided he make an entry in his book in the name of his principal. Kemble v. Atkins, 1 Moore, 6; 7 Taunt. 260; Holt, 427.

A purchaser cannot object to a broker becoming an intermediate purchaser for the purpose of becoming responsible to the seller, when he had before consented to similar agreements. Id.

Where plaintiffs consigned goods to their factors, who, not having funds to pay the freight and duties, agreed with the defendants that they should take charge of the consignment, pay the freight and duties, and sell the goods, and have one half the usual commission on such sale; and defendants accordingly paid the freight and duties, and received the goods, after which the factors became bankrupt, having before informed defendants that the goods were the plaintiffs', but defendants notwithstanding sold the goods:—Held, in trover by the plaintiffs, that the defendants had not a right to retain for the freight and duties, after deducting the balance due from the factors to the plaintiffs, at the time of the bankruptcy. Solly v. Rathbone, 2 M. & S. 298.

Where C. consigned goods to M. their broker, upon a del credere commission, for sale, and drew bills on him in advance, which M. accepted, but never paid, and afterwards, without the knowledge of C., placed the goods with H. another broker, upon a del credere commission, and upon an agreement to divide the commission with him, and obtained his acceptances for the amount, and H. sold the goods and afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees received the proceeds of those sales, and the acceptances of H. were proved under his commission, and a dividend received upon them:—Held, that the assignees of H. were liable to the assignees of C., who had also become bankrupt, for the amount of the proceeds, in an action for money had and received. Cockran v. Irlam, 2 M. & S. 301, n.

5. As to Securities.

[Rights and authority of Bankers, see BANKERS.]

An agent who has received from his principal bills indorsed "on account" of such principal, (by which means their negociability is restrained,) cannot deposit them with his bankers as a security for advances: the special indorsement is a sufficient notice to the bankers that the bills are not the property of the party from whom they receive them, to enable him to pledge them. Truett v. Barandon, 1 Moore, 543; 8 Taunt. 100.

Defendant was held liable where he had received a bill to be discounted and promised to pay the amount to the plaintiff, but paid a debt of his own instead. Oughton v. West, 2 Stark. 321—Ellenborough.

Where a check was drawn upon a banker at Llanelly, at the residence of the drawer, (a single house four miles from thence), on unstamped paper, but dated at Llanelly, and delivered by the drawer to his farming bailiff, to give to the person in whose favour it was drawn; and he discounted it with a banker at Carmarthen, who did not present it before the drawer stopped payment, which took place five days afterwards:—Held, that the bailiff was not acting within the scope of his authority in discounting the check, so as to charge his principal. Waters v. Brogden, 1 Y. & J. 457.

Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, and afterwards absconded, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds:—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer (Knt.), 5 M. & S. 562; 2 Rose, 415.

Where an attorney, acting under a special power to receive the money only, deposited certain victualling bills with the defendant, as a security for money borrowed from him; in an action of trover by the payee of the bills:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Tonkin v. Fuller, 3 Dougl. 300.

There is a distinction between goods in the hands of a factor, and bills in the hands of a banker; the latter, if indorsed, may be pledged or discounted, though against the faith of the remittance, and the remitter can be only a general creditor. Ex parte Pease, 19 Ves. jun. 39.

Bills remitted to a factor or banker, while unpaid, are in the nature of goods unsold, and, on failure of the factor, must be returned to the principal, subject to such lien as the factor may have thereon. Zinck v. Walker, 2 W. Black. 1154.

6. Under Power of Attorney.

[For Execution of Deeds, see DEEDS.]

A power of attorney must be pursued strictly; but it is to be so construed as to include all the necessary means of executing it with effect. Howard v. Baillie, 2 H. Black. 618.

Where one gave a power of attorney to another to demand and receive all monies due to him on any account whatsoever, and to use all means for the recovery thereof, and to appoint attorneys for the purpose of bringing actions, and to revoke the same, "and to do all other business:"—Held, that the latter words must be understood with reference to the former, as meaning all business appertaining thereto. Hay v. Goldsmidt, 2 Smith, 79.

Defendant who carried on business on his own account, and in partnership, gave a general power of attorney to his wife and partners to act for him and in his name, and to his use, and to indorse bills, and generally to act for him while abroad. He gave another power to his wife alone, to act for him and on his behalf, and to pay and accept such bills as should be drawn by his agents and correspondents as occasion should require. One of the partners drew a bill on defendant for money to supply the partnership concerns, defendant having received while abroad money on the partnership account, and the wife accepted the bill for her husband:—Held, 1st, that the partner could not be called defendant's agent, and therefore that the wife had not power to accept the bill; 2dly, that she had not power to accept a bill for partnership transactions, but only bills on his account; 3dly, that the general words in a power of attorney were not to be construed at large, but as giving general powers for carrying into effect the special purpose for which they were given: and therefore that an indorsee who had not used due caution could not recover. Attwood v. Munnings, 1 M. & R. 66; 7 B. & C. 278.

A power of attorney authorizing an agent to demand, sue for, recover, and receive, by all lawful ways and means, all monies, debts and dues whatsoever, and to give sufficient discharges, does not authorize him to indorse bills for his principal. Murray v. East India Company, 5 B. & A. 204.

And trover may be maintained for the bills indorsed by the agent, where the power of attorney was to receive all salary and money, with all the principal's authority to recover, compound, and discharge, and to give releases and appoint substitutes. Hogg v. Snaithe, 1 Taunt. 347.

A general power of attorney granted to one partner does not give any authority to the others. Edmiston v. Wright (Bt.), 1 Camp. 88—Ellenb.

One of two partners gave his son a power of attorney, "to act on his behalf in dissolving the partnership, with authority to appoint any other person as he might see fit:"—Held, that this gave the son power to submit the account to arbitration. Henley v. Soper, 8 B. & C. 16; 2 M. & R. 153.

Where a power of attorney is given as part of a security for money, it is not revocable. Walsh v. Whitcomb, 2 Esp. 565—Kenyon.

A., being indebted to B., in order to discharge the debt, executed to B. a power of attorney, authorizing him to sell certain lands belonging to him, A.:—Held, that this being an authority with an interest, could not be revoked. Gaussen v. Morton, 10 B. & C. 731.

A power of attorney is revoked by the death of the party giving it, even though the party to whom it is given has an interest, or the act be not to be performed until after the death of the party. Watson v. King, 1 Stark. 121; 4 Camp. 272—Ellenb.

7. Other Cases.

A special agent, under a limited authority, cannot bind his principal by any act beyond the scope of such limited authority. Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757; 4 T. R. 177.

Where the holder of a bill of exchange desired A. to get it discounted, but positively refused to indorse it, and A. delivered it to B. for the same purpose, informing him to whom it belonged; and B. finding that he could not dispose of it without indorsing it, was prevailed upon to do so, by A.'s telling him that he would indemnify him; but the indorsee took it upon the credit of the names on the bill, without any knowledge of the real owner: although such original holder afterwards promised to pay the bill, yet such promise cannot support an action brought against him by the indorsee, it being nudum pactum; for, as A. was a special agent under a limited authority, he could not bind his principal by any act beyond the scope of such limited authority. Id.

It afterwards held, on a new trial, that the employers of A. the agent were bound by his act; and were liable to refund if the bill be afterwards dishonoured by the acceptor. 4 T. R. 177.

An agent employed generally to do an act is only authorized to do it in the usual way of business; therefore, as stock is usually sold for money only, a principal is not bound by the acts of a broker employed by him, who sells it upon credit without a special authority, though acting bona fide and with a view to the benefit of the principal. Wiltshire v. Sims, 1 Camp. 258.—Ellenborough.

If one of two trustees order a broker to sell stock standing in their joint names, and undertake to procure his co-trustee to join in the transfer, the broker is not warranted in making the sale, unless such co-trustee authorize or concur with the other in making the transfer. Leyton v. Sneyd, 2 Moore, 583.

A factor, who was a partner in a house abroad, to whom goods were consigned, made advances to the consignor to be paid out of the proceeds:—Held, that the consignees were not authorized to purchase bills for the account and risk of the consignor. Lucas v. Groning, 7 Taunt. 164; 2 Marsh. 460; 1 Stark. 391.

A. consigned and shipped goods to India for sale, and in his letter of instructions to his agent B., directed him to invest the proceeds in certain specified articles of merchandise, or in bills at the exchange of the day, and remit them to England. B., instead of complying with this order, invested the proceeds in a commodity not specified in his letter of instructions, and informed A. of the purchase, by letter, and transmitted a bill of lading for the goods, which reached A. on the 29th May, who notified to an agent of B., on the 7th August, his dissent from what had been done; the goods having in the mean time been lost at sea:—Held, that the laches of A. in delaying his notice of dissent so long, discharged B.'s liability; and that the jury were warranted in finding that A. had assented to the purchase made by B. Prince v. Clark, 2 D. & R. 266; 1 B. & C. 186.

A share in the London Institution, incorporated by charter, for the advancement of literature, &c., cannot be transferred until the proprietor shall, by writing under his hand, signify his desire so to do to the committee of managers, and mention therein the name, &c. and other description of the person to whom he is desirous the same should be transferred; which person is to be approved by the committee:—Held, that a note addressed to them in these words: "Having disposed of my share in the London Institution to [leaving a blank for the name], I beg leave to recommend him to be elected in my place, as a proprietor," &c. and signed by the proprietor, which note was left in the hands of an agent (the clerk of the society), for the purpose of selling the share, did not authorize such agent to fill up the blank himself with the name of the purchaser with whom he contracted for the price, against the rules of the society, which required the recommendation of the candidate to be vouched by the proprietor himself, inserting his name, &c., in the paper; and consequently the agent had no authority, before the transfer was so completed, to receive the money of the purchaser, and to insert his name in the blank, unknown to the proprietor.

And such purchaser, paying the money before the time of payment when the transfer from the proprietor was complete, pays it at his own risk to the agent, whom he thereby makes his own for that purpose. And such agent afterwards absconding with the money, and the society disallowing the transfer, upon the interference of the proprietor: Held, that the purchaser could not recover the amount from such proprietor in an action for money had and received. Parnther v. Gaitskell, 13 East, 432.

A factor having an authority to sell for money, is not entitled to barter; therefore, where a factor, being ordered to sell, bartered the goods of his principal:—Held, that no property passed, and that the principal might maintain trover against the party with whom the goods were bartered, although the latter was ignorant that he had been dealing with a factor. Guerreiro v. Peile, 3 B. & A. 616.

A traveller who receives orders for goods from his employer's customer in the country, is authorized to receive payment for them in money, but not in other goods. Howard v. Chapman, 4 C. & P. 508—Tindal.

IV. RIGHTS OF AGENT AGAINST PRINCIPAL

1. Remuneration.

Misconduct of Agent.—An agent cannot recover commission, or even a compensation for his trouble, if he executes his duties in such a manner that no benefit results from them. Hamond v. Holiday, 1 C. & P. 384—Best.

Nor is he entitled to commission where he has been guilty of gross misconduct in selling goods. White v. Chapman, 1 Stark. 113—Ellenborough.

A broker purchases goods on commission at a month's credit, and pays duties on them, and sends them to the place of the purchaser's abode, consigned to his own order: the seller, being fearful of the purchaser's credit, procures the broker to delay the arrival of the goods till the month's credit is expired, and to render them to the buyer on payment of the price, whereupon they are refused:—Held, that the broker can neither recover the price, duties, or commission, in an action for money paid. Hurst v. Holding, 3 Taunt. 32.

Claims by the agent for expenses on account of the principal, which, from the conduct of the agent in having undertaken the business without authority or agreement, could not be ascertained, were disallowed. Beaumont v. Boulbee, 11 Ves. jun. 358.

A confidential agent in that character is bound to keep regular accounts; and, having neglected to do so, and to preserve vouchers against himself, though he had preserved those in his own favour, was, on the ground of gross neglect of duty, not allowed a charge in respect of bills of costs for business done as a solicitor. White v. Lincoln (Lady), 8 Ves. jun. 363.

Business ineffectual.—A ship-broker employed to sell a ship, which, when put up for sale, was bought in, is not entitled to a commission on the sale. Mestac v. Atkins, 1 Marsh. 76; 5 Taunt. 381.

A ship-broker who has procured a bargain for the hire of a vessel, is, by the usage in the city of London, entitled to receive from the owner a certain commission on the amount of freight, if the contract is perfected, but not otherwise:—Held, that, when a broker had negotiated the hire of a vessel, and a memorandum for a charter was signed by the parties, but the bargain afterwards went off, and the ship was not employed, the broker could not maintain an action against the ship-owner to recover the commission, or a compensation for his work and labour. Read v. Rosa, 10 B. & C. 438.

Even where the contract is not completed by the act of the owner. Broad v. Thomas, 7 Bing. 99; 4 M. & P. 732; 4 C. & P. 338.

Where a broker is employed by a ship-owner to procure a charter-party, if the negotiation goes off on account of any fault in the broker, he is not entitled to recover any thing in the shape of remuneration; nor is he, in such case, entitled to recover for any expenses which he may have been put to, unless such expenses are unusual, and have been incurred in consequence of the ship-owner's having urged him to extraordinary expedition in the matter. And semble, that, where the negotiation is not carried into effect, but there is no fault in the broker, he is not entitled to any thing, unless the charter-party is actually signed. Dalton v. Irwin, 4 C. & P. 289—Tindal.

Del credere Commission.—A commission del credere is an absolute engagement to the principal from a broker, and makes him liable in the first instance, though the principal may resort to the person trusted as a collateral security. Grove v. Dubois, 1 T. R. 112. See Bize v. Dickason, 1 T. R. 285.

Indebitatus assumpsit lies to recover del credere commissions for guaranteeing sums insured upon policies; such commissions being due upon entering into the contract of guarantee. Caruthers v. Graham, 14 East, 578.

If a declaration state that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, in respect of goods delivered by him to the defendant, to be sold and disposed of; and it appear in evidence, that the defendant received a del credere commission on guaranteeing the solvency of the purchasers:—Held, that such declaration was insufficient, as the commission was not therein stated. Gall v. Comber, 1 Moore, 279; 7 Taunt. 558.

The plaintiff declared in indebitatus assumpsit, that the defendant was indebted to him for commission due for his having guaranteed the payment of goods sold by him, as the factor of the defendant, to third persons, and at his request: Held good after verdict. Solly v. Weiss (in error), 2 Moore, 420.

An agent who received annuities for his principal, sent him several accounts, in which he gave credit, amongst others, for instalments of annuities, but which he stated he had not yet received. He charged commission on them, as well as on the others which were received, and told his principal he might draw for the balance, which he did. In subsequent accounts no notice was taken of the instalments, which, in a previous account, were stated to be unpaid:—Held, sufficient evidence for a jury to infer a del credere commission, creating an agreement for the agent to be responsible to his principal for the annuities. Shaw v. Woodcock, 7 B. & C. 73; 9 D. & R. 889; and see Shaw v. Picton, 7 D. & R. 201; 4 B. & C. 715; and Shaw v. Dartnell, 9 D. & R. 54; 6 B. & C. 56.

Other Cases.—A broker chartering a ship to the Baltic is entitled to 5 per cent. commission, by usage of the trade. Cohen v. Paget, 4 Camp. 96—Ellenborough.

A broker charters ships, at a commission of 2½ per cent. on their outward freight, and the like on their homeward freight: if the charter-party makes it contingent what the amount of freight shall be, the broker cannot sue for any sum till the contingency is determined. Winter v. Mair, 3 Taunt. 531.

It is no answer to an action by a broker for commission for procuring freight, that the charter-party procured was such, that, if the charterer failed to obtain certain licenses, the voyage would be illegal. Haines v. Busk, 5 Taunt. 521; 1 Marsh. 191.

A ship broker is entitled to 5 per cent. on the gross freight of a ship, though payment of a part is contingent on the arrival of the vessel home. Roberts v. Jackson, 2 Stark. 225—Ellenborough.

A spirit broker is entitled to a commission of half a crown per puncheon, for putting a quantity of rum up for sale by public auction, although such sale turned out to be ineffectual. Stewart v. Kahle, 3 Stark. 161.—Ellenborough.

By an usage of trade, a broker may be entitled to ¼ per cent. commission from the purchaser as well as the seller. Eicke v. Meyer, 3 Camp. 412.—Ellenborough.

Where plaintiffs, being ordered to sell an estate, or to raise money upon it, and being unable to effect a sale, applied to A., by negotiation with whom money was obtained, but without any further interference on the part of the plaintiffs:—Held, that they could not recover more than 5s. per cent. commission for procuring this money. Pryce v. Wilkinson, 2 Bing. 470; 10 Moore, 177.

By agreement, T., an agent, was to have a commission on sales effected, or orders executed by him; the principal to be responsible for bad debts, and the agent to draw his commission monthly. By the custom of the trade, commission was not allowed on sales which produced bad debts:—Held, notwithstanding, that, under the terms of this agreement, T. was entitled to commission on bad debts. Bower v. Jones, 8 Bing. 65; 1 M. & Scott, 140.

The plaintiff, a surveyor, was retained by the defendant, to negotiate with the commissioners of woods and forests for the sale to them of certain premises of the defendant, for which he was to receive a commission of 2l. per cent. "on the sum which might be obtained, either by private treaty, arbitration, or trial by jury." Private treaty proving unavailing, a jury was empanelled, by whom the value of the property was assessed at 4,000l. but, in consequence of a defect in the defendant's title, arising out of an annuity charged upon part of the premises, which the commissioners required the defendant to buy off, the money was not paid to her, but was placed in the hands of the Accountant-General, to await the adjustment of the difference. The plaintiff was not previously aware by the existence of this charge:—Held, that he was, nevertheless, not entitled to his commission until the money awarded was actually received by the defendant. Bull v. Price, 5 M. & P. 2; 7 Bing. 237.

2. Lien.

A factor has a lien on his principal's goods for the general balance due to him. Goden v. London Ass. Company, 1 W. Black. 104.

But he has no lien on goods for a general balance, unless they come into his actual possession. Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 119, 783; 4 Bro. P. C. 47.

A factor who becomes surety for his principal, has a lien on the goods sold by him for his principal, to the amount of the sum for which he has so become surety. Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251.

An actual possession given to a factor by a carrier, by order of the shipper, after his (the shipper's) bankruptcy, is not such a possession as will give him a lien against the assignees, although the goods were shipped on account of the factor, and bills had been accepted by him on the faith of it, such an order rather operates to defeat his claim of lien, as being an act of ownership exercised by the bankrupt. Nicholas v. Clent, 3 Price, 547.

If a broker advance money, and give his acceptances on the credit of goods lodged in his hands, he has a lien on them, and may retain them until the owner gave him a full indemnity. Pultney (Bart.) v. Keymer, 3 Esp. 182—Eldon.

So he has a lien on such goods, and the purchase money, available against the crown, where the goods or money have been seized by the sheriff under an extent against the principal, for a debt due to the crown. Rex v. Lee, 6 Price, 369.

A broker purchasing goods for his principals, without their knowledge, adds to the terms of purchase which the principals had agreed to, a guarantee by himself of their bills: the goods were delivered to the broker, and the principals became bankrupts:—Held, that the broker had no lien on them for the money he had paid on his guarantee. Gurney v. Sharp, 4 Taunt. 242.

A principal gives notice to his factor of an intended consignment of a ship to him for the purpose of sale, and in consequence draws bills on him, which factor accepts: and then the principal dies, and his executors direct the captain of the ship to follow his former orders; who thereupon delivers the ship into the possession of the factor, who sells the same:—Held, that the factor has a lien upon the proceeds, as well for the amount of money disbursed by him for the necessary use of the ship on its arrival, and for the acceptances by him actually paid, as for the amount of his outstanding acceptances not then due. Hammonds v. Barclay, 2 East, 227: and see Kinger v. Wilcox, Amb. 252.

If goods are bought by an agent on his own credit, he may, before they come to the possession of the principal, stop them, to protect himself. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 416; 1 Price, P. C. 24.

If a trader, before an act of bankruptcy, place a cargo of coals in the possession of a factor for sale, and he is in the course of disposing of them when the trader becomes bankrupt; the factor has a right to proceed with the sale, to receive the money, and to hold it in payment of his own balance. Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. 236—Ellenborough.

Where the owner of goods was indebted to a factor in a sum exceeding their value, and consigned them to him for sale; and the factor, being indebted to J. S. in more than their worth, sold them to him, and afterwards became bankrupt; and on a settlement of accounts between J. S. and the assignees of the factor, the former allowed credit to them for the price of the goods, and then proved the residue of his claim against the estate:—Held, that, as the factor had a lien on the whole price of the goods, such settlement of accounts between the vendee and the assignees was a good answer to an action against the vendee for the price of the goods, brought either by, or on the account of the original owner. Hudson v. Granger, 5 B. & A. 27.

If A. deposit goods with B. for sale, and B. promise to pay the proceeds to A. when sold; B. has no lien on them (if not sold) for the balance of his general account arising upon other articles. Walker v. Birch, 6 T. R. 258.

On the 15th of October the defendants, as brokers of A., purchased goods of B. & Co. on his account, and agreed with them that such goods should remain on their premises one month, free of rent, and after that time that A. should pay rent until their removal. From 7th to the 11th of November the defendants shipped part of the goods by the order of A., who directed the remainder to be left at B. & Co.'s premises till further orders. Shortly after, B. & Co. requested the defendants to remove them, which they did not; but, on the 9th of December, without any direction of A., they removed them to their own premises, a docket having been previously struck against A. on the 6th, and a commission issued on the 10th: Held, that the possession continued in A., and that the defendants had no lien on the goods for a general balance due to them from A. as his brokers. Taylor v. Robinson, 2 Moore, 730.

A., a factor, having sold goods for B. in his own name to C.; the latter, without paying for these goods, sent another parcel of goods to A. to sell for him, never having employed A. as a factor before. C. then became bankrupt, and his assignees claimed the goods sent by him to A., and which still remained unsold, tendering the charges upon those goods. A. refused to deliver them up, claiming a lien upon them for the price of the former goods sold by him to C., there being a balance then due from B. to himself:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to recover. Houghton v. Matthews, 3 B. & P. 485.

The right of lien being personal cannot be transferred by any tortious act of the broker. McCombie v. Davies, 7 East, 5; 3 Smith, 3.

An agreement by a broker that he will sell goods for his principal, and pay over the whole proceeds without setting off a debt then due to him from his principal, is not binding upon the broker so as to deprive him of his legal right of lien. McGillivray v. Simson, 9 D. & R. 35; 2 C. & P. 320.

3. Dispute Principal's Title.

Quære, whether a broker, who sells goods and receives the money for them on account of his principal, can controvert his title to the goods in an action brought against him by the principal, or his assignees, for the money. Jones v. Dwyer, 15 East, 21.

An agent cannot dispute the title of his principal; and, therefore, where a ship originally belonged to one of two part owners, had been conveyed to B. for securing a debt, and B. became the sole registered owner of the ship, and afterwards, as agent for both partners, insured the ship and freight, and charged them with the premiums, &c., and, on a loss happening, received the money from the underwriters: Held, that he was accountable to the assignees of the surviving partner for the surplus, after payment of his own debt, and not to the executors of the deceased partner, to whom the ship originally belonged. Dixon v. Hamond, 2 B. & A. 310.

A contract, establishing between the contracting parties the relation of principal and agent, is made absolute in law by the latter's acting under it; and an insurance broker cannot, as an agent, dispute the claim of his only known principal, on the ground that other persons were interested in the subject-matter of the insurance: their claims would be a question between the assured and the persons so claiming to be interested. Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269.

4. Payments on Account of Principal.

A direction to an agent to pay over the proceeds of a sale, is not revocable, if founded upon a valuable consideration. Metcalf v. Clough, 2 M. & R. 178.

Where the plaintiff directed the defendants (his bankers) to hold a certain sum of money from his private account, at the disposal of J. S., and the bankers accepted the order, but the plaintiff countermanded it before any actual appropriation or payment made:—Held, that such order was revocable, and the defendants, having paid the money to J. S. after such countermand, were liable to the plaintiff in an action for money had and received. Gibson v. Minet, 9 Moore, 31; 2 Bing. 7; 1 C. & P. 247; R. & M. 68.

Although where an agent has money in his hands belonging to his principal, who orders him to pay it over to a third person, but before payment the principal countermands such order, and the agent afterwards pays it over, he does so in his own wrong; yet, where advances were made, under an agreement, amounting to the appropriation of the proceeds of a specified cargo by a particular ship, which the agent remitted accordingly:—Held, that he was not responsible for such payment, although his principal had countermanded the order subsequently to the agreement under which the advances were made. Fisher v. Miller, 7 Moore, 527; 1 Bing. 150.

Plaintiff cannot recover money paid to redeem property seized, which he had improperly shipped by order of his partner, who was defendant's agent. Edmiston v. Wright, 1 Camp. 88—Ellenborough.

A. consigns goods to B., with directions to pay over the net proceeds to C. B. employs D. to dispose of them. In an action by C. to recover the proceeds from D., D. is entitled to make the same deductions for freight, &c., as B., who was the owner of the ship in which the goods were brought, might have made. Blackburn v. Kymer, 1 Marsh. 223; 5 Taunt. 584.

Where an agent has a general authority to receive and sell goods, and out of the proceeds to repay himself his advances, charges, and commission; the costs of an action, with a reference thereof, against a wrong-doer, who withholds the possession of the goods, bona fide incurred for the recovery of the goods, are legal charges upon the goods, and may be set off by the agent in an action brought against him by his principal for the balance of the proceeds of the goods. Curtis v. Barclay, 7 D. & R. 539; 5 B. & C. 141; S. C. not S. P. 2 C. & P. 185.

A broker, who contracts with others for the sale of stock at a future day, by the authority of his principal, who afterwards refuses to make good the bargain, cannot, by paying the difference to such third person, maintain an action on an implied assumpsit against his principal for the amount. Child v. Morley, 8 T. R. 610.

Quære, whether a broker who contracts a purchase for his principal, and afterwards makes good the contract, can recover the money he pays to complete it, of his principal, on any of the common money counts. Joseph v. Pebrer, 1 C. & P. 341—Littledale. 5 D. & R. 542; 3 B. & C. 639.

V. LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL.

1. On Sale of Goods.

An agent who sells goods on credit is not liable to his principal until he is paid by the vendee, unless the delay in payment was occasioned by his own neglect. Varden v. Parker, 2 Esp. 710—Buller.

And if he discloses the name of the vendee, he is not liable for the price to his principal, unless he acts under a del credere commission. Alsop v. Sylvester, 1 C. & P. 107—Hullock.

A broker when he bought goods for his principal, agreed for half per cent. to indemnify him from any loss on the re-sale; it was held, that this undertaking was discharged when the principal had a fair opportunity of selling to advantage, but neglected it, though he was afterwards obliged to sell at a loss. Curry v. Edensor, 3 T. R. 524.

If a broker, being employed to sell goods, sell them for a bill at a given date, and draw on the buyer for the amount, he is answerable on the bill to his principal. Le Feuvre v. Lloyd, 1 Marsh. 318; 5 Taunt. 749.

An agent purchasing foreign bills for his principal, and indorsing them to him without qualification, is liable to the principal on his indorsement, however small be the commission which he gets upon the purchase. Goupy v. Harden, 2 Marsh. 454; 7 Taunt. 159; Holt, 342.

A factor takes a security, payable to himself, from a purchaser of goods, and gives his own security to his principal, without giving the name of the purchaser; the factor cannot compel his principal to refund the money paid him, on failure of the purchases. Simpson v. Swan, 3 Camp. 291.—Ellenborough.

Goods were consigned to two for sale by commission; upon a dissolution of partnership, the commission to sell was assumed by one:—Held, that, having sold, he was rightly sued for money had and received, which action could not have been maintained against both, although an action for not accounting would have laid against him. Wells v. Ross, 7 Taunt. 403.

Consignees abroad, on a del credere commission, specially indorse bills to one of their partners in London for the proceeds of goods, who had advanced money on the goods to the consignor: the consignees must bear the loss on the bills being dishonoured while in the partners' hands. Lucas v. Groning, 1 Stark. 391; 2 Marsh. 460, 7 Taunt. 164.

If a broker advance money, and give his acceptances on the credit of goods lodged in his hands, the owner cannot demand them without a full indemnity; and giving his counter-acceptances, or those of any other person, to the amount of those given by the trader, and becoming payable at the same time, is not a sufficient indemnity. Pultney (Bart.) v. Keymer, 3 Esp. 182—Eldon.

A bill for an account will lie by the principal against an agent employed to sell goods for him. Mackenzie v. Johnston, 4 Madd. 373.

2. Negligence.

A person is liable for negligence in procuring a policy of insurance, though he did it gratuitously. Wilkinson v. Coverdale, 1 Esp. 75—Kenyon.

A., a general merchant, undertakes voluntarily, without reward, to enter a parcel of goods to B., together with a parcel of his own of the same sort, at the custom-house, for exportation; but makes the entry under a wrong denomination, whereby both parcels were seized. A. having taken the same care of the goods of B. as of his own, not having received any reward, and not being of a profession or employment which necessarily implied skill in what he had undertaken, is not liable to an action for the loss occasioned to B. Shiells v. Blackburne, 1 H. Black. 158.

Merchants in London receive from a mere stranger abroad a bill of lading, in a letter, requesting them to effect an insurance; they decline doing so, but bona fide indorse the bill of lading to a friend of his, who fails:—Held, that the merchants were liable to the consignor for the amount. Corlett v. Gordon, 3 Camp. 472—Ellenborough.

An agent who acts upon the best advice he is able to get in the affairs of his principal, is not liable to damages arising from that act. Miles v. Bernard, Peake Add. Cas. 61—Kenyon. And see Reece v. Rigby, 4 B. & A. 202.

Case, not trover, lies against a broker who is authorized to sell goods for a certain price, but sells them at an inferior price. Dufresne v. Hutchinson, 3 Taunt. 117.

Trover does not lie against a person who takes out goods to India for the vendor under an agreement to sell them for what he could get, and retain what he could obtain above a certain price, but who left them to a third person to be disposed of, on quitting India. Bromley v. Coxwell, 2 B. & P. 438.

No action is maintainable. Id.

A., in Holland, commissioned B. in London to purchase and ship tobacco of the best quality. B. employed C. as his broker for that purpose, who accordingly made a purchase from D. On the arrival of the tobacco in Holland, it turned out to be of a very bad quality, when A. brought an action and recovered against B.:—Held, that B. was entitled to recover from C. the whole of the damages he had sustained in the action brought against him by A., although he had received and bought a note from C. in which the tobacco was not described as of the best quality. Mainwaring v. Brandon, 2 Moore, 125.

A party employing another to present a bill for acceptance is entitled to recover nominal damages against such agent if he fails to present it; although no real damage whatever is occasioned by the neglect, the bill and costs having been paid by other persons liable on it. Van Wart v. Wollley, M. & M. 520—Tenterden. See 8 B. & C. 439; 1 M. & R. 4.

An agent acting gratuitously was charged with a loss arising from the failure of his bankers, where he had paid in the monies to his own account. Massey v. Banner, 1 J. & W. 241; 3 Madd. 413. S. P. Lipton v. White, 15 Ves. jun. 432.

An agent so depositing money with a banker to his own account, cannot relieve himself from liability, by informing his principal of the payment, without a correct specification of the particulars. Id.

Rights of Principal [AGENT AND PRINCIPAL] against Third Persons. 41

An agent who applies money remitted to him to his own use, is liable for interest; but not if he suffers it to lie dead in his hands. Rogers v. Boehm, 2 Esp. 704—Kenyon: and see Chedworth v. Edwards, 8 Ves. jun. 48.

3. Other Cases.

The clerk to a body of trustees, who executes his office by a deputy appointed by himself, is not responsible in damages for losses occasioned by the negligence or malversation of his deputy, if they were of such a nature that they only become prejudicial to the trustees through negligence on their own part. Whitmore v. Wilks, M. & M. 214—Tenterden.

Nor for money belonging to the trustees and actually received by the deputy, but which only came into his hands by reason of an irregular act of the trustees, which the deputy had prevailed on them to commit. Id.

But he is answerable for sums of money which the trustees had ordered him to receive, although not in his capacity of clerk, if those sums be actually paid to the deputy at the office, although the deputy had no particular authority to receive them, if the clerk had, at the time, reasonable ground to believe that the payment would actually be made to the deputy at the office. Id.

Rule for new trial granted. Id.

Where a person is employed to receive money for another, and he employs a third person to receive it for him, assumpsit for money had and received will not lie against the first, without evidence that the money came to the hands of such third person. Matthews v. Haydon, 2 Esp. 509—Kenyon.

Defendant is employed to procure payment of a bill, and remit the produce direct to plaintiff, but remits it to a third person, whereby it gets into the hands of plaintiff's creditors: defendant is not liable for money had and received. Duncan v. Skipwith, 2 Camp. 68—Ellenborough.

Defendant is not liable for a loss where he had collected some debts for plaintiff, and sent them by the post according to his direction. Warwicke v. Noskes, Peake, 67—Kenyon.

Where a servant was accustomed to receive debts for his master, and pay the money over without any written vouchers, the master must prove that the servant has not paid the money over, as well as that he has received it, in an action against him for money had and received. Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp. 10—Ellenborough.

VI. RIGHTS OF PRINCIPAL AGAINST THIRD PERSONS.

The defendant drew a bill at Marseilles on B. in London, which he accepted, payable to the order of C., who indorsed it to the plaintiffs: being dishonoured, the plaintiffs commenced an action against the defendant, the bill being then held by them as the agents of C.: a former bill had been drawn by the defendant on D., which, at the time of its dishonour, was held by E., who took it up, and, having struck out his indorsement, sent it to F., to be forwarded to G. & Co. at Marseilles, for the purpose of receiving the amount from the defendant. G. & Co., in breach of the trust reposed in them, indorsed it, being overdue at the time, to C., for a valuable consideration. On C.'s demanding payment from the defendant, he drew the bill in question as a substitution for the former, and delivered it to C.; and, before the latter bill became due, E. gave the defendant notice not to pay it:—Held, that he was not liable, as the plaintiffs held the bill as the agents of C., and that they could only recover, to be accountable to him, and that C. had no right to recover, as the produce of it belonged to E., who had given the defendant notice not to pay it. Lee v. Zagury, 1 Moore, 557.

A. ordered goods of B. & Co. to be shipped at Bristol, and, before the vessel sailed, he directed his agents in London to insure her. B. & Co. having shipped the goods, caused another insurance to be effected, they being ignorant of the former insurance by A. Neither of the policies were cancelled, but that effected by A. was void on the ground of concealment. In an action against an underwriter by B. & Co. on the policy effected by them:—Held, that they were entitled to recover, A.'s agent having directed it to be effected; and that the jury were warranted in finding that he had an implied authority so to do. Barlow v. Leckie, 4 Moore, 8.

Although an agent enters into an agreement for the purchase of an estate in his own name, and appears to act on his own account, yet, on the vendor's default in completing the purchase, the principal may maintain an action for the deposit in his own name. Norfolk (Duke) v. Worthing, 1 Camp. 337—Ellenborough.

Where an agent, without declaring his principal, purchases goods, the vendors, on discovering the principal, may sue him, though he has debited the agent, and though the principal has remitted money to his agent to discharge the debt. Nelson v. Powell, 3 Dougl. 410.

Where sugars were shipped from abroad, under a bill of lading, which expressed that they were on account of the plaintiffs, and were to be delivered to W. and their assigns, and W., who was the agent of the plaintiffs for the management of their property consigned from abroad, indorsed the bills of lading, together with other bills of lading, comprising the rest of the cargo, to the defendants, and drew bills upon them for the amount of the whole cargo, which the defendants accepted, and paid, and sold the sugars at two months' credit, at the expiration of which they carried the amount of the proceeds to the account of W., who, in the interval between the sale and the expiration of the credit, had become bankrupt:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the proceeds of such sale from the defendants. Shipley v. Kymer, 1 M. & S. 484.

By custom in the corn market, a buyer may pay the factor upon discount, within the two months which constitute the ordinary time of payment, either for his own accommodation, or that of the factor; and therefore, where a factor stopped payment after he had received the money for corn sold, but before the expiration of the two months: Held, that the principal could not sue the buyer, but must look to the factor. Heish v. Carrington, 5 C. & P. 471—Denman.

VII. OBLIGATION OF PRINCIPAL TO THIRD PERSONS.

1. On Contracts of Agents.

Fraud will vitiate any transaction, though the principal do not personally take any part in the fraud, if the agent do: for, the principal is civilly responsible for the acts of his agent. Doe d. Willis, v. Marjin, 4 T. R. 39.

A principal is bound by all the acts of his general agent; but, where he appoints an agent for a particular purpose, he is only bound to the extent of the authority given. E. I. Comp. v. Hensley, 1 Esp. 112—Kenyon: and see Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278; 1 M. & R. 66.

If a tradesman living in the country receive goods, ordered on his behalf by a person in London, and pay for them in several instances, he is liable for goods furnished on an order given by such person afterwards, though he did not receive them, such person having appropriated them to his own use. Gillman v. Robinson, 1 C. & P. 642; R. & M. 226—Best.

Therefore, where the defendant, a linen-draper in Yorkshire, has in several instances employed A. B. as his agent, to purchase on credit goods from the plaintiffs, linen-drapers, in London, and A. B., without the authority of the defendant, orders goods, in his name, to be sent by the usual conveyance, and intercepts them to his own use: Held, that the defendant is liable for such goods, having by the previous dealing authorized the plaintiffs to treat A. B. as his agent. Todd v. Robinson, R. & M. 217—Abbott.

A., a merchant, purchases goods of B., for the use of C., who is present and selects the goods, and stipulates with B. the price and other terms of the purchase. A. credits B. with the amount, and debits C. with the amount and a commission. B. debits A. in his books and invoices. B. cannot recover the price of the goods against C. Addison v. Gandusequi, 4 Taunt. 374.

If one take the security of the agent of the principal with whom he dealt, unknown to the principal, and give the agent a receipt as for the money due from the principal, in consequence of which the principal deals differently with his agent, on the faith of such receipt, the principal is discharged, although the security fail. Otherwise, if the principal do not show that he was injured by means of such false voucher. Wyatt v. Hertford (Marq.), 3 East, 147.

An agent for the Bank of Scotland, carrying on the business of a banker on his own account, took in money, and gave an unstamped receipt, not purporting on the face of it to be the security of the bank:—Held, that they were not bound by such receipt. Bank of Scotland v. Watson, 1 Dow, 40.

A return cargo belonging to the plaintiff was consigned by the defendant to A. and B. to "be held at the orders of the latter," who had a lien on it; and the cargo was sold by them and their lien satisfied:—Held, that the plaintiff could not consider them as agents of the defendant, so as to entitle him to maintain money had and received against the defendant for the balance remaining in their hands. Tennant v. Mackintosh, 1 B. & A. 594.

Notice to an agent, in order to bind his principal, must be in the same transaction. Mountford v. Scott, 3 Madd. 34; 1 M. & R. 66.

Where cattle had been sold by the plaintiff to A., and it appeared that at the time of sale A. managed the defendant's farm; that he had always his money in hand, and that he had then to the credit of defendant's account more than the value of the cattle; that the defendant had never authorized him to buy on credit: that he had sometimes bought for the defendant and sometimes for himself; that the cattle had been paid for by bills drawn on A., which had been dishonoured when due, and afterwards renewed by the plaintiff:—Held, that it was sufficient to leave it to the jury to say whether the cattle had been sold on the credit of the defendant or of A., and it was not necessary that it should be left to them to say, whether the plaintiff, at the time of the sale was aware that A. was acting as the agent of the defendant. Edwards v. Smith, 12 Moore, 59.

A., a merchant at Liverpool, circulated catalogues of certain goods to be sold by auction, subject to the following condition, amongst others:—"Payment to be made on the delivery of bills of parcels, by good bills on London to the satisfaction of the sellers, not exceeding three months' date, to be made equal to cash in four months." B., a broker at Liverpool, sent a catalogue to C. a merchant in London, who in return gave him directions to buy certain lots which B. bought accordingly. Before the sale began, the auctioneer stated that payment by known buyers was to be on the usual credit, two and two months; B., as a known buyer, received the goods without giving bills, and forwarded them to C. in London, with an invoice, stating that payment was to be equal to cash at four months; and a few days afterwards B. drew on C. for the amount, at four months from the day of sale, which bill C. accepted and paid at maturity. Within two months from the sale B. failed, never having given bills to A. for the price of goods, and A., finding that C. was B's principal, sued him for the value:—Held, that he could not recover, as C. would naturally be induced by A.'s catalogue to suppose that B. had given bills for the goods at the time of the delivery, and therefore accepted B's draft under a mistake occasioned by A.: and, per Parke, J., the broker B. had not any authority from C. to make a contract for goods to be paid at two and two months, and consequently C. was not bound by it. Horsfall v. Fautleroy, 10 B. & C. 755.

Defendants entered into an agreement with C. to carry on for them certain mining speculations in America; furnished him with instructions; a letter authorizing him to draw on them for 10,000*l.*, and a power of attorney of the most extensive description, "to take and work mines, to purchase tools and materials, to erect the necessary buildings, and to execute any deeds or instruments he might think necessary for the purpose." C., after he had raised 10,000*l.* under the letter of authority, obtained of plaintiff, in America, 1,500*l.* which he applied to the defendants' use, and, for the amount, drew bills on the defendants, which he indorsed to plaintiff. He did not show the letter of authority to the plaintiff; there was no indorsement on it of sums previously raised, and it did not appear that the plaintiff knew that any money had been raised before by C.; the defendants refused to accept the bills; Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover the 1,500*l.* from the defendants, as money had and received to his use. Witherington v. Herring, 5 Bing. 442; 3 M. & P. 30.

2. For Misconduct of Agents.

An incorporated water-works company are liable in case, where workmen, employed by persons who contract with the company to lay down pipes in a public street, do the work in a negligent manner, whereby a person passing along the street receives an injury. Matthews v. West-London Water-works Company, 3 Camp. 403—Ellenborough.

So of a private person, Bush v. Steinman, 1 B. & P. 404.

Trustees of a turnpike road are not liable in damages for an injury occasioned by the negligence of contractors, or others employed under them, in the performance of public works on the road, unless they personally interfere in the management of the works. Humphreys v. Mears, 1 M. & R. 187.

Quere, what degree of personal interference would suffice to render them so liable. Id.

It has been held that a steward, manager, or agent was not liable for damage done by the negligence of those employed by him in the service of his principal; for, the principal, or those actually employed, only are liable. Stone v. Cartwright, 6 T. R. 411.

Where an agent tendered the amount of a note for his principal, on condition of having the note given up, which could not be done from its being mislaid, and afterwards failed with the money in his hands: Held, that the principal was still liable on the note, but without interest from the time of the tender. Dent v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 296—Ellenborough: and see Stewart v. Fry, 1 Moore, 74; 7 Taunt. 339.

The plaintiffs and the defendant having each lodged their respective India bonds with the same bankers, who afterwards privily and without the defendant's authority, sold his bonds, and, upon his demand of them, delivered up to him the India bonds of the plaintiffs, to the same total amount, and payable to the same obligee, (being always the treasurer of the company, who indorses such bonds in blank before they are circulated,) but having different numbers, and for different separate sums, and therefore manifestly distinguishable from his own bonds, though the defendant did not know that they were the property of another, but was told by the bankers that they had exchanged his original bonds for these: Held, that the defendant, having sold the plaintiffs' bonds so received from his own agents, who had acted mala fide in passing them to him, was liable to answer over to the plaintiffs for the amount, in an action of assumpsit for money had and received to their use. Glyn (Bart.) v. Baker, 13 East, 509.

In trover for wool, which the plaintiffs alleged the defendants had obtained by fraud, it appeared that it had been purchased of the plaintiffs by one D., as agent for Messrs. W. & Co., and that they pledged it two days afterwards to the defendants for an advance made by them to W. & Co. through the intervention of D., who acted as the agent of the defendants as well as of W. & Co. The plaintiffs, in order to show that W. & Co. had obtained the wool without intending to pay for it, they being insolvent at the time of the purchase, and which D. was aware of, offered certain contracts in evidence, signed by D.; and his handwriting to them having been proved:—Held, that such contracts were admissible, without calling D. as a witness. And the jury having found that the transaction between D. and W. & Co. was fraudulent, but that the defendants were not cognizant of the fraud, and that D. was their agent as well as the agent of W. & Co., and the plaintiffs obtained a verdict, the court refused to grant a new trial, as the defendants were liable for the fraudulent acts and misconduct of their own agent. Irving v. Motley, 5 M. & P. 380.

VIII. RIGHTS OF AGENT AGAINST THIRD PERSONS.

A plaintiff who has made a contract as agent for a third person, cannot sue as principal without giving notice to the defendant, previously to the commencement of the action, that he is the party actually interested. Bickerton v. Burrell, 5 M. & S. 383.

But held at Nisi Prius, that a broker who had advanced money on goods, might declare on a special contract respecting the sale in his own name; and that it was not a variance, though the sale-note mentioned the name of the principal. Atkyns v. Amber, 2 Esp. 493—Eyre.

That the mere indorsement of a bill of lading to an agent to enable him to receive the goods on account of his principal, without any consideration, will enable such agent to maintain trover in his own name for the goods, is doubtful—semble that it will not. Coze v. Harding, 4 East, 211; 1 Smith, 20.

A factor who sells goods in his own name, without a del credere commission, is a good petitioning creditor against the purchaser. Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 185—Ellenborough.

Unless the principal has considered the purchaser as his debtor, by taking steps to recover the debt directly from him. Id.

The plaintiffs, who were brokers, bought goods of the defendant, on account of H., and by his authority. The purchase was made in their own names, but the vendor was told that there was an unnamed principal. The plaintiffs afterwards, under a general authority from H., contracted to sell the same goods, which the defendant had not yet delivered. H., on hearing of the latter contract, told the plaintiffs that he would have nothing to do with the goods, either as buyer or seller, and in this they acquiesced. The defendant then refused to deliver the goods, and the plaintiffs sued him for damages sustained by them in consequence:—Held, that the renunciation of the contract by H., and the plaintiffs acquiescence in it, formed no objection to the right of the plaintiffs to recover. Short v. Spackman, 2 B. & Adol. 962.

IX. LIABILITY OF AGENT TO THIRD PERSONS.

It was laid down by Eyre, C. J., that if a person who describes himself as agent for another residing abroad, enter into a contract here, he is personally liable. De Gaillon v. L'Aigle 1 B. & P. 368.

So, where an agent who described himself as the agent and consignee of a ship chartered for a specific voyage, signed an agreement in his own name, "witnessing that the said parties had agreed to vary the voyage," and it appeared that throughout the business he gave instructions and conducted himself as principal:—Held, that he was personally liable. Kennedy v. Gouveia, 3 D. & R. 503.

If a man describe himself in the beginning of an agreement to grant a lease, as making it on behalf of another, but in a subsequent part of it says that he will execute the lease, he is personally liable. Norton v. Herron, 1 C. & P. 643; R. & M. 229—Best.

Where A., an auctioneer, being employed to sell an estate belonging to B., entered into and signed an agreement with C. for the purchase, in his own name, as agent of B., and B. shortly afterwards signed it, and added, "I hereby sanction this agreement, and approve of A.'s having signed the same on my behalf:"—Held, that A. was not personally responsible. Spittle v. Laverder, 5 Moore, 270; 2 B. & B. 452.

An agent is not responsible if he names his principal as the person to be responsible. Ex parte Hartop, 12 Ves. jun. 352.

An agent to a country bank, to whom the plaintiff sent a sum of money, in order to procure a bill upon London, drew it in his own name for the amount upon the firm in London, the two firms being the same:—Held, that the agent was personally liable as drawer, although the plaintiff knew that he was agent, and supposed that the bill was drawn by him at such, and on account of the country bank, to which the agent paid over the money. Leadbitter v. Farrow, 5 M. & S. 345.

An agent in this country for merchants who are sellers of goods in Russia, who guarantees "that a shipment shall be in conformity with the revenue laws of Great Britain, so that no impediment shall arise upon the importation thereof, or that in default the consequences shall rest with the sellers," makes himself personally responsible to the buyer. Redhead v. Cator, 1 Stark. 14—Ellenborough.

An agent who buys goods, and remits bills in payment which he does not indorse, but says he will see them paid, is liable to the seller. Morris v. Stacey, Holt, 153—Gibbs.

An action for money lies against an agent for money paid to him by mistake, although he has forwarded his account to his principal, and placed the sum to his credit. Cox v. Prentice, 2 M. & S. 344.

If money be paid by mistake to an agent, and placed by him to the account of his principal, but not paid over, money had and received to the use of the person so paying it by mistake, will lie against the agent. The mere passing such money in account, or making rest, without any new credit given, fresh bills accepted, or further sums advanced for the principal in consequence of it, is not equivalent to the payment of it over. Buller v. Harrison, Cowp. 565.

A receipt signed by an agent for his principal, is not evidence to support an action for money had and received against him, to recover the money back. Edden v. Read, 3 Camp. 339—Ellenborough.

To make it a defence to an agent that he has paid over money, it is necessary that the money should have been paid to the agent expressly for the use of the person to whom he has so paid it over. Snowdon v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359.

A. having received money as agent for B. and others, in specific proportions for each, pays it over to D. as a banker in his own name, and having drawn out part of it, directs C. not to pay away the remainder, except by his order:—Held, that B. is bound to hold the money for A., and that therefore B. cannot recover the remainder of his share from C., though he had given C. notice that A.'s agency was at an end. Pinto v. Santos, 1 Marsh. 132; 5 Taunt. 447.

Where persons have received money for the express purpose of taking up a bill of exchange, two days after it became due, and, upon tendering it to the holders and demanding the bill, find that they have sent it back protested for non-acceptance to the person who indorsed it to them: Held, that such persons, having received fresh orders not to pay the bill, were not liable to an action by the holders for money had and received, when, upon the bills being re-procured and tendered to them, they refused to pay the money. Stewart v. Fry, 1 Moore, 74; 7 Taunt. 399: and see Dent v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 296.

J., an attorney, who was accustomed to receive certain dues for the plaintiff, his client, went from home, leaving B., his clerk, at the office. B., in the absence of his master, received money on account of the above dues for the client, (which he was authorized to do); and gave a receipt signed "B., for Mr. J." J. was in bad circumstances when he left home, and he never returned, but it did not appear that his intention so to act was known at the time of the payment to B. B. afterwards refused to pay the money over to the client, and on assumpsit brought against him for money had and received :—Held, that the action did not lie ; for that the defendant received the money as the agent of his master, and was accountable to him for it, the master, on the other hand, being answerable to the client for the sum received by his clerk ; and there was no privity of contract between the present plaintiff and the defendant. Stephens v. Badcock, 3 B. & Adol. 354.

Where a son had ostensibly appeared as the proprietor and conductor of the business in a trade, not an extensive one, and the father, to whom the business really belonged, was superannuated and incapable of conducting it :—Held, that the son was liable on contracts connected with the business. Turrel v. Collet, 1 Esp. 321—Kenyon.

But, where a party gives an order for another, and at the time tells the tradesman for whose use he orders the goods, he is not personally liable, unless the tradesman refuse to deliver them to the order of the person for whom they are directed, but will only give credit to the agent who ordered them. Owen v. Gooch, 2 Esp. 567—Kenyon.

Where the defendant bought goods of the plaintiffs in the name and upon the credit of Smith & Co., but those purchases were made in reality on his own account, he was held to be liable. Reilton v. Hodgson, 15 East, 67 ; Peele v. Hodgson, Id.

Where a factor, dealing for a principal, but concealing that principal, delivers goods in his own name, the person contracting with him has a right to consider him, to all intents and purposes, as the principal : and, though the real principal may appear and bring an action upon that contract against the purchaser of the goods, yet that purchaser may set off any claim he may have against the factor in answer to the demand of the principal, Rabone v. Williams, 7 T. R. 360, n.—Mansfield.

Where a bill is drawn on an agent, and made payable out of a particular fund, and the agent says he will pay it when he gets money from the principal ; this is binding on him ; and if he gets money at any subsequent time, he is bound to pay the bill. Stevens v. Hill, 5 Esp. 247—Ellenborough.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, the question being whether the contract was made by the defendant as principal or as agent for third persons, who employed him to make purchases on their account ; and it was left to the jury to say whether the defendant told the plaintiff that he was acting as an agent at the time of the purchase :—Held, that it was not a misdirection, as it was incumbent on the defendant to show, either that he told the plaintiff that he made the purchase on account of his principals, or that the plaintiff knew that he was merely acting as their agent. Seaber v. Hawkes, 5 M. & P. 549.

ALE HOUSES.

By stat. 1 Will. 4. c. 64, all householders assessed to the poor-rates, other than and except sheriffs' officers, or officers executing the legal process of courts of justice, may sell beer, ale, or porter, or cyder and perry, by retail, on obtaining an excise license merely ; for which a duty of 2l. 2s. is paid yearly for the beer, ale, &c., and 1l. 1s. for cyder and perry. By this act, the license from justices, formerly required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 17, is no longer necessary : but the recognition required by stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 77, s. 1, which had been repealed by 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, is revived.

Semble, license under the statute to sell beer, although obtained by fraud, is valid, unless the fraud be practised by the party to whom the license is granted. Rex v. Minshull, 1 Nev. & M. 277.

By the 26 Geo. 3, c. 31, s. 4, no ale license could be granted but on the 1st September, yearly, or within twenty-one days after. And by s. 16, ale-houses in cities and towns corporate were excepted ; but by 3 Geo. 4, c. 77, s. 7, all general annual meetings for granting licences, as well in cities and towns corporate, as in all other places in England, must have been held in the month of September, yearly :—Held, that the effect of this clause was not to repeal the general provision of the former statute, but to extend its operation to cities and towns corporate only. Rex v. Surrey (Justices), 5 D. & R. 308.

The court refused a mandamus to rehear an application at any other period of the year. Id.

A mandamus was refused where justices had refused the application for an ale-house license, and it was suggested that their refusal proceeded from a mistaken view of their jurisdiction. Rex v. Farringdon Without (Justices), 4 D. & R. 735.

By charter, the mayor and some of the aldermen of London have jurisdiction in Southwark ; but, as the charter contains no non-intromittant clause as to the justices of the county of Surrey, the latter have a concurrent jurisdiction with the former. Where there were two sets of magistrates having a concurrent jurisdiction, and one appointed a meeting to grant ale licenses, their jurisdiction attached so as to exclude the others appointing a subsequent meeting ; but they might all meet together on the first day. But if, after such appointment, the other set of magistrates met on a subsequent day, and granted other licenses, their proceeding was illegal, and the subject of an indictment. Rex v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451 ; Nolan, 8.

Where the mayor of an antient borough, in which he was also a justice of the peace, took a fee of 4s. from a publican resident within the borough, for renewing his annual license, and though it appeared that for fifty-seven years a similar fee had been uniformly received by the mayor for the time being, from every publican within the borough applying to renew his license: Held, that such fee was illegal, and might be recovered back in assumpsit for money had and received, as the payment could not be considered as voluntary, so as to preclude the plaintiff from recovering in that form of action. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729.

It was held that a person who sold spirituous liquors by retail, without a licence from two justices of the peace, was liable to the penalties of the 5 Geo. 3, c. 46, though he had a license from the commissioners of the excise to retail spirituous liquors, as the exception in the 26 Geo. 2, c. 28, that nothing in that act should extend to alter the time of granting licenses in cities and towns corporate, did not exempt such places from the operation of the other parts of that act; but magistrates in such districts might give the same notice of their meeting to grant licenses as justices for a county to give. Rex v. Downs, 3 T. R. 560.

The 48 Geo. 3, c. 143, did not in any way repeal, but confirmed the 35 Geo. 3, c. 113, as to the jurisdiction of the justices to grant ale licenses; in order, therefore, to constitute a due licensing, there must have been as well a licence from the magistrates as from the excise. Rex v. Drake, 6 M. & S. 116.

There was no appeal under 48 Geo. 3, c. 143, against a conviction for selling ale without an excise licence. Rex v. Hanson, 4 B. & A. 519.

A conviction for suffering tippling, held bad, because it did not state whether the persons tippling were strangers or inhabitants, it appearing to be made on the oath of one witness. Rex v. Dove, 3 B. & A. 596.

The statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, for regulating the granting of licences to innkeepers, &c., by s. 27, enacts "that any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any act of any justices in execution of that act, may appeal against such act to the quarter sessions," &c.:—Held, that the words "person who shall think himself aggrieved," means a person "immediately" aggrieved, as by refusal of a license to himself, by fine, &c., and not one who is consequentially aggrieved; and therefore, that, where magistrates had granted a license to a party to open a public house not before licensed, within a very short distance of a licensed public house, the occupier of the latter house could not appeal against such grant. Rex v. Middlesex (Justices), 3 B. & Adol. 938.

Where a brewer delivers beer to be used in a particular public house, he cannot make any person, except the licensed keeper of the house, primarily liable for it, so as to maintain an action for goods sold and delivered to him. Meux v. Humphries, M. & M. 132; 3 C. & P. 79—Tenterden.

I. WRITS AND RETURNS.

1. Mesne Process.

[See stat. 2 Will. 4, c. 39, amended by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 67, by which all process is at present regulated.]

Teste and Return of Writ.—The principle on which the courts act in cases of amendment is, that there must be something to amend by. Green v. Rennet, 1 T. R. 782.

The court of C. P. would amend the irregularity of a writ, when there was not fifteen days between the teste and return. Carty v. Ashley, 2 W. Black. 918; 3 Wils. 454; Bouchier v. Whitte, 1 H. Black. 291; Davis v. Owen, 1 B. & P. 342; Popkins v. Amory, 5 M. & P. 319.

But a writ returnable on a dies non was void and could not be amended. Kenworthy v. Pepsist, 4 B. & A. 288.

Before a writ was returnable, it might be altered and re-sealed as to the return-day without being re-stamped, provided no term intervened between the teste and the day on which it was ultimately made returnable. Durdon v. Hammond, 2 D. & R. 211; 1 B. & C. 111.

A capias returnable on a day certain, instead of a general return, might be amended on payment of costs. Walker v. Hawkey, 1 Marsh. 399; 5 Taunt. 853.

But in another case the court held a testatum capias under the same circumstances irregular, and refused to amend it on account of the bail. Jansen v. Huish, 2 N. R. 133. S. P. Houlden v. Fassen, 4 M. & P. 126.

In another case the court refused to allow the writ to be amended, unless the plaintiff would consent to discharge the bail on the defendant's entering a common appearance. Johnson v. Dobell, 1 M. & P. 28.

An attachment of privilege returnable after the essoin day, and before the quarto die post, instead of a day certain in full term, was allowed to be amended on terms. Adams v. Luck, 6 Moore, 113; 3 B. & B. 25.

A præcipe for an attachment of privilege was amended, by adding the days of issuing and return, upon payment of costs, to make the præcipe in accordance with a rule of court of 20 Geo. 2, which required it to set forth those particulars. Skryme v. Lankford, 1 Ld. Ken. 394.

Where a capias per continuance was tested on the same day as the original capias, the irregularity might be amended by issuing a new original capias to warrant it; though it bore teste before the cause of action accrued. Davies v. Owen, 1 B. & P. 342.

A bill of Middlesex, returnable on Monday next after the morrow of the Holy Trinity, was held irregular; but amendment was allowed. Anon. 1 Smith, 425.

A writ having a wrong return, was not aided by a correct day being mentioned in the notice to appear. Anon. 2 Chit. 356.

The teste of a writ, if irregular in naming a late chief baron, instead of the existing chief baron, may be amended, even after a rule to set it aside upon that ground; and upon the amendment being made, the rule was discharged. Wakeling v. Watson, 1 C. & J. 467; 1 Tyr. 377.

Names of Parties.]—One obligee in a joint bond having sued out a capias against the obligor, and taken a recognizance of bail in his own name only, afterwards sued out an original in the name of both obligors, and then applied to the court to amend both the capias and recognizance; the court granted the former, but refused the latter. Tabrum v. Tenant, 1 B. & P. 481.

A. B. having been arrested on a capias sued out against him by the name of B. C., a bail bond was given, by which A. B. arrested by the name of B. C. became bound, conditioned for the appearance of A. B. arrested by the name of B. C.: the affidavit to hold to bail named the defendant properly A. B. The court amended the capias and return, and rejected an application by the bail to set aside the bail bond. Stevenson v. Danvers, 2 B. & P. 109.

So, a special capias which omitted the christian names of two of the defendants, was amended on payment of the costs of amendment, and application, although there was no document to amend by. Rutherford v. Mein, 2 Smith, 392.

A writ cannot be amended by adding the name of another person as plaintiff. Adamson v. —, 1 Chit. 369 (a).

If the defendant's name is stated to be John in the writ, and Joseph in the notice to appear, it may be amended. Padgett v. Lee, 2 Chit. 355.

A defendant having been served with a copy of process by the name of John, said that his name was Nicholas, and the person who served the copy was about to alter the name:—Held, that it could not be altered without re-sealing, and the service was set aside, but without costs. Israel v. Middleton, 1 Chit. 313.

The court of K. B. refused to allow the amendment of a writ under which a defendant had been arrested by a wrong name, after actions for false imprisonment had been brought. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 160.

Other Cases.]—A bill of Middlesex, filed of record as of the 24 Geo. 3, when it ought to have been of the 25th, might be amended agreeably to the truth. Green v. Rennet, 1 T. R. 782.

A special capias was amended, in order that an application might be made to the master of the rolls to procure a new original. Carr v. Shaw, 7 T. R. 299.

The copy of a writ cannot be amended after service. Byfield v. Street, 10 Bing. 227; S. P. Sutherland v. Tubbs, 1 Chit. 230, n.

Where the defendant was in custody under an extent, and a capias was issued against him at the suit of the plaintiff, and delivered to the sheriff, who returned, that "he had taken the defendant, whose body remained in prison under his custody:" the court of C. P. refused to allow the return to be amended by striking it out, and making another according to the fact. Rex v. Worcestershire (Sheriff), 7 Moore, 552; 1 Bing. 156.

2. Writs of Execution.

(a) Fi. fa.

[See Stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 67, s. 2, by which writs of execution may be tested on the day they are issued, and returnable immediately after execution.]

A fi. fa. returnable on a day out of term, was allowed to be amended by the award of execution on the roll. Davy v. Hollingsworth, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1037.

So a fi. fa. returnable on a K. B. instead of a C. P. return-day, was amended from the same source. Atkinson v. Newton, 2 P. & P. 336.

So a fi. fa. directing the money to be returned "before us," instead of "before the king's justices at Westminster," but tested by the chief justice of C. P. was allowed to be amended on payment of costs. Simon v. Gurney, 1 Marsh. 237; 5 Taunt. 605.

So where a fi. fa. was sued out into a different county from that in which the venue was laid, and the party suing it afterwards took out a fi. fa. into the proper county, and got a return of nulla bona in order to warrant the fi. fa. which first issued, the court permitted the first writ to be amended, by inserting the return of nulla bona and the testatum clause, though the second writ was returnable several days before the judgment was signed. Meyer v. Ring, 1 H. Black. 541.

So in K. B. the court allowed a party to amend a similar fi. fa. on payment of costs, by suing out an original fi. fa., and adding the testatum part. Cowperthwaite v. Owen, 3 T. R. 657.

But where the defendant died before the application, the court refused to amend a fi. fa. by inserting the testatum clause. Phillips v. Tanner, 6 Bing. 237; 3 M. & P. 562.

The court refused to allow plaintiff to amend a fi. fa. where the defendant had become bankrupt before sale of the goods taken under it. Hunt v. Pasman, 4 M. & S. 329.

(b) Ca. sa.

A ca. sa. may be amended in the name of the plaintiff or defendant, or court in which it is returnable. Anon. 1 Chit. 350, (a).

Even after it has been executed. Hunt v. Kendrick. 2 W. Black. 836.

A writ of execution to satisfy James the debt awarded to John, was amended after execution executed, upon payment of costs. Mackie v. Smith, 4 Taunt. 322.

So the court, after a rule obtained to show cause why the tes. ca. sa. should not be set aside, because not warranted by the judgment, permitted it to be amended agreeably to the judgment, and directed the sealer of the writs to seal an original ca. sa. to warrant it. Shaw v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 450.

So, even at the time of showing cause, on payment of costs, and the defendant undertaking to bring no action, where the only alteration was in the sum recovered. Stevenson v. Castle, 1 Chit. 349.

So it may be amended by inserting a smaller sum where the defendant sustains no inconvenience thereby. Anon. 1 Chit. 350, (a).

A plaintiff having recovered judgments against two defendants in K. B., one of whom brought a writ of error in Cam. Scac, where the judgment was affirmed, and costs of the writ of error given, took both under a writ of execution for the whole sum, including the costs of the writ of error as well as the original sum recovered; the court permitted him to amend the writ as to the defendant who did not join in the writ of error, by altering it to the original sum recovered. Laroche v. Wasbrough, 2 T. R. 737.

After a motion to set aside proceedings for irregularity, in proceeding to execution in the name of two plaintiffs, one of whom had died before interlocutory judgment; the court permitted the surviving plaintiff to suggest the death on the roll, and amend the ca. sa. without paying costs. Newnham v. Law, 5 T. R. 577.

3. Other Writs.

Of Inquiry.—The teste of a writ of inquiry may be amended by the award on the roll. Jackson v. Toulmin, 4 East, 173.

And the return may also be amended by the award, even after the inquisition of damages has been taken; and consequently a defect in the return does not vitiate the proceedings, or affect the jurisdiction of the sheriff. Pippet v. Heern, 1 D. & R. 266; 5 B. & A. 634.

Where in an action on the statute of Edward VI. for treble value of tithes, the declaration contained a count for treble value, and other counts for tithes bargained and sold, and on an account stated; and the defendant suffered judgment by default; and the jury, on a writ of inquiry, assessed the plaintiff's damages at 17*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* on the first count for the treble value, and 9*l.* for the single value on the other counts, but omitted to find costs: the Court of C. P. ordered the return of the inquisition to be amended, by the insertion of nominal damages as to the last counts, on which costs de incremento might be added. Bale v. Hodgetts, 7 Moore, 602; 1 Bing. 182.

Habeas Corpus.—The Court of K. B. refused leave to amend the return to a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Eden, 2 M. & S. 226.

Mandamus.—A mandamus cannot be amended after a return has been made to it. Rex v. Stafford (Mayor, &c.), 4 T. R. 689.

Nor would the court allow the defendants in a traverse to amend the return to a mandamus by setting forth a different constitution, where the application was after verdict. Rex v. Grampond (Mayor, &c.), 7 T. R. 699.

The court will not direct in what manner justices shall make their return to a mandamus; but, if the return made be insufficient to raise the question intended to be agitated, the court will, at the instance of the party interested, make a rule, giving the justices liberty to amend in the manner required, if they shall be so minded. Rex v. Marriott, 1 D. & R. 166.

Scire facias.]—Where a scire facias, founded on an inquisition, mis-recites the inquisition, and therefore fixes by such recital a day on which the debt had been found to be due differing from the true day named in the inquisition, the Court of Exchequer will give leave (on cause being shown) to amend the writ on payment of the costs, &c. even after the defendants have pleaded. Rex v. Scott, 4 Price, 181; S. P. Regina v. Hoble, 4 Price, 181, n.; Regina v. Peters, 4 Price, 182, n.

If an inquisition to find debts, executed in vacation, be returnable in the following term, and a writ of scire facias be issued thereon, tested as of the term preceding the vacation, the Court of Exchequer will set it aside for the repugnancy which must appear on the face of the record; nor will they allow it to be aided by inserting the true dates, by means of a memorandum on the record. Rex v. Pearson, 3 Price, 288. But see Dodsworth v. Bowen, 5 T. R. 325.

In sci. fa. on a judgment more than a year old, if the writ of sci. fa. which has been returned nihil, the award of execution, the ca. sa., and the warrant, are issued in a different christian name from the one stated in the judgment as that of the plaintiff, the court will allow the proceedings to be amended by substituting the one stated in the judgment, although the ca. sa. has been executed and returned. Thorpe v. Hook, 1 Dowl. P. C. 501.

II. MATTERS RELATIVE TO BAIL AND APPEARANCE.—See also BAIL.

1. When allowed.

Bail-piece.]—A misnomer in a bail-piece may be amended. Anderson v. Neale, 1 B. & P. 31.

If a defendant be arrested by the name of Elizabeth, and put in and justify bail in the name of Betsy, the bail-piece may be amended on payment of costs and a re-acknowledgment of the bail. Croft v. Coggs, 4 Moore, 65.

But the Court of C. P. will not amend a clerical error in the spelling of the plaintiff's name in the bail-piece, without the consent of the bail. Hingham v. Dickie, 5 Taunt. 814.

An appearance entered by plaintiff for defendant by a wrong name, may be amended after declaration. Whiston v. Packman, 3 Wils. 49.

Recognizance.]—Where the bail had misnamed the plaintiff, to whom they meant to be bound in the recognizance, the court of C. P. refused to amend the recognizance and proceedings, in an action thereon, after issue joined on nul tiel record. Venn v. Warner, 3 Taunt. 263. But see Anon. 1 Moore, 126.

But where the bail acknowledged in a cause in which the plaintiff was correctly named, but the officer, by mistake, stated his name incorrectly in the recognizance, the court allowed an amendment at the instance of the bail. Halliday v. Fitzpatrick, 4 Taunt. 875; S. P. Tabrum v. Tenant, 1 B. & P. 481.

Where an affidavit to hold to bail named five defendants, and separate bailable process was issued against one, and a bail-piece taken, in which he alone was named; and afterwards serviceable process was issued against the other four, who were not named in the bailable process; and the declaration was against all the five; the court permitted the plaintiff to amend the recognizance of bail, by inserting the names of the four defendants who had been at first omitted. Christie v. Walker, 1 Bing. 206; 8 Moore, 33. And see 7 Moore, 301, 362, 599, 632; 1 Bing, 48, 68.

Where a recognizance of bail in the Court of Exchequer was taken for satisfying the condemnation, or rendering the defendant to the prison of the Fleet, that court refused to grant an application made on behalf of the bail, to amend the record of the recognizance, by inserting the words "on or before the 4th day of the next following term," which is the usual form. Bottomley v. Medhurst, M'Clel. 310, 399; 18 Price. 589.

Where a defendant was arrested on a bailable capias, which was issued into Durham, signed by the filacer of that county, but having no testatum clause, and put in bail as a upon a testatum; a declaration being afterwards delivered with a venue laid in Lincolnshire; and a recognizance was entered into in Middlesex, and a declaration on such recognizance afterwards delivered, to which the defendant pleaded:—Held, on a motion to amend the recognizance, that the defendant, by submitting to the arrest, and putting in and getting bail allowed, had waved the irregularity; and the court refused to interfere. Hartley v. Hodson, 1 Moore, 514, 430; 2 Moore 66; 8 Taunt. 171.

In scire facias against the bail, if there be a failure of the record through a misprison of the officer of the court, the court will permit the recognizance to be amended. Mann v. Calow, 1 Taunt. 221.

Proceedings by sci. fa.]—A scire facias against bail in error may be amended in C. P. by the record of the recognizance. Perkins v. Pettit, 2 B. & P. 275.

But the court will not cure any irregularities of which the bail are entitled to take advantage. Fulwood v. Annis, 3 B & P. 321.

And in K. B. two writs of scire facias against the principal on a judgment, and the declaration thereon, were amended conformably to the judgment roll. Brasswell v. Jeco, 9 East, 316.

The court refused to allow amendment of a declaration in a scire facias, against bail, who had failed to surrender their principal (then in custody) before the quarto die post of the second writ. Stevenson v. Grant, 2 N. R. 103.

III. DECLARATIONS.

Generally.]—A declaration may be amended at any time, so long as the proceedings remain on paper. Havers v. Bannister, 1 Wils. 7. And see Anbeer v. Barker, 1 Wils. 149.

The court will give the plaintiff leave to do so in a civil action, even against a prisoner; but they will not permit him to add new counts to his declaration in such a case. Owens v. Dubois, 7 T. R. 698.

An amendment of the plaintiff's declaration does not necessarily entitle the defendant to plead de novo, but only where the amendment alters the state of the defendant's case. Woodroffe v. Watson, 6 Taunt. 400.

Where an amendment of the declaration is allowed, no new rule to plead shall be deemed necessary, whether such amendment be made of the same term, or of a different term. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 188; 8 Bing. 294; 1 M. & Scott, 420; 3 B. & Adol. 379; 2 C. & J. 179; 2 Tyr. 344; 4 Bligh, N. S. 597.

Changing Statement of Cause of Action.]—Where the plaintiff, under leave to amend, adds new counts which contain no new cause of action, but only vary the manner of statement in a count which was demurred to, the court of C. P. will not order them to be struck out. Brown v. Crump, 1 Marsh. 609; 6 Taunt. 300.

Where, in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the declaration contained three counts; the first of which was to marry on request; on a motion to amend by adding a new count, to marry on a particular day, the court of C. P. ordered the first count to be amended by striking out the promise to marry on request, and inserting a particular day, although the declaration had been filed more than two terms; and they directed the costs of such application to abide the event of the cause. Horston v. Shilliter, 6 Moore, 490.

In an action by assignees for the rescue of goods distrained for rent due to the bankrupt, the court allowed new counts to be added, stating the facts to have taken place in the time of the provisional assignee, though two terms had elapsed since the return of the writ, the cause of action being substantially the same. Freen v. Cooper, 2 Marsh. 59; 6 Taunt. 358.

Where, in an action of slander, for giving a servant a false character, a rule for a new trial was made absolute, and the plaintiff had leave to amend one of the counts of the declaration, in order that the words charged might be made to correspond with those proved at the first trial: the court allowed a new count to be added to enable the parties to try the merits at the second trial. Wyatt v. Cocks, 10 Moore, 504.

Where, in an action upon a bill of exchange, it appeared that the bill had been cancelled, and a new one substituted, which was not declared upon, and the defendant thereupon had a verdict, the court refused to allow the plaintiff to amend upon payment of costs, by adding counts upon the new bill. Sweeting v. Halse, 4 M. & R. 383.

Declaration amended by allowing plaintiffs to declare on the same cause of action, as surviving partners instead of administratrixes, when administration was not taken out before action brought, and the statute of limitations would have run against a new action. Taylor v. Lyon, 5 Bing. 333; 2 M. & P. 586.

In an action for disturbance of a right of ferry, the declaration was allowed to be amended, after the cause had been taken down to the assizes and the record withdrawn, by introducing new counts, in which the termini of the ferry were varied, and also the description of the persons liable to toll. Morris v. Evans, 1 Dowl. P. C. 657.

Changing Form of Action.]—Where the plaintiff's had commenced an action of assumpsit for money had and received, to recover back differences paid on stock-jobbing contracts, and had filed a bill of discovery, to which the defendant pleaded that the discovery was given by the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, s. 2, in debt only, the court permitted the plaintiffs to amend by changing assumpsit to debt, after six terms from the commencement of the action. Billing v. Flight, 2 Marsh. 124; 6 Taunt. 419.

So where no bill in equity had been filed for a discovery, the court permitted the plaintiffs to amend by converting their declaration from assumpsit to debt. Billing v. Pooley, 6 Taunt. 422; 2 Marsh. 125, n.

But the plaintiff having sued out process in debt, and declared in case, and the defendant having thereupon moved to cancel the bail bond, the court refused to amend the declaration by changing it from case to debt. Levett v. Kibblewhite, 2 Marsh. 185; 6 Taunt. 483.

Venue.]—The court will not amend a declaration, by changing the venue, unless the plaintiff showed substantial ground for it; therefore, where the plaintiff moved to amend, by changing the venue from Bedford to Middlesex, on the ground that the action depended on the construction of an act of parliament, the court, on the affidavit of the defendant that the cause of action arose in Bedfordshire, discharged the rule. Ayres v. Buston, 2 Marsh. 121; 6 Taunt. 408.

And where the plaintiff, an attorney, by the mistake of his agent, laid the venue in the country, instead of Middlesex, the court refused to amend by changing it to Middlesex. Lewis v. Shelley, 2 Marsh. 426; 7 Taunt. 146.

Names of Parties.]—Where the name of the plaintiff was mistaken in the process and all the proceedings, the Court of Exchequer allowed the amendment of the declaration whilst every thing was on paper. Gardner v. Walker, 3 Anst. 935.

A variance between the name of the attorney in the warrant and in the declaration may be amended by altering the name in the warrant to that in the declaration, in a penal action, after error brought and the variance assigned for error. Richards q. t. v. Brown, 1 Dougl. 114.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, the court allowed the declaration to be amended by adding the name of the official assignee as a plaintiff, on payment of costs. Baker v. Neaver, 1 C. & M. 112; 1 Dowl. P. C. 616.

Title.]—An amendment allowed of the title of a declaration, according to the truth of the fact as to the time of the delivery thereof. Symonds v. Parmenter, 1 Wils. 256; S. P. Wilkes v. Halifax, (Earl), 2 Wils. 256; Stook v. Herbert, 1 Wils. 242.

So, where the object was to make it accord with an averment therein, that other defendants named in the writ were then outlawed. Coutauche v. Le Ruez, 1 East. 133.

The Nisi Prius rule was allowed to be amended by inserting a special title to a declaration, the defendant having appeared after he became of age, which was after the first day of term. Boys v. Edmeads, 2 Chit. 22.

After the delivery of the paper-book to the clerk of the papers, with a memorandum generally of Michaelmas term, corresponding with the declaration, neither party has a right to amend it by making a special memorandum of the day of the delivery of the declaration without an order to amend. Clements v. Sterling, 1 Chit. 336.

In an action against the marshal for an escape, the bill was intitled generally of Michaelmas term, and the escape was alleged to have taken place on the 15th Nov.; there was a special demurrer, for that the cause of action appeared to have accrued after the first day of the term to which the bill had relation: the court allowed the plaintiff to amend on payment of costs, although it appeared by affidavit that the prisoner had returned into the custody of the marshal before any application for liberty to amend was made. Brazier v. Jones, 6 B. & C. 196; 9 D. & R. 349.

Other Cases.]—An executor was allowed to amend his declaration, by laying a promise to himself instead of to his testator. Tenour v. Smith, 1 Ld. Ken. 141.

The court refused to put off a trial, upon a motion at Nisi Prius, in order to enable the plaintiff to amend his declaration, by omitting the profert of a bond on which the action was brought: nor would they allow the amendment to be made at Nisi Prius, because it was matter of material allegation. Paine v. Bustin, 1 Stark. 74—Ellenborough.

Declaration on a writ of partition and the sheriff's return, amended by striking out an erroneous description of the quality of the estates conveyed to the different parties. Baker v. Daniel, 1 Marsh. 537; 6 Taunt. 193.

A suggestion in prohibition, amended after a nonsuit had been set aside. Franklin v. Holmes, 2 Tidd's Prac. 754.

So, where, on an issue on nul tiel record, there is a variance between the record and declaration, the court will permit an amendment on payment of costs. Doubleday v. —, 2 Chit. 27.

A declaration in debet and detinet against an executor was refused to be amended by striking out the debet and retaining the detinet only, after demurrer argued. Anon. Lofft, 46.

When.]—Generally, a declaration cannot be amended after verdict. Marriott v. Lister, 2 Wils. 141, 147. And see Lloyd v. Skutt, 2 Tidd's Prac. 776; Watson v. Richardson, 1 Wils. 226.

An amendment may be made by increasing the damages according to the truth of the case as found by the jury, the former verdict being at the same time set aside, and a new trial granted, to enable the defendant to make his defence to the demand so enlarged. Tomlinson v. Blacksmith, 7 T. R. 132.

The Court of Exchequer allowed a plaintiff to amend his declaration, after a new trial obtained, on the ground of a variance, upon the usual terms of paying the costs of the amendment and application only; the costs of the new trial to abide the event. Hooper v. Mantel, 13 Price, 695, 736; M'Clel. 388.

A declaration may be amended after a nonsuit, where a fresh action would otherwise be barred by the statute of limitations. Dartnall v. Howard, 2 Chit. 28.

But, generally, the court will not allow the plaintiff to amend, even on payment of the costs of the trial, but will leave him to his remedy, by bringing a fresh action. Brown v. Knill, 5 Moore, 164; 2 B. & B. 395.

The court will amend a clerical mistake in a declaration, upon which a defendant relies as matter of error, even pending the writ of error. Moody v. Stracey, 4 Taunt. 588.

In an action against executors in their own right, on a covenant for good title and quiet enjoyment, the court of C. P. refused to assist the plaintiff by allowing him to amend his declaration after special demurrer argued. Noble v. King, 1 H. Black. 34.

The court of C. P. allowed a plaintiff to amend his declaration on payment of costs after a judgment on demurrer against him, where there was also a sham plea of judgment recovered, and on nul tiel record being replied, the defendant had filed a demurrer for delay: the defendant to plead de novo. Gammon v. Schmoll, 5 Taunt. 344; 1 Marsh. 80.

IV. SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS.

1. Proceedings to issue.

Pleas in abatement are not amendable because dilatory and not to the merits. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 690; S. P. Atkinson v. — (Gent.) 2 Chit. 5.

But the court will allow a plaintiff to withdraw a demurrer, and reply. Id.

So, the court will not order a defendant to amend a plea on which issue has been joined, on a doubt suggested, whether the plea meets the declaration; but will give the plaintiff leave to withdraw the similiter, and demur. Attwood v. Bonacich, 1 D. & R. 473.

Avowries in replevin may be amended on payment of costs. Brown v. Sayce, 4 Taunt. 320.

So, the court allowed several avowries in replevin to be amended by altering the name and description of the locus in quo, and stating the holding to have been for a year instead of half a year; and also by adding new avowries, varying the amount of the rent, although issue had been joined, and notice of trial given and countermanded, and more than two terms had elapsed previously to the application for the amendment. Prior v. Buckingham (Duke of), 8 Moore. 584.

A replication was amended, by changing it from de injuria to molliter manus imposuit, all the pleadings being in paper, and not entered of record. Low v. Newland, 1 Wils. 76.

A replication may be amended after verdict by inserting the similiter instead of &c. Sayer v. Pocock, Cowp. 407.

If to a rejoinder concluding with a verification, the plaintiff add the similiter, and take the record down to trial, and the defendant obtain a verdict, the court will not grant a new trial, but will amend the record. Grundy v. Mell, 1 N. R. 28.

Unless it be inconsistent with the justice of the case. Reader v. Bloom, 2 Bing. 384; 9 Moore, 741.

Where in an action of trespass the similiter was only entered to the general issue, and omitted to a replication de injuria to four special pleas, and the plaintiff obtained a general verdict, the court permitted the record to be amended, by the insertion of a similiter to those issues, and would not allow the verdict to be entered upon the general issue only. Id.

And even in a qui tam action the court will, after verdict, direct a similiter to be entered, although the objection founded upon the want of it was taken at the trial. Wright q. t. v. Horton, 1 Stark. 400; 6 M. & S. 50; 2 Chit. 25; Holt. 458.

And where the parties had gone down to trial upon a plea which had not been traversed, after verdict for the plaintiff, the plaintiff was permitted to amend, by adding a traverse, and the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment was discharged, upon payment of costs by the plaintiff of both motions. Cooke v. Burke, 5 Taunt. 164.

But where the defendant pleaded six several pleas, and the plaintiff did not reply to the last, but left it wholly unnoticed on the record, which he was aware of before the trial, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff for nominal damages, subject to an award of an arbitrator, who found for the plaintiff on the first and second issues, and for the defendant on the third, fourth, and fifth, without prejudice to the objection on the record: Held, that the plaintiff could not amend by adding a traverse and similiter to the sixth plea; and that the defendant was not entitled to arrest the judgment, as he might bring a writ of error. Ferrers v. Weal, 2 Moore, 215.

Where, in a plea by an executor of a former judgment recovered, by mistake a less sum is stated than the judgment was really for, if it clearly appear that a greater sum was recovered, the court will permit the defendant to amend the record by inserting the real sum in the plea, though the application be not made for such amendment till a considerable time (e. g. nearly three years) after the record has been made up; and they will in such case allow the plaintiff to reply per fraudem. Skutt v. Woodward, 1 H. Black. 238.

After issue, notice of trial, putting off the trial till a subsequent term, and a plea of bankruptcy, puis darrien continuance, the court gave leave to amend the plea, without imposing the terms that the plaintiff should be at liberty to discontinue without costs, but imposing terms as to continuing the notice of trial, and taking short notice. Lindo v. Simpson, 2 Smith, 659.

Where the nisi prius record has been altered, after it was passed by one of the parties without an order from the judge, the court will try the cause as it stands on the record, and will not amend it at nisi prius by striking out the alteration or the parts of the declaration in which the alteration was made. Drummond v. Burt, 1 M. & Rob. 136. And see Whitehead v. Scott, 1 M. & Rob. 137, n.

If the plaintiff, in making up the record, makes the time of plea pleaded appear posterior to the date of the subject matter pleaded, when it was not so in fact, the court will direct an amendment at plaintiff's costs if he resists. Reynolds v. Beer-ing, 4 Dougl. 181.

After verdict for plaintiff and rule made absolute for a new trial, defendant will not be allowed to amend the pleadings by withdrawing the general issue, and pleading a special justification, for the purpose of giving the defendant the right of beginning, and of the general reply at a second trial. Chambers v. Bernasconi, 1 C. & J. 459; 1 Tyr. 335.

In assumpsit, the issue was, whether the action had been commenced within six years, and a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court on a special case. It appeared by the case, that process had been sued out within six years, in an action corresponding with the present, and continued on the roll down to the first return of Trinity term, 1827, when the six years had elapsed; and that a testatum special capias was sued out in the present action, tested on the last return of the same term; but there was no continuance from the first to the last return. The question being, whether, on this state of facts, the latter process was sufficiently connected with the former to take the case out of the statute, the court, after two arguments of the special case, allowed the plaintiffs, on motion, to amend the roll by entering the required continuance. Taylor v. Gregory, 2 B. & Adol. 257.

2. At Nisi Prius.

Enactments of Statute.—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 15, it is enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for every court of record holding plea in civil actions, any judge sitting at Nisi Prius, and any court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery in England, Wales, the town of Berwick upon Tweed, and Ireland, if such court or judge shall see fit so to do, to cause the record on which any trial may be pending before any such judge or court in any civil action, or in any indictment or information for any misdemeanor, when any variance shall appear between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence, and the recital or setting forth thereof upon the record whereon the trial is pending, to be forthwith amended in such particular by some officer of the court, on payment of such costs (if any) to the other party, as such judge or court shall think reasonable; and thereupon the trial shall proceed as if no such variance had appeared.

This power of amendment is much extended by the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42, s. 23, which recites, That great expense is often incurred, and delay or failure of justice takes place at trials, by reason of variances [printed vacancies] as to some particular or particulars between the proof and the record, or setting forth on the record or document on which the trial is had, of contracts, customs, prescriptions, names, and other matters or circumstances not material to the merits of the case, and by the misstatement of which the opposite party cannot have been prejudiced, and the same cannot in any case be amended at the trial, except where the variance is between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence and the record; and enacts, That it shall be lawful for any court of record holding plea in civil actions, and any judge sitting at Nisi Prius, if such court or judge shall see fit so to do, to cause the record, writ or document on which any trial may be pending before any such court or judge in any civil action, or in any information in the nature of a quo warranto, or proceedings on a mandamus, when any variance shall appear between the proof and the recital or setting forth on the record, writ, or document on which the trial is proceeding, of any contract, custom, prescription, name, or other matter, in any particular or particulars in the judgment of such court or judge not material to the merits of the case, and by which the opposite party cannot have been prejudiced in the conduct of his action, prosecution, or defence, to be forthwith amended by some officer of the court or otherwise, both in the part of the pleadings where such variance occurs, and in every other part of the pleadings which it may become necessary to amend, on such terms as to payment of costs to the other party, or postponing the trial to be had before the same or another jury, or both payment of costs and postponement, as such court or judge shall think reasonable; and in case such variance shall be in some particular or particulars, in the judgment of such court or judge, not material to the merits of the case, but such as that the opposite party may have been prejudiced thereby in the conduct of his action, prosecution, or defence, then such court or judge shall have power to cause the same to be amended, upon payment of costs to the other party, and withdrawing the record or postponing the trial as aforesaid, as such court or judge shall think reasonable; and after any such amendment the trial shall proceed, in case the same shall be proceeded with, in the same manner in all respects, both with respect to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance had appeared; and in case such trial shall be had at Nisi Prius, or by virtue of such writ as aforesaid, the order for the amendment shall be indorsed on the postea or the writ, as the case may be, and returned, together with the record or writ; and thereupon such papers, rolls, and other records of the court from which such record or writ issued as it may be neces- sary to amend, shall be amended accordingly; and in case the trial shall be had in any court of record, then the order for amendment shall be entered on the roll or other document upon which the trial shall be had; provided that it shall be lawful for any party who is dissatisfied with the decision of such judge at Nisi Prius, sheriff, or other officer, respecting his allowance of any such amendment, to apply to the court from which such record or writ issued, for a new trial, upon that ground: and in case any such court shall think such amendment improper, a new trial shall be granted accordingly, on such terms as the court shall think fit, or the court shall make such other order as to them may seem meet.

Sect. 4, provides, That instead of amending, the court, or judge, may direct the facts to be specially found by the jury.

*What Cases within the Statute 9 Geo. 4.]—The statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 15, applies only to cases where some particular written instrument is professed to be set out or recited in the pleading. Ryder v. Malbon, 3 C. & P. 594—Park.*

*In replevin the defendant, in his avowry, stated that the distress was for rent in arrear, and that the plaintiff held the lands on certain terms; however, on the plaintiff's lease being put in, it appeared that he held on other and different terms:—Held, that this variance was not amendable under the statute. *Id.

*The statute invests the judge with a discretion, which cannot, it seems, be revised by the Court above. Parker v. Ade, 1 Dowl. P. C. 643; S. C. nom. Parks v. Edge, 1 C. & M. 429.*

*The judge will not allow an amendment under the statute when there is a variance which would not have accrued if common care had been used in the drawing of the declaration. Jelf v. Oriel, 4 C. & P. 22—Tenterden.*

*A record may be amended pending the trial, by correcting a variance between a written contract and the statement of the contract on the pleadings, although it do not appear by the record that the contract was in writing. Lamez v. Bishop, 1 Nev. & M. 332.*

*Where a judgment is stated in the record as of one court, and it appears by the production of an examined copy to have been obtained in another, the judge at Nisi Prius may order the record to be amended. Briant v. Eicke, M. & M. 359—Tenterden.*

*Rule for new trial was, however, obtained. *Id.

*In a declaration on a bill of exchange, the date of the bill was stated to be the 26th March, it really was the 29th. The cause was undefended, and the judge allowed the variance to be amended under the statute, without the payment of costs. Bentzing v. Scott, 4 C. & P. 24—J. Parke.*

*Where, in a declaration on a bill, it was stated that the bill was drawn by S. S., payable to his order, and the bill, when produced in evidence, was payable to the order of J. C.:—Held, that the judge had rightly exercised his discretion in allowing the record to be amended. *Parks v.

Edge, 1 C. & M. 429; S. C. nom. Parker v. Ade, 1 Dowl. P. C. 643.

In an action against a witness for not obeying a subpoena, the declaration, after reciting the writ of subpoena, stated that the plaintiffs caused the said writ "to be made known to, and shown to the defendant, and caused a copy to be left with the defendant of the said writ of subpoena." When the cause came on for trial, it appearing that the writ of subpoena contained the names of other witnesses besides the defendant, and the copy served upon him was, therefore, not a full copy of the writ, the judge caused the record to be amended thus:—"caused a copy to be left with the defendant of so much of the said writ of subpoena as related to the said defendant:"—Held, that the amendment was warranted by the statute. Masterman v. Judson, 1 M. & Scott, 367: 8 Bing. 224.

In an action for a malicious arrest, the declaration contained an allegation that the defendants "did not prosecute the suit complained of, but made default, and their pledges were in mercy, &c.," and the proof was merely a discontinuance: Held, that the error could not be amended at Nisi Prius under the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 15, not being a mere mistake in setting out a written instrument, but an allegation of something totally different from the proof. Webb v. Hill, M. & M. 253; 3 C. & P. 485—Tenterden.

Before the statute, a judge at Nisi Prius would allow a trifling or verbal error, or omission in a record, to be amended on summons, or a word therein transposed. Freeman v. Cockell, 1 C. & P. 137—Park.

Even after the cause has been called on, by a rule of Court made instant, on the consent of both parties. Murphy v. Marlow, 1 Camp. 57—Ellenborough.

3. Verdicts.

The entry of a verdict may be amended according to the notes of the judge; but application for that purpose must be made before the judge, and not to the Court. Scougull v. Campbell, 1 Chit. 283; S. P. Graham v. Bowham 1 Chit. 284, n.

The Court will not alter a verdict, unless it appear on the face of it, that the alteration would be according to the intention of the jury. Spencer v. Goter, 1 H. Black. 78.

The postea may be amended by the judge's notes at any time, even after final judgment, and a writ of error brought. Doe d. Church v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 749: S. P. Newcomb v. Green, 1 Wils. 33.

Where a general verdict has been given on two counts, one of which is bad, and it appears by the judge's notes, that the jury calculated the damages on evidence applicable to the good count only, the Court of C. P. will amend the verdict, by entering it on that count, though evidence was given applicable to the bad count also. Williams v. Breedon, 1 B. & P. 329.

Where a verdict was taken by consent on two counts, the court, on the application of the plaintiff, amended the postea by entering the verdict on one (to which the evidence applied) although the judge who presided declined to interfere. Henley v. Lyme Regis (Mayor), 6 Bing. 100; 3 M. & P. 310.

The court will not amend the entry of a verdict according to the notes of an arbitrator, on the ground that they had no power to compel such notes to be brought before them. Scougull v. Campbell, 1 Chit. 283.

Where a general verdict was given on a declaration, some of the counts of which were bad, the court amended the postea, by entering up judgment on a single count, after argument in error, in K. B. Richardson v. Mellish, 3 Bing. 334; 11 Moore, 104; S. C. nom. Mellish v. Richardson (in error), 1 B. & C. 819.

So held, where evidence had only been given on the good or consistent counts. Eddowes v. Hopkins, 1 Dougl. 376.

So, where there is a misjoinder of counts, one of which is partly in case and partly in trespass, and another entirely in trespass, the verdict, if taken generally, may be amended according to the evidence. Harris v. Davis, 1 Chit. 625.

Where the jury in an action of debt on the statute 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, which gives treble value for not setting out tithes, found damages which amounted only to the single value:—Held, that the court could not amend the postea by entering the verdict for the treble value. Sanford v. Porter, 2 Chit. 351. And see Pedley v. Frampton, 2 Chit. 155.

Where a declaration in trespass contained two counts, the first for assaulting the plaintiff, and destroying a scraper affixed to his house, and the second for destroying the scraper, and a general verdict was given, with damages, two shillings: Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to full costs; and the court of C. P. refused to allow the postea to be amended by entering a verdict for the defendant on the first count. Reece v. Lee, 7 Moore, 269.

The court will not, at a distance of time after the trial, amend the postea, by increasing the damages given by the jury, although all the jurymen join in an affidavit, stating their intention to have been to give the plaintiff such increased sum, and that they conceived that the verdict they had given was calculated to give him such sum. Jackson v. Williamson (Bart.), 2 T. R. 281.

But, in one case, a verdict which was improperly delivered, by the mistake of the foreman, was set right, and the postea amended on the affidavits of the jury. Cogan v. Ebdon, 1 Burr. 283; 2 Ld. Ken. 24.

Where the jury find a greater sum than that laid in the declaration, semb. that the verdict cannot be amended by making it equal. Anon. Loft, 146. And see Pickwood v. Wright, 1 H. Black. 643.

Where a verdict was given, and judgment entered, for a sum exceeding the damages laid, on error brought, the court of K. B. allowed the plaintiffs to amend the judgment and transcript in a term subsequent to that in which the judgment was signed, by entering a remittitur for the excess. Usher v. Dansey, 4 M. & S. 94; 4 Camp. 97.

So, the court of C. P. permitted the plaintiff to enter a remittitur of the excess above the sum laid, on payment of the costs of the writ of error. Pickwood v. Wright, 1 H. Black. 642.

4. Judgments.

Where a verdict was found for the plaintiff on the general issue, and no notice taken of a second issue on the statute of limitations, on error brought on this point, the court allowed it to be amended by the judge's notes, on payment of costs. Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 659.

Where a plea was pleaded to the whole declaration, but the matter of the plea was in truth but an answer to part, and a verdict was obtained and judgment given for the plaintiff, and a writ of error brought, the court refused to allow the record to be amended by inserting judgment by nil dicit to the part unanswered, on the ground that such amendment was unnecessary. Patterson v. Everard, 2 Chit. 30.

The court of C. P. after error brought, and argument in the court of error, having amended a postea by entering the verdict for the plaintiff on the first count, and for the defendant on the others, amended the judgment roll remaining in that court by the amended postea, after the judgment had been reversed in K. B. Mellish v. Richardson, (in error), 1 B. & C. 519; S. C. nom. Richardson v. Mellish, 11 Moore, 104; 3 Bing. 334.

Semble, that the court of K. B. is bound to amend the record by the amended record of the court of C. P. Id.

After a nonsuit on a variance in an undefended action, the court allowed the record to be amended, and a new trial had. Halhead v. Abrahams, 3 Taunt. 81.

But the court would not amend a record after the term in which it had been filed. Anon. M'Clel. 251.

Nor after a new trial granted. Parker v. Ansell, 2 W. Black. 920.

An amendment of the nisi prius record and jury process refused, when the trial took place after the day of nisi prius, because the case was coram non iudice, but a venire de novo was awarded. Crowder v. Rooke, 1 Wils. 144.

Where the defendant, in replevin, made cognizance for rent in arrear, and the jury found a verdict for him, and damages to the amount of the rent claimed in his cognizance, without finding either the amount of the rent in arrear, or the value of the cattle distrained, and judgment was entered for the damages assessed, the court permitted the defendant to amend his judgment, and to enter a judgment pro retorno habendo, after a writ of error brought. Rees v. Morgan, 3 T. R. 349.

Where a defendant is entitled to treble costs by a judge's certificate, under a statute, and the judgment is entered up for treble costs generally, without stating on what ground the defendant is entitled to them; this is a substantial defect, and the court will not amend the judgment by striking out the word "treble." Dunbar v. Hitchcock, 1 Marsh. 382; 5 Taunt. 820; 3 M. & S. 591.

A judgment will not be amended to the prejudice of an executor, after the term in which it was given. Prince v. Nicholson, 1 Marsh. 401; 6 Taunt. 45.

Where the clerk entered judgment "de bonis propriis," instead of "de bonis testatoris," on error brought, the court ordered the entry to be amended. Green v. Bennet, 1 T. R. 782.

Where an executor pleads plene administravit, and the plaintiff does not take issue on it, but takes a judgment of assets quando acciderint, and sues out a sci. fa. on such judgment, if the executor receive assets between the time of the plaintiff's suing out the writ in the first action and judgment, the court will permit the plaintiff to amend his judgment as to the time, by making it a judgment as of that term when he could at the soonest have entered it up; unless the defendant can show that in point of fact some injustice will be done by it in the particular case. Mara v. Quin, 6 T. R. 1.

But where an executor pleaded a false plea of judgment recovered against himself, on which judgment was entered up against him for the debt and damages de bonis testatoris et si non de bonis propriis, and words were afterwards interlined on the judgment roll, by which the judgment de bonis propriis was confined to the damages only; the court refused to amend, by striking out the words which had been interlined, where it did not appear by whom the interlineation had been made, and the judgment was of six years standing. Burroughs v. Stephens, 1 Marsh. 211; 5 Taunt. 554.

A rule to show cause at chambers, why a judgment which had been entered up by mistake on a warrant of attorney (for a less sum than that secured by it), should not be amended, will not be granted on the consent of an attorney who was employed by both parties, but there must be some other person authorized. Anon. 2 Chit. 24.

V. INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS.

1. Proceedings in Error.

A variance in writs of error from the record is amendable in the court into which they are returnable. Anon. Loft, 272, 275; Rex v. Williams, 1 Ld. Ken. 470.

The court of K. B. will amend a writ of error from court of C. P. in case, by converting it to a writ of error in covenant. Sampayo v. De Payba, 5 Taunt. 82.

But if a writ of error be brought by a feme covert without joining her husband, the court will not allow an amendment in the writ, unless it appear by affidavit that the husband concurs. Binns v. Pratt, 1 Chit. 369.

A writ of error in the name of two defendants, one only of whom had been found guilty of trespass, was amended by striking out the name of the other. Verelst v. Rafael, Cowp. 425.

The court will not admit the bail-piece in error to be amended by enlarging the penalty in order to defeat the execution. Reed v. Cooper, 5 Taunt. 320.

Where a plaintiff in error had sued out his writ of error in time to stay execution, but had made a mistake in the name of the defendant in error, upon which the latter issued execution, the court of K. B. granted a rule upon the sheriff to pay the money taken into court, and enlarged the rule, to enable the plaintiff in error to amend his writ. Barnard q. t. v. Guy, 2 Smith, 259.

After error brought, the court can only amend the record in respect of misprision of the clerk; and, therefore, the court refused to allow a plaintiff in replevin, who had pleaded two bad pleas, and after judgment in his favour in the court of K. B., and error brought, to withdraw the same and plead de novo. Green v. Miller, 2 B. & Adol. 781.

The court will give leave to amend a record by inserting a special memorandum of the day when the plaintiff's bill was filed, after error brought, notwithstanding an objection by the defendant that the application was made too late. Dickinson v. Plaisted, 7 T. R. 474.

And the terms of such amendment are payment of costs, and liberty to the defendant to plead de novo, upon terms. Minchin v. Cope, 1 Chit. 45.

A bill may be filed to warrant a judgment after the want of a bill has been assigned for error. French v. Cook (in error), 1 Taunt. 126.

Where the clerk of the errors in C. P., in transcribing the record, had by mistake intitled it generally, instead of specially, and error was assigned thereon; after which he amended the transcript by inserting the special memorandum; the court would not restore the transcript to the state in which it stood at the time when the plaintiff in error assigned his error. Randole v. Bailey (in error), 1 M. & S. 232; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 277, (a).

The court of K. B. will order an inferior court to amend its record according to the facts of the case as they occurred below, after an imperfect record had been annexed to a writ of error, brought in the former court upon the judgment. Williams v. Bagot (Lord) (in error), 4 D. & R. 315. And see Daubers v. Pender (in error), 1 Wils. 337.

So, where a case came on for argument in the Exchequer Chamber on a writ of error, it was found that one of the errors assigned was grounded on a defect in setting forth the subject matter of the postea, which, although it might have been erroneous as it stood, was of such a nature as that an amendment would be allowed below as a matter of course; that court gave the party leave to amend the transcript, on payment of costs of the day; and an application to discharge such order, quia improvide emanavit, was refused. De Tastet v. Rucker (in error), 9 Price, 432; 6 Moore, 135; 3 B. & B. 65.

Where a verdict was given for a sum exceeding the damages, in the declaration, and judgment entered for the same, and writ of error upon the judgment, assigning that for cause; the court allowed the plaintiffs to amend the judgment and transcript in a term subsequent to that in which the judgment was signed, by entering a remittitur for the excess. Usher v. Dansey, 4 M. & S. 94; 4 Camp. 97.

The court of C. P. allowed a similar amendment on payment of costs of the writ of error. Pickwood v. Wright, 1 H. Black. 643.

In judgments by default the record is to be made up by the plaintiff; and if error be brought for not making proper entries for the defendant, judgment shall be staid until he can apply to amend below. French v. Cornely, 1 W. Black. 453.

But amendment by adding continuances cannot be made in a record transcribed without some other record to amend by, but the court will grant a ceritorari to send for the continuances. Rex v. Ponsonby (in error), 1 Wils. 303.

Where the issues are entered informally, a court of error will adjourn the hearing of the case, to afford an opportunity for the party to apply to the court below to amend the record unless the counsel will consent to argue upon the presumption of such amendment. Hawkey v. Borwick (in error), 1 Y. & J. 376; S. C. not S. P. 4 Bing. 135.

After error from C. P. into K. B. and from K. B. into Dom. Proc., the court of K. B. allowed an amendment to be made in the record, by inserting the certificate of the judge who tried the cause, allowing plaintiff treble costs, which had been omitted by the clerk in entering judgment in C. P., also by inserting the true term in which the assignment of errors and joinder were made, instead of an entry by the clerk on the judgment roll of K. B., that they were made on an impossible day in another term, although both these errors were assigned for cause in Dom. Proc. Dunbar v. Hitchcock, 3 M. & S. 591; 1 Marsh. 382; 5 Taunt. 820.

2. Orders of Nisi Prius and Reference.

The court refused to amend an order of nisi prius according to the terms contained in a paper signed by the counsel at the trial; the intention of the parties appearing from their subsequent acts to have been in favour of the terms of such order. Pearman v. Carter, 2 Chit. 29.

If all matters in difference in the cause are agreed to be referred to an arbitrator, and the associate, by mistake, draws up the order of reference generally as to all matters in difference between the parties, it cannot be amended; but they must go down to another trial. Rawtree v. King, 5 Moore, 167.

The court will amend an order of reference at nisi prius, made a rule of court, by inserting such omitted matters as are incident to the substance of the agreement between the parties. Evans v. Senor, 5 Taunt. 662.

Explanatory words to an order of nisi prius cannot be inserted, but may be made a separate rule. Anon. Loft, 151.

The condition of a recognizance to abide the award of D., cannot be varied by a rule of court, substituting M. for D. Rex v. Bingham, 1 C. & J. 245; S. C. not S. P. 2 Tyr. 46.

3. Rules and Affidavits.

The court will not amend a rule for a new trial, by providing that the action shall not abate by the death of a party, where a surety has previously entered into a bond for payment of the damages and costs of the second trial. Lopez v. De Tastet, 8 Taunt. 712.

Affidavit in support of motion for costs of the day for not proceeding to trial, allowed to be amended. Larken v. Bovill, 2 Tyr. 746.

VI. PECULIAR PROCEEDINGS.

1. Ejectment.

Amendment in ejectment may be made even in the time of the demise, to prevent being barred. Doe d. Hardman v. Pilkinton, 4 Burr. 2447.

Amendment allowed on payment of costs, in a declaration of ejectment, where the day of the demise was laid before the title accrued; even after the record was made up, and the cause set down for trial. Doe d. Rumford v. Miller, 1 Chit. 536; Ad. Eject. 199.

So, in the day of the demise in a declaration in ejectment on a forfeiture for dilapidations. Anon. 1 Chit. 536.

So, in a declaration in ejectment after judgment, and writ of error brought, by leaving out the word "tenements." Anon. 1 Chit. 537.

In ejectment the plaintiff declared for twenty messuages, twenty tenements, &c.; and after a verdict, and a writ of error brought in K. B., the court of C. P. allowed the record to be amended, by striking out the words "twenty tenements." Doe d. Lawrie v. Dyeball, 1 M. & R. 330; 8 B. & C. 70.

But refused by altering it to a day subsequent to the day of the delivery of the declaration. Doe d. Fozlow v. Jefferies, Ad. Eject. 200.

A plaintiff in ejectment was permitted to amend his declaration on payment of costs, by adding a new count on another demise, after three terms had elapsed, and the roll had been made up and carried in. Doe d. Beaumont v. Armitage, 1 D. & R. 173; 2 Chit. 302.

The plaintiff, in ejectment, has a right to an amendment of the record, upon payment of costs of the application against a defendant, who refuses to give up the possession. If the defendant consent to give up possession, the plaintiff must pay the whole costs up to the time of the application. Doe d. Lewis v. Coles, R. & M. 380—Best.

The term in a declaration of ejectment, if expired, may be enlarged, on payment of costs; though the cause be at issue, a special jury struck, and the parties gone down to the assizes before the mistake is discovered. Roe d. Lee v. Ellis, 2 W. Black, 940.

It is too late to amend the record, by increasing the term in ejectment, after the cause has been called on. Doe d. Manning v. Hay, 1 M. & Rob. 243—Parke.

Where an ejectment had been brought, and judgment recovered in 1798, and the term of the demise laid in the declaration had since expired, the court refused to grant a rule for enlarging the term and issuing a scire facias, the possession having changed, and the person who was the owner having since died. Doe v. Rendell, 1 Chit. 535.

Where judgment in ejectment was signed sixty years ago, when the Court of Chancery granted an injunction to stay execution, and nothing appeared to have been done in the cause since, the court of King's Bench refused to enlarge the term in the declaration, for the purpose of enabling a descendant of the original plaintiff to sue out a scire facias, in order to revive the judgment, and take out a writ of possession against the heir at law of the original defendant, unless it were quite clear that such amendment would work no injustice. Bradney v. Hasselden, 2 D. & R. 227; 1 B. & C. 121.

After judgment in ejectment from Ireland affirmed, the court amended the declaration by enlarging the term, though the record was remitted to Ireland. A writ of supersedeas was issued to the former mittimus, and a new writ of mittimus was awarded to the judge of K. B. in Ireland, inclosing the tenor of the record so amended. The whole on payment of costs by the party applying. Vicars v. Heyden (in error), Cowp. 341.

In certain cases the court will permit an amendment to be made in a notice at the bottom of a declaration in ejectment. Doe d. Bass v. Roe, 7 T. R. 469.

2. Penal Actions.

The omission of trespass, and insertion only of a plea of debt, in a bill of Middlesex, by a common informer, was amendable. Cox q. t. v. Murray, 1 W. Black. 462.

A declaration in a penal action may be amended. Anon. 1 Wils. 256.

But the court of C. P. will not alter the term of which such a declaration is intituled, to a previous term, in order to bring it within the time limited for the action, at the mere instance of the plaintiff, without a reason shown. Woodroffe v. Williams, 1 Marsh. 419; 6 Taunt. 19; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 45.

The court allowed a plaintiff to amend his declaration in a penal action, after the time limited for bringing another action, there having been no unnecessary delay in his proceedings. Cross v. Kaye, 6 T. R. 543.

And the amendment prayed for does not introduce any new substantive cause of action. Maddock q. t. v. Hammet, 7 T. R. 55.

But the court will not permit any amendments to be made in a penal action, where the plaintiff has been guilty of delay in carrying on the suit. Ranking q. t. v. Marsh (Knt.), 8 T. R. 30; S. P. Steel v. Sowerby, 6 T. R. 161.

And it was held an unreasonable delay where the action had been depending for four years. Goff v. Popplewell, 2 T. R. 707.

But an amendment was allowed, by correcting an error in the declaration in the description of the persons to whom part of the penalty was given, though the defendant had pleaded early enough for the plaintiff to have gone to trial at the assizes after an issuable term, and had neglected to do so, as well as delayed in making up the issue till a subsequent term. Solomons v. Jenkins, 2 Chit. 23.

A declaration in an action for usury was amended after the record was made up, carried down to trial, and withdrawn by plaintiff. Mace q. t. v. Lovett, 5 Burr. 2833.

Where a plaintiff in a qui tam action for usury, sued out his writ in September, 1828, and delivered a declaration in Trinity term, 1829, and at the summer assizes in that year withdrew the record, the court refused to allow him to amend the declaration. Wood v. Grimwood, 10 B. & C. 689.

A similar declaration was amended by altering the date of the note, all being in paper. Bonfield, q. t. v. Milner, 2 Burr. 1098.

Where a defendant was served with a copy of a latitat, in a penal action, by a wrong name, and a declaration was filed conditionally by the same name, to which he appeared and pleaded a misnomer:—Held, that a judge's order to amend the bill and declaration, by substituting the true name, was good, and that after such amendment there was no irregularity. Mestaer v. Hertz. 3 M. & S. 450.

A declaration for a penalty under the bribery act, was amended by altering the venue from the county at large to an inferior jurisdiction, after the time limited for commencing a new action; the particularity of the declaration making it appear probable to the court, that the plaintiff was proceeding on the same fact for which the action was originally brought, when laid by mistake in the wrong county, though there was no affidavit that it was the same. Petre v. Craft, 4 East, 433.

So also in another case, though it appeared that there were distinct causes of action in the two different counties, upon an affidavit that the plaintiff proceeded on a mistake, in supposing that both causes of action could be proved in the county where the election was holden. Dover v. Mestaer, 5 East, 435; 1 Smith, 123.

In an action of debt, to recover penalties against a sheriff's officer for extortion, under the 32 Geo. 2, c. 28, the court of C. P. will not allow the declaration to be amended by inserting new counts on the 23 Hen. 6, c. 9. Wright v. Ager, 5 Moore, 330.

Nor is there any instance in which the court has given leave to amend, as to the parties to the suit in a qui tam action, after a demurrer. Evans q. t. v. Stevens, 4 T. R. 228.

A record may be amended, in a penal action, by inserting or correcting a similiter, though the objection was taken on the trial. Wright q. t. v. Horton, 6 M. & S. 50; 2 Chit. 25; 1 Stark. 400; Holt, 458.

So, in an action on the statute of usury, for taking more than legal interest on a loan of money "from the 15th of April to the 14th of July, 1802," the court will amend the verdict by the judge's notes, if the jury, by mistaking the date of an instrument, create a variance for which the evidence affords no foundation. Manners q. t. v. Postan, 3 B. & P. 343; 4 Esp. 240.

The record in a penal action, where the jury by mistake give damages, being carried by writ of error to the K. B., the plaintiff may enter a remittitur of the damages on the record, and the transcript may be made conformable thereto. Hardy v. Cathcart, 1 Marsh. 180; 5 Taunt. 11.

An information for killing game allowed to be amended. Howell q. t. v. James, 1 Wils. 163.

3. Real Actions.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 36, all real and mixed actions, (except writ of right of dower, writ of dower under nihil habet, quare impedit, and ejectment,) are abolished after 31 Dec. 1834.

In one case it was said, that it is not allowed to amend the count in a writ of right, unless a favourable case be made out by affidavit. Dumsday v. Hughes (Bart.), 3 B. & P. 453; 1 N. R. 66, c.

But it was afterwards held, that considering the nature of the proceeding, and how much it had always been discouraged, it would be the soundest exercise of their discretion not to allow of amendments in proceeding by writs of right. Charwood v. Morgan, 1 N. R. 64.

And accordingly the court refused to allow the demandant to amend the mistake of a christian name in the count, though an affidavit accounting for the mistake was produced; or to discontinue the suit. Id.

So, they refused an amendment, by introducing an additional step in the descent, though it was sworn that the mistake had arisen from the demandant having been misinformed in the country, and that the demandant would be barred unless the amendment were allowed. Baylis v. Manning, 1 N. R. 233.

The demandant having omitted to set forth his pedigree upon the count in a writ of right, the court refused to allow him to amend even upon an affidavit of merits, and that the omission had been occasioned by the oversight of an experienced pleader at the bar. Worley v. Blunt, 9 Bing. 635; 2 M. & S. Scott, 799; 1 Dowl. P. C. 728.

An amendment is so little favoured in a writ of right, that, after an amendment had been made under a judge's order, the court discharged the order. Tooth v. Boddington, 8 Moore, 42; 1 Bing. 208.

Judgment having been signed in a writ of right, because a blank was left for the word "esplees" in the count, and because a country attorney's name was inserted instead of that of a London attorney, the court set aside the judgment, and allowed an amendment without costs. Webb v. Lane, 5 Bing. 285; 2 M. & P. 478.

An amendment of the disseisor's name was refused in a writ of entry sur disseisin en le post. Hull v. Blake, 4 Taunt. 572.

In formeden the plaintiff had leave to amend all his proceedings, on paying costs, and the costs of an ejectment. Scott v. Perry, 3 Wils. 206; 2 W. Black. 758.

The court allowed the demandant in a writ of formeden to withdraw a demurrer, and reply, on payment of costs, on an affidavit stating that his title had but recently accrued to him. Cholmeley v. Paxton, 10 Moore 246; 3 Bing. 207.

4. Quare Impedit.

Leave given to amend a declaration in quare impedit, on payment of costs. Keppington v. Tamworth School, 2 Wils. 118.

Rule to amend a declaration in quare impedit, by adding a count, stating that certain persons took by descent, instead of by devise, was made absolute after a nonsuit, which had been set aside. Gully v. Exeter (Bishop), 4 Bing. 525; 2 M. & P. 105.

5. Informations.

Amendments upon informations are now so much a matter of course, that they are made on an application to a judge at chambers. Rex v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457; S. P. Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Barr. 2527.

The attorney-general may at any time amend a revenue information. Att. Gen. v. Henderson, 3 Anst. 714.

An information filed by the attorney-general against an East Indian delinquent, under 24 Geo. 3, c. 25, and 26 Geo. 3, c. 57, to which the defendant demurs, may be amended in K. B. upon the motion of the attorney-general. Rex v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457.

The court refused, on cause shown, to discharge a side bar rule, allowing the attorney-general to amend an information for penalties incurred under the excise laws, on payment of costs, as to ten new counts which had been added charging other offences laid on days long subsequent to those in the original information and to the filing of that proceeding, and the issuing of process thereon; and although the name of a succeeding attorney-general had been introduced; and although the defendant was served with process on the first information in Hilary vacation, returnable the first day of Easter term; and the side bar rule for amending was not obtained till the first day of the following Michaelmas term, nor the information so amended filed till the seal day after Michaelmas term. Att. Gen. v. King, 5 Price, 363.

6. Criminal Proceedings.

The court will not allow a defective plea in abatement, to an indictment for a misdemeanour, to be amended. Rex v. Cooke, 4 D. & R. 592; 2 B. & C. 871.

After verdict of guilty upon an indictment on the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, for an assault on account of money won at gaming, the return to the writ of certiorari, which had been issued at the instance of the defendant, was amended by inserting in the return of the caption the true time when, and the names of the justices before whom, the quarter sessions at which the indictment was found was holden, and the names of the jurors by whom it was found. And the entry roll and record of nisi prius were also amended, as to the caption of the indictment (but not as to the names of the grand jurors), by making the same agree with the caption so amended. Rex v. Hill Darley, 4 East, 174.

A return to a certiorari, issued at the instance of the defendant, may be amended by inserting therein the commission of oyer and terminer, by virtue of which, and also the names of the justices who constituted the court before whom the indictment was found, on production of the commission and the minutes taken by the clerk in court. And also the caption of the indictment may be amended by inserting the names of the grand jurors. The latter is not necessary. Rex v. Atkinson, 4 East, 176, n. And see Rex v. Aylett, 4 East, 176, n.

And the entry roll in the Treasury, and the record of nisi prius, in the same cause may be amended, as to the caption of the indictment, by making it agree with the amended caption. Id.

The jury panel, in cases of treason, may be amended by correcting mistakes and inserting a description of the professions of the jurors. Rex v. Hardy, 1 East, P. C. 113.

VII. FINES AND RECOVERIES.

1. Generally.

By stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74. fines and recoveries are abolished, and a more simple mode of assurance substituted. The enactments are noticed post, tit. FINES AND RECOVERIES.

By that stat. sects. 7 & 8, it is enacted, that if it shall be apparent from the deed declaring the uses of a fine, or making the tenant to the writ of entry or other writ, for suffering a recovery already levied or suffered, or hereafter to be levied or suffered, that there is in the indentures, record, or any of the proceedings of such fine, or in the exemplification, record, or any of the proceedings of such recovery, any error in the name of the conusor or conussee of such fine, or of the tenant, demandant, or vouchee in such recovery, or any misdescription or omission of lands intended to have been passed by such fine or recovery, then and in every such case, the fine, without any amendment of the indentures, record, or proceedings, or the recovery, without any amendment of the exemplification, record, or proceedings, in which such error, misdescription, or omission shall have occurred, shall be as good and valid as the same would have been, and shall be held to have passed all the lands intended to have been passed thereby, in the same manner as it would have done if there had been no such error, misdescription, or omission: Provided (sect. 9,) that nothing shall lessen or take away the jurisdiction of any court to amend any fine or recovery, or any proceeding therein, in cases not provided for by the act.

Where the original writ was insensible, the court would permit it to be amended. Cook v. Milles, 4 Taunt. 644.

So, clerical mistakes in a fine, which make it insensible, might be amended. Gill v. Yates, 4 Taunt. 708.

A fine, with a double operation, amended by striking out lands in reversion. Moore v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 631.

The term of a fine was not amendable. Heath v. Wilmot, 2 W. Black. 788.

Where the deed to lead the uses appeared to be colourable, and the fine was taken from a dying woman, the court refused to amend the return to a writ of covenant. Lindsay v. Gray, 2 W. Black. 1013.

No amendment allowed, where the recovery, as it stands, has land of the vouches to operate upon. Acton v. Baldwin, 2 W. Black. 874.

Where one purchaser under a recovery had obtained an amendment of the recovery, so worded, that by its collocation on the record, it destroyed, and rendered insensible the title of another purchaser under the recovery, the court, upon motion of the latter, rectified the mistake. Lancaster, dem.; Wilmot, ten.; Boone, vouchee, 7 Taunt. 352; 1 Moore, 95.

If there be several palpable mistakes in a recovery, through the neglect of the attorney employed to perfect it, the court will order him to pay the costs of its amendment. So, in a fine, if one parish be inserted instead of two, by mere mistake of the attorney, the costs of the amendment must be paid by him. Williamson, dem.; Meggison, ten.; Beaumont, vouchee, 4 Moore, 171.

The court would not compel a recovery suffered by an insolvent debtor to be amended. Sanderson, dem.; Bessant, ten.; Partridge, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 105.

2. Names of Parties.

Names of Parties in Fines.—Formerly held, that no change of the christian name of the parties could be made by way of amendment. Dixon v. Lawson, 2 W. Black. 816.

Afterwards, the præcipe and concord of a fine were amended, by inserting the real christian names of the deforciant, instead of those which had been erroneously inserted. Grey v. Wainwright, 1 Marsh. 578.

And by altering the surname of one of the deforciant conformably to his signature in the covenant and dedimus. Bye v. Haywood, 1 Moore, 125.

On an affidavit explaining the mistake. Dobson v. Dewar, 1 B. & B. 15.

So, a fine was amended by the insertion of part of the conuser's christian name, to which he did not know he was entitled at the time the fine was passed. Spencer, conuser, 8 Taunt. 20.

So, also, they allowed the warranty of a fine to be amended, by altering it from a warranty by the husband and wife and the heirs of the husband, against themselves and the heirs of the wife, to a warranty by the husband and wife and the heirs of the wife, against themselves and the heirs of the wife. Hannaford v. Pearce, 1 B. & B. 68.

Where an affidavit from husband and wife stated that they both, for the purpose of levying a fine, appeared at the bar, and the officer wrote both their names accordingly, but the name of the wife appeared to have been afterwards struck out of the præcipe, but not by the officer, the court refused to amend the caption by inserting the wife's name; and, as the fine was of very recent date, directed her to come up and re-acknowledge it. King v. Steddel, 8 Taunt. 87.

If a wrong christian name of one of the parties to a fine be inserted by mistake, and the right one written on an erasure in the deed to lead the uses, the court will require an affidavit, to show that such erasure was made, and the name written thereon, before the deed was executed, although the party had signed his right name at the foot of such deed. De Warre v. Bryan, 3 Moore, 241.

Where the wife of a deforciant was improperly described by the name of "Maria," instead of "Mary Ann," the court allowed the right name to be substituted in the writ of covenant, præcipe, and concord, on an affidavit stating that she was an illiterate woman, and that her real name had not been ascertained at the time the fine was levied. Woolley v. Harrison, 8 Moore, 449.

It is unnecessary to amend a fine by altering the christian name of the deforciant from "Ellen" to "Eleanor," where she had always been known by the former, although her real baptismal name was the latter. Hext v. Cockey, 8 Moore, 15.

The court refused to amend a fine passed two years back, by altering the surnames of the deforciant, though it was sworn that a wrong name had been inserted by mistake. Ex parte Motley, 2 B. & P. 455.

Where, in levying two fines between the same parties, the one sur concessit, the other sur cognizance de droit, the parcels had by mistake been transposed, the court allowed the fines to be amended, so as to make them conformable with the deed to lead the uses. Banbury v. Harper, 3 M. & Scott, 101.

Vouchee in Recoveries.—The christian name of the vouchee may be altered in a fine by a deed to lead the uses. Mayre v. Coulthard, 2 W. Black. 1230.

As by inserting an omission in the christian name. White, dem.; Gregory, ten.; Herne, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 27.

But if he sign a recovery with one part of his christian name only, the court will not permit it to be amended by adding the other part, such addition being unnecessary. Bradley, vouchee, 3 Moore, 577.

So, a recovery cannot be amended by inserting an additional christian name of the vouchee, if he has always been known by, and has signed the deed to make a tenant to the præcipe without such name. Shaw, dem.; Spence, ten.; Hunt, vouchee, 2 Moore, 721.

Held formerly that the warrant of attorney in a recovery might be amended by inserting an additional christian name of the vouchee. O'Brien vouchee, 4 Taunt. 196.

But the court will not now amend a warrant of attorney, because it is the act of the party. Fax, dem.; Benbow, ten.; Gower (Earl), vouchee, 6 Taunt. 652; 2 Marsh. 328.

The court refused to amend a recovery by adding the name of one of the parties which had been omitted in the warrant of attorney. Id.

Where the warrant of attorney and deed to lead the uses were executed in a name by which the vouchee was commonly known, the court refused to amend the recovery by substituting a different name, by which, as he afterwards discovered, he had been baptized. Addis v. Power, 7 Bing. 455; 5 M. & P. 379.

Or strike out the voucher of a vouchee, whose acknowledgment was taken without a dedimus. Rawlings, dem.; Price, ten.; Tom, vouchee; 3 Taunt. 59.

Or strike out a minor vouchee. Cheesman, dem.; Sykes, ten.; Denn, vouchee, 7 Taunt. 697.

Nor will they amend by inserting the name of the husband of a vouchee who is a feme covert. Parsons, dem.; Abbott, ten.; Knight, vouchee, 1 Taunt. 478.

A præcipe at the head of a warrant of attorney directed to the vouchee, was allowed to be amended by substituting the name of the tenant. Dawson, dem.; Stocker, ten.; Brooke, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 226.

So, where the name of the vouchee was inserted by mistake in the præcipe, instead of that of the tenant, the court allowed it to be amended by substituting the name of the latter for that of the former. Cox, dem.; Ince, ten.; Gill, vouchee, 7 Moore, 257; 1 Bing. 22.

Where the vouchee's warrant of attorney, in a recovery, omitted in the body of the warrant to express against whom the plea of land was, wherein the attorney was made, but it appeared by the præcipe engrossed at the head of the warrant of attorney who the demandant was: the court held, that the authority must refer to the plea described by the præcipe, and permitted the recovery to pass. Forster, dem.; Forster, ten.; Bolton, vouchee, 6 Taunt. 373.

If the name of a tenant be inserted by mistake for that of the demandant, in the body of a warrant of attorney in a recovery, the court will not allow the warrant of attorney to be amended, or the recovery to pass, although the parties were rightly described in the præcipe at the head of such warrant. Morrell, dem.; Alban, ten.; Hatchett, vouchee, 4 Moore, 495; 1 B. & B. 92.

Demandant and Tenant.—The court will allow the christian names of the demandant to be transposed. Shepherd, dem.; James, ten.; Boughton, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 226.

So, also, the names of the demandant and tenant. Roberts, dem.; Robinson, ten., 2 Taunt. 222; S. P. Hamilton, dem.; Farrer, ten., 8 Bing. 11; 1 M. & Scott, 43; 1 Dowl. P. C. 238.

Without any affidavit of intention, or identity of the party or premises, Bird, dem.; Quilter, ten.; Tindal, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 556.

But not unless the documents relative to the recovery being suffered be produced. Allen, dem.; Hexley, ten.; Massey, vouchee, 6 Moore, 46.

The court will not alter a recovery by substituting one joint-tenant to the præcipe for his companion. Buswell, tenant, 4 Taunt. 101.

They will substitute the name of the attorney for the name of the vouchee, which had by mistake been inserted in the place of the attorney's name. Shaw, dem.; Le Blanc, ten.; Ramsay, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 98.

Or strike out the name of one of two demandants, who died pending the recovery. Morris, dem., 5 Taunt. 73.

The court allowed a writ of entry to be amended by altering the names of the parties, on an affidavit, that the recovery was intended to be suffered as prayed, and that all the parties were alive, and consented to the motion. Edge, dem.; Taylor, ten.; Warren, vouchee, 4 Moore, 514; 2 B. & B. 98.

3. Description of Locality of Land.

County.—A writ of covenant cannot be transferred from one county to another, nor can parishes comprised in wrong counties be transposed to the right counties; but additional parishes in the same county may be inserted, where it is seen, by a clear relation, that land in those parishes was intended to pass. Gill v. Yeates, 4 Taunt. 708. And see Behoun v. Burton, 2 Wils. 58.

A fine has been amended by substituting one county for another, where it appears that the lands, intended to pass, were situate in the same parish, which ran into both counties. Stubbs v. Stephenson, 1 Moore, 530.

But the court refused to amend a recovery by changing the county, the premises lying in a parish which ran into two counties, and lying wholly in the county omitted, and no part in the county mentioned. Anon. 3 Taunt. 418.

So, by altering Berks into Bucks, which was engrossed by mistake; the deed to lead the uses being correctly Bucks. Dowling, dem.; Selby, vouchee, 4 Bing. 426.

So, the court refused to allow the original writ, and subsequent proceedings in a recovery to be amended by substituting therein "Lancashire," instead of "Berkshire," although it was sworn that the parties had no property in the latter county, and that the premises intended to be passed were wholly situate in the former. Dolling, dem.; Rice, ten.; Euston, vouchee, 1 M. & P. 178.

In one case, however, the original writ and other proceedings in a recovery were amended by inserting the "county of the town of S." for "county of S." Rashleigh, dem.; Lee, ten.; Smith, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 855.

A recovery may be amended by a more accurate description of the vill and county, from the deed to lead the uses. Watson v. Cox, 2 W.

Black. 1065. And see Henzell v. Lodge 2 W. Black. 747; 3 Wils. 154.

So, by inserting the words "the county of the" before those of "city of C." on an affidavit stating that the premises intended to pass were situate in the county of that city, and so described in the deed to lead the uses, but by mistake were described in the recovery as being in the city of C. Hill, vouchee, 6 Moore, 259, n.

So, by describing the premises to be situate "in the parish of A., in the city of B., and in the parish of C., in the county of the same city," according to the deed to lead the uses, although they were described in the exemplification of the recovery to be situate in "the parishes of A. and C., in the city of B." Bisgood, dem.; Brutton, ten.; Ivee, vouchee, 6 Moore, 259.

More accurate Description of Parish.]—A recovery was amended by adding the greater comprising district to the district comprised. Pinder, dem.; Meredith, ten.; Baker, vouchee, 5 Taunt. 661.

Where premises were described to be situate at Malden, in the county of Essex, an amendment of a fine was allowed, by adding the words, "St. Peter's, in," before Malden, there being three parishes in that town. — v. Pring, 8 Moore, 163.

So, a fine of premises in "the town of Kingston-upon-Hull" was amended, by prefixing the words, "the lordship of Myton, in the county of." Frost v. Hale, 2 Marsh. 391.

So, the court permitted a fine and recovery to be amended by inserting the words, "upon Trent" after that of "Stoke," on affidavits stating that the property intended to be conveyed was situate in the parish of Stoke upon Trent, and that there was no parish in the county called "Stoke," but merely a hamlet of that name, in which the parties had no property. Smith v. Brodrick, 10 Moore, 109.

So, in a recovery, by altering the words "in the parish of C. and B., in the county of E." to the words "in the parishes of C. and S. in the county of E.," on the ground that it had been discovered since the recovery was suffered, that B. was a hamlet in the parish of S., and that the vouchee intended to suffer a recovery of so much of his lands as were since discovered to lie within that parish. Copland, dem.; Bigg, ten.; Thompson, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 86.

Where two parishes were described in the exemplification by the names of L. and W. and in the deed to lead the uses as L. M. and W. M., the court allowed the recovery to be amended by inserting the additional names. Selby, dem.; Smith, ten.; Barnard, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 244.

So, where lands in two parishes were conveyed as lying in the parish of G., which was the true name of neither of them, nor of any parish, but was an addition equally applicable to both, the court permitted both parishes to be added in an old recovery. Jacob, dem.; Devonshire (Duke of), vouchee, 4 Taunt. 737. And see 5 Taunt. 624.

A recovery "of all tithes arising out of the premises in S., and in the parish of S.," was amended by striking out the words "the premises in S., and in;"—the deed containing all the tithes in S. Domville, dem.; Kinderley, ten.; Coventry (Earl), vouchee, 2 Marsh. 264.

A fine was amended, in which tithes were described as arising out of a rectory, by describing them as arising out of a borough and parish, in conformity with the deed to lead the uses. Collins v. Brown, 4 Moore, 170.

Correction of Mistake in Name of Parish.]—If a parish be misdescribed by name in a fine and deed to lead the uses, the former may be amended by substituting the right name, if the deed contain general words under which the premises in such parish may pass. Anon. 6 Moore, 520.

If the parish of A. be written on an erasure in the deed to lead the uses of a fine, the court will allow it to be substituted for B., on an affidavit that the latter parish was inserted by mistake, and that the parish of A. was written on the erasure before the deed was executed. Glennell v. Storer, 3 Moore, 22.

Where a deed to make a tenant to the præcipe comprised tithes in two parishes, but an amendment had been improperly introduced into the recovery, which confined its operation to one parish only, the court allowed the words of such amendment to be transposed, so as to give effect to the deed, and comprise both parishes. Lancaster, dem.; Wilmot, ten.; Boone, vouchee, 1 Moore, 95; 7 Taunt. 352.

So, by adding the name of a parish (the name having been improperly spelt); but the court would not permit the right name to be substituted for the wrong one, as it did not appear that there was no such parish as that mis-spelt in the recovery, or that the vouchee had no lands there. Sykes, dem.; Knowles, ten.; Galway (Lord), vouchee, 8 Taunt. 262.

So, by altering the name of a parish mis-named in the deed making the tenant to the præcipe, as well as in the recovery, upon affidavit of the intention. Flower v. Bainwright, 5 Taunt. 303: S. P. Banazeletti v. Kingmore, 12 Moore, 159.

So two fines of different shares in the same lands, may be amended, by stating them to be situated in A., instead of "in the parish of A." there being no such parish, the deed to lead the uses of the former fine being correct, that of the latter containing the same mistake as the fines. Shelly v. Miller, and Johnson v. Miller, 1 Marsh. 519; 6 Taunt. 162.

So, a fine of lands in the parish of F. which is in fact no parish, but the popular name for a district containing two parishes, F. St. M. and F. St. N., was amended by the substitution of these two parishes by name. Blake v. Saffery, 5 Taunt. 624. And see 4 Taunt. 737.

But where a fine comprised only lands lying in the parishes of S. and S. within a larger district, the island of F., the deed so describing the lands, which were in truth in the parish of F. in the same district, the court refused to amend the fine by inserting also the parish of F. Cottrell v. Franklin, 6 Taunt. 285.

Where premises were described in a fine to be in the parish of A., whereas they were in fact in the parish of B., being in a certain street, part of which was in A. and part in B., and the deed to lead the uses stated the premises to be in that street in the parish of A.:—The court, on an affidavit of the facts, allowed the fine to be amended, by altering the name of the parish from A. to B. Hauser, deforciant, 11 Moore, 485.

So, in a recovery, by substituting the hamlet of F. in the parish of A. for the parish of F. Willis, dem.; Calvert, ten.; Bartholomew, vouchee, 1 Moore, 131.

So, the township, of A. in the parish of F. for the parish of A. Kinderley, dem.; Graham, ten.; Ogle, vouchee, 11 Moore, 249.

But where a vouchee had, in his instructions to suffer a recovery, and in the deed to lead the uses prepared in pursuance thereto, misdescribed the parish in which certain closes were, though they were described in the deed with truth and certainty in four other circumstances, the court refused to substitute in the recovery the parish in which the lands lay, for the parish named in the deed and recovery. Steele, dem.; Clennell, ten.; Benn, vouchee, 6 Taunt. 145.

Substitution of Parishes.]—A fine may be amended by erasing the name of one parish and substituting another in its stead, in order to make it conformable to the deed to lead the uses. Lloyd v. Simmons, 9 Moore, 740.

So, by describing the premises intended to be conveyed, to be situate in the parish of A. instead of the parish of B., where both were originally one parish, and afterwards separated into distinct parishes by act of parliament. Kinderley v. Robinson, 8 Moore, 334.

So, a recovery was amended by substituting a certain part of a parish which lay within a liberty, for the other part of the parish which lay within a borough. Payne, dem.; Nathaniel, ten.; Hodges, vouchee, 3 Taunt. 396.

So, by substituting the parish of A. for that of B., where the land was improperly described in the deed to lead the uses to be in the latter parish, on an affidavit which stated, that the property was actually in A.; that in a settlement in tail, made in 1776, it had been described correctly, as to the parish in which it was situate; and that the premises, ever since that period, had been enjoyed consistently with the deed. Anon. 2 Bing. 93.

So, by substituting the parish of A. for B., if the deed to lead the uses comprehend all the estates of the demandant, situate in the county where such parishes lie. Greenaway, vouchee, 2 Moore, 237.

Even where the parish is not named in the deed, if the lands intended to pass are specified therein, as well as to the number of acres, as the names of the vendee and occupier at the time the recovery was suffered. —, dem.; Woodyer, ten.; Nicholls, vouchee, 9 Moore, 195.

not amend a recovery by inserting more parishes, unless it be irresistibly clear that the land in those parishes passed by the deed: although the intention to pass them be sworn to, and the construction of the deed, at the worst, is only doubtful. Kinderley, dem.; Domville, ten.; Bamfylde, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 738.

But where the deed clearly passes them, omitted parishes may be added. Id.

Upon affidavit, a recovery may be amended by adding the name of the parish in which part of the premises lie, if it is sworn that the parish is wholly within the same county; and by inserting the entirety of the premises not comprised in the deed, but comprised in the recovery, by the description of moieties only, if the conveying parties are all alive and consenting, and their intention be sworn to. Kinderley, dem.; Domville, ten.; Bamfylde, vouchee, 1 Taunt. 257.

But the court refused to permit a recovery to be amended by inserting a parish not named in the deed to make a tenant to the præcipe, although it appeared that the parish was named in the instructions given for preparing that deed, and that the lands were parcel of the estate of an ancestor, all whose estate was intended to pass. Clutterbuck, dem.; Debary, ten.; Langton, vouchee, 2 Taunt. 96.

The court permitted a recovery to be amended by inserting a new parish in the writ of entry, on affidavit of the original intent of the parties to include all their property within the county, and of the assent of all persons interested at the time of the amendment. Wheeler, dem.; Hill, ten.; Heseltine, vouchee, 2 B. & P. 560.

In one case, after seventy-five years. Rolfe, dem.; Iacon, ten.; Anguish, vouchee, 5 Taunt. 2.

If there be general words in the exemplification and deed to make the tenant to the præcipe, to warrant the insertion of such parish. Anon. 3 Moore, 326.

A fine was amended by inserting the name of a parish, in which part of the premises were, upon seeing that they were comprehended in the deed to lead the uses. Gladwin v. Brown, 2 Taunt. 1.

So, by inserting a parish not named in the deed to lead the uses, it being certain, from the deed specifying the quantity and occupiers, that the land was intended to pass, and being necessary to make up the quantities. Lambe v. Reaston, 5 Taunt. 207; 1 Marsh. 23; S. P. Anon. 1 M. & Scott, 239; 1 Dowl. P. C. 255.

So, by inserting a parish according to a deed to declare the uses, dated subsequently to the fine. Rowlitt v. Orlebar, 1 Marsh. 452; 6 Taunt. 73.

A recovery was amended by inserting the parish of C., although it was omitted in the deed to lead the uses; the premises being therein described as lying in the parishes of A. and B., or elsewhere in the county where the parish of C. was also situated. Rogers, dem.; White, ten.; Lloyd, vouchee, 9 Moore, 740.

Where, in the deed to lead the uses, the premises were described as a farm, in the parish of L., late in the occupation of J. H., and it was afterwards discovered that part of the farm was situate in the parish of A., which was not mentioned in the deed:—the Court refused to allow the recovery to be amended by describing the farm as being situate in both parishes, although it was sworn that the whole of the farm was in the occupation of J. H., that it was intended to pass, and that the premises had been since enjoyed consistently with the deed. Elliott (Lord), vouchee, 8 Moore, 521; 1 Bing. 425.

Insertion of Parish not named.]—The court will

So, they refused to amend by adding two parishes in unqualified terms after a large enumeration of lands, where the purpose of the amendment was only to include certain parcels of one out of many enumerated manors, which parcels were in the omitted parishes. Charter, dem.; Shepherd, ten.; Gwynn, vouchee, 7 Taunt. 177.

So, they refused to allow the name of a parish to be amended, on the ground that the property in the deed to lead the uses was described as a rectory, and such rectory might extend to more than one parish. —, dem.; Orchard, ten.; Barnes, vouchee, 3 Moore, 20.

Conveyance to make a tenant to the præcipe of the vouchee's manor of J. in the parish of B., and of all his manors and lands in B., or in any town or towns next or near adjoining thereto. Recovery of the manor of J., in the parish of B., amended by inserting six other parishes, upon affidavit that the manor of J. extended into those six parishes, that they were adjoining to B., and that the vouchee had exercised ownership over those parts before the sale and not since, and that they were intended to pass. Colville, dem.; Denison, ten.; Acton, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 749. And see Rogers, dem.; White, ten.; Lloyd, vouchee, 9 Moore, 740.

A recovery was amended by inserting the name of the parish of A., where the recovery was of lands in the parishes of B. and C.; and the deed to lead the uses contained the names of those parishes, or any adjoining town; A. being contiguous to B. and C. Baxter, dem.; Baxter, ten.; Hawkins, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 191.

So, by the insertion of a parish in which a certain close lay, the close being named in the deed declaring the uses, but the parish being no otherwise named in the deed than by reference to a map in the margin, on which the name of the close and parish were marked together. Baxter, dem.; Baxter, ten.; Newman, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 249.

A recovery was amended by inserting the parish of A. after that of B., in which the whole of the lands to be conveyed were described to be situated, part of the lands being situated in A., that part being particularly described in the deed, and no land answering to that description being in the parish of B.; though the parish of A. was not mentioned in the deed to make the tenant to the præcipe. Sidney, dem.; Hulme, ten.; Austin, vouchee, 1 Marsh. 532; 6 Taunt. 177.

So, a recovery of the "manor of A. and eight messuages in A." amended, by adding the names of parishes in which the premises were partly situated; those parishes being comprised in the manor of A. Dowse, dem.; Lloyd, ten.; Reeve, vouchee, 2 Marsh. 330.

Striking out Names of Parishes.—A fine may be amended by striking out the names of the parishes in which the lands were erroneously described to be situated; those lands being extra-parochial. Payne v. Garrick, 1 Marsh. 468.

4. Description of Quality of Land.

Insertion of new Premises.—A fine may be amended by insertion of newly erected works and buildings. Gill v. Yeates, 4 Taunt. 708.

And where the deed leading the uses no otherwise ascertained part of the premises omitted in the fine, than by referring to a devise which referred to a deed of partnership, which contained a covenant to purchase lands, which covenant had been performed, and lands had been purchased, the fine was permitted to be amended by the insertion of the lands so purchased thereunder. Id.

So a recovery was amended by inserting a messuage recently built upon part of the premises. Shaw, ten.; Hawkins, vouchee, 3 Taunt. 74.

But an ancient recovery will not be amended by inserting other premises, without proof of seisin of the vouchee of an estate tail therein at the time of the recovery, and intention that they should pass. Dalton, dem.; Greg, ten., 5 Taunt. 811.

A recovery was amended by inserting "a fee-farm rent." Times, dem.; Meredith, ten.; Edwards, vouchee, 5 Moore, 474.

Where certain farms had been enjoyed by the tenant in tail and his ancestors beyond memory, as tithe-free, but no legal reason for their discharge was known, the court permitted a recovery to be amended by insertion of the tithes. Cullem, dem.; Ryder, ten.; Vernon, vouchee, 7 Taunt. 341.

By a recovery suffered in 1759, premises were described as consisting of "a mill, lands, and hereditaments, in the parish of M." By a deed of bargain and sale, in 1771, "all the tithes and hereditaments, except in M., were conveyed;" which, it was stated, were comprised in the recovery of 1759, and were accordingly omitted in a subsequent one:—Held, that such tithes did not pass by the first recovery; but as it appeared that the tithes of all the vouchee's estates were intended to pass by the latter, except those which were supposed to have been included in the first, the court permitted the latter to be amended by inserting the "tithes in M." Ward, dem.; Palmer, ten.; Coventry, vouchee, 6 Moore, 224.

A recovery, suffered seventy years since, cannot be amended by inserting an advowson, although it was omitted by mistake, and has formed part of the estate since the recovery was suffered, without an affidavit, stating how the presentations had gone from that time to the application for the amendment. Colclough, dem.; Praed, ten.; Savage, vouchee, 7 Moore, 268.

But, in another case, a recovery, ninety-eight years old, was amended by inserting a manor and tithes, without affidavit of intention that they should pass, the intention being manifest from the deeds, and the possession having gone accordingly; though there was no other evidence of the existence of a manor than the mention of it in an old deed, and the appointment of a gamekeeper. Tennison, dem.; Goulton, ten.; Rousby, vouchee, 3 Taunt. 408.

The court permitted a recovery to be amended by inserting an advowson which had passed by the general word hereditaments, but refused to insert a curacy, because the right of nominating a perpetual curate was incident to, and parcel of, the rectory. Horne, dem.; Lodge, ten.; Preston, vouchee, 3 Taunt. 462.

So, by inserting the tithes of Wroxham, where possession had followed the deed ever since its date, and the tithes appeared to be intended to pass. Collyer, dem.; Chesterfield (Lord), vouchee, 4 Taunt. 226.

So, by inserting tithe of wool and lamb of a township, which passed by the general words "all other the tithes," though all the tithes of the vouchee's own lands, part of the township, had been specifically granted. Ex parte Bullock, 5 Taunt. 748.

So, by inserting the "great and rectorial tithes belonging to a manor," if they be contained in the deed to lead the uses, although the king's silver was not paid for such tithes at the time the recovery was suffered. White, dem.; Bicknell, ten.; Papillon, vouchee, 2 Moore, 299.

But where one of the deeds to lead the uses (viz. the lease) contained the word "tithes," but the other deed (viz. the release) omitted that word, the court refused to amend the writ of entry, by inserting the word "tithes," though the release had the words "and also all houses, ways, &c. hereditaments and appurtenances whatsoever, to the said messuages, lands, &c. belonging, or in any way appertaining." Phillips v. Jones, 3 B. & P. 362.

And they refused to allow the amendment of two recoveries, the one suffered in the reign of Will. & Mary, and the other in Geo. 1, by the insertion of the word "tithes;" it not appearing that the parties were in possession of such tithes at the time the recoveries were suffered; although the word "hereditaments" was contained in the deed to lead the uses. Phillips, dem.; Noune ten.; Lisle, vouchee, 4 Moore, 604; 2 B. & B. 105.

Nor will the court amend a recovery by adding the tithes of the premises under the word hereditaments, where that word does not occur in the operative part of the deed. Garle, dem.; Oram, ten.; Mason, vouchee, 2 Marsh. 194.

On the 23d June, 12 Geo. 3, a recovery suffered on the 2d Oct. 11 Geo. 1, of the manor or deanery of Chester-le-Street, with its members and appurtenances, thirty messuages, &c. and four hundred acres of moor, was amended by inserting in the writ of entry and subsequent proceedings, after the words "quadraginta acras mores," the words "acotiam advocacionem, presentationem, donationem, nominationem, liberam dispositionem, et jus patronatus ecclesie de Chester-le-Street, ac etiam advocacionem, &c. de curatione de Chester-le-street;" the word "hereditaments" being contained in the deed to lead the uses, and the intention to pass the advowson with the rest of the premises appearing, although the amendment was contested. Milbanke v. Joliffe, in C. P. at Durham, 2 B. & P. 580, n.

The writ of entry and subsequent proceedings in a recovery, amended by inserting the words "all and all manner of tithes whatsoever yearly arising, &c. from and out of the said premises," on an affidavit, setting out the vouchee's title to the tithes, and stating his intention to have passed all his interest in the premises; the word "hereditaments" being contained in the deed to lead the uses. Douse, dem.; Lloyd, ten.; Reeve, vouchee, 2 B. & P. 578.

An affidavit of presentation is necessary to admit the word "advowson" in an amendment. Holmes v. Seton, 3 Bing. 176.

A recovery of 17 Geo. 3, was amended by inserting the word "tithes," the deed to lead the uses having conveyed all the hereditaments, late of C. C., who had devised all his hereditaments at M. to the vouchee. Corden, dem.; Hall, ten.; Colclough, vouchee, 2 N. R. 431.

The court allowed a recovery suffered sixty-four years since to be amended, by the insertion of woodlands, in accordance with the deed to lead the uses. Brackenburgh, dem.; ———, ten.; Tutton, vouchee, 12 Moore, 303.

A part of the premises named in the deed to lead the uses had been omitted in the copy of the præcipe, which precedes the warrant of attorney: the court refused amendment. Oddie, dem.; Foster, ten., 3 Bing. 446; 11 Moore, 340.

Alteration of Description.—A recovery was amended by inserting the words "meadow and pasture," before "land;" although it was described as land generally in the deed to lead the uses. Tucker, dem.; Fairbank, ten.; Bishop, vouchee, 7 Moore, 257; 1 Bing. 22.

In a subsequent case it was held, that, as meadow and pasture, as well as arable land, would pass in a recovery under the word "land," the court would not amend by adding the word "meadow." Cooke v. Yates, 4 Bing. 90; 12 Moore, 296.

Amendment was allowed by inserting the word "marshy" before "land," on an affidavit stating how the premises had been occupied since the recovery was suffered. Phillips, dem.; Field, ten.; Rolfe, vouchee; 5 Moore, 98.

So, by removing the words "an inbound common," from a line in which they had been inadvertently inserted, to that in which they ought to have stood, they having no meaning without such alteration. Willisford v. Fairbank, 8 Moore, 322; S. C. nom. Anon. 1 Bing. 317.

So, by inserting a rent-charge which had long been treated as merged in the land by unity of possession. Brett, dem.; Smith, ten.; Honeywood, vouchee, 1 Taunt. 484.

But amendment was refused, by striking out the aggregate sum of several rents, and inserting the different rents or sums of which it was composed. Domville, dem.; Kinderley, ten.; Coventry (Earl), vouchee, 2 Marsh. 264.

So, by adding to the description, where the description is already sufficient to pass the lands. Howman, dem.; Orchard, ten.; Barney, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 683.

Where woodland was converted into arable, the court would not allow amendment by increasing the quantity of the latter, as the land would pass under either description. Webber v. Grey, 5 Moore, 94.

A fine of a rent-charge may be amended by substituting lands out of which it issued, for the premises out of which the fine erroneously described it to issue. Cary v. Bedingfield, 6 Taunt. 276.

The court refused to amend a recovery by striking out a "portion of tithes, and substituting "all the tithes" arising from the lands conveyed. Ross, dem.; Willshen, ten.; Worge, vouchee, 2 Marsh. 195; 6 Taunt. 489.

In a recovery, the property was described as a "moiety of the vicarage, &c." and in the deed to lead the uses as a "moiety of the advowson of the vicarage, &c.;" the court allowed the recovery to be amended by inserting the words "of the advowson" before "the vicarage." King, dem.; Shepherd, ten.; Germain, vouchee, 10 Moore, 251.

So, by inserting the word "advowson;" the word "rectory" being thought insufficient. Manley v. Tattersall, 4 Taunt. 257.

So, by substituting an advowson for a rectory, if it appear by the deed to lead the uses that the former was intended to pass. Haller, dem.; Woolley, ten.; Palmer, vouchee, 6 Moore, 53.

So, by substituting the words "advowson of the church," for the word "rectory." Coore, dem.; Spragg, ten.; Blackburn, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 333.

So, by inserting the words, "the advowson of," before those of "the rectory of the church of H." on an affidavit stating that there had been no vacancy since the recovery was suffered, and that the church was now full. Chambers v. Blake, 8 Moore, 586.

So, by substituting the words "perpetual advowsons" for those of "tithes to rectories belonging," &c. if the words "perpetual advowsons" are only inserted in the deed to lead the uses. Williamson, dem.; Meggison, ten.; Beaumont, vouchee, 4 Moore, 49.

So, a recovery, suffered in 1780, was allowed to be amended by the insertion of three-fifths of five messuages instead of one, to make it conform with the deed. Hind, dem.; Radden, ten.; Hawkins, vouchee, 1 Dowl. P. C. 269; 1 M. & Scott, 515.

So, in the case of a fine, by inserting the words "one-fourth part," in conformity with the deed to lead the uses. Wilmot v. Clarke, 8 Taunt. 335.

In the deed to lead the uses of a recovery, the premises were described as a moiety or halfen-deal of messuage, and three hundred acres of meadow; in the recovery, the words "or halfen-deal" were omitted; the court allowed the recovery to be amended, by the insertion of those words after the word "moiety." Manners, vouchee, 5 M. & P. 378.

5. Description of Quantity of Land.

The court will not allow an amendment by increasing the quantity of land, if the deed to lead the uses contains sufficient terms to show that it was intended to pass; nor is it necessary that the exact admeasurement should be inserted in such deed. Maryatt, dem.; Elmore, ten.; Shard, vouchee, 6 Moore, 50.

They refused to increase the number of acres, the deed of uses being general, and the intent only proved by affidavit. Powell v. Peach, 2 W. Black. 1202.

But, in another case, they allowed an amendment, by increasing the number of acres in one-third part of an estate, when correct fines had been levied of the other two-thirds. Anon 8 Taunt. 74.

So, they will allow amendment by inserting more acres of land, there being an excess of acres of wood and meadow, and too few of land. Strong, dem.; Still, ten.; Drake, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 155.

So, where, in the deed to lead the uses, the lands were described as 100 acres, more or less, and a recovery was suffered for 110, the court admitted it to be amended by increasing it to 120, on the ground that it would not augment such lands beyond the terms of the deed. Gwynne, dem.; Heathcote, ten.; Camfield, vouchee, 2 Moore, 163.

So, the court permitted, in a recovery of manors, an amendment by the insertion of messuages originally parcel of the manor, but severed by a settlement, and omitted to be named in the recovery; the vouchee being tenant in tail still alive, and the messuages intended to pass. Carew, vouchee, 1 Taunt. 355.

So, by increasing the quantities of specific closes, described in the deed as being of a less number than the true quantities. Alexander, dem.; Bleasdale, ten.; Hanford, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 734.

So, by increasing the number of 17 messuages, which had originally been all, but increased to 47 by having been subdivided. Horne, dem.; Rossiter, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 366.

But where a recovery, fifty years old, was found, by mistake, to comprise only 2 messuages and 20 acres of land, instead of 6 messuages and 300 acres of land, the blunder being wholly unexplained and unaccounted for: the court refused to permit an amendment by substituting the larger quantity; and said that they had already in many cases extended their indulgence quite far enough; but no case had gone so far; and if they permitted the amendment, the consequence would be to cast it on the court to find out, on imperfect evidence, the meaning of the parties, after sixty years had elapsed, and to supersede the necessity of using any degree of accuracy whatever in preparing conveyances. Collingwood, dem.; Wilmet, ten.; Hose, vouchee, 1 B. & B. 83.

A mistake having been made in the concord, in the number of messuages to be conveyed, the writ of covenant was altered in conformity to it, but was afterwards restored to its original form. The court refused to amend the concord by the writ of covenant so altered, but left the party to his remedy by a new caption, or by re-acknowledging the concord. Clutterbuck v. Brabant, 1 Marsh. 406; 6 Taunt. 1.

So, where a fine was passed of 30 acres of land, 12 of meadow, and 25 of pasture, and, in the deed to lead the uses, the estate was described as consisting of 35 acres in the whole; the court refused to amend by increasing the quantity of each species of land, so as to make each cover the whole quantity intended to be conveyed. Bartrem v. Towne, 1 Marsh. 446; 6 Taunt. 58.

So, a fine cannot be amended by inserting more acres, where there was no other warrant for the amendment than the fact that the closes enumerated by name in the deed were therein stated respectively to contain, and did contain, acres, the aggregate whereof was more than the number of acres comprised in the fine. Stone v. Ashby, 5 Taunt. 616.

So, where a recovery of Easter, 3 Geo. 1, was passed of one hundred acres of land, thirty acres of meadow, fifty acres of pasture, and ten acres of wood; in the deed to lead the uses, the estate was described as containing one hundred and seventy acres, more or less; and also a mill and lands containing fourteen acres, more or less; and, in a prior deed, it was stated to contain two hundred acres, more or less. On a recent admeasurement, the estate appeared to contain two hundred and nine acres. The court refused an amendment to increase the quantity of land, according to the late survey, as it exceeded the quantity in the deed to lead the uses; and held, that, as the recovery was passed so long since, it was necessary to account for the modern as well as the ancient possession, and ascertain the successive possessors, and whether the estate had been divided or gone together since the recovery was passed. Kenrick, dem.; Owen, ten.; Owen, vouchee, 3 Moore, 70.

A. was tenant for life of two moieties of common field land, called Blackacre, with remainders to B. and C. in common in tail. A. was also tenant in fee of other common field land, called Whiteacre. The commissioners under an inclosure act allotted to A. Greenacre in lieu of Blackacre and Whiteacre conjointly, without distinguishing the portion allotted in right of each. A. devised all his land to D. in fee, and died. Covenant upon a conveyance by B. and C. to D. of all the land allotted to A. in right of Blackacre, and a recovery suffered of the entirety of certain acres, fewer than were comprised in Greenacre. Burrough, J., held, that all the estate of the tenants in tail was comprised in that recovery, and the court refused to amend it by the insertion of more acres. Barlow, dem.; Macdougall, ten.; Barlow, vouchee, 1 B. & B. 69.

Where, in a deed to make a tenant to the præcipe, lands were described as a farm generally, without particularising their quality or quantity, and in the recovery the parcels were set out as amounting to 50 acres; but on a late admeasurement they had been found to comprise 70; the court allowed the quantity to be increased to that number, the terms of the deed being large enough to comprise all the lands of which the farm consisted at the time the recovery was suffered; and as the lands in question formed part of the farm, the additional twenty acres would not increase it beyond the terms of the deed. Battisall, dem.; Turner, ten.; Cann, vouchee; 9 Moore, 591.

The court will not amend a recovery by inserting more parcels, unless the true number of messuages, tofts, &c., be distinctly and precisely sworn to. Vanderzee, dem.; Ince, ten.; Lawson, vouchee, 5 Taunt. 632.

6. Writ of Entry and other Proceedings.

The court would amend a mistake in the writ of entry in a common recovery. Cross, dem.; Grey, ten.; Pead, vouchee, 1 B. & P. 137.

So, they would allow the return to a writ of entry to be amended by adapting it to the time of taking the acknowledgment. Hind, dem.; Milne, ten.; 5 Taunt. 259.

So, the return-day of the writ returnable in Michaelmas term was amended, and the recovery allowed to pass as of Hilary term following. Bruin, dem.; Blizard, ten.; Miller, vouchee, 8 Taunt. 197.

A writ of entry was returnable, and appearance entered thereon in Michaelmas term. The count was intituled of Hilary term, and was delivered on the 10th February. The court set aside the count for irregularity, and refused to allow it to be amended. Raoules, dem.; Lawrence, ten.; 11 Moore, 338.

Although the court will not enlarge the return of a writ of summons. Gibbons v. Stevenson, 2 W. Black. 1223.

Even for the purpose of making a term intervene between the teste and the return. Barnard v. Woodcock, 2 W. Black, 1201.

Yet they will alter the return by inserting a subsequent return-day, if there are several vouchees residing in different counties, and one of them could not sign it until a day after it was first made returnable. Bramwell, dem.; Winter, ten.; Osborne, vouchee, 7 Moore, 269.

Recovery amended by abridging the returns under 24 Geo. 2, c. 48, s. 8, 9, where there were not four returns between the return of the first writ of summons, and the death of the second vouchee, who was tenant for life, and though the commissioners for taking the warrant of attorney of the first vouchee had omitted to indorse the usual return. Hill, dem.; Raymond, ten.; Law, vouchee, 4 Bing. 425.

The caption of the warrant of attorney in a recovery may be amended, as it is not an integral part of the instrument. James, dem.; Williams, ten.; James, vouchee, 1 Moore, 130; 7 Taunt. 434.

Where in the warrant of attorney, instead of the usual words, "to gain or lose in a plea of land," those of "in a plea of trespass" had been inserted by mistake, it was allowed to be amended by substituting "land" for "trespass." Palmer, dem.; Meredith, ten.; Eddington, vouchee, 8 Moore, 339; 1 Bing. 343.

A recovery amended in the return of the writ of seisin. Watson v. Lockley, 2 Wils. 2.

The writ of dedimus potestatem for a recovery must not be directed to and returned by the demandant. But the recovery may be amended in fieri, by substituting a new commissioner for the demandant, and retaking the acknowledgment. Rawle, dem.; Pyke, ten.; Miller, vouchee, 5 Taunt. 747.

7. Time and Mode of Application.

No motion can be made at the bar of C. P. on the last day of any term, touching the amendment of any fine or recovery, or any of the proceedings therein. Reg. Gen. H. T. 60 Geo. 3, 4 Moore, 320; 2 B. & B. 122; 5 Taunt. 856; S. P. Fox, dem.; Benbow, ten.; Gower (Earl), vouchee, 2 Marsh. 328; 6 Taunt. 652; 1 Moore, 96.

It was ordered by the court that in future, on a motion to amend a fine or recovery, an affidavit must be produced, stating that the possession has followed the execution of such instrument. Bisgood, dem.; Brutton, ten.; Ivee, vouch., 6 Moore, 259.

And in the case of fines, connecting the fine with the deed produced to warrant the amendment. Fawcett v. Lowe, 6 Taunt. 432.

In a recovery the court permitted an amendment, upon an affidavit by the demandant (who was not born at the date of the recovery) of the facts, and of his belief that tithes were intended to pass, and that they were included in the deed. Collyer, dem.; Chesterfield (Lord), vouchee, 4 Taunt. 226.

But an unqualified affidavit, that the possession had gone with the title for a period long before the knowledge of the deponent, not stating the grounds of his belief, is not sufficient. Noble, dem., 7 Taunt. 697.

The court will not allow a recovery to be amended by inserting the words "advowson and tithes," although the deed to lead the uses contains the general word hereditaments, without an affidavit, stating how the presentations have gone from the time of suffering the recovery, and by whom the last was made, and whether prior to or since the recovery. Holmes, dem.; Seton, ten.; Foreman, vouchee, 10 Moore, 585; 3 Bing. 176.

In applying to amend a recovery, it is not necessary to show the title to the court further back than a seisin in tail of the vouchee. Simcox, dem.; Wakeford, ten.; Marshall, vouchee, 4 Taunt. 155.

The court will not grant leave to amend a recovery on affidavit only; it must appear on the face of the deed to lead the uses, that there is sufficient ground for an amendment. Pearson, dem.; Pearson, ten.; Brougham, vouchee, 1 H. Black. 73.

The material part of the deed which is to authorize the court to amend a fine or recovery, must be read aloud in the court by one of the serjeants at law, or by the officer of the court, but not by the attorney for the amendment. Hurst, dem.; Foster, ten.; 5 Taunt. 379; S. P. Harris v. Davis, 1 Chit. 625.

Where the deed to make the tenant to the precept is lost, a recovery is not to be amended by an attested copy of that deed, nor by an office copy of the enrolment of a deed; but it may be amended by the enrolment itself being brought into court. Dawney, dem.; Newsome, ten.; Doone (Lord), vouchee, 4 Taunt. 798; S. P. King, dem.; Shepherd, ten.; Germain, vouchee, 10 Moore, 251.

In one case a fine was amended by a lost deed to lead the uses, upon inspection of the draft, and of a certified copy of the memorial of the deed (the land being in a register county,) and on affidavit that the deed contained the matter for amendment, and of the intent. Frost v. Hale, 7 Taunt. 79.

The heir of the conusor may be heard, to oppose a fine being amended to his disherison. Lambe v. Reaston, 5 Taunt. 207; 1 Marsh. 23.

Remainder-man in tail may be heard to show cause against the amendment of a recovery. Lancaster, dem.; Wilmot, ten.; Boone, vouchee, 7 Taunt. 352.

The officer of the court of Great Session having omitted to enter of record a recovery duly suffered at bar, in 1804, the court of C. P. ordered it to be done nunc pro tunc, under sect. 27 of 1 Will. 4, c. 70, which gives that court the like power to amend a recovery of the court of Great Session, as if it had been suffered in C. P. Evans, dem.; Griffith, ten.; Jones, vouchee, 9 Bing. 311; 2 M. & Scott, 383.

VIII. TERMS OF AMENDMENT.

All rules to amend are upon payment of costs. Anon. Lofft, 155.

The terms of amending a record by inserting a special memorandum of the day of filing the bill, after error brought, are payment of costs and allowing the defendant to plead de novo on terms. Minchin v. Cope, 1 Chit. 45; S. P. Dickenson v. Plaisted, 7 T. R. 474.

Held in C. P. that the motion to amend a writ, must be made before showing cause on the motion to set it aside, or the costs of the latter motion will be given. Anon. 1 Chit. 350 (a.)

A plaintiff having been nonsuited at Nisi Prius on the ground of a variance between the contract set out and that proved, the court granted a new trial, with leave to amend the declaration generally on payment of costs, with liberty to the defendant to plead de novo or demur. Williams v. Pratt, 5 B. & A. 896.

Where a plaintiff replied a bad replication to a sham plea of set-off, the court of K. B. allowed him to amend without payment of costs. Solemons v. Lyon, 1 East, 369.

After a party has once amended on a demurrer, the court will not give him leave to amend again on a second demurrer. Kinder v. Paris, 2 H. Black. 561.

After a demurrer seriously argued, the court would not permit the plaintiff, in an action against the sheriff, to amend. Cooke v. Birt, 5 Taunt. 765; 1 Marsh. 333.

And where a plea was held bad on argument on a special demurrer, the court of C. P. refused amendment, although it was stated that the matter of the plea was a bona fide statement. Went v. Reece, 7 Moore, 244; 1 Bing. 18.

But a plea in bar, by one sued in a wrong name, which was held bad on demurrer, was allowed to be amended. Jackson v. Ford, 3 Wils. 413.

So, leave was given to amend pleas in bar, in replevin, after argument. Mattravers v. Fosset, 3 Wils. 295.

If a defendant obtain leave to amend his pleadings on payment of costs, it does not seem necessary under the words "usual terms," that he should be prepared to go to trial at the ensuing sittings after the then term. Edmonds v. Walter, 2 Chit. 292.

After trial and verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant was allowed to amend his pleas, and have a new trial, on payment of costs. Storer v. Gordon, 2 Chit. 27.

Under the rule of Michaelmas 1654, s. 17, a party has a right to amend after plea in abatement on payment of costs, but the court, or a judge, have a discretion to allow him to amend without costs. Wall v. Lyon, 9 Bing. 411; 2 M. & Scott, 579; 1 Dowl. P. C. 715.

I. INSTRUMENT OF CREATION.

1. Validity generally.

By statutes 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 6, and 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 8, all contracts for annuities with infants are utterly void.

An annuity can only be where the principal is irrecoverably gone, and is to be satisfied by periodical payments; therefore, a bond conditioned for the payment of a sum to the executors of the obligee, and interest in the mean time to him, is not an annuity bond. Winter v. Mousley, 2 B. & A. 802.

Devises in tail male granted an annuity for 21 years, if they should so long live, to the remainder-man, and in case of his death, to his children, or, if he had none, to his wife. The remainder-man, his wife and child, died during the term:—Held, in debt, by the administrator of the remainder-man and his child, that the deed was not an absolute grant of an annuity for 21 years, but was determinable by the death of the remainder-man, his child and wife; and, therefore, that the plaintiff could not recover the arrears of the annuity in respect of either of his intestates. Barford v. Stuckey, 5 D. & R. 118; 8 Moore, 88; 5 Moore, 23; 1 B. & B. 333; 1 Bing. 225.

An instrument reciting that it had been agreed to sell an annuity, secured upon property in possession of the grantor, but containing no words of present grant, cannot be sued upon in a court of law, even though it were enrolled. In re Locke, 2 D. & R. 603.

It is no objection to one of the deeds securing an annuity, that it assigns "the salary of the grantor of so much per annum," without saying what salary it is. Watts v. Millard, 5 T. R. 598.

The several covenant of a grantor of an annuity is not avoided by the infancy of another who grants in the same deed. Haw v. Ogle, 4 Taunt. 10.

A covenant in an annuity deed made prior to the stat. 46 Geo. 3, c. 65, s. 115, (which stat. has a retrospective operation,) whereby the grantor of the annuity covenanted to pay the same on the days and times, &c. without any deduction whatever out of the same, or any part thereof, for or in respect of the then present or any then future property tax, is void in respect of its obligation on the grantor not to deduct the property tax, but not in respect of the payment of the annuity, subject to such deduction. Readshaw v. Balders, 4 Taunt. 57.

A deed granting an annuity within the time included by relation back in that act, reciting the agreement for the purchase at a certain price of a certain annuity, free from the property or income tax, and covenanting for the payment of it without any deduction in respect of the property or income tax, or other parliamentary taxes, &c. is not void in toto, but only to the extent of such disallowance. Howe v. Synge, 15 East, 440.

The obligor of a bond without penalty, conditioned for the payment to A. M. during her life of 20*l.* a year, bequeathed to his wife 30*l.* a year for her life, and devised to defendant all his freehold messuages, &c. in trust, to educate his son until twenty-one, and to account for profits at that time; provided that if his wife should be living when his son attained full age, the devisee should retain and hold in trust such of his estates as would secure to his wife the said 30*l.* a year. Testator's wife died during his lifetime, and testator afterwards died, leaving his son surviving, who afterwards died under age:—Held, that the estate of the devisee ceased on the death of testator's son; and that the devisee was not liable to A. M. for any arrears of her annuity which had accrued due since his death, although the rents and profits exceeded the annuity. Morant v. Gough, 1 M. & R. 41; 7 B. & C. 206.

Proviso that an annuity should cease if a lady should associate, continue to keep company with, or cohabit, or criminally correspond with J. F.: all intercourse whatever, though the most innocent, is within the terms of the deed. Dormer (Ld.) v. Knight, 1 Taunt. 417.

T., seised for life, granted an annuity to W., and, to secure the annuity, in consideration of money, "granted, bargained, sold, and demised" to F. certain premises for a term of years, upon trust, in case the annuity should be in arrear, to raise the annuity by distress, or by sale or mortgage of the premises: afterwards T. granted another annuity to H., with a power of distress upon the same premises. H. distrained and avowed the taking for arrears of the annuity under his deed: the tenant set up the demise to

F., but did not show under whom, he the tenant, was in possession, or that F. had entered upon the premises, or had elected to treat the demise as operating by the statute of uses:—Held, that the demise to F. operated as at common law, and without an entry was no bar to the distress by H. Miller v. Green, 2 C. & J. 142; 8 Bing. 92.

Deed reciting an agreement for sale of a life interest in stock, a memorial being registered under the annuity act, and there being a covenant to pay any deficiency beyond the produce to the extent of the annual sum specified, and a proportionable share in case of death between the days of payment: this is an annuity, not a sale. Hood v. Burlton, 2 Ves. jun. 29; 4 Bro. C. C. 421.

2. Consideration for.

What a good Consideration.—Money lent and paid at different times for the education and advancement of the defendant, is a good consideration for the grant of an annuity, and is sufficiently expressed, in the deeds for securing the annuity, under the description of "money lent and advanced, and also paid, laid out, and expended, to and for the maintenance, education, and advancement in the world of the defendant." Kelfe v. Ambrose, 7 T. R. 551.

A covenant by the husband to secure his wife an annuity during her life, in case she should survive him, is a sufficient consideration to support a grant of an annuity from the wife's father. Ex parte Draycott, 2 Glyn. & J. 283.

Statement of Consideration in Deed.—By 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 3, in every deed, instrument, or other assurance, for granting annuities or rent-charges, the consideration and names of parties advancing it must have been set out fully. This statute was repealed by 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, which, although it does not contain a provision to this effect, requires that the names of the parties beneficially interested must be stated in cases where they are not the parties to whom the annuity is granted.

Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, it was not sufficient if the mode of payment of the consideration was not truly stated. Glosse v. Mount, 7 T. R. 390; and see 1 B. & P. 63, n.

If the consideration be paid by an agent, it must have been so stated in the deed; it was not sufficient to state that it was paid by the principal. Dalmer v. Barnard, 7 T. R. 248.

But if the consideration of an annuity be paid to the agent of the grantor, the name of such agent need not be inserted in the annuity deed. Crawford v. Phillips, 2 N. R. 141; 9 Ves. jun. 215.

Although where it was paid by the clerk of the bankers of the grantee:—Held, that the name of such clerk ought to be stated in the deed. Askew v. Mackreth, 1 N. R. 214.

If a bond, and warrant of attorney to confess judgment, be given to secure an annuity, the warrant of attorney need not express the consideration, if the bond do. Hodges v. Money, 4 T. R. 500.

If a bond to secure an annuity contain a recital of the payment of the consideration, and the annuity has been paid for several years, the actual payment of the consideration will be presumed though there be no receipt indorsed, and though the subscribing witness have no recollection of the subject. Haslam v. Diggles, 1 C. & P. 398—Best.

The court of C. P. set aside the securities for an annuity after a lapse of six years, for two of which it had been paid, on the ground that the consideration money did not belong to W., as stated in the securities, but to C.; and that the name of the person on whose behalf the money was paid was not truly set forth in the receipt thereon, C. being alive, and having claimed the consideration money and the annuity as his own. Williams v. Hackin, 8 Taunt. 435.

3. Actions on.

Debt will lie for an annuity granted by the defendant to the plaintiff in consideration of faithful services for life. Hope v. Coleman, 2 Wils. 221.

Debt does not lie for the arrears of an annuity issuing out of lands, and payable to the annuitant for life, although it is not stated in the declaration that the grantor had a freehold in the premises out of which it was payable; as it must be inferred that he had such an interest where nothing appears to the contrary. Kelly v. Clubbe, 6 Moore, 335; 3 B. & B. 130.

Debt does not lie at the common law, nor by statute 8 Ann. c. 14, for the arrears of an annuity or yearly rent devised payable out of lands to A. during the life of B., to whom the lands are devised for life, B. paying the same thereout, so long as the estate of freehold continues. Webb v. Jiggs, 4 M. & S. 113.

Bonds for the payment of annuities, or of money by instalments, are within the equity of the statute 3 Anne, c. 16, s. 13. Wilkinson v. Jordan, 1 Tidd's Prac. 588.

If an instalment of an annuity secured by bond be not paid on the day, the bond is forfeited, and the penalty is the debt in law. Judd v. Evans, 6 T. R. 399.

In an action on an annuity bond, a plea stating that a memorial of the bond had been inrolled, and, after reciting the memorial, that it was not a good and sufficient memorial according to the form of the statute, without stating in what particulars it was defective, or alleging that no other memorial had been inrolled, is bad on special demurrer. Simmons v. Hunt, 1 Marsh. 155.

Debt on bond conditioned for payment of an annuity of 175*l.* quarterly, during the life of Lady G.; pleas, payment of the annuity at the days, and payment of the arrears after the days in the condition; replication, that the defendant did not pay the annuity or the arrears in manner and form as defendant alleged, but on the contrary, plaintiff suggested that during the life of Lady G., 87*l.* 10*s.* for two quarterly payments became due and was still in arrear, and concluded to the country: on demurrer, the court of C. P. seemed to think the replication bad, and gave the defendant leave to amend on payment of costs. De la Rue v. Stewart, 2 N. R. 362.

Where, to debt on an annuity bond, defendant pleaded no such memorial as the statute requires, to which plaintiff replied, that there was a memorial which contained the names of the parties, &c. and the consideration for which the annuity was granted; and the defendant rejoined, that the consideration was untruly alleged by the memorial to have been paid to both obligors, for that one of them did not receive any part of it: rejoinder held bad, first, because it was a departure from the plea; secondly, because the fact alleged respecting the memorial did not contradict the replication; for the consideration might have been paid to the other obligor on account of himself and the co-obligor, or to a stranger for them both. Praed v. Cumberland (Duchess), 4 T. R. 585. Affirmed in Cam. Scac. 2 H. Black. 280.

In a cognizance justifying the taking of goods for arrears of an annuity, the plaintiff pleaded that a memorial of every deed, bond, instrument, and assurance, whereby the annuity was secured, was not duly inrolled. The defendant replied, that a memorial of every deed, &c., whereby the annuity was secured, was within twenty days of the execution thereof inrolled, setting out the memorial verbatim, and concluding with a verification by record:—Held, on demurrer, that the conclusion was proper. Richardson v. Tomkies, 2 M. & Scott, 56; 9 Bing. 51.

In ejectment upon the assignment of a term to secure an annuity, a proper memorial of the annuity deeds will be presumed, till the contrary be shown. Doe d. Griffin v. Mason, 3 Camp. 7—Ellenborough.

II. INROLMENT.

1. Necessity for Inrolment.

(a) Statutes.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 1, a memorial of every deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent-charge should be granted for one or more life or lives, or for any term of years, or greater estate determinable on one or more life or lives, must, within twenty days of the execution of such deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, have been inrolled in Chancery, otherwise the instrument was to be null and void.

By sect. 2, before any judgment should be entered upon any warrant of attorney for recovering or securing the payment of any annuity or rent-charge then already granted, and before execution sued out, or action brought on such judgment, a like memorial must have been inrolled.

Sect. 6, provided that the act was not to extend to annuities or rent-charges given by will or marriage settlement, or for the advancement of children; nor to annuities or rent-charges secured upon lands of equal or greater annual value, whereof the grantor was seised in fee simple or in fee tail in possession, or secured by the actual transfer of stock, the dividends whereof were of equal or greater value; nor to voluntary annuities granted without regard to pecuniary consideration; nor to annuities or rent-charges granted by corporations, or under any authority or trust enacted by act of parliament; nor to annuities not exceeding 10*l.*, unless there be more than one from the same grantor to or in trust for the same grantees.

[This statute was repealed by 53 Geo. 3. c. 141, and other enactments substituted, but as it is still applicable to all annuities granted prior to the 14th July 1813, it is necessary to be stated as well as the cases determined upon it. By the statute 53 Geo. 3. c. 141, s. 2, every such instrument as above specified must be inrolled within thirty days after execution, otherwise it is null and void to all intents and purposes. The statute also contains an exception of particular annuities, precisely similar to the one contained in the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, except that the annuities secured on landed property are extended to freehold or copyhold or customary lands, whether in Great Britain, Ireland, or in the colonies; and such annuities of which the grantor had no notice, are not to be considered with respect to the value: the statute also uses the words "money's worth" as well as "pecuniary consideration," in excepting voluntary annuities; and does not except annuities under 10*l.*

(b) As regards Nature of Instrument.

What are Assurances requiring Inrolment.—The documents required to be inrolled by 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, are those to which the grantor is a party, or which are entered into by a third person at his instance and request, or on his behalf; therefore, where a third person, unconnected with the grantor, guaranteed, in consideration of a certain commission, the payment of an annuity to the grantee:—Held, that such guarantee need not be inrolled. Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 B. & A. 673.

A bond given by a third person, to secure the payment of an annuity, must be registered under the annuity act, as well as the deeds made by the grantor himself. Rosher v. Hurdie, 5 T. R. 678.

Deeds to secure annuities are within the annuity act as well as deeds granting them. Hood v. Burlton, 2 Ves. jun. 29; 4 Bro. C. C. 421; S. P. Bolton (Duke) v. Williams, 4 Bro. C. C. 297; 2 Ves. jun. 154.

The statute, however, does not require any thing further than a memorial of every deed given for securing an annuity. Richardson v. Tomkies, 2 M. & Scott, 56; 1 Bing. 51.

An agreement to grant an annuity is not within the annuity act. Nield v. Smith, 14 Ves. jun. 491.

So, a memorial of a contract to give good and sufficient landed security for payment of an annuity, as a consideration for the conveyance of a real estate, need not be inrolled. Jackson v. Lever, 3 Bro. C. C. 605.

Quære, whether a fine, if levied before the memorial is inrolled, is an assurance, within the meaning of the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, required to be memorialized. Bradford v. Burland, 14 East, 453.

It is not necessary that the admittance on surrender of copyholds be memorialized; although the surrenderees were admitted immediately on the surrender. Doe d. Naylor v. Stephens, 1 Price, 38.

Where a memorial of an annuity omitted to register certain bonds, whereby the grantor, for whose life the annuity was granted, bound himself to pay the grantee a certain sum if he went abroad in a military capacity during three several years following the grant of the annuity:—Held, that the annuity was thereby vacated; and the court set aside the warrant of attorney, and judgment, given amongst other instruments for securing the annuity. Chawner v. Whaley, 3 East, 500.

A policy of assurance on the life of the grantor of an annuity, assigned as a further security for the annuity, need not be mentioned in the memorial, not being a pecuniary consideration within the meaning of the statute 53 Geo. 3, c. 141. Faircloth v. Gurney, 2 M. & Scott, 823; 9 Bing. 456, 622; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724.

Assignment of Annuities.—An annuity bond was assigned to secure another annuity of less amount: the court of C. P. held that the second annuitant was not bound to inrol a memorial of the first bond. Henderson v. Glencairn (Countess), 2 Taunt. 235.

So, also, where there is a memorial inrolled of all the original securities, it is not necessary that there should be also one of the assignment of an annuity. Dixon v. Birch, 2 H. Black. 307. And see Bromley v. Greathead, 2 H. Black. 307, n. But see Bolton (Duke) v. Williams, 2 Ves. jun. 139; 4 Bro. C. C. 297.

Instruments of further Charge.—An annuity being duly registered according to the statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 26:—Held, it was not necessary that an equitable mortgage taken as a further security at a subsequent period should be registered. Ex parte Price, Buck, 22; 3 Madd. 132.

Where A. granted an annuity secured by bond and warrant of attorney, and two years after deposited a lease as a further security for the payment of the annuity:—Held, that the subsequent security need not be inrolled. Id.

An annuity granted by A. to B., and which was regularly registered, was redeemed by virtue of a clause of redemption in the deeds, when the deeds were delivered up to the grantor uncanceled; and he and the attorney for the grantee agreed, that if, at any future time, the former should wish to borrow money on the same terms, those deeds should be given as a security: on a subsequent application by the grantor, the attorney advanced the same money on having the same deeds delivered to him; but because this re-grant of the annuity was not registered, the court set aside the annuity, and ordered the deeds to be cancelled, &c. Hammond v. Foster, 5 T. R. 635.

A., by two several deeds, granted to B. two annuities charged on certain estates of which A. was tenant for life, and further secured by warrant of attorney, and an insurance on the life of A., and memorials of these annuities were duly inrolled. Afterwards, by deed, A. granted another annuity to B. charged upon the same estates, and also upon another estate to which A. was likewise entitled, and effected a further insurance on his life. By this deed A. also charged the two former annuities upon the last-mentioned estate. And he conveyed his interest in all the estates to a trustee in trust for securing the three annuities. The three annuities were further secured by a covenant in this deed, on the part of the grantor, to authorize and permit his deputy in an office held by him to pay a yearly sum towards the annuities; and by a covenant for payment of extra premiums of insurance. A memorial of the grant of the last-mentioned annuity was inrolled, but no further or additional memorial was inrolled as to the two first-mentioned annuities, with regard to the charge of them on the additional estate, and the additional securities for them contained in the last-mentioned deed; nor in the memorial inrolled of the third annuity was any notice taken of the additional securities for the two first annuities:—Held, that it was not necessary under the annuity act to inrol any memorial of the further or collateral securities for the two first annuities. Aston, v. Gwinnell, 3 Y. & J. 136.

Other Cases.]—Where tenant for life conveyed estates to trustees for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live, in trust to raise money by the grant of annuities for his life; and afterwards he and the trustees granted an annuity to one by deed, reciting the former conveyance to the trustees; it is not necessary to inrol a memorial of the trust-deed. O'Callaghan v. Ingilby, (Bart.), 9 East, 135.

Where judgment had been entered up on a warrant of attorney to secure an annuity, it was set aside because there was no memorial, though it was omitted at the request of the grantor; and the court refused to take the warrant of attorney off the file. Axon, 2 Chit. 34.

By 3 Geo. 4. c. 92, s. 2, reciting, that doubts had arisen whether, under the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, the omission to inrol any one of the assurances does not vitiate the whole transaction, notwithstanding the inrolment of another instrument, it is enacted, that every instrument granting an annuity, of which a memorial shall be inrolled, notwithstanding the omission to inrol any other instrument for securing such annuity, shall be valid: provided, s. 3, that no additional validity is given in such case to the instrument.

Pecuniary Consideration under stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 26.]—The annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. as appears from the whole purview of it, is confined throughout to annuities granted upon pecuniary consideration, though the first clause, in the terms of it, requires a memorial of every annuity bond, &c. to be inrolled: it is not enough therefore, for the defendant to plead generally to an action on a bond conditioned for the payment of an annuity, the consideration whereof does not appear upon the face of the bond or condition set forth upon oyer, that it was sealed and delivered after the passing of the act, and that no memorial of it was inrolled, without showing that the consideration was pecuniary; but such general plea is bad on demurrer. Horn v. Horn, 7 East, 529; 3 Smith, 522.

Under that statute the consideration must be something paid in order to render registration necessary. Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 790.

The following are cases under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, in which it was held, that no memorial was necessary, the consideration not being a pecuniary consideration within the statute:—

Grantee's giving up business to grantor. Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 790.

Grantee's resigning situation as master of an academy. Hutton v. Lewis, 5 T. R. 639.

Even though there was also an agreement to assign furniture at an appraised value, and to lend money at interest. Id.

Grantee (a mother) selling her business and advancing the proceeds with other money to grantor (her son), to set him up in business, it not appearing that the annuity was stipulated for at the time of the advance. Hick v. Keats (in error), 6 D. & R. 68; 4 B. & C. 69; 5 Moore, 629.

Grantee's resigning her lands and freehold premises to grantor, though part of the consideration was book-debts and stock in trade. Doe d. Johnston v. Phillips, 1 Taunt. 356.

Freehold Consideration under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26.]—An annuity, secured on lands in fee of equal annual value, need not be registered under the statute, though the annuity was also secured upon leasehold property. Ex parte Michell, 2 East, 137.

A., who was tenant for life, with remainder to trustees, &c. remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to himself in fee, suffered, together with B., his only son, a recovery, and declared the uses to such person, and for such estate, &c., as they should jointly appoint; they jointly granted an annuity, and appointed and granted the lands to C. for a term of years in trust for the grantee:—Held, that this case came within the exception of the act. Halsey v. Hales (Bart.) 7 T. R. 194.

An equity of redemption is within the exception in that act. Tucker v. Thurston, 17 Ves. jun. 131.

So, an annuity, granted by one who was mortgagor in fee in possession of lands on which it was secured, of greater annual value than the interest of the mortgage, is within the exception, as a grant of an annuity by one who was seized in fee simple; the seisin in fee there excepted, extending, by parity of reason, to equitable as well as legal estates. Amburst v. Skynner, 12 East, 263.

So, of one who was seized in fee tail of a similar equity of redemption. Cumming v. Twysden, 12 East, 272, n.; S. P. Shrapnel v. Vernon, 2 Bro. C. C. 268.

A surety, who charges his estate in fee simple, of which he was seized in possession at the time of granting an annuity, with the payment of it, and which estate is of greater annual value than the annuity, is a grantor within the meaning of the exception. Darwin v. Lincoln, 5 B. & A. 444.

Pecuniary Consideration, or Money's Worth, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141.]—The statute 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, applies only to annuities granted for pecuniary consideration; therefore, where by the trusts of a marriage settlement, a father agreed to settle 10,000*l.* upon his daughter, in trust, to pay the interest to the husband during his life, and the father died without having paid the principal money to the trustees; and the husband having agreed with the executors to accept 5,000*l.* and an annuity of 125*l.* for life, in lieu of the 10,000*l.*:—Held, that such annuity did not require inrolment. Blake v. Attersoll, 4 D. & R. 549; 2 B. & C. 875.

Nor does a bond require inrolment under that statute, which recites in the condition, that the plaintiff was entitled to an interest in certain veins of coal for his life, and that he, by indentures of even date therewith, had assigned such interest to the defendants, who, in consideration thereof, had agreed to pay him an annuity for his life, and for the payment of which the bond was conditioned. James v. James, 5 Moore, 479; 2 B. & B. 702; S. P. Harrison v. Smitheringale, 5 Moore, 481.

Where there is a fair and bona fide sale of an interest in land, and the consideration in part or in whole is an annuity to be paid to the vendor, the consideration for granting such annuity is not a pecuniary consideration, or money's worth, within the meaning of the statute. Id.

An annuity of 10*l.* was granted by a son to his parent, in consideration of their giving up to him a farm they had occupied, and the stock on it worth 300*l.*:—Held, that the annuity need not be inrolled. Tetley v. Tetley, 4 Bing. 214; 12 Moore, 441.

A. being indebted to B., it was agreed between them, that, in lieu of payment, A. should, by bond, secure the payment of an annuity to B.'s widow, after his decease, during the joint lives of A. and the widow. B. died in 1825, and in 1828 A. executed an annuity deed, pursuant to the agreement:—Held, that the deed did not require inrolment. Frost v. Frost, 3 B. & Adol. 612, n.

—By the annuity act, 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 10, no inrolment is necessary where the annuity is charged on freehold or copyhold lands equal to it in value, over and above any other annuity charged and secured on such lands. Such "other annuity," to be within the meaning of the act, must be directly and specifically charged on the lands, not merely secured in a manner which may, by possibility, affect them, as by judgment entered up on a warrant of attorney. Walford v. Marchant, 2 B. & Adol. 315.

Transfer of Stock under both Statutes.]—Annuities secured by the transfer of stock are excepted by both statutes, and require no inrolment; but this only extends to those cases where an actual transfer of the stock is made for the purpose of securing the annuity: therefore, if A., who is entitled for life to the dividends in certain stock standing in the names of trustees, grant an annuity to B., payable out of the dividends, and empower those trustees to pay B., the annuity must be registered. Hudson v. Skinner, 6 T. R. 596; S. P. Duff v. Atkinson, 8 Ves. jun. 577.

The want of a memorial is no objection, if it be not shown, by the party seeking to set aside the annuity, that the transfer was only a colour for an advance of money, to be raised by sale of the stock. Cumberland v. Kelley, 3 B. & Adol. 602.

A bona fide sale of dividends of stock is not within the act 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Browne v. Like, 14 Ves. jun. 302.

So an annuity, granted in consideration of a reversionary interest in stock, need not be inrolled. Brown v. Dowthwaite, 1 Madd. 446.

But an assignment of 150*l.*, part of the dividends of a sum of stock, of which the vendor was entitled for life, with a proviso that the purchaser should not receive any part of the dividends then growing due, but a proportionable part of the 150*l.*, is a grant of an annuity to that amount, and must be inrolled. Charretie v. Vause, 1 Sim. 153.

An annuity secured on dividends of stock, standing in trust, among other things, for the grantor for life, is not within the exception in the acts. Dupuis v. Edwards, 18 Ves. jun. 358.

So is a grant of a certain sum out of dividends, to which a feme covert is entitled to her separate use, and must therefore be inrolled. Hood v. Burlton, 4 Bro. C. C. 121; 2 Ves. jun. 29.

2. Time and Manner of Inrolment.

The first section of the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, requiring deeds, &c., to be inrolled within 20 days of the execution, &c., means within 20 days exclusive of the day of execution. Ex parte Fallon, 5 T. R. 283.

A memorial inrolled within 30 days after execution of the deed by the grantee, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, is good, though inrolled before execution by the grantor. Flight v. Buckridge, 3 Bing. 215; 11 Moore, 28; S. C. (in error), 9 D. & R. 113; 6 B. & C. 49.

It is not necessary that an annuity deed should be executed by all the parties to it, before the memorial is inrolled, pursuant to that statute. Id.

A trustee under an annuity deed executes after the memorial has been inrolled; a memorial of his subsequent execution need not be inrolled. Dec d. Delegal v. Holloway, 1 Stark. 431—Ellenborough.

If a correct memorial of an annuity deed be incorrectly inrolled for a time, and after some years the officer of the inrolment office discover and rectify the error before any proceedings had to vacate the annuity, the court, finding the inrolment right when they call for it, will not inquire when the entry was made. Garrick v. Williams, 3 Taunt. 540.

But it is a high misprision in an officer to alter the inrolment without the sanction of the court of Chancery. Id.

Quære, whether it be sufficient for the grantee of an annuity to carry a memorial to the inrolment office and pay for it, without insisting himself on seeing it inrolled, and comparing the inrolment with the original memorial. Id.

By 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 5, copies of instruments securing annuities may be obtained at the inrolment office, and the delivery of them enforced by a summons before a judge, to whom power is given to make orders for production.

3. What must be stated in the Memorial.

(a) Statutes.

The 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, required the memorials to state the day of the month and year when the deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, bore date, the names of all the parties, and for whom any of them were trustees, and the names of all the witnesses; the annual sum to be paid, and the names of the persons for whose life or lives the annuity was granted, and the consideration of granting the same. s. 1.

The 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, repealing that statute, requires a memorial of the date of every deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, of the names of all the parties, and of all the witnesses thereto, and of the person or persons for whose life or lives the annuity shall be granted, and of the person or persons by whom the same is to be beneficially received, the pecuniary consideration for granting the same, and the annual sum to be paid; and gives a form in which these circumstances, with such alterations as may be required, must be stated. s. 2.

The 3 Geo. 4, c. 92, reciting that doubts have arisen as to the construction of the last statute, enacts, that no further or other description of the subscribing witness or witnesses to any deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent-charge is or may be granted, is required in the memorial thereof, besides the names of all such witnesses.

And by the 7 Geo. 4, c. 75, reciting still further doubts, it is enacted and declared, that by the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, no further or other name or names of the subscribing witnesses to instruments, whereby annuities are granted, is or are required in the memorial thereof, besides the names of all such witnesses, as they shall appear signed to their attestations respectively of the execution of such instruments.

(b) As to Witnesses.

Under statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 26.]—By statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, the memorial ought to state the names of the witnesses to the respective instruments by which the annuity is secured; stating that all the instruments were attested by A., B., and C., or one of them, was considered not sufficient. Hart v. Lovelace, 6 T. R. 471.

It was not necessary that the memorial should contain the Christian names of the attesting witnesses at full length; and the memorial was sufficient if it stated them as they appeared signed to the attestation of the deed. Phillips v. Const, 3 Russ. 267; S. C. nom. Const v. Phillips, 4 D. & R. 344.

In this case the court of K. B. refused to set aside the annuity granted nearly twenty years since. Id.

Where the memorial stated, that "the bond, warrant of attorney, &c., given to secure the annuity, were witnessed by four persons," it meant that each of them was so witnessed; and when it appeared by the answer on oath of the assignee of the grantee, that three of the instruments were attested by two persons only, the court, on application, though at the distance of near 20 years, and after the principal parties and witnesses to the transaction were dead, set aside the warrant of attorney. Ex parte Makreth (Knt.), 2 East, 563.

At the time of executing an annuity deed, one R. W., the agent of J. C., the grantee, entered into an agreement for redemption, beginning thus:—"Memorandum—I undertake and agree," &c.; and concluding, "Witness my hand, R. W., agent for J. C.:" the memorial stated that J. C. entered into an agreement by R. W., his agent, and that it was witnessed by R. W.:—Held, that the memorial was sufficient. Cator v. Hoste, 2 B. & P. 557.

So it was sufficient to state that the securities were executed "in the presence of T. C. of" &c., without expressing that he subscribed his name as an attesting witness. Wallis v. Lade, 4 Taunt. 761.

Where the memorial of a deed between A., B., and C., stated that it was executed by A. and C. in the presence of E. and F., it was no objection that B. also executed it in the presence of the same parties; for it was sufficient if the memorial stated all the subscribing witnesses, without specifying what signatures they respectively attested. Orton v. Knight, 3 B. & P. 153.

An omission in the memorial of the names of witnesses to the execution by the trustees of a grant of freehold estates, to secure an annuity, was held no objection, provided the deed was in fact executed by the trustees, and in the presence of the witnesses who attested the execution of the several cestuis que trust, and such execution and attestation appeared accordingly on referring to the deed. Doe d. Naylor v. Stephens, 1 Price, 38.

Where the witnesses to the indenture and to the warrant of attorney were the same persons, it was sufficient to state them as witnesses to the former instrument, without repeating their names as witnesses to the warrant of attorney. Brown v. Rose, 1 Marsh, 478; 6 Taunt. 124.

And even though the omission had been fatal to the warrant of attorney, the other parts of the assurance would not have been affected by it. Id. And see 3 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 2.

It was not necessary to state in the memorial the names of the attorneys who were authorized to enter up judgment on the warrant of attorney. Id.

Under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141.]—By the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, the memorial must contain the description and places of residence of the witnesses to the annuity deed. Darwin v. Lincoln, 5 B. & A. 444.

And, therefore, where the subscribing witness to a warrant of attorney, given as a collateral security to secure an annuity, was described in the memorial as "C. R. clerk to W. A. of Gt. M.-St. in the county of M.;" it was held, that the memorial in this respect was not a compliance with the second section of the statute, as C. R. did not reside, but only attended at the office at Gt. M.-St. at the time, and the warrant of attorney was set aside. Smith v. Pritchard, 1 D. & R. 374; 5 B. & A. 717.

So where the memorial described one of the subscribing witnesses to the warrant of attorney by the initial of his christian name, instead of setting it out at length:—Held, not to be a compliance with the statute; and the court ordered the warrant of attorney for securing such annuity to be set aside. Cheek v. Jefferies, 3 D. & R. 185; 2 B. & C. 1; S. P. Metcalfe v. Strathmore (Earl.) 7 D. & R. 773; S. C. nom. Metcalfe v. Bowes, 5 B. & C. 258.

The statute requires all the names of the witnesses to be set out with such certainty that they may be found, if required, to give evidence of the due execution of the instruments. Id.

But, although by the schedule of that statute, it is required, that the witnesses shall be described in the memorial of an annuity as E. F. of ———, and G. H. of ———; where the witnesses to the deeds for securing the payment of an annuity were attorney's clerks:—Held, that they were properly described as "E. F. and G. H., clerks to J. G. of C.-street, in the county of M.," being the place where the latter carried on his business as an attorney; and that it was not necessary to describe them as of their residence or place of abode. St John v. Champneys (Bart.) 7 Moore, 382; 1 Bing. 77. And see stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Where the memorial described one of the subscribing witnesses as "G. M. Dance, of Cursitor-street, in the county of Middlesex, attorney at law," without setting out his christian names at full length, in compliance with the statute:

Held, a fatal objection in ejectment for the premises on which the annuity was secured. Doe d. Fox v. Bromley, 6 D. & R. 292.

If the witnesses to the deed are accurately described in the memorial, it is sufficient, though they did not see the parties execute. Flight v. Buckridge, 3 Bing. 215; 11 Moore, 28; S. C. (in error) 6 B. & 49; 9 D. & R. 113.

If the names of all the witnesses to the deed are inserted in the memorial, that is sufficient, without specifying the parties by whom the deed was executed in their presence. Id.

(c) Description of Instrument generally.

An indenture releasing one annuity, and granting another, is well described in the memorial as "a grant of annuity," within the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 2. Crowther v. Wentworth, 9 D. & R. 286; 6 B. & C. 306.

An annuity deed is properly described in the memorial as a "grant of an annuity," though it also contains an assignment of stock as a security. Browne v. Lee, 6 B. & C. 689; 9 D. & R. 701.

Where the memorial described the instrument by which it was secured as "an assignment of certain hereditaments," and it appeared that the instrument was in fact an under-lease:—Held, that, in popular language, such instrument was sufficiently described. Butler v. Capel, 3 D. & R. 485; 2 B. & C. 251. And see Wyatt v. Bاندell, 19 Ves. jun. 435.

Under the head "Nature of the Instrument," in the memorial, an annuity deed was described as an "assignment of dividends, and annuity deed to secure the same:—Held, that this was not so incorrect as to invalidate the memorial. Cane v. Lovelace, 2 B. & Adol. 767.

A memorial, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, of a bond, stating that A. & B. severally became bound, is not sufficient in law, if the bond be joint as well as several. Willey v. Cawthorne, 1 East, 398.

If it merely recite a bond as binding the obligor only, it is not cured by reciting the condition to be for payment by the heirs of the obligor. Purling v. Parkhurst, 2 Taunt. 237.

The first part of a memorial stating a bond, by which certain persons became bound to the grantee, may be explained by a subsequent part setting forth another bond, in which the first is recited as a joint and several bond; such recital not being inconsistent with the preceding allegation, but only explaining what was before left short in the description of the first bond. Coe v. Giblett, 3 East, 461. And see 4 East, 85; 4 Esp. 231.

Nor is it an objection that it does not state that the grantor had bound his heirs, &c. according to the deeds. Jackson v. Milsentown (Lord.) 1 Marsh. 533; 6 Taunt. 189; S. P. 4 Taunt. 346. But see Horwood v. Underhill, contra, 10 East, 123; 3 M. & S. 82; 4 Taunt. 346; 10 Ves. jun. 209.

It is no objection that it states the deeds to have been executed on or about such a day, when in fact they were executed on that day. Id

So, if the consideration be alleged in the deed to have been paid on a particular day, on which day it was paid to the common agent of both parties, who were at a distance from each other, and by him paid over in a few days afterwards to the grantor on his executing the deed: this is a sufficient allegation of the time of payment. Craufurd v. Phillips, 2 N. R. 141; 9 Ves. jun. 215.

(d) Warrant of Attorney.

Where a warrant of attorney has been given to confess a judgment, to secure an annuity, together with other securities, the memorial must state the warrant of attorney, as well as the other securities. Davidson v. Foley (Lord,) 2 H. Black. 12; Bro. C. C. 598: S. P. Hopkins v. Waller, 4 T. R. 463.

In this respect there is no difference, whether the annuity were granted before or after the passing of the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Id.

But a judgment on a warrant of attorney, given together with a bond to secure an annuity, need not be inserted in the memorial, though it be entered up before the memorial is registered. Sherson v. Oxlade, 4 T. R. 824: S. P. Richardson v. Tomkies, 2 M. & Scott, 56; 9 Bing. 51.

But if the only security had been a judgment actually entered up, perhaps it would have been within the act. Id. And see Ranger v. Chesterfield (Earl), 5 M. & S. 2.

In the memorial of a warrant of attorney to confess judgment as a collateral security for an annuity, it is unnecessary to state for what penal sum it authorizes a confession of judgment. Barber v. Gamson, 4 B. & A. 281.

If, in the deed securing an annuity, it be declared that the judgment, to be obtained under a warrant of attorney given at the same time, shall be only a collateral security for the regular payment of the annuity, and that no execution shall issue thereon till default made in the payment for 14 days; and the memorial does not notice the above declaration, and in setting forth the warrant of attorney, only states, generally, that "such warrant of attorney was executed for the better securing the payment of the annuity, as in the above stated deed is particularly mentioned," the court will set aside the annuity for such defect. Cunningham v. Mackenzie, 2 B. & P. 598.

Where an annuity was secured by bond and warrant of attorney, and by an indenture charging lands, which stated the annuity to be granted in consideration of 1050*l.* paid by the grantee to the grantor, on which was indorsed a receipt for the money from the grantee by payment of T. H. his agent; and the indenture also contained a proviso, that execution should not be taken out upon the warrant of attorney until forty days after the day limited for the payment of the annuity; and the memorial set forth the bond with its date, and the indenture as bearing even date therewith, but omitted any mention of the proviso:—Held, that the memorial sufficiently contained the date of the indenture, and need not have set forth the proviso; and that the receipt, coupled with the indenture, sufficiently described the person by whom the consideration was paid. Doe d. Mason v. Phillips, 5 M. & S. 369.

A memorial need not state the defeasance of a warrant of attorney, in the recital of that instrument, if it be explicitly set out in the recital of the deed. Jackson v. Milsentown (Lord), 1 Marsh. 533; 6 Taunt. 189.

But when a bond and warrant of attorney, given to secure an annuity, are no otherwise noticed in the memorial than by way of recital in the annuity deed, which is set out; it is not a sufficient compliance with the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Van Braam v. Isaacs, 1 B. & P. 451.

(e) Clause of Redemption.

The memorial of an annuity granted subsequently to the statute 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, need not state that the annuity was redeemable by the grantor; nor does the schedule in that statute require the name of the party, in whose favour the warrant of attorney is given, to be set out. Yems v. Smith, 3 B. & A. 206.

Previously to that statute, a clause of redemption, contained in the body of an annuity deed, must have been inserted in the memorial. Appleby v. Smith, 3 Anst. 365: S. P. Greaves v. Bainbridge, 3 Anst. 870, n.; Harris v. Stapleton, 7 T. R. 205.

So must a memorandum indorsed on a deed, importing that the grantor may redeem it on certain terms. Steadman v. Purchase, 6 T. R. 737.

But a concession to the grantor of a greater facility of redemption, made at a time subsequent to the original grant of the annuity and inrolment of memorial, need not have been memorialized. Booth v. Druce, 4 Taunt. 252.

If a memorial stated a proviso to repurchase, by only referring to the deed, and stating the annuity to be redeemable, "on such notice, terms, and conditions as are therein expressed, it was not sufficient. Ex parte Ansell, 1 B. & P. 62.

Where a power to redeem upon six months' notice, terminating on one of the days of payment, was memorialized as a power to redeem at any time on six months' notice, the misdescription was fatal. Tringham v. Bethune, 7 Taunt. 429.

(f) Other Covenants.

Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26.]—A covenant that the premises assigned to the trustee to secure the annuity should be kept insured to a certain amount, at the grantor's expense; otherwise the grantee to insure, and the expense to be chargeable upon the premises, and to be levied in the same manner as the annuity itself, was sufficiently set out, by stating, "that the grantor would keep the premises insured, and, in default thereof, that the grantee might keep insured the same, as therein mentioned." Bleamire v. Barfoot, 2 Marsh. 204; 6 Taunt. 504.

In the memorial of an annuity or rent-charge, granted by a rector or vicar out of his benefice, it was not necessary to state the grantor's covenant to pay the annuity or rent-charge. Mouys v. Leake, 8 T. R. 411.

A stipulation that the trustee should permit the grantor to take the rents and profits until default in the payment of the annuity, and that, in case the annuity should be in arrear for sixty days, the trustee might enter and raise sufficient to satisfy it, and suffer the grantor to take the overplus from time to time, is not sufficiently described in a memorial, stating that the deed contained the usual powers of entry and distress, and perception of the rents and profits of the premises, for better securing and enforcing the payment of the annuity. Des Enfants v. O'Brien, 3 East, 559.

The grantor of an annuity was required, for further security, to make her will, and deposit it with the grantee; and to make an affidavit that she would not revoke it; a magistrate having refused to let her swear the affidavit, the grantee retained the will; and 10*l.*, which had been retained till the grantee should make the affidavit, were then paid to the grantor. The memorial did not notice the will:—Held, that the memorial was therefore bad, but that the 10*l.* was not money retained within section 4 of the statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Ex parte Mackenzie, 4 Taunt. 323.

It was not sufficient if the memorial only stated the time at which execution might be sued out by words of reference to the deed. Orton v. Knight, 3 B. & P. 153.

Under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141.—It was not necessary to notice in the memorial a covenant in the annuity deed, that if the grantor went abroad, whereby the expense of insuring his life should be increased, the grantee might retain such additional amount out of the dividends; and, if they proved insufficient, the grantor should make up what was wanting. Cane v. Lovelace, 2 B. & Adol. 767.

In a case under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, an annuity was set aside because one of the trusts (viz. that, in case the grantor should leave the kingdom, he should pay any extra expense of the grantee in insuring his life,) was not stated in the memorial. Cummings v. Isaac, 8 T. R. 183.

In the memorial of an annuity deed, it is not necessary to state a covenant by the grantor to insure his life for the benefit of the grantee; for that is a collateral matter. Johnson v. Tweed, 1 Dowl. P. C. 459.

A sum contracted for to be paid as an annuity, being partly secured by the transfer of a policy of insurance on the life of the grantor, was in the annuity deed increased by the amount of the annual premium on the policy, which the grantee covenanted to pay:—Held, that this covenant was not a pecuniary consideration to be specified in the memorial, and that the amount of the annuity was properly described in the memorial as a total compounded of the sum originally contracted for, with the annual premium of a policy added to it. Faircloth v. Gurney, 9 Bing. 456, 622; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724; 2 M. & Scott, 827.

(g) Statement of Consideration.

Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26.—The memorial must set forth precisely the manner in which the consideration money was paid. Kirkman v. Price, 1 H. Black. 309.

And if it be paid in promissory notes, they must be set forth. Rumball v. Murray, 3 T. R. 298.

So, if part of the amount have been paid in country bank-notes. Morris v. Wall, 1 B. & P. 208.

So, if paid by a note, the time when payable must be set forth. Berry v. Bentley, 6 T. R. 690; Poole v. Cabanes, 8 T. R. 328.

But a check may be stated as money, the value of which had been actually received by the grantor some time before the execution of the deeds. Ex parte Michell, 2 East, 137.

And bank-notes may always be described as money. Wright v. Reed, 3 T. R. 554; S. P. Cousens v. Thompson, 6 T. R. 335.

Where, upon the execution of an annuity bond by three out of several obligors, the grantee of the annuity paid the consideration money to D. S., one of the three, who immediately paid it into a banker's in the names of himself and J. L., the attorney who acted for all parties, and took the banker's receipt for the money in the names of himself and J. L., which was done in consequence of the other obligors not attending to execute the bond, it being agreed by the parties then present, that until the securities should be executed the money should remain in the hands of the banker, and afterwards, upon the execution of the securities, the money was paid at the banker's with the authority of J. L. to D. S., and upon debt brought by the executors of the grantee on the annuity bond, the condition of which, on oyer, stated that the grantee paid the money to the obligors, and the memorial stated that the money was paid to D. S., to the use of himself and the other obligors, by the grantee:—Held, that a plea alleging, that, in the assurances, the consideration money was stated to be paid by the grantee, and that it was not stated in the assurances that the sum was advanced by any agent or agents of the grantee, and that the same was advanced on behalf of the grantee by J. L. and D. S., was to be taken as pleaded with reference to the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, and that it raised an objection which was sustained by the facts, and invalidated the bond. Horwood v. Underhill, 3 M. & S. 82; 4 Taunt. 346; 10 East, 123; 10 Ves. jun. 209.

Decided, on the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, that if several deeds be given to secure an annuity, and the consideration be expressed in all, the memorial need only state the consideration once. Hodges v. Money, 4 T. R. 500.

Also, that it is sufficient to state the consideration by reference. Sowerby v. Harris, 4 T. R. 494; Consens v. Thompson, 6 T. R. 335.

Also, that it was unnecessary that a consideration of 10s. paid to a trustee, should be set forth. Jace v. Everard, 6 T. R. 545.

Also, that if it be agreed by the grantor and grantee, that the former shall pay the expenses of the writings, and he, immediately after receiving the consideration money, pay the fair charges of the writings out of that money, no notice need be taken of it in the memorial, but that it might be stated, that the whole consideration money was paid to the grantor. Mouys v. Leake, 8 T. R. 411.

But where part of the consideration of an annuity is paid over by the grantee to a third person, with the consent of the grantor, or is accounted for to the grantor by a note from a third person, the whole of the transaction must be stated in the memorial; and if it is stated that the whole consideration was paid in money, the annuity deeds will be set aside. Watts v. Millard, 3 T. R. 598.

If it be set forth in the memorial of an annuity, that the consideration was so much in money paid, when the real consideration is part in money and the giving up of a former annuity, the court will set aside the securities. Wasburn v. Birch, 5 T. R. 472.

Where the consideration of an annuity was stated in the memorial to be 640*l.*, 105*l.* of which was paid in money by the grantee to the grantors at the time, and the remaining 535*l.* was paid by the grantee, at the desire of the grantors, to another person, to redeem a former annuity granted by them, for which only 480*l.* was paid; this was held a sufficient and legal consideration. Ex parte Fallon, 5 T. R. 283.

In one case the court enlarged a rule, for the parties in the meantime to bring an action on the bond, and the defendant to take issue on the payment of the consideration in the very words of the act, in order to raise the question, whether it was necessary to state in the memorial the actual hand by which the money was paid. Eastland v. Forrester, 1 Smith, 256.

A memorial, stating that the consideration money was paid to A., B. and C., "some or one of them," was bad; though it appeared that the money was paid on the day on which the deed was executed by them all. Vaux v. Ansell, 1 B. & P. 224.

Where a bond, to secure an annuity, set forth in the memorial, recited, that the consideration money, 1,400*l.*, was paid on the 24th of December, when all the deeds except one were executed and bore date; and the memorial also contained a specific allegation that the consideration money was paid, but without stating any particular time; when, in fact, one deed not having been executed by one of the grantors, the grantee delivered over the consideration money on that day to another of the grantors, to be by him lodged in a banker's hands, in the names of himself and the grantee's attorney, till that deed was executed; and such deed was not in fact executed, nor the money actually available to the grantors till the 26th of the same month:—Held, that this was a substantial compliance with the statute, the time of payment of the consideration money not being specifically required to be stated by the act, nor being any otherwise material than as entering into the question of the value of the consideration. Coare v. Giblett, 4 East, 85; 4 Esp. 231. And see S. C. 3 East, 461.

So where, 1,200*l.* have been paid for the grant of an annuity, and the securities, to prevent their being registered, had been renewed from twenty days to twenty days, and then 600*l.* had been paid for the grant of a further annuity, and the securities renewed in like manner, and sometimes after a longer period than twenty days, and afterward had been registered; a memorial of the annuity, stating the consideration to be 1,800*l.*, was deemed a valid memorial. Symons v. Mortimer, 5 T. R. 139.

A memorial, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, stated a deed-poll, by which (after reciting that A. had formerly granted an annuity of 24*l.* to B., who had assigned to C., and that A. had agreed to grant a further annuity of 7*l.* to C. for 42*l.*) certain tithes, &c. were assigned by A. to C.; and also a bond by A. to C. in 400*l.* for securing "one annuity of 31*l.*" without reference to the deed-poll:—Held, that the consideration for the annuity secured by the bond should have been stated, and that for want of it the bond was void; the annuity mentioned in it not appearing to be the same annuity as that secured by the deed-poll. Saunders v. Hardinge, 5 T. R. 9.

Under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141.]—Held, on this statute, that where part of the consideration consisted of a draft payable at a banker's, it was necessary to state in the memorial at what time such draft was payable; and the application for setting aside the securities being made twelve years after the execution of the deed, and after the deaths of the attesting witnesses, the court of C. P. imposed on the grantors the terms of returning the principal, on taking an account before the prothonotary. Drake v. Rogers, 4 Moore, 402; 2 B. & B. 19.

An annuity deed stated the consideration to have been paid in bank-notes and sovereigns; the memorial stated it (according to the fact) to have been paid in bank-notes only:—Held, no ground for setting aside the annuity. Faircloth v. Gurney, 2 M. & Scott, 822; 9 Bing. 456, 622; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724.

A. having agreed with B. to advance him a sum of money, and to pay off an annuity formerly granted by him; B. executed a deed, whereby, in consideration of 1050*l.*, he covenanted to pay an annuity to A., and assigned to him certain dividends upon trusts for the purpose of securing the annuity. The 1050*l.* were paid to B. the grantor, who directly returned to the grantee the sum necessary for paying off the annuity, and he immediately paid it over for that purpose. In the memorial inrolled pursuant to 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, the consideration for the present annuity was stated to be 1050*l.*, without any notice of the former annuity:—Held, that this statement was sufficient. Cane v. Lovelace, 2 B. & Adol. 767.

An annuity deed contained a covenant by the grantor, that he would not at any time during the continuance of the annuity go upon the seas, or parts beyond them, without first giving the grantee seven days' notice, in writing, of such his intention, in order to enable him to pay such additional premiums of insurance as might be incurred on account thereof, which premiums the grantor covenanted to pay to the grantee:—Held, that it was not necessary to state such covenant in the memorial, under the statute 53 Geo. 3, c. 141. Wood v. Perrott, 5 Moore, 63.

Where the grantor of an annuity assigned a policy of assurance on his own life to the grantee, whereby the latter was enabled to insure the life of the former at a less premium than he otherwise might have done:—Held, that such assignment was no part of the consideration, and need not have been set out in the memorial, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 2, the other requisites of that statute having been complied with. Morris v. Jones, 3 D. & R. 263; 2 B. & C. 232.

(h) Statement of Trusts.

Under the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, the memorial should contain an accurate description of the trusts and interests of the parties, and, in fact, the whole res gestæ. Cummins v. Isaac, 8 T. R. 183; Dupuis v. Edwards, 18 Ves. jun. 358.

But see stat. 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, which gives a concise tabular form for memorials.

A memorial must, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, show for whom parties are trustees. Defaria v. Sturt, 2 Taunt. 225. And see Bleamire v. Barfoot, 6 Taunt. 504, 2 Marsh. 204; Bradford v. Burland, 14 East, 445.

And state the trusts. Askew v. Mackreth, 1 N. R. 214.

Only those trusts created in consequence of the annuity need be stated. Toldervy v. Allan, 5 T. R. 480.

But stating, "for purposes therein mentioned," not sufficient. Denn d. Dolman v. Dolman, 5 T. R. 641. And see Leycester v. Lockwood, 1 M. & S. 527; 5 Taunt. 587. But see Brown v. Rose, 1 Marsh. 478; 6 Taunt. 124.

So, stating a trust to permit grantee to receive profits until default, and then for grantee as a trustee for him generally, was held bad. Taylor v. Johnson, 8 T. R. 184.

(i) Statement of other Matters.

The court will not set aside annuity deeds for a mere clerical mistake in the memorial; as if, in stating the assignment of a term of 61 years, it set forth a term of 62 years. Ince v. Everard, 6 T. R. 545. And see Wyatt v. Bandell, 19 Ves. jun. 438.

Or if, after reciting the true consideration, e. g. 280*l.* it afterwards state "which said sum of 250*l.* was paid," &c. Id.

A warrant of attorney for securing an annuity set aside, with the judgment and execution thereon, because the annuity was stated in the memorial to be 257*l.* instead of 237*l.* per annum. Nash v. Godmond, 1 B. & Adol. 634.

The annuity originally agreed to be paid by the grantor was 80*l.*, and, in consideration of a covenant by the grantee to pay the annual premium on the policy (33*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*), the grantor consented that that sum should be added to the annuity, which was accordingly described in the deed and in the memorial as an annuity of 113*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that it was properly so described. Faircloth v. Gurney, 2 M. & Scott, 822; 9 Bing. 456, 622; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724.

Under 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, it is sufficient to state that the annuity was granted for the lives of three persons by name, without stating their places of abode or other additions, or averring that the annuity was granted for their joint lives, or the life of the survivor of them, or for a term of years determinable on such lives. Barber v. Gamson, 4 B. & A. 281.

It need not be stated that an annuity was payable for the portion of time from the last quarter-day to the death of the annuitant. Ince v. Everard, 6 T. R. 545.

The estates charged need not be specifically set forth, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. O'Callaghan v. Ingilby (Bart.), 9 East, 135.

Nor need the covenant of grantor, for due payment of the annuity, be stated. Id.

Where an annuity was granted by three, one of whom was known to be only a surety for the other two, to whose use the money was, in fact, applied; yet all three being present when the money was paid down upon the table, and counted over by them all, and the receipt of it signed by all, it was properly stated in the memorial as a payment made to the three. Cook v. Jones, 15 East, 237.

When the deed and memorial stated the consideration money to have been paid by the grantee by the hands of W., his agent, yet as it also appeared by the same instruments that a part of it was the money of a third person; that was held to be no objection: for either W. was the agent in fact of the sole grantee, or impliedly the agent, through the medium of the grantee, for such third person also, whose interest was stated in the deed and memorial according to the truth. Id.

A memorial of a bond and warrant of attorney, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, need not express for whose life the annuity is granted, if it be expressed in the memorial of the indenture which recites the said bond and warrant of attorney. Ranger v. Chesterfield (Earl), 5 M. & S. 2.

III. WHEN VOID AND VOIDABLE.

1. Generally.

An annuity deed was considered absolutely void, and not merely voidable, if the memorial was not registered according to the directions of the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Crossley v. Arkwright, 2 T. R. 603.

Therefore, where a person against whom a writ of fi. fa. is taken out, was in possession of goods under a deed which was given in consideration of an antecedent debt, and a small annuity payable from thenceforth; it was held that the sheriff was warranted in returning nulla bona, if it appear that the memorial of such annuity was not registered according to the act, for in that case the deed was absolutely void. Id.

But in another case it was held, that the executor of the grantee of an annuity which was regularly paid until the time of his death, could not bring an action for the consideration money on the ground that no memorial of the grant was inrolled, as the contract was not therefore void, but voidable only. Davis v. Bryan, 6 B. & C. 651; 9 D. & R. 726.

If the memorial of a deed to secure an annuity be defective, the whole deed is void for every purpose, even though there are other parts of it not connected with the annuity. Dann d. Dolman v. Dolman, 5 T. R. 641.

Therefore, if A. being entitled to a life estate, subject to a condition not to charge or incumber it, grant an annuity, and demise the land as a security, but there be a defect in the memorial of the annuity, the deed is wholly void, and does not work a forfeiture of the estate. Id.

If several deeds be given to secure an annuity, and one of them be not properly inrolled, quære, if all of them be not void by the annuity act. Hart v. Lovelace, 6 T. R. 471.

If a memorial of an annuity be defective in stating one of several securities, semble, that the particular instrument only is void, and not the other assurances. Brown v. Rose, 6 Taunt. 124; 1 Marsh. 478.

Where several deeds were executed to secure one annuity, and the christian name of the witness to one of the deeds was omitted in the memorial, the court would not set aside the deeds. Watts v. Millard, 5 T. R. 598.

Where a party gave a bond as a security, and the memorial defectively described it, the court only set aside the judgment entered up by warrant of attorney on such bond, and directed the warrant of attorney to be deposited with the proper officer of the court. Denne v. Dupuis, 11 East, 134.

A bond and warrant of attorney to confess a judgment were given to secure an annuity, and the date of the latter was not set forth in the memorial, the court only set aside the latter. Ex parte Chester, 4 T. R. 694.

And on motion, without action brought, or judgment entered up, under the warrant of attorney. Id. S. P. Thurkill v. Wallace, 4 T. R. 595, n. And see 1 B. & P. 66, n.

2. Keeping back Consideration.

Statutes.]—By 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 4, if any part of the consideration shall be returned to the person advancing the same; or, if paid in notes, any of them, with the privity and consent of the person advancing the same, be not paid when due, or be cancelled or destroyed without being paid; or if the consideration or any part of it be paid in goods; or if any part of the consideration be retained on pretence of answering the future payments of the annuity, the annuity is void. The 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 6, has an enactment precisely similar, except that it is extended to a retainer under any pretence whatever.

What is a keeping back.]—Where an annuity was granted in consideration of a debt before secured by bond, and the grantees refused to deliver up the bond:—Held, that it was not such a keeping back of part of the consideration as vacated the annuity. Cook v. Tower, 1 Taunt. 372.

So, where the consideration was a bill accepted, which was dishonoured by the acceptor, but paid by the drawer on notice:—Held, that it was not such a non-payment of the bill as to vacate the annuity, though it was accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, who undertook to furnish assets for payment, and neglected so to do. Id.

Where, upon the grant of an annuity, the agent of the grantees, on paying the consideration money, retained a considerable sum for the expenses of preparing the deeds, and a further sum, by way of advance, to answer the first year's payment of the annuity; the court of C. P. set aside the deed against a person who was surety for the payment of the annuity by two collegians, who were minors, at Cambridge, on the ground that this was an illegal retainer; but they imposed on such trustee the terms of returning the principal with interest, on taking an account before the prothonotary. Mence v. Hammond, 6 Moore, 491.

A., an attorney, purchases an annuity of B., and, having paid the consideration money, receives from B. the amount of a bill for business done, including, by mistake, a charge for searches for incumbrances, which searches had never been made:—Held, that the payment of this charge, so inadvertently made, was not a return of the consideration money within the meaning of 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, § 4. Hurd v. Girdlestone, 1 Marsh. 407; 6 Taunt. 8.

And where the attorney for the grantor of an annuity, at the time of the payment of the purchase money, takes and keeps an unreasonable part thereof for the expenses of the deed, this is not a ground on which the court will set aside the annuity. Mootham v. How, 7 Taunt. 596.

And where part of the consideration money for an annuity was deposited in the hands of the grantee's attorney until some houses, out of which the annuity was granted, should be completed, but such money was paid over to the grantee in a short time after the date of the deeds, and there was no fraud in the transaction, the court refused to set aside the annuity, it not being the case of a fraudulent retainer contemplated by the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, § 6, as the power given them by that statute was discretionary. Barber v. Gamson, 4 B & A. 281.

A solicitor, who advances his own money on the purchase of an annuity, is not entitled to any commission fee; and if any part of the consideration money be returned to him by the grantor, as a charge for such commission, the court will set aside the annuity deeds. Broomhead v. Eyre, 5 T. R. 597.

After the consideration of an annuity had been paid to the grantor, the latter immediately paid back to the grantee (who was in partnership, as an attorney, with two other persons) a sum for procuration money, in pursuance of an agreement for that purpose, and there appeared to be no fraud or collusion:—Held, that the deeds were not void by the fourth section of 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, and that the court might impose such terms upon the parties as seemed just and reasonable. Girdlestone v. Allan, 2 D. & R. 150, 157; 1 B. & C. 61: S. P. Cook v. Tower, 1 Taunt. 372.

S. having occasion to raise 2,800*l.* by way of annuity, desired the annuities to be divided into three; the consideration for all three was paid at one time and place to one person, who was agent to all the grantors, and he retained 300*l.* for the expenses of all three annuities:—Held, that all three might be set aside on equitable terms on account of this retainer, although the 300*l.* was retained in a bank note, which formed part of the consideration money of only one of the grantors. Jones v. Silberschildt, 4 Bing. 26; S. C. nom. Chappell v. Silverchild, 12 Moore, 113.

Where, on the grant of an annuity, the consideration money was, with the assent of the grantor, paid to a trustee, to be applied by him in payment of the costs of the annuity deeds, afterwards of certain debts due from the grantor to certain judgment creditors, and the surplus to the grantor:—Held, that this was not a retainer within the meaning of the statute, so as to render the annuity void, notwithstanding the trustee was the partner of the grantee, and both of them were the solicitors employed in the transaction. Aston v. Gwinnell, 3 Y. & J. 136.

Where the issue is whether the consideration of an annuity has been paid, it is not necessary to prove the consideration had in money or bank notes. Franco v. Lindo, 1 Esp. 300—Buller.

Retainer by Agents.—Where the grantor of an annuity, in pursuance of an agreement with the broker, received the whole consideration money, and immediately afterwards returned 15*l.* per cent. for law expenses and brokerage, and the amount of one year's annuity, which was deposited in a bank, and drawn out quarterly to pay the annuitants:—Held, that this was an illegal retainer of part of the consideration money within the meaning of the 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 6, and after the lapse of eight years, the court set aside the annuity, on paying principal and interest on the money advanced, together with reasonable expenses, although the annuitants were not directly privy to the retainer, and although one of them was dead before the application was made. Finley v. Gardner, 9 D. & R. 207; 6 B. & C. 165.

Where a person was employed as an agent by the grantor, to raise money by way of annuity, and by the grantee to pay the consideration money over to the grantor; and at the time of the payment of the annuity, such person received or retained part of it for a debt alleged to be due to him from the grantor, the court of C. P. set aside the annuity on the terms of the grantor's paying the principal and interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., although the grantee had not received any part of the money so returned, and although it was done without his privity or knowledge. Gorton v. Champneys, 8 Moore, 302; 1 Bing. 287.

Where, upon the grant of an annuity, the agent of the grantee, on paying the consideration money, retained, or cause to be returned to him, a considerable sum for the expenses of deeds, investigating title, journeys, &c. (two witnesses, brought from a considerable distance for the purpose of attesting the annuity deed, having first retired); the court held that this was an illegal retainer, for which the grantee was responsible, and on that ground set aside the annuity, ten years after it had been granted and acted on, though the grantee alleged that he had given no authority for, and was ignorant of such retainer, on the terms of an account being taken before the prothonotary, who was to ascertain what sum might be due to the grantee in respect of principal and interest. Williamson v. Gould, 1 Bing. 234; 8 Moore, 109.

So the court of C. P. set aside an annuity where 910*l.*, the consideration money, was paid to the grantor, who immediately returned it all but 1*l.* to pay off preceding annuities, and 165*l.* which the attorney, who negotiated the affair, retained for his trouble. Henry v. Taylor, 3 Bing. 177; 10 Moore, 588.

In all such cases of retainer by agents, the court will set aside the annuity, on payment of principal and interest, even though the grantee be not privy to the transaction. Calton v. Porter, 2 Bing. 370; 9 Moore, 703.

3. Other Things.

Held; that paying a half-yearly instalment for half a year sooner than the deed required it, on a mistaken claim of the grantee, did not avoid the annuity. Jackson v. Milsentown (Lord), 6 Taunt. 180; 1 Marsh. 533.

An annuity being in arrear, and the rent of an estate on which it was secured being unpaid, the trustee of the estate, who had negotiated the annuity between the grantor and grantee, having advanced a sum to the latter in anticipation of the coming rents, and received from the grantee on such advance the commission which he usually received on annuity payments—the court of C. P. set aside an execution which (the rents proving insufficient) was afterwards issued for that sum in the name of the grantee, against one who, as surety for the payment of the annuity, had given a warrant of attorney to confess judgment. Williamson v. Goold, 7 Moore, 579; 1 Bing. 171.

So, that court afterwards set aside an execution which the grantee had issued for the same sum against the grantor. Corroll v. Goold, 8 Moore, 109; 1 Bing. 190. And see 7 Moore, 621; 1 Bing. 171.

4. Who may apply to avoid.

An application to set aside an annuity must be made bona fide on behalf of the grantor. Faircloth v. Gurney, 1 Dowl. P. C. 724; 9 Bing. 456, 622; 2 M. & Scott, 822, 827.

The court declined to hear a rule for setting aside an annuity, upon its appearing that the rule had not been obtained on behalf of the grantor; but on behalf of a party who had purchased the annuity from an assignee, and who had raised objections to avoid completing his purchase. Id.

A creditor of the grantor may avail himself of the invalidity of an annuity for want of registration. Saunders v. Hardinge, 5 T. R. 9. And see Newland v. Watkin, 2 M. & Scott, 174.

The grantor of an annuity, having assigned a lease for securing the payment of it, and having afterwards sold his interest in the lease to a fair purchaser:—Held, that the latter was not entitled under the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, to apply to the court to have the security delivered up to be cancelled, because the memorial required by the act was not duly registered. Garrod v. Sanders, 6 T. R. 403.

A party outlawed in K. B., in an action to recover the arrears of an annuity, cannot be heard in C. P. on a motion to set aside the annuity. Loukes v. Holbeach, 4 Bing. 419; 1 M. & P. 126.

5. Time and manner of applying.

Statutes.—By statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 4, in all cases where for the causes before stated the annuity is void, "the person by whom the annuity or rent-charge is made payable, may apply to the court in which any action is brought for payment of the annuity, or judgment entered, by motion to stay the proceedings on the judgment or action; and if it shall appear to the court that such practices have been used, they may order the deed, bond, or instrument, or other assurance, to be cancelled, and the judgment, if any has been entered, to be vacated." The 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 4, extends the right of application to any person whose property is liable to be charged or affected.

Concurrent Jurisdiction of Courts of Law and Equity.—There is jurisdiction in equity to order instruments void under the annuity act, to be delivered up. Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. jun. 209.

The Court of Chancery has jurisdiction, even after the grantor has twice failed at law in his attempts to set aside the annuity, to declare it void, and order the securities to be delivered up. Bromley v. Holland, Coop. C. C. 9; 7 Ves. 18.

Where the grantee of an annuity is induced by false representations or improper concealment of facts on the part of the grantor or his agent, to become the purchaser of an annuity, although he may have relief at law, a court of equity has concurrent jurisdiction. Adamson v. Evitt, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 66.

The grantor and his agent in such transaction are not bound to disclose all the circumstances of the grantor's situation; they are, however, bound to give honest answers to questions put to them. Id.

Jurisdiction of Courts of Law.—Quære, whether the courts have a summary jurisdiction under sect. 4 of the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, to set aside annuity securities for objections arising on sect. 1. Steadman v. Purchase, 6 T. R. 737.

The court of C. P. cannot order an annuity bond to be delivered up to be cancelled for want of a memorial pursuant to 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, though it be void by the 1st section of that act. Quære, whether in such a case they would stay proceedings on the bond. Symonds v. Cobourne, 1 B. & P. 482. See also 7 T. R. 253, and 1 B. & P. 66, n.

It is discretionary with the court, whether they will give relief under the fourth section of the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26; and they may either vacate the securities given for an annuity, in case of a violation of that clause, or do so on certain terms, or refuse to do so altogether, according to the circumstances of each particular case. Girdlestone v. Allan, 2 D. & R. 150, 157; 1 B. & C. 61: S. P. Cook v. Tower, 1 Taunt. 372.

So is the power given to the courts under stat. 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 6. Barber v. Gamson, 4 B. & A. 281.

Courts of law have no authority to order instruments void under the annuity act, to be delivered up further than the act expressly gives it. Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. jun. 18; Coop. C. C. 9: S. P. Bolton, (Duke) v. Williams, 2 Ves. jun. 154; 4 Bro. C. C. 297.

The court of Exchequer cannot proceed, on motion, to order the securities to be delivered up, for want of a proper memorial, but can only set aside the warrant of attorney and judgment. Appleby v. Smith, 3 Anst. 865: S. P. Jeffrey v. Athol (Duchess), 3 Anst. 865, n.

A fine levied of a rent-charge, assigned by way of annuity, will not give the court of C. P. authority to set aside the annuity securities, &c. on account of a defective memorial, there being neither a warrant of attorney to enter, nor judgment actually entered in the court. Craufurd v. Caines, 2 H. Black. 438.

When an action was brought by executors, on a bond given by the defendant to their testator, for securing an annuity, and, upon a plea of non est factum, they obtained a verdict and judgment, and levied execution thereon, the court held this not a case where they could give relief upon a summary application under the annuity act, for a defect in the memorial. Buck v. Tyte, 7 T. R. 495.

A. grants an annuity for his own life to B., to secure which a bond and warrant of attorney are given, and judgment entered; B. dies; after his death the court of C. P. will not admit evidence of a parol agreement between the parties, that A. should be at liberty to redeem the annuity on certain terms, (especially if it be the evidence of the attorney concerned), as a ground to order the securities to be given up, and satisfaction entered on the judgment. Haynes v. Hare, 1 H. Black. 659.

Though the court, on the ground of minority, and the want of a proper memorial, will set aside a judgment entered up on a warrant of attorney to secure an annuity, they will not, on these grounds alone, order the deeds to be delivered up to be cancelled. Storton v. Tomlins, 2 Bing. 475; 10 Moore, 172.

If, in a deed of grant of annuity, which is void, the grantor also covenant personally to pay the said rent charge or annuity, and give a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, as a collateral security for payment of the annuity, this court will not order the deeds to be delivered up to be cancelled. Mouys v. Leake, 8 T. R. 411.

Where an ejectment was brought to recover possession of lands extended under an elegit upon a judgment confessed, which had been entered up on a warrant of attorney given for securing an annuity, it is too late for the grantor to object to the consideration of such annuity, upon a summary application for staying the proceedings after verdict in such ejectment, because he had an opportunity of making his defence to the action. Withy v. Wooley, 7 T. R. 540.

But a scire facias to revive a judgment entered up by warrant of attorney given to secure the payment of an annuity, and a fieri facias issued thereon, are not such proceedings as to call upon the grantor of the annuity to avail himself of an objection to the memorial. Fielde v. Cole, Forrest, 125.

Where several persons who had purchased annuities of A. agreed to give up these annuities on receiving a certain sum of money and a bond payable at a future day, they retaining their annuity securities till the bond becomes payable: the court cannot under the statute order any of the securities so retained to be delivered up, although they may be void. Goring (Bart.) v. Welles, 1 B. & P. 395.

Course of Proceeding.—Where a rule to show cause is obtained for the purpose of setting aside an annuity, the several objections thereto, intended to be insisted upon by counsel at the time of making such rule absolute, shall be stated in the said rule nisi. Reg. Gen. K. B., T. T. 42 Geo. 3, 2 East, 569; C. P. M. T. 10 Geo. 4, 3 M. & P. 761; 6 Bing. 349.

An annuity is secured upon land, expressed to be of equal or greater annual value; before the court will set aside, for the want of a memorial, upon the inferiority of the value of the land, a warrant of attorney given as a collateral security, they will direct an issue to try whether the land be of the annual value, and will not try that matter upon affidavits, especially if there be conflicting evidence of the value of the land. Saunders v. Wright, 1 Taunt. 369.

On a motion to set aside an annuity, after a lapse of eleven years, on the ground of a misstatement in the consideration, the affidavits should state that the parties are alive. Amstead v. Atkins, 2 Chit. 32.

Where an annuity is sought to be set aside on the ground of the insufficiency of the consideration, there must be an affidavit of the circumstances from the grantor himself. Dartnell v. Wellesley (Marquis), 3 B. & B. 255; 7 Moore, 63.

So, where the application to set aside is on the grounds that the consideration money did not belong to the grantee, and that part of it was retained at the time the annuity was granted. Id.

The court of C. P. in one case set aside a judgment and warrant of attorney given to secure an annuity, for a defect in the memorial, without costs, because it was the case of an executor. Dickenson v. Boyne, 1 B. & P. 335.

Courts of equity, on setting aside, decree an account. Holbrook v. Sharpey, 19 Ves. 131.

Operation of previous Application.—If the validity of an annuity has come in judgment before a court of competent jurisdiction, no other court will suffer the same objection to be stirred again. Hart v. Lovelace, 6 T. R. 471. But see Ex parte Mackreth, 2 East, 563.

Where, upon a summary application to set aside an annuity for non-compliance with the requisites of the 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, the rule was discharged upon discussion of the merits, the court will not entertain a similar application between the same parties on the same state of facts, though grounded upon a new objection to the annuity, which was not before urged or considered. Greathead v. Bromley, 7 T. R. 455.

Where a former rule for setting aside an annuity was discharged, because it did not appear that an indorsement (not memorialized), containing a clause of redemption (bearing date after the deed), had been made prior to the execution of it; in which case it could not be received in evidence for want of being stamped; the court will not enter into the question on a subsequent rule, although it appear clearly that the indorsement was made before the deed was executed, and that such clause of redemption was not inserted in the memorial of the annuity inrolled according to the stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Schumann v. Weatherhead, 1 East, 537.

The refusal of a summary application to set aside an annuity, is no objection to the same ground being taken again upon an attempt to enforce it. Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 617.

Operation of Delay.—An annuity granted in 1790, the grantee of which died in 1794, and the interest of which was regularly paid till 1800 without objection, shall not be impeached for a supposed defect of consideration, which might have been explained by the grantee if living. And semble, that an annuity, paid without objection for more than six years, shall be protected, by analogy to the statute of limitation, against any such objection debars the memorial, without strong reasons to the contrary. Ex parte Maxwell, 2 East, 85.

The court of C. P. in one case held that they could not refuse to interfere, on the ground of eighteen years having elapsed since the grant of the annuity, and the grantee being dead. Van Broom v. Isaacs, 1 B. & P. 451.

In another case the court refused to set aside an annuity granted eighteen years since. Const v. Phillips, 4 D. & R. 344; 3 Russ. 267.

If the grantor of an annuity pay it without objection, during the lifetime of the person who negotiated the business for the grantee, the court will not permit the grantor to apply to set aside the annuity deeds, on a representation of facts that could only have been answered by such agent for the grantee. Poole v. Cabanes, 8 T. R. 328. And see Plaircloth v. Gurney, 2 M. & Scott, 827; 9 Bing. 622; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724.

IV. RECOVERY OF CONSIDERATION.

When and how recoverable.—Assumpsit for money had and received lies to recover back the purchase money, either where the annuity has been set aside by the court, or where the grantor, upon the discovery of a defect, refuses to re-execute any fresh securities. Weddel v. Lynam, 1 Esp. 309; Peake's Add. Cas. 30.—Kenyon.

So after a nolle prosequi had been entered in an action on an annuity bond for defect of memorial. Este v. Broomhead, 3 Esp. 261.

So it lies for money advanced on an agreement for an annuity which has never been carried into effect. Richards v. Borrett, 3 Esp. 102.—Kenyon.

But it will not lie by an attorney for the consideration which he has paid to his client as damages in action for negligently preparing the annuity securities. Burdon v. Webb, 2 Esp. 527.—Kenyon.

To entitle the grantee to recover back the price, as money had and received, it is sufficient if the grantor has communicated to the grantee that there are defects in the memorial, and has treated for a compromise on the ground of the annuity being void, although the grantee neither demands payment of the arrears, nor tenders new securities, nor delivers up the old ones, before he sues. Waters v. Mansell (Bart.), 3 Taunt. 56.

And although the grantor has taken no active measures to set aside the securities. Id.

The grantee of a void annuity, on account of an informality in the deeds, cannot maintain an action for money had and received to recover back the money until he has demanded fresh deeds from the grantor. But it is not necessary for the grantee to tender back the old deeds previous to the commencement of such action. Weddel v. Lynam, Peake's Add. Cas. 30; 1 Esp. 309.—Ken.

The consideration of an annuity, being partly a debt antecedently due for goods sold, and the residue thereof money paid at the time of granting it, the grantee may recover back the whole consideration, if the annuity be set aside for informality in registering the memorial. Shove v. Webb, 1 T. R. 732.

Quære, whether he can if part of the consideration be for goods sold at the time of granting the annuity. Id.

Where the grantor of an annuity applied to have it set aside on motion, and to vacate a judgment irregularly signed upon a warrant of attorney which had been improperly described in the memorial, and the court of K. B. accordingly held that the grantee might recover back the consideration money in assumpsit, and was not put to his action on a bond which was also given for securing the annuity, and which bond was not ordered to be cancelled, though voidable in pleading by virtue of the annuity act, 17 Geo. 3, c. 26. Scurfield v. Gowlan, 6 East, 241; 2 Smith, 332.

But where an annuity bond, granted by two becomes void by the neglect of the grantee in not registering the memorial under the statute, he cannot recover back any part of the consideration money from the one, who was known to be only a surety for the other, and had not in truth received any part of it, notwithstanding they both joined in signing a receipt for it. Stratton v. Rastall, 2 T. R. 366.

On an annuity secured upon a rent charge, which was settled in trust for a married woman, being set aside, the annuitant is not entitled to recover the consideration given by him for the annuity out of the arrears of the rent-charge paid into court under a decree made upon a bill of interpleader filed by the owner of the estate, subject to the rent-charge. Angell v. Hadden, 2 Mer. 169.

Deductions allowed.—Where an annuity is set aside, and an action brought for the money, an account is always taken of all money received under the annuity. Byne v. Vivian, 5 Ves. jun. 608.

Where an annuity is void under the act at law, the balance of the consideration may be recovered, deducting the payments under the annuity. Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. jun. 23; 5 Ves. 617; Coop. C. C. 9.

On an account of the consideration and the payments under the annuity, if the balance is against the grantee, it has been decided in equity that it cannot be recovered. Id.

Quære, where a contract of life annuity is avoided, and the grantee is to receive back his principal and legal interest, if annuity instalments to a greater amount than the principal and interest have been paid, whether it is reasonable that the grantee shall refund. Burdon v. Browning, 1 Taunt. 520.

Where the grantee of an annuity, set aside for a defective registry, brings an action for money had and received, to recover back the consideration money paid for it, the grantor may set off the payments made in respect of such annuity, though for more than six years, unless the plaintiff reply the statute of limitations. Hicks v. Hicks, 3 East, 16; S. C. nom. Hills v. Hills, 4 Esp. 196; S. P. Weddel v. Lynam, 1 Esp. 309; Peake's Add. Cas. 30.

But held, at Nisi Prius, that, when an annuity is rescinded after it has been paid for some time, the purchaser is entitled to receive back the whole of his purchase money. Beauchamp v. Borret, Peake, 109—Kenyon.

Premiums of life insurance cannot be charged on the vendor of a rescinded annuity. Burdon v. Browning, 1 Taunt. 520.

The grantee cannot claim sums paid by him for insuring the life of the grantor, unless there has been a special provision in the deed to that effect. Williamson v. Goold, 8 Moore, 324; 1 Bing. 316.

Nor cost incurred in supporting the annuity. Ex parte Shaw, 5 Ves. 620.

The court allowed the grantee of an annuity his reasonable disbursements for the conveyances by which the grant of such annuity was effected and secured, where it had been previously set aside on the terms of the grantor's paying the grantee what should be found by the prothonotary to be due to the latter for principal and interest at the rate of 5l. per cent. Williamson v. Goold, 1 Bing. 316; 8 Moore, 324.

Where a surety obtained an order for setting aside an execution under a judgment which he had given to secure the payment of an annuity, upon his entering into an account and paying the grantee the balance which might be found due under the provisions of the annuity deed, which was afterwards set aside upon the ground of an illegal retainer of part of the consideration money: the court of C. P. refused to discharge such surety out of execution until he had accounted, or paid money into court to cover the amount of the sum which might be ultimately ascertained by the prothonotary to be due to the grantee for principal and interest on the annuity. Williamson v. Goold, 8 Moore, 224; 1 Bing. 274.

V. PAYMENT OF ANNUITIES.

Where the defendant, as surety for the grantor of an annuity, executed a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment, as a collateral security for the due and regular payment of the annuity, subject to a defeasance, that, after any default should be made by the grantor in payment of the annuity, the grantee might sue out execution upon such judgment against the defendant for such part of the annuity as should be then due: and the annuity being in arrear, and the rents of the estates of the grantor, on which it was originally secured, being unpaid, the agent and trustee of the estates, who negotiated the annuity as between the grantor and grantee, advanced to the latter a sum of money in anticipation of the accruing rents, and deducted and retained the usual commission charged by him on the receipt and payment of annuities: Held, that such advance must be considered as a payment made on account of the grantor, as the principal; and that, on the insolvency of the latter, and the rents of his estates proving insufficient to satisfy the amount, the grantee could not resort to the defendant as his surety, to recover the whole of the arrears of the annuity then due; as, whatever sum he had received from the agent on account of the annuity, operated to that extent to the extinguishment of the liability of the surety. Where, therefore, an execution was issued against the defendant, as such surety, for the whole of the arrears due from his principal (the grantor), and under which he was detained in custody, the court of C. P. ordered him to be discharged, on payment into court of the balance due, after giving credit for the advance; the amount of which balance was to be ascertained by the prothonotary. Williamson v. Goold, 7 Moore, 579; 1 Bing. 234, 171.

So where upon the grant of an annuity, the agent who negotiated it as between the grantor and grantee, was appointed trustee and receiver of the rents of the estates of the grantor on which it was charged, and afterwards advanced money to the grantee out of his own funds, in anticipation of the receipt of the arrears from such estate, and debited the grantee with the usual commission charged by him on annuity payments:—Held, that, upon the eventual failure of the securities and insolvency of the grantor, the agent could not treat such an advance as a mere loan; but that it must be taken as payment made to the grantee in liquidation of the arrears of the annuity; and the latter could only issue execution against the grantor for the amount of the arrears actually due, after deducting the sum advanced and received by him from such agent. Carroll v. Goold, 7 Moore, 621; 1 Bing. 191. And see Williamson v. Goold, 1 Bing. 190; 8 Moore, 109.

Where the grantor of an annuity assigned it to A., together with all the securities, for a valuable consideration, part of which belonged to B., one of the co-sureties for payment of the annuity; and it was agreed by deed, between A. and B., that the former should retain out of the annual payments sufficient to pay him the principal sum advanced, together with the interest, and that when he should have been paid principal and interest the annuity should be for the benefit of B.:—Held, that the annuity did not thereby become extinguished, and that the co-sureties still remained liable to contribution to A., although B. had assigned stock for further securing the payment of the annuity. Browne v. Lee, 9 D. & R. 701; 6 B. & C. 689.

APPEAL OF MURDER.

Method and form of proceeding upon an appeal of murder. Bigby v. Kennedy, 5 Burr. 2643; 2 W. Black. 713. Rex v. Taylor, 2 Burr. 2793.

Appellees are not to be put to plead till oyer had of all prior proceedings, if demanded. Id.

An objection to the memorandum of the bill of appeal cannot be taken before arraignment. Id.

In an appeal of death, the appellee waged his battle:—Held, that the counterplea, to oust him of this mode of trial, must disclose such violent and strong presumptions of guilt, as to leave no possible doubt in the minds of the court. And therefore a counterplea which only stated strong circumstances of suspicion, was held to be insufficient. Ashford v. Thornton, 1 B. & A. 405.

Held also, that the appellee may reply fresh matter tending to show his innocence, as, for instance, an alibi, and his former acquittal of the same offence on an indictment. Id.

But quære, where the counterplea is per se insufficient, or, where the replication is a good answer to it, whether the court should give judgment that the appellee be allowed his wager of battle or that he go without day. Id.

In this case, as the appellant prayed no further judgment, the court, by consent of both parties, ordered that judgment should be stayed on the appeal, and that the appellee should be discharged. Id. 460.

Appeals of murder, as well as of treason, felony, or other offences, together with wager of battle, are absolutely abolished by stat. 59 Geo. 3, c. 46.

APPEARANCE—See PRACTICE.

APPOINTMENT—See POWER.

APPRAISER.

Nothing being referred to the appraisers except the mere value of the goods and of the repairs, an appraisement stamp upon the written valuation is sufficient under the statute 46 Geo. 3, c. 43, and an award stamp is not necessary. Leeds v. Burrows, 12 East, 1; S. P. Perkins v. Potts, 2 Chit. 399.

The word "appraiser" in statute 46 Geo. 3, c. 43, s. 4, does not mean a person who, in one single instance only, shall happen to make a valuation for another; but is intended to designate persons who exercise the calling or occupation of an appraiser, and who bear a known character as such. Atkinson v. Fell, 5 M. & S. 240.

Therefore, a valuation made of parish lands by two resident parishioners appointed for that purpose by parish officers, for the purpose of equalizing a rate for the relief of the poor, does not require an appraisement stamp, within the statute, it being merely for the information of the parties employing the valuers. Id.

If a broker is called to prove the value of goods, he need not produce an inventory written on an appraisement stamp. Stafford v. Clarke, 1 C. & P. 25—Burrough.

I. CONTRACT OF APPRENTICESHIP.

1. General Requisites.

No agreement whatever will constitute an apprenticeship unless there are indentures executed. Rex v. Whitchurch, 1 Bott's P. L. 532; Burr. S. C. 540; Rex v. Margran, 5 T. R. 153; Rex v. Mawman, Burr. S. C. 290; Rex v. Stratton, Burr. S. C. 272; Rex v. Kingsweare, Burr. S. C. 839.

A contract to serve for three years, at so much per week, the master agreeing to teach the other a trade, and the latter agreeing, if he lost any time to the prejudice of his master, to abate so much per day, constitutes an apprenticeship, if the instrument be sealed and stamped. Rex v. Rainham, 1 East, 531.

If an apprentice be bound, it is not necessary to the validity of his indenture, that the master should sign a counterpart. Rex v. Fleet, Cald. 31; Rex v. St. Peter's on the Hill, 2 Bott's P. L. 367.

An indenture by which an apprentice was bound for seven years, to serve one person for the first four years, and his own father for the last three, to learn two different trades, is a valid indenture. Rex v. Louth, 8 B. & C. 247; 2 M. & R. 273.

2. Stamp.

Operation of Statute 8 Anne, c. 9.—The statute 8 Anne, c. 9, s. 39, makes void indentures of apprenticeship in which the full sum or sums of money received, given, paid, secured, or contracted for, are not truly inserted. It does not apply to cases where the sum actually paid is inserted in the indenture, though it is a less sum than that which was originally agreed for, and the reduction was made to diminish the amount of the stamp duty. King v. Low, 3 C. & P. 620—Tenterden.

An undertaking by the mother of an apprentice, without the knowledge of her husband, to pay the master a sum of money beyond the premium inserted in the indenture and paid by the husband at the time of its execution (the stamp on the indenture being sufficient for both sums), does not make the indenture void under the act, the undertaking being void and no fraud being practised on the revenue. Rex v. Burton, on Dunsmore, 3 M. & R. 631; 9 B. & C. 872.

The consideration expressed in an indenture of apprenticeship was 4*l.*, to be paid to the master by a public charity: but the apprentice's mother privately agreed to pay, and did pay the master, after execution of the indenture, 1*l.* in addition: Held, that the indenture (though stamped) was void by s. 39, the full sum contracted for with or in relation to the apprentice, not being inserted. Rex v. Baildon, 3 B. & Adol. 427.

Where a sum agreed to be given with an apprentice was five guineas, which was inserted in the indenture, and the duty paid accordingly: Held, well, though in fact only four guineas were paid. Rex v. Keynsham, 5 East, 309.

An indenture of apprenticeship is not void by that statute, although it was originally agreed between the master and the apprentice's father that a premium of 20*l.* should be paid, and the master afterwards, to reduce the amount of the duty, agreed to take 19*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, which was the sum inserted in the indenture and actually paid. Shepherd v. Hall, 3 Camp. 180—Ellenborough.

Nor is it necessary under that statute, to call on the party at the time of giving an indenture of apprenticeship in evidence, to make oath as to the amount of premium actually paid with the apprentice at the time he was bound. Stewart v. Lawton, 8 Moore, 414; 1 Bing. 374.

In indentures of apprenticeship the apprentice covenanted to provide for himself meat, drink, lodging, and physic in sickness, during the term, for which benefit to the master no additional duty was paid under sect. 45: the indentures were held to be admissible evidence; it not appearing that weekly payments, which the master covenanted to make to the apprentice during the term were not an equivalent. Rex v. Walton in Le Dale. 3 T. R. 515.

If the friends of an apprentice covenant to maintain him, and to provide him with clothes, it is not such a benefit as is liable to the duty imposed by s. 45. Rex v. Leighton, 4 T. R. 732; Nolan, 100.

A master stipulating for 4*d.* out of every 1*s.* of the earnings of his apprentice, is no benefit to him within the statute, for which an additional duty is to be paid, being by law entitled to the whole. Rex v. Wantage, 1 East, 601.

Nor is an agreement before the binding to pay the master 30*s.*, to clothe the apprentice, within the statute, and the indenture is not void for want of inserting it therein. Rex v. North Onam, Burr. S. C. 145; 2 Stra. 1132.

Nor is an agreement by the father of an apprentice, to provide necessaries for his son, in consideration of a weekly sum to be paid him by the master, within the statute. Rex v. Portsea, Burr. S. C. 834.

The premium given by the parish officers upon the binding out of a poor apprentice, need not be set out in the indenture in words at length; such an indenture being exempted from any duty by sect. 40, and the insertion of the premium being required for no other purpose but to ascertain the amount of the duty. Rex v. Oadby, 1 B. & A. 477.

Neither is any duty payable for any consideration money, unless it be given to the master or mistress of the apprentice. Rex v. Saint Petron, Dartmouth, 4 T. R. 196.

No action can be maintained by the plaintiff on a note given to him by the defendant, as an apprentice fee with his son, who was to be bound to the plaintiff, if it appear that the indenture executed was void by the statute, for want of the insertion of such premium therein, and a proper stamp in respect of the same; although the plaintiff did in fact maintain the apprentice for some time, and until he absconded. Jackson v. Warwick, 7 T. R. 121.

An assignment of a parish apprentice is not subject to the regulations imposed by the statute, and need not, therefore, be stamped within two months, nor must the consideration paid for such assignment be set forth in it. Rex v. Ide, 2 B. & Adol. 866.

An unstamped assignment of a parish apprentice stated that D. E. the new master, in consideration of 3*l.* 10*s.* paid him by H., the old master, agreed to accept the apprentice, &c.:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show that the money paid on the assignment was parish money; and, therefore, that the instrument did not require a stamp. Lex v. Langunor, 2 B. & Adol. 616.

Revenue Stamp Acts.]—The amount of duty is now regulated by 55 Geo. 3. c. 184, sched. 1 tit. Apprenticeship.

An indenture to two masters, to serve them consecutively in distinct trades, requires only a single stamp. Rex v. Louth, 2 M. & R. 273; 8 B. & C. 247.

The stamp duty on indentures of apprenticeship, where the premium exceeds 50*l.* and is less than 100*l.* is 50*s.* by 48 Geo. 3, c. 149. Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876.

An indenture of apprenticeship, executed before the passing of the statute 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, must be stamped with the premium stamp within the time prescribed by the statute 8 Anne, c. 9; and, where such an indenture was stamped at the time of its being produced in evidence with the stamp required by the 55 Geo. 5. c. 184, but not within the time prescribed by the statute of Anne:—Held, that the indenture was altogether void. Rex v. Chipping Norton, 5 B. & A. 412.

An agreement for the assignment of an apprentice from one master to another, must be stamped, by statute 23 Geo. 3, c. 5. Rex v. St. Paul's Bedford, 6 T. R. 452.

An unstamped indenture of apprenticeship, recited that a premium had been paid with the apprentice; but added, that it was paid out of a charitable fund belonging to the parish: the master also proved that the premium had been paid by the parish officers, who informed him at the time that it came out of such fund:—Held, that the fact of payment being proved, the recital in the indenture, and the declaration of the parish officers, could not be admitted in evidence, so as to bring the case within the exception in the 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, s. 190, and that the indenture being unstamped, was void. Rex v. Skeffington, 3 B. & A. 382.

A binding with the consent of trustees of funds bequeathed for that purpose, though they do not execute, is exempt from duty. Rex v. Quainton 2 M. & S. 238.

A pauper was bound apprentice by the trustees of a public charity. The master covenanted to find him meat, drink, apparel, washing, &c. Before the execution of the indenture, the father of the pauper, who was not a party to it, agreed with the master to find the pauper clothing and washing during the term; and he did so. It did not appear that the trustees were privy to this engagement:—Held, that the indenture did not require to be stamped, because either the agreement by the father to provide clothes was not a thing secured to be given to or for the benefit of the master, within the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. part 1, tit. Apprenticeship, or, assuming that it was, then it was void as being a fraud on the trustees, who had bound out the apprentice on the faith that the master was to provide clothes. Rex v. Aylesbury, 3 B. & Adol. 569.

In an indenture of apprenticeship, a covenant by the apprentice to allow his master 2s. per week, and to have wages, and provide for himself during the term, does not require the additional stamp required by 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, upon an indenture, where a sum of money is contracted for with the apprentice. Rex v. Bradford, 1 M. & S. 151. And see Aldridge v. Ewen, 3 Esp. 188.

On parol evidence of the existence of an indenture, the sessions may presume that it was stamped, and the duty paid. Rex v. Badby, 1 Bott's P. L. 549.

The sessions presumed that an indenture of apprenticeship executed 30 years before, and under which the apprentice had regularly served his time for 7 years, when the indenture was given up to him, and proved to be lost, and when the parish in which he was settled under such indenture, had relieved him for the last 12 years, was properly stamped in proportion to the apprentice fee of 12l. received by the master, although the deputy-registrar and comptroller of the stamp duties proved that it did not appear in the office that any such indenture had been stamped or inrolled during that period; and the judgment of the justices was confirmed in K. B. Rex v. Long Buckby, 7 East, 45; 3 Smith, 92.

Effect of Want of Stamp.—An indenture of apprenticeship, unstamped, is void. Rex v. Holbeck, Burr. S. C. 198; Rex v. Llanvair, Burr. S. C. 236; Rex v. All Saints, Burr. S. C. 656.

But not so where the consideration money was only sixpence. Rex v. Yarmouth, Burr. S. C. 379: say, 107: S. P. Baxter v. Faulam, 1 Wils. 129.

And if the indenture be not stamped, and the duty not paid, it cannot be given in evidence, nor is it available for any purpose whatsoever. Cuerden v. Leland, 1 Bott's P. L. 545.

An agreement for an apprenticeship must be stamped in order to confer a settlement by service under it. Rex v. Ditchingham, 4 T. R. 769; Nolan, 109: S. P. Rex v. Edgeworth, 3 T. R. 353.

3. Length of Term.

The statute 5 Eliz. c. 4, avoided all indentures of apprenticeship other than for seven years: but the 54 Geo. 3, c. 96, repealed that statute, and enacted that it might be lawful for persons to take apprentices though not according to the provisions of the statute, 5 Eliz.

The stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4, was construed as rendering indentures made for a less time voidable only, and not void. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13: S. P. Rex v. St. Nicholas, Burr. S. C. 91; 2 Stra. 1066.

But such indenture was not to be avoided by the mere act of an apprentice absenting himself from his master's service, which is an offence under the statute 20 Geo. 2, c. 19. Id.

And, generally, it seems that no act could be relied on as such an avoidance, in an action of trespass against the convicting magistrates, except it appeared on the face of the conviction. Id.

So, a refusal of the apprentice to return into the service of his master, when urged to it by the magistrates themselves in the course of the inquiry, upon the complaint of the master, on a prior absenting himself by the apprentice from the service, was not available in support of such action, against the conviction. Id.

Where an indenture was for five years, the father covenanting for the due service of the apprentice, and the son avoided the indenture by leaving the service, it was held void against the father also. Guppey v. Jennings, 1 Anst. 256.

The statute related only to infants, and not to adults. Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & S. 189.

Where an apprentice was bound for five years only, and a bond was given conditioned for his service, the binding being void by the statute, as not being for seven years, the bond was also void. Burnly v. Jennings, 6 Esp. 8—Ellenborough: S. P. Jackson v. Warwick, 7 T. R. 121.

But it was held that it was no objection to an action on a promissory note, that it was given as part of the consideration of an indenture of apprenticeship for less than seven years, by being antedated; such indenture being only voidable: nor did the consideration of the note fail because the apprentice was discharged by a magistrate after two years, on account of the master having enticed him to commit felony; particularly when the apprentice fee was to be paid in the first instance, though in that case a note was taken for part of it, payable at a distant day. Grant v. Welchman, 16 East, 207.

4. Dissolution.

Apprenticeship is determined by the death of the master. Rex v. Clark, Burr. S. C. 782.

And by the indenture being given up, though not cancelled. Rex v. Titchfield, Burr. S. C. 511.

And by the master telling his apprentice, "he might go where he pleased," and giving up his indenture. Rex v. Notton, Burr. S. C. 629.

So, where a master receives money of his apprentice, who is of full age, to vacate his indenture, the relation is dissolved, although the indenture remains uncanceled. Rex v. Devonshire, (Justices,) Cald. 32.

The apprenticeship of an infant may be dissolved with the consent of all parties concerned. Rex v. Weddington, Burr. S. C. 766. S. P. Rex v. Spaurston, Burr. S. C. 801.

Where there has been such an agreement between the master and the apprentice to give up the indentures, that, to an action of covenant brought by the former, the latter could plead the matter in bar; the indentures are considered as cancelled, though the indentures still subsist in fact. Rex v. Harberton, 1 T. R. 139.

A verbal agreement by a master, "upon being paid three pounds, to set his apprentice at liberty, and to give him up his indenture," does not discharge the indenture. Rex v. Warden, 2 M. & R. 24.

The mother of an apprentice, before the expiration of his apprenticeship, applied to his master to give him up to her, to which he consented, and the apprentice left him; but the indenture remained in the hands of the overseers, and was never applied for, or given up:—Held, that the apprenticeship was not put an end to by the agreement between the parties. Rex v. Skeffington, 3 B. & A. 382. See also Rex v. Warminster, 3 B. & A. 121.

The bankruptcy of the master does not discharge the indenture, although he absconded and afterwards delivered it to the person to whom the apprentice had hired himself as a yearly servant. Rex v. Shepton, 2 Bott's P. L. 395.

Where an apprentice was bound for seven years to A., and served him in his house between five and six, and resided at his mother's for the remainder of the term, having previously agreed with A. that he might work for whom he pleased on his paying a weekly sum to A., who also during the term occasionally gave him work for which he was not paid:—Held, that this was not a continuance of the service to A. for seven years under the indenture. Rex v. Inman, 4 B. & A. 55.

Where the master had agreed by indorsement (unstamped) on the indenture to cancel it, "provided the apprentice made no engagement or entered into any person's service in the town of N.:" it was held, that the apprentice setting up a trade for himself in N. was a breach of the condition, which entitled the master to recal him back into his service. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.

5. Proceedings on.

The covenants in an indenture of apprenticeship are distinct and independent of each other. Winstone v. Linn, 2 D. & R. 465; 1 B. & C. 460.

A declaration on an indenture for a breach of a covenant whereby a master covenanted to instruct the apprentice in the business of a tobacco-nist for four years, and to board and lodge him during that time, alleged, first, a general breach in the terms of the covenant; secondly, a particular breach on the 13th July, averring a refusal to instruct on that day, or at any other time; and thirdly, a similar breach as to boarding and lodging on the same day, and alleging that on that day the master compelled the apprentice to quit the service, and refused to maintain and keep him, contrary to the effect of the covenant. Pleas, first, performance of the covenant until the 10th July: secondly, willingness to maintain and keep the apprentice during the whole term; but that from the date of the indenture until the 10th July the apprentice would not truly and faithfully serve the defendant, nor attend to his business, but on the 10th July refused so to do; and setting forth various acts of misconduct on his part during the interval mentioned; and concluding, that on the 10th July, the apprentice, against the orders of the defendant, quitted the service, declaring that he would never return again, whereby the defendant was hindered and prevented from performing his covenant; thirdly, readiness to instruct and maintain according to the effect of the covenant, but averring neglect and refusal of the apprentice to obey the defendant's lawful commands on the 10th July, and a refusal any longer to serve him, and absconding on that day, whereby he was prevented from performing his covenant: fourthly, averring a wrongful absence of the apprentice on the 10th July, whereby, &c.: and fifthly, a denial that the defendant had compelled the apprentice to quit his service. And the replication took issue on the first and fifth pleas: and as to the others, there was a confession of the breaches of duty mentioned therein; but replying, that, on the 13th July the apprentice returned to the defendant, and tendered and offered himself to serve and obey him according to the indenture, but that the defendant upon request refused to receive him, &c. And the defendant demurred specially to the replication, and assigned for causes that the plaintiff had by his declaration complained of a continued breach of covenant in not instructing, &c. the apprentice, from the time of making the indenture to the commencement of the suit; and that, although the second plea answered to the whole time in the declaration after the 10th July, yet that the plaintiff had omitted to reply to such parts of the defendant's second plea as related to not instructing, &c. the apprentice on the 10th July, and between that time and the 13th July:—Held, that the plaintiff's claim was not entire, but divisible; and covered every part of the time during which the master refused to instruct the apprentice; and consequently, that there was no discontinuance:—Held, also, that the replication was not a departure from the declaration, the gravamen of the complaint being that the defendant had compelled the apprentice to quit his service, and the replication showing the manner in which he had so done:—Held, also, that, as the covenants were independent covenants, the acts of misconduct on the part of the apprentice stated in the second plea, were not an answer to an action brought for a breach of the covenant by the master, to instruct and maintain the apprentice during the term agreed upon by the indenture. Winstone v. Lina, 2 D. & R. 465; 1 B. & C. 460.

Covenant, by the father of an apprentice, against the master, for not teaching the apprentice: plea, that defendant did teach, until the apprentice ran away, and never returned: replication, that, on a certain day, defendant refused then or ever to take back the apprentice, and thereby discharged him: rejoinder, that the apprentice had previously enlisted as a soldier, and that plaintiff never requested defendant to take the apprentice when he was able to return: surrejoinder, that soon after the apprentice had enlisted, defendant refused then or ever, to take him back, and wholly discharged him: demurrer: Held, that the surrejoinder was bad, and no answer to the rejoinder; and that the plea was a good answer to the action; and that the plaintiff should have alleged an offer to return the apprentice. Hughes v. Humphreys, 9 D. & R. 715; 6 B. & C. 680. And see Cumming v. Hill, 3 B. & A. 59.

6. Proof of.

[See EVIDENCE—Proof of private Documents.]

Parol evidence of an indenture, not produced, is in general inadmissible. Rex v. St. Helens, Burr. S. C. 735.

Unless under particular circumstances. Rex v. St. Helens, Burr. S. C. 292: S. P. Rex v. East Knolly, Burr. S. C. 150.

But under circumstances an indenture may be presumed. Rex v. St. Michael's, Burr. S. C. 731.

An averment in a declaration on the stat. 8 Ann. c. 9, against the master of an apprentice, for not inserting the true consideration in the indenture, "that A. B., the apprentice, by a certain indenture, executed on, &c., put himself apprentice to the defendant," &c. may be proved by the production of that part of the indenture executed by the defendant, in which it is recited that A. B. had put himself apprentice, &c. Burleigh v. Stibbs, 5 T. R. 465.

Where, in the absence of the usual proof in support of a settlement by apprenticeship, it appeared that the pauper, when a boy, had lived for three years with his master, and then ran away; that, twenty years since, a fire had happened in the apartment in which the pauper's father lived, and destroyed every thing he had; that the father and mother of the pauper were both dead; that the pauper's master, and the wife of the latter, were also dead; that the master had left no property at his decease, and that no relatives of his were to be found; that a fellow-apprentice of the pauper had seen in his master's hand an indenture, which he understood to be the indenture of apprenticeship of the pauper; and that, after the pauper had left his master's service, he married, and the parish in which he was supposed to have served as an apprentice, relieved his wife by receiving her into the workhouse:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence to warrant the sessions in presuming a legal binding and service as an apprentice, so as to confer a settlement. Rex v. St. Mary-lebone, 4 D. & R. 475.

It was proved by a pauper that he had been bound apprentice twenty-three years ago, by the overseers of the parish to A. B., for seven years, that the indenture was signed and sealed, and that he served the seven years, and that A. B. had the indenture; that, when the apprenticeship expired, the pauper asked A. B. for the indenture, who said the overseers had it:—Held, that the declarations of A. B. who might have been called as a witness, were not admissible in evidence, and that parol evidence of the contents was not admissible, the indenture not having been sufficiently accounted for. Rex v. Denio, 7 B. & C. 620; 1 M. & R. 294: S. P. Rex v. Castleton, 6 T. R. 236.

II. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES.

1. Of Master.

Generally.—It was doubted whether a master who exercised a trade not within the stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4, could legally take an apprentice. Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876.

That statute is repealed by 54 Geo. 3, c. 96.

Semble that an infant may take an apprentice. Rex v. St. Petrox, Dartmouth, 4 T. R. 196.

But the binding an apprentice to a feme covert is void. Rex v. Guildford, 2 Chit. 284.

The interest of a master in his apprentice is a mere personal trust; and the indentures not being assignable in his life time, except by custom, and with the consent of the apprentice, the master's executors cannot maintain debt on a bond for performance of the covenants in the indenture, unless his executors are named. Baxter v. Burfield, 1 Bott's P. L. 581.

If a lad goes on liking, with a view to his being bound an apprentice, his intended master cannot charge for his board and lodging for the first month, nor, perhaps, for so long a time as he conducts himself with propriety; but if he stays for many months, behaving ill, after complaints to his father of his misconduct, it will be for the jury to say whether there was any contract, either express or implied, that his father should pay for his board and lodging. Earratt v. Burghart, 3 C. & P. 381—Tenterden.

So, in another case, under similar circumstances, it was held, that, if no fresh agreement were entered into, the master was not entitled to charge for the board and lodging of the lad whom he employed in his trade; and by consequence, could not set it off in an action by the lad's father for money lent. Wilkins v. Wells, 2 C. & P. 231—Garrow.

So, where a surgeon agreed with defendant to take his son an apprentice in consideration of a premium; and after the son had served a short time, the agreement was broken off on account of the refusal to pay the expense of the stamp for the indenture :—Held, that the surgeon could not recover damages for a breach of the agreement, nor for the board and lodging of the son during the time he remained with him. Keene v. Parsons, 2 Stark. 506—Abbott.

If an apprentice absent himself from his master, and his master take him back, and an action be afterwards brought for such absenting, the taking back, to constitute a defence, must be specially pleaded. Wright v. Gihon, 3 C. & P. 583—Best.

The staying out by an apprentice on a Sunday evening, beyond the time allowed him, is not such an unlawful absenting of himself as will enable his master to maintain an action of covenant against a person who became bound for the due performance of the indenture. Id.

The statute 10 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 5, after reciting the inconvenience which happens by watermen, &c. taking apprentices before they are housekeepers, or have any settled habitation for themselves or their apprentices, enacts, That it shall not be lawful for any waterman, though a freeman of the (waterman's) company, or his widow, to take and keep any person as his or her apprentice, unless he or she shall be the occupier of some house or tenement wherein to lodge him or herself and such apprentice; and that he or she shall keep such apprentice in the same house or tenement wherein he or she shall lodge or lie, on pain of forfeiting ten pounds for every offence. By section 4, it is provided, That no such freeman, or freeman's widow, shall take or retain more than two apprentices at the same time, under a penalty.

Any contract to take an apprentice, entered into by a freeman or widow, not being an occupier of some house, &c., or having already two apprentices, is prohibited; and, therefore, where a pauper bound himself by indenture of apprenticeship to serve the widow of a waterman, she not having such house, &c., but it being understood that he was to live at the house of a freeman of the company (which he did), and to serve him conformably to the indenture, he having two other apprentices at the time, such indenture was absolutely void. Rex v. Gravesend, 3 B. & Adol. 240.

Harbouring apprentices.—The master may have an action against those who detain the apprentice after knowing him to be such. Rex v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745.

But an action does not lie for harbouring an apprentice, if the master at the time of binding was not a housekeeper, and twenty-four years of age. Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876.

Quære, whether, in an action for harbouring an apprentice, it be necessary to prove that the master has made oath that the premium mentioned in the indenture is the whole premium he received? Id.

To earnings of Apprentices.—A master is entitled to maintain assumpsit for the work and labour of his apprentice, against another who har-bours him after desertion. Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & S. 191.

So the master of an apprentice who has been seduced from his service to work for another person, may waive his action for the tort, and bring an action of indebitatus assumpsit for work and labour done by his apprentice, against the person who tortiously employed him. Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112.

So the captain of a ship of war, detaining an impressed apprentice after notice, is liable to the master for wages for the service of the apprentice. Eades v. Vandeput, 5 East, 39, n.; 4 Dougl. 1.

Even if the captain have knowledge of the fact, from the apprentice's assertion merely. Id.

The prize money gained by an apprentice, serving on board a letter of marque ship, does not belong to the master of the apprentice, the usage being proved to be, that such money is the property of the apprentice, (Ashhurst, J., dissentiente.) Carson v. Watts, 3 Dougl. 350.

Impressment.—If an apprentice be impressed into the sea service, the master cannot sue out a habeas corpus to bring him up to be discharged, though the apprentice may. Rex v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 654, n.; Rex v. Reynolds, 6 T. R. 497.

Even if the apprentice, of the age of eighteen, voluntarily enter into the sea service, or he is anxious to return to his master's service. Id.

Nor where the apprentice is impressed, if he be willing to enter into the king's service. Ex parte Lansdown, 5 East, 38.

So a habeas corpus was refused to discharge an apprentice from a king's ship, where the apprentice did not allege that he was detained against his own consent. Ex parte Grocot, 5 D. & R. 610.

The master, however, may have a warrant to the commander of the vessel, to have the apprentice discharged. Id.

Such warrant is granted by the Chief Justice of K. B. Apprentices' Case, 1 Leach, C. C. 203.

So an apprentice, enlisted without his master's permission, may be discharged by the Lord Chief Justice. Rex v. Parkins, 2 Ld. Ken. 295.

2. Apprentice.

An infant may bind himself apprentice by indenture, because it is for his benefit. Rex v. Arundel, 5 M. & S. 257. And see Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Black. 511.

It was once doubted whether an indenture of apprenticeship, made by an infant, being for his benefit, was voidable by him; but it was held, that it was not avoided by the act of his leaving his master's service, and going into the service of another. Ashcroft v. Bertles, 6 T. R. 652.

Nor is going into the king's service with his master's approbation such an avoidance. Rex v. Hindringham, 6 T. R. 557. And see Rex v. Mountsorrel, 3 M. & S. 497.

The indenture cannot be avoided when the apprentice is before a magistrate, charged with misbehaviour under the indenture. Rex v. Beer-erd, Cald. 26.

Nor by the apprentice's absenting himself from the service. Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & S. 189.

Quære, whether an apprentice by the custom of London is compellable to serve after twenty-one? Ex parte Eden, 2 M. & S. 226.

A return to a habeas corpus for the discharge of an apprentice above the age of 21, stating the custom of London, that every citizen and free-man of the city may take as an apprentice any person above the age of 14, and under 21, to serve for 7 years and more, must show that the apprentice was within those ages when he bound himself apprentice; for the court will not intend that from matter debors the return. Id.

The Court of K. B. has no power to discharge an apprentice from his indentures who has bound himself when an infant to serve till 25, and who when he came of age elected to avoid the indentures, after which he had been committed to the house of correction for a misdemeanour in absenting himself from his master's service, when it appeared by the return to a writ of habeas corpus that he was committed, upon a regular conviction, by two magistrates. Ex parte Gill, 7 East, 376; 3 Smith, 369.

But the court said, that such apprentice, having made such objection to the validity of the indenture before the convicting magistrates, who disregarded it, had a remedy against them. Id.

An apprentice, of seventeen years of age and upwards, bound by indenture (which stated her to be fourteen) for seven years, is entitled to be discharged at twenty-one. Ex parte Davis. 5 T. R. 715.

An infant can do no act to bind himself, except such as is clearly for his own benefit; therefore, though he may bind himself an apprentice, he cannot dissolve the indenture. Rex v. Wigston, 5 D. & R. 339; 3 B. & C. 484.

Where an infant bound himself apprentice for seven years, and after serving three years quarrelled with his master, paid him 6d. for the remainder of his time, and then left him, and bound himself to another master in another parish:—Held, that the apprentice had no power to dissolve the first apprenticeship, and that the second, therefore, was invalid, and conferred no settlement. Id.

The statute 28 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 4, makes void all indentures whereby children under eight years of age are bound apprentices to chimney sweepers. Rex v. Hipswell, 8 B. & C. 466; 2 M. & R. 474.

An indentured apprentice deserting his service, on entering on board ship cannot maintain an action for wages. Bright v. Lucas, Peake's Add. Cas. 121—Kenyon.

3 Father.

A father cannot bind his infant son an apprentice without his assent; therefore, an indenture of apprenticeship executed by the master and father, but not by the apprentice himself, was held to be invalid. Rex v. Arnesby, 3 B. & A. 584.

An indenture binding an adult as an apprentice, which was not executed by herself, but only by her father-in-law and the master, though with her consent, does not constitute her an apprentice. Rex v. Ripon, 9 East, 295.

Where the master and father of a boy agreed, under seal, that the master should teach the son the art and mystery of weaving for five years, and find utensils, and the son should receive half his earnings, and the master the other half; under which the boy served out the time as an apprentice:—The Court of K. B. held, that this agreement between the father and master (to which the son was no party), not binding the son, or the father for him, to any service to the master, but the son's service in fact being merely voluntary, was no apprenticeship in point of law. Rex v. Cromford, 8 East, 25.

Money paid as a premium for an apprentice, by a parent to a master under an indenture, cannot be recovered back if such indenture be void for not having the amount of the premium inserted therein; although the statutes relative to the duties payable on such indentures impose a penalty on the master alone for such omission; as the parent, by executing the instrument, must be considered to be aware of its illegality, and therefore in pari delicto with the master. Stokes v. Twitchen, 2 Moore, 538; 8 Taunt. 492.

In a common indenture of apprenticeship under 5 Eliz. c. 4, between the father, son, and master, the father is answerable for what is to be performed by the son. Branch v. Errington, 2 Dougl. 518.

In an action of covenant on an indenture of apprenticeship, by the master against the father, the declaration assigned for breach, that the apprentice absented himself from the service, and the defendant pleaded that his son faithfully served till he came of age, and that he then avoided the indenture:—Held, that this was no answer to the action, as it did not discharge the father's liability on the covenant, which was that his son should serve for seven years. Cuming v. Hill, 3 B. & A. 59. And see Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 680; 9 D. & R. 715.

III. JURISDICTION OF JUSTICES.

The stat. 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 4, enabling two magistrates, "upon application or complaint made upon oath, by any master against such apprentice," as is described in the act, touching any misdemeanour in such service, to hear and determine the same, and to commit or discharge the apprentice, extends to a complaint in writing preferred by the master, and verified by the oath of another person. Finley v. Jowle, 12 East, 248.

This statute is not repealed by 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 1, empowering the justices to oblige an apprentice, absenting himself from his master's service, to serve out, after the expiration of the apprenticeship, such time of absence, or to make satisfaction for it; and in default of such satisfaction, to commit the apprentice; for, the remedy given to the master, by the latter statute, is cumulative to the punishment inflicted on the apprentice by the former statute for his offence. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.

A conviction on the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, of an apprentice for misbehaviour, must show on the face of it that the defendant is an apprentice within the 4 Geo. 4, c. 29, which extends previous acts to apprentices upon whose binding out no larger sum than 25*l.* has been paid. Rex v. Taylor, 7 D. & R. 622.

The sessions may order an apprentice to be discharged, and money to be returned, though bound to a trade not mentioned in the act; but the order must state that the defendant appeared, or was summoned and made default; and that the master had received money with the apprentice. Rex v. Aimes, 1 Bott's P. L. 574.

IV. PARISH APPRENTICES.

1. Statutes.

By 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, churchwardens and overseers, or the greater part of them, by the assent of any two justices, may bind children apprentices; if males, till they are twenty-four years of age, and, if females, until twenty-one, or time of marriage.

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 80, (which has a retrospective operation) indentures signed by two persons only, acting as churchwardens as well as overseers, are as good as if executed by distinct persons as churchwardens, and distinct persons as overseers, as required by the statute of Elizabeth.

By 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 11, no indenture, by reason of which any expense whatever shall at any time be incurred by the public parochial funds, shall be valid and effectual, unless approved of by two justices, under their hands and seals.

Sect. 2 enacts, that in all cases where the residence or establishment of business of the person to whom any child shall be bound, shall be within a different county from that within which the place by the officers whereof such child shall be bound shall be situated, and in all other cases where the justices of the peace for the district or place within which the place by the officers whereof such child shall be bound shall be situated, and who shall sign the allowance of the indenture by which such child shall be bound, shall not have jurisdiction, every indenture by which such child shall be bound shall be allowed as well by two justices of the peace for the county or district within which the place shall be situated, as by two justices of the peace for the county or district within which the place shall be situated wherein such child shall be intended to serve.

It has been held that in such case the indenture must be allowed by four distinct persons, two of them being justices of the county from which the apprentice is to be bound, and the other two being justices of the county into which he is to be bound. Rex v. Shipton, 8 B. & C. 772.

By sect. 7, children are not to be bound until they are nine years of age.

Justices may appoint apprentices at any age beyond that of nurture, except, perhaps, in cases of husbandry. Rex v. Saltern, Cald. 444.

By 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 32, indentures signed by one church or chapelwarden only, where there is one only, are sufficient.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 1, reciting the last statute, it is enacted, that all indentures allowed by two justices, acting as well for the county or district within which the place by the officers of which the child shall be bound shall be situated, as for the county or district within which the place shall be situated wherein such child shall be intended to serve, shall be as good as if allowed by two justices acting for each respectively.

Sect. 3, provides, that indentures with the corporation seals of directors, guardians, or other corporations authorized to bind children, shall be sufficient.

By sect. 4, indentures for binding parish apprentices within cities, boroughs, or towns corporate, shall be allowed by two justices, one acting for the county, and the other for the corporate jurisdiction.

2. To whom.

A person occupying lands in a parish, but living out of it, is compellable to receive a parish apprentice. Rex v. Clap, 3 T. R. 107.

Where several persons hold land in partnership, some of whom actually reside on and occupy it, and others reside at a distance in another parish, the latter, as well as the former, are bound to take parish apprentices if in other respects they are fit persons to take them. Rex v. Barwick, 7 T. R. 33.

So although it is enacted by 20 Geo. 3, c. 36, relative to the binding of poor apprentices within particular incorporated districts, that no person shall be bound to receive any such apprentice, unless he be an inhabitant and occupier in the parish where such child lives, it is not necessary that the master should actually reside in the parish; if he be an occupier there it is sufficient, for, inhabitant and occupier are for this purpose synonymous terms. Rex v. Tunstead and Happington Hundreds, 4 T. R. 523.

Incorporeal property (as tithes) makes the holder liable to take parish apprentices. Rex v. Saltern, Cald. 444.

A poor child may be bound apprentice to the inhabitant of another parish. Rex v. St. Margaret's, Burr. S. C. 728: S. P. Anon. Lofft, 79.

Quære, whether a parish apprentice can be bound to a person living abroad, though retaining property in the parish? Rex v. Spreyton, 3 B. & Adol. 818.

3. By whom.

The stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, does not require absolutely two church wardens in every parish for the management of the poor; and, therefore, an indenture binding out a poor apprentice, by one churchwarden (where by custom there was but one,) and one overseer, was held to be good within the fifth section of that statute, which requires it to be executed by the greater part of the churchwardens and overseers. Rex v. Skilton (Earl), 1 B. & A. 275.

Since the 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, an indenture executed by the overseers of a township which has no churchwardens or chapelwardens, and maintains its own poor separately, is valid, although neither of the churchwardens of the parish at large within which the township is situate join in the execution. Rex v. Nantwich, 16 East, 228.

An indenture, executed by W. S. churchwarden and J. G. overseer of the poor of a hamlet maintaining its own poor separately from the parish at large, not being impeached by evidence negating its execution by a majority of the churchwardens and overseers of the hamlet, shall be deemed good, by intending that there were two overseers for the hamlet, as required by stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 21, and only one churchwarden, by custom, in the same place. Rex v. Hinckley, 12 East, 361.

Where a parish is incorporated with others for the maintenance of its poor, and a guardian is appointed under the 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, the churchwardens and overseers may still bind out poor children apprentices, and the indentures need not be signed by the guardian. Rex v. Lutterworth, 5 D. & R. 343; 3 B. & C. 487.

Where a poor child was bound apprentice by two persons styling themselves churchwardens and overseers, who had been appointed overseers at a time when one of them was churchwarden, who continued sole churchwarden for about two months afterwards, when the other overseer was appointed sole churchwarden in his place, it was held that the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, was not satisfied. Rex v. All Saints, Derby, 13 East, 143.

The statute 51 Geo. 3, c. 80, extends to parishes where there are three officers only, one of whom acts as churchwarden as well as overseer; and, therefore, an indenture in such a case, signed by two parish officers, one of whom acted in a double capacity, was held to be valid. Rex v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, 2 B. & A. 200.

And notwithstanding that statute, an indenture signed by two parish officers, one of whom acted in the double capacity of churchwarden and overseer, was held good. Rex v. Stoke Golding, 1 B. & A. 173.

4. Assent of Justices.

When Required.—The 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, applies to cases where the binding is either directly or indirectly by the parish officers, the first ten sections applying to cases where the parish officers were parties to the indenture, the eleventh to cases where they were not actual parties to the indenture, but procured the binding. Rex v. St. Peter (Herefordshire), 1 B. & Adol. 916.

A. intending from charitable motives, to apprentice a poor person, collected a sum of money for that purpose from several individuals, and, among others, from the overseers of three different parishes, though there was no evidence that the person belonged to either; and the sums given by the overseers were charged and allowed them in their respective accounts. With the sums so collected, and with money of his own, A. paid the premium of apprenticeship. The sessions thought that this was not a binding by the parish officers; that the payments by the several parishes were voluntary; and that the indenture was one within 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 31, which would have required the assent of two justices: Held, that the decision was right. Id.

Lands were devised for the relief of the poor of H., one half of the revenue to be employed for the relief of widows, the other half towards binding out apprentices. The rents were received by the churchwardens, and not mixed with the poor's rates; but kept in a distinct account. A parishioner of H., not receiving parish relief, applied to the churchwardens to provide him with the means of apprenticing his son. The son was apprenticed, and the churchwardens paid the premium, costs of indenture, and expense of clothing the apprentice, out of the charity fund:—Held, that this was not an indenture by which an expense was incurred by public parochial funds, within 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 11, and therefore not void for want of the approval of two justices according to that statute. Rex v. Halesworth, 3 B. & Adol. 717.

And in a similar case, where lands were devised to the churchwardens and overseers of L., and their successors, upon trust to apply the rents towards educating twenty poor children, and a part thereof yearly towards apprenticing eight of such children, to be chosen out and allowed by the said churchwardens and overseers and the principal inhabitants:—Held, that this also was not a public parochial fund within the meaning of the act. Id.

Where an apprentice is bound out of a parish by his father, but part of the expenses is paid out of the parochial funds, the indenture must be approved by two justices, or it will be void ab initio. Rex v. Stoke Damarel, 1 M. & R. 458; 7 B. & C. 563.

Before the execution of an indenture, the master said that the intended apprentice should have better clothes. The apprentice then applied to the parish officers, who agreed to give him 2l. on the execution of the indenture for the purpose of buying clothes, which they did accordingly:—Held, that the money paid by the parish officers was an expense incurred by reason of an indenture of apprenticeship, within the meaning of the 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 11, and therefore that the indenture required the assent of two justices. Rex v. Mattishall, 8 B. & C. 733; 3 M. & R. 386.

Though an infant be a pauper in the parish workhouse at the time of the binding, and the parish officers pay the premium, still it is not necessary for them to sign the indenture, or that the justices should assent thereto, if the infant be not a parish apprentice within the meaning of the 43 Eliz. c. 2. Rex v. Arundel, 5 M. & S. 257.

What Justices, and how testified.—To make a good binding, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, one of the two justices who assent to it must be of the quorum; and this must be alleged. Rex v. Woolstanton, Burr. S. C. 129; 2 Stra. 1110.

The 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2, gives the justices a discretion to determine on the propriety of the binding generally, and not merely with regard to the fitness, respectively, of the master and apprentice. Rex v. Mills, 2 B. & Adol. 578.

At the time of the execution of the indenture by the master, it seems that the indenture ought to have the signature and allowance of two justices. Rex v. Saltern, Cald. 444.

An indenture assented to by the two justices separately, is void. Rex v. Hamstall Ridware, 3 T. R. 380.

The assent of two magistrates is sufficiently signified by one of them first signing it alone, and being afterwards present when the other signs it. Rex v. Winwick, 8 T. R. 454.

An indenture stated that the overseers and churchwardens of M. in the county of Warwick, with the consent of justices of the said county, bound a pauper apprentice to T. W. of H., in the county of Leicester, and the justices in their written consent in the margin, described themselves as justices of the county aforesaid:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that they were justices of the county of Warwick. Rex v. Hinckley, 1 B. & A. 273.

By an indenture which purported to be made between the churchwarden and overseers of the parish of D., in the county of Northampton, of the one part, and A. B. of Countesthorpe, in the county of Leicester, of the other part, it was witnessed that the said churchwarden and overseers of the parish of D., with the consent of two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, dwelling in or near the said parish, had bound, &c.; the justices in their written consent in the margin of the indenture, described themselves as justices of the county aforesaid:—Held, that the words "county aforesaid," had the same meaning as the words "said county" in the body of the indenture; and, that it sufficiently appeared, by the reference to the latter words, that the consenting justices were justices of the county of Northampton. Rex v. Countesthorpe, 2 B. & Adol. 487.

The approval of the justices must be sealed as well as signed, by 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 11, and if it is not the indenture is void. Rex v. Stoke Damerel, 7 B. & C. 563; 1 M. & R. 458.

And such an indenture, approved of under their hands only, is void, and not voidable. Id.

An indenture to which parish officers are parties is valid, if allowed by two justices under their hands only, though expense be incurred, but not clandestinely, by the parish funds, under sections 1 to 10. Rex v. St. Paul. Exeter, 5 M. & R. 94; 10 B. & C. 12.

Section 11, requiring an allowance by two justices under their hands and seals, applies only to cases where expense is incurred by the parish funds, the parish officers not being parties to the indenture. Id.

5. Notice to Overseers.

Under the statute 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2, when an apprentice is bound from one parish into another, notice must be given to the overseers of the latter, though both be in the same county and jurisdiction of the peace. Rex v. Threlkeld, 4 B. & Adol. 229; 1 Nev. & M. 14.

Where, pursuant to an order of county justices overseers of a county parish bound one of their paupers apprentice to a master residing in a borough within the same county, having justices of exclusive jurisdiction therein, and gave no notice of such binding to the overseers of the borough parish:—Held, that the indentures were void by 56 Geo. 3, c. 139. (Abbott, dissentiente.) Rex v. Newark-upon-Trent, 4 D. & R. 745; 3 B. & C. 59.

6. Indentures.

An indenture by which a poor girl is bound to serve till 21, (without saying "or till marriage," as directed by the statute 43 Elizabeth,) is voidable and not void; and can only be avoided before justices. Rex v. Stoke, 1 Wils. 96; S. P. Rex v. St. Petros, Burr. S. C. 248.

Where a parish apprentice was bound by the order of two justices, which was referred to in the indenture, in which the date of the order was omitted: Held, that such indenture was void by the first and fifth sections of the statute 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, and consequently that it conferred no settlement by serving under it. Rex v. Bebburgh, 3 D. & R. 338; 2 B. & C. 222.

Parish apprentices may be bound for a shorter, but not for a longer time than the statutes mention. Rex v. Woolstanton, 1 Bott's P. L. 606.

The person to whom a parish appoint an apprentice, is concluded by signing the indenture; nor can parol evidence be admitted of any prior informality in such indenture. Rex v. Saltern, Cald. 444.

The signing of the indenture by a parish apprentice is not necessary to its validity. Rex v. Chalbury, 1 Bott's P. L. 640.

If a poor boy be bound apprentice by the parish officers, with the consent of two justices of the county, to a master residing in a different parish and county, and all the parties (except the apprentice) sign the indenture, it is sufficient. Rex v. St. Nicholas, Nottingham, 2 T. R. 726.

7. Dissolution of Contract.

A parish apprenticeship cannot be dissolved, whilst the apprentice is under age, without the consent of the parish officers. Rex v. Austery, Burr. S. C. 441.

An infant parish apprentice and his master cannot by themselves vacate the indenture. Rex v. Langham, Cald. 126.

But the indenture may be dissolved, by an agreement betwixt the master and apprentice, after he has attained twenty-one years of age; and the assent of the parish officers is not necessary to the validity of such agreement. Rex v. Hacburton, 1 Bott's P. L. 615.

A parish apprentice may agree with his master to cancel his indentures at twenty-one though bound till twenty-four. Bierlow v. Warlow, 1 W. Black. 592; Burr. S. C. 562.

Since the act 32 Geo. 3, c. 57, for the regulation of parish apprentices, which recites, "that on the death of the master during the term of such apprenticeship, the agreement for service on the part of the apprentice is at an end:" but the covenant for maintenance on the part of the master still continues as far as his assets extend, or doubts have arisen with respect thereto, &c.: and then enacts that such covenants for maintenance of parish apprentices, with whom no more than 5*l.* shall be given, shall not continue in force longer than for three calendar months after the death of the master, &c., during which three months the apprentice shall continue to serve the executors, &c. or their appointees; and that within the three months, two justices of the peace, on application by the widow, or certain relatives of the master, may, by indorsement on the indenture, &c., direct such apprentice to serve out his time with the applicant; such applicant having lived with and been part of the family of the master, &c. at his death; but otherwise, that such apprenticeship shall be determined; and then it provides (sect. 5.) "that nothing thereinbefore contained shall extend to any parish apprentice, but to such only as shall be living with and make part of the family, or be in the actual employment of the original master, &c. or of any subsequent master, &c. appointed under the provisions of the act at the time of the death of such master, &c.:"—Held, that a parish apprentice, who was not living at the time of his mistress's death with her appointee under the provisions of the act, though living with her son by her individual consent, could not gain a settlement in another parish by serving another mistress with the consent of the son and assignee of the original mistress; given after the death of the original mistress; the contract of service being declared by the recital of the act to be at an end upon the death of the original mistress, unless continued in the manner described in the second, third, and fourth sections of the act: to which sections the proviso in the fifth section seems properly to apply. Rex v. Sheephead, 15 East, 59.

8. Effect of Fraud.

An indenture of apprenticeship of an infant pauper, sanctioned by the overseers and magistrates acting bona fide, is not avoided by its having been fraudulently contrived between the parent and nominal master, for the purpose of obtaining a premium from the parish, and keeping such infant at home. Rex v. Great Sheepy, 2 M. & R. 286; 8 B. & C. 74.

Where the parish officers, wishing to put out a child at the age of nine years as an apprentice, upon the refusal of his mother, withdrew her parish allowance; but two years afterwards, she not being able to support him, went to the parish officer and consented to her son's being put out, and, by desire of the parish officer, chose a master, to whom the parish officer agreed to give three guineas, &c.; and afterwards all the parties met, and went before the justices, who, thinking that the master had already a sufficient number of apprentices, refused to bind the son; whereupon the parish officer declaring, that, if he could not have him bound there, he would elsewhere, took the parties to an inn, and procured an indenture, which was filled up and executed, and the son, with the mother's consent, bound himself for seven years:—Held, that the sessions were not warranted in finding fraud, so as to defeat the settlement under the indenture. Rex v. Kilby, 2 M. & S. 501.

I. SUBMISSION.

1. Where there is a Cause depending.

Where the parties intend to refer all disputes, the terms of the reference should be "of all matters in difference between the parties;" and when the reference is only intended to be of the matter in the particular cause, "of all matters in difference in the cause." Smith v. Muller, 3 T. R. 624.

It is best, in entering into a rule of reference, to stipulate that the reference shall not be defeated by the death of one of the parties before award made. Toussaint v. Hartop, 7 Taunt. 571; Moore, 287; Holt, 335.

After an order of reference has been made with the consent of counsel and attorney, the court will not set it aside on an affidavit by a party expressly denying his attorney's authority to refer, though the application be made before any step taken by the arbitrator, excepting the appointment of a meeting. Filmer v. Delber, 3 Taunt. 486; 1 Chit. 193, a.

Where matters in a suit in Chancery were ordered by the Vice-Chancellor, with the consent of the attorneys of the parties in the suit, to be referred to A. B.:—Held, upon error, that no sufficient authority to refer on behalf of the infant plaintiffs was shown, the attorneys in the suit having no such authority, and that therefore the submission was not mutual, and consequently the award was bad. Biddell v. Dowse, 6 B. & C. 255; 9 D. & R. 404, reversing S. C. nom. Dowse v. Coxe, 10 Moore, 272; 3 Bing. 20.

Parties may, if they choose, take arbitrators instead of the master in equity; and they must proceed in the same way as the master, and make the same report. Dick v. Milligan, 2 Ves. jun. 23.

By a reference to arbitration both at law and equity, the court divests itself of all judgement upon the facts. Id.

2. When there is no Cause depending.

Statute 9 & 10 Will. 3.—By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, merchants, traders, and others, desiring to end any controversy, suit, or quarrel, for which there is no other remedy but by personal action or suit in equity, may, by arbitration, agree that their submission of their suit to the award or umpirage of any person shall be made a rule of any of his majesty's courts of record, and insert the agreement in the submission, which may, on affidavit of the witnesses thereto, or any one of them, be made a rule of court, and enforced by the usual means.

The act was made to put submissions, where no cause was depending, upon the same footing as where there was, and is only declaratory of what the law was before in the latter cases. Leucas v. Wilson, 2 Burr, 701.

Under this statute a submission to arbitration may be made a rule of court in vacation. In re Taylor, 5 B. & A. 217.

The court have no authority under the statute to make a parol submission to an award a rule of court. Ansell v. Evans, 7 T. R. 1. But see — v. Mills, 17 Ves. 419.

Where, in the course of proceeding before an arbitrator, the parties agreed by parol that the arbitrators should determine as to a lease to be granted: it was held, that such an agreement was within the statute of frauds; and the award, having directed a lease to be made, could not be enforced. Walters v. Morgan, 2 Cox, 369.

Where the plaintiff's attorney, having received a sum of money from the defendant for the plaintiff in the progress of a cause, entered into an agreement to secure it to the latter, in which was contained a proviso that the agreement should be made a rule of court:—Held, by C. P., that they had not authority to direct it to be done, as the stat. 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, is confined to cases of submission to arbitration, and the plaintiff's attorney was no party to the original suit; and that therefore the plaintiff's only remedy was by action for the breach of the agreement. Steers v. Harrop, 7 Moore, 466; 1 Bing. 133.

The courts have jurisdiction though the submission were to make the award, instead of the submission, a rule of court. Pedley v. Westmacot, 3 East, 603; Powell v. Phillips, 2 Tidd's, Prac. 875.

So also a submission to arbitration may be made a rule of court, where the bond, made between the trustee of a wife and her husband, recited that a suit for separation had been instituted between the husband and wife in the commons, and that, in order to put an end to any contest about the terms of separation, it had been agreed that all matters should be referred to J. S., and either of the parties should be "at liberty to apply to the court" to make the award a rule of court. Soilleux v. Herbst, 2 B. & P. 444. And see Thompson v. Charnock, 8 T. R. 139.

The court will not make a submission to an award a rule of court, where part of the matter agreed to be referred has been made the subject of an indictment. Watson v. McCullum, 8 T. R. 520.

Nor where there is a cause depending. Lonsdale (Lord) v. Littledale, 2 Ves. jun. 451.

But a party who has preferred an indictment for an assault, may submit the adjustment of the reparation to arbitration, as well as the costs. Baker v. Townshend, 1 Moore, 120; 7 Taunt. 422; 1 Moore, 287; Holt, 335.

Where an agreement of reference is to be made a rule in the alternative of one of two courts, and it is made a rule of one, it cannot be made a rule of the other:—Semble, that, under the statute, such an agreement in the alternative is illegal. Wispenny v. Bates, 1 Dowl. P. C. 559; 2 C. & J. 379; 2 Tyr. 466.

Where four actions, three in the Exchequer, and one in K. B., were referred by an agreement, which had been made a rule of K. B., under a clause therein, empowering the parties to make it a rule of the K. B. or Exchequer, the court refused to allow the agreement to be made a rule of the court of Exchequer. Id.

A submission may be made a rule of court after the award is made. Smith v. Symes, 5 Madd. 74; S. P. Fetherstone v. Cooper, 9 Ves. 67.

But a submission ought not to be made a rule of court after it has been revoked by one of the parties. King v. Joseph, 5 Taunt. 452.

Submission ought to be mutual.—In an action of debt on an award, the execution of the submission by all the parties on both sides must be proved. Ferrer v. Owen, 7 B. & C. 427; 1 M. & R. 222.

So in the case of bonds of submission, though the action is against only one of the obligors in one of the bonds. Id.

Where, in an action by the assignee of a bankrupt, the petitioning creditor's debt was to be proved by a deed of reference between himself, the bankrupt, and others, their partners, of all accounts between them, or any two of them; and by an award (inter alia) of a separate debt of above 100*l.* due from the bankrupt to the petitioning creditor, who was also the assignee:—Held, that it was not sufficient to prove the execution of the deed by the petitioning creditor and the bankrupt, without proving also the execution by the other partners, (by whom it appeared on the face of it to have been also executed); for the consideration to each to execute his own submission was the submission of all the others, and without proof of that, the arbitrators had no authority to make their award between any of the parties. Antam v. Chace, 15 East, 209.

In an action against the marshal for an escape of a prisoner committed under an attachment for not performing an award, an allegation that plaintiff and the prisoner referred their disputes to arbitration "by mutual bonds of submission," is a material and necessary allegation, and must be strictly proved; proof of the prisoner only having executed a submission bond is insufficient, and the plaintiff must be nonsuited. Brazier v. Jones, 2 M. & R. 88; 8 B. & C. 124.

Semble, that he need not have done so had he alleged and proved a rule of C. P., ordering the issuing of the attachment, although proof of such rule, without a statement of it in the declaration, would not be sufficient. Id.

3. Effect on claims of Parties.

Generally.—A submission to arbitration of all matters in difference between the parties in the cause is not confined to the subject-matter in the particular action then depending, but will extend to cross demands between the parties, though not pleaded by way of set-off; and the costs being to abide the event makes no difference. Malcolm v. Fullarton, 2 T. R. 645.

But a reference of all matters in dispute in the cause between the parties, is confined solely to the matters in dispute in that trial. Id.

Where cross actions and all matters in difference are referred, and the award decides the actions only, it is no objection to the award that a claim not included in either action was brought before the arbitrator, upon which he has not adjudicated, unless it be also averred that he did not take such claim into his consideration. Rex v. St. Catherine Dock Company, 1 Nev. & M. 121.

By an order of reference, all matters in difference in a cause between A. and B. were referred to an arbitrator, and by a subsequent order C. was made a party thereto, and it was directed that all matters in difference between A., B., and C., should be referred to the same arbitrator, and that the costs of the suit should abide the event of the award. The arbitrator made two awards, in the one of which he awarded that A., at the date thereof, was indebted to B. without mentioning C., and in the other that A. was indebted to C., without mentioning B.:—Held, that both these awards were bad, as he had not decided all the matters in difference between all the parties, Winter v. White, 2 Moore, 723. But see Jackson v. Yabely, 5 B. & A. 848.

On a reference of all matters in difference, a demand on one side was laid before the arbitrators, and immediately admitted by the other party; no evidence was therefore given concerning it, nor any adjudication upon it requested. The arbitrators published their award of and concerning the matters referred to them, directing payment of a sum of money (without saying on whose account) to the party against whom the above claim had been made, with costs, and it was proved that they left that claim out of consideration in making their award, as a matter not in dispute:—Held, that the award was bad, as the arbitrators ought to have taken notice of the admitted demand. In re Robson & Railson, 1 B. & Adol. 723.

Prevention of future Litigation.—An award, made upon a reference of all matters in difference between the parties, does not preclude the plaintiff from suing upon a cause of action subsisting against the defendant at the time of the reference, upon proof that the subject-matter of such action was not laid before the arbitrators, nor included in the matters referred. Ravee v. Farmer, 4 T. R. 146. But see 1 Bro. P. C. 528. And see Mason v. Thornton, 4 Esp. 180.

Otherwise, if included in the reference. Smith v. Johnson, 15 East, 213.

Therefore, where disputes existed between the master and owner of a ship, touching the ship's accounts on a certain voyage, they referred all actions and causes of action to arbitrators, who awarded a balance to be paid by the owner to the master:—Held, upon a rule for an attachment for non-payment of the sum awarded, that it was not competent to the owner to claim a deduction of a certain sum, the price and proceeds of certain goods shipped on their joint account, the whole of which price had been paid by the owner in the first instance, on the ground that such particular adventure formed no part of the disputes between them, and had not been submitted to, nor taken into the consideration of the arbitrators; because it was plainly within the terms and scope of the reference; the direct object of which was to make a final settlement of all matters of account between the parties; and it was the owner's own fault if he kept back that item of the account. Smith v. Johnson, 15 East, 213.

So, where all matters in difference in a cause were referred, and the arbitrator awarded to the plaintiff a sum in satisfaction of his damages in the cause, it was held that the plaintiff could not afterwards support another action for a demand within the scope of the reference, and which he might have brought before the arbitrator. Dunn v. Murray, 4 M. & R. 571.

The plaintiff, an attorney in the country, sued his agent in town for negligence in conducting the plaintiff's business, and alleged in his declaration that he had thereby become liable to pay certain sums, and had lost the employment of divers clients. The cause was referred under an order of Nisi Prius, by which the plaintiff consented not to bring any action or suit concerning the premises referred. The order was afterwards made a rule of court, and the arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, who afterwards commenced a second action against the defendant, alleging in the declaration that the plaintiff had paid certain sums to persons who had threatened him with actions, and lost the employment of divers other clients, from the negligence of the defendant. The court refused to stay the proceedings in the second action on motion, but intimated an opinion that the recovery in the former action might be pleaded in bar to the latter. Dicas v. Jay, 4 M. & P. 285; 6 Bing. 519.

Where a party has agreed to refer all matters in difference to arbitration, and the arbitrator has decided on it, such determination shall be conclusive and binding on the party; nor shall he be allowed to go into the original case at the trial, unless there was some misconduct on the arbitration. Bailey v. Lechmere, 1 Esp. 377.—Kenyon.

Mode of taking Objection.—The objection to an award, that the arbitrator has left undetermined any of the matters submitted to him (though fatal), cannot be taken advantage of upon demurrer to a declaration in debt on the award, unless it appear on the face of the submission and award. Aitcheson v. Cargey (in error), 13 Price, 639; 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clel. 367; affirming S. C. nom. Cargey v. Aitcheson, 3 D. & R. 433; 2 B. & C. 170. And see In re Cargey, 2 D. & R. 222.

But it may be put on the record by plea, with sufficient averments. Id.

Therefore, where arbitrators awarded that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 444*l.* part of a sum of 2,500*l.* recovered against the plaintiff: that the latter should pay five-eighths, and the defendant three-eighths of the costs of several suits; that the money already paid by either of them should be considered as in part payment of his proportion; and that, upon payment of the 444*l.* and the costs, mutual releases should be given and executed:—Held, on general demurrer to a declaration on the award, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; for that, as to the first part of the award, nothing appeared on the record to show that the arbitrators had not taken all the matters into consideration; and that, as the plaintiff was originally liable for the whole 2,500*l.*, he must continue so for all the sums, except the 444*l.* awarded to him; and consequently that the first part of the award was sufficiently certain:—Held, also, that the second part, respecting the costs, was sufficiently certain, as it would be made so on the taxation of the costs by the master; and that it would also have been final, if no dispute had existed respecting the amount of the money paid; and that, if such dispute did exist, or if the arbitrators had neglected to consider all or any of the matters submitted to them, the defendant should have pleaded the fact, instead of demurring. Id.

To debt on bond conditioned to perform an award, under a reference of all matters in difference between the parties, it is a good plea in bar, that, at the time of submission, certain negotiable bills of exchange, drawn by the defendant and accepted by the plaintiff, were then outstanding, and that, an indemnity of the defendant against such bills was a matter in difference between the parties, which was notified to the arbitrators before the award made, and that they made no award concerning it, and that some of the bills had not been paid by the plaintiff, and the defendant was still liable to the holders; though it appeared by the award set forth, that the arbitrators stated therein, that they had heard the allegations of the parties, and examined all the accounts, bills of exchange, &c., and all other evidence and proofs produced to them, touching the matters in difference, and awarded of and concerning the same, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 1,500*l.* in full of all claims and demands upon him, &c.; and so proceeded to award concerning other specific matters; but without mentioning such outstanding bills, or any indemnity concerning the same. Mitchell v. Slaveley, 16 East, 58.

To debt on an arbitration bond of all matters in difference, averring that the arbitrators took upon themselves the arbitration, and awarded, &c.: the defendant pleaded that all matters were submitted, &c.; that there were disputes as to money claimed by him of the other party, and that the arbitrators took upon themselves to arbitrate of and concerning, &c., and that they made no award of those sums: the plaintiff replied, that the arbitrators made their award of and concerning, &c., as in the declaration; to which there was a demurrer:—Held, that the plea was bad, for want of averring that the arbitrators had notice of the claims of the defendant, and refused to arbitrate concerning them. Elsom v. Relfe, 2 Smith, 459.

Where matters have been referred to arbitration, it is a matter of evidence whether a particular matter of complaint has been subjected to the arbitrator's consideration. Martin v. Thornton, 4 Esp. 180—Alvanley v. S. P. Raves v. Farmer, 4 T. R. 146. And see Smith v. Johnson, 15 East, 213.

An order of reference was made in an action where the main point in dispute was, whether certain goods, the value of which (namely, 246*l.*) the defendants proposed to set off against the plaintiff's claim, had been bought by the plaintiff of the defendants, or of A. B. The question stated in the order was, whether or not the defendants were entitled to set off the sum of 246*l.* The arbitrators, as was alleged, being unable to decide the main point; but finding that, at all events, a small reduction (8*l.* 12*s.*) was to be made from the 246*l.*, awarded, in the terms of the order of reference, that the defendant was not entitled to set off 246*l.* A rule was afterwards obtained for setting aside the award as not being final, but discharged. The plaintiff then brought an action of debt on the award, and the defendants pleaded a set off to the amount of 247*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*—Held, that they could not now set off the difference between the 246*l.* and 8*l.* 12*s.*, for that the award was conclusive as to the sum now sought to be set off, as well as that mentioned in the order of reference; and if the arbitrators had gone upon a mistaken ground, their decision could not be questioned in this form. Johnson v. Durant, 2 B. & Adol. 925.

4. Effect as an Admission.

Agreeing to refer the quantum of damages to arbitration, after a question of law has been reserved by the judge at the trial, does not waive an objection to the defendant's liability in the action, after the arbitrator has made his award. Oxenham v. Lemon, 2 D. & R. 461.

Trustees of an insolvent debtor, by entering into an arbitration bond, admit that they have assets, and may be directed to pay costs. Wansborough v. Dyer, 2 Chit. 40.

In another case it was held, that proof must be given of assets to make a trustee who has submitted to arbitration personally liable. Davies v. Ridge, 3 Esp. 101.—Eldon.

As to executors, see EXECUTOR.

5. Submission become abortive.

Where a verdict was found for the plaintiff at nisi prius for the damages laid in the declaration, subject to the award of an arbitrator, who declined proceeding in the reference, he having been previously consulted by one of the parties in the cause:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to issue judgment and execution against the defendant forthwith for the damages found by the jury, unless he consented to refer the damages to another arbitrator. Woolley v. Clarke, 2 D. & R. 158: S. C. nom. Woolley v. Kelly, 1 B. & C. 68.

But where a plaintiff recovered a verdict for 5*l.* subject to an order of reference at nisi prius whether such verdict should stand, or be reduced to 20*s.*, and the arbitrator refused to make an award, the court of C. P. would not allow a verdict to be entered for the lesser sum, until such order was made a rule of court. Kirkus v. Hodgson, 3 Moore, 64.

If in equity arbitrators under an order of reference in a cause decline to proceed, the suit may be prosecuted as if no reference had been made. Crawshaw v. Collins, 3 Swans. 90.

There is no case at law or in equity where an award is not made at the time and in the manner stipulated, in which the court have substituted themselves for the arbitrators, and made the award, even where the substantial thing to be done was agreed by the parties, but the time and manner left to others to prescribe. Blundell v. Brettargh, 17 Ves. 242.

6. Proof of.

A submission to arbitration may be given in evidence on a count on the original promise. Kingston v. Phelps, Peake, 227—Kenyon.

Where the submission to arbitration has been obtained by fraud, it may be given in evidence under a plea of non assumpsit, or nil debet. Jackett v. Owen, 2 Chit. 39.

In an action on an award made under a judge's order, to prove the order, it is enough to put in the office copy of the rule making it a rule of court. Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17—Ellenb.

In such an action, where the submission is to A. and B., and such third person as they shall appoint; to satisfy an allegation that A. and B. appointed C., it is not enough to put in an award executed by all three, reciting that A. and B. did appoint C., and to prove that C. acted along with them in the arbitration. Id.

7. Revocation.

(a) Death.

An arbitrator's power is determined by the death of the parties to the submission, or any one of them. Edmunds v. Cox, 2 Tidd's Prac. 877; 2 Chit. 432; 3 Dougl. 406. And see Bristow v. Binns, 3 D. & R. 184.

At any time before the award. Cooper v. Johnson, 2 B. & A. 394; 1 Chit. 387.

But the court will not set aside an award, made after the death of one of the parties, where a cause is referred by order of Nisi Prius. Id.

Where a cause was referred to arbitration, the court of C. P. however set aside an award made subsequently to the death. Potts v. Ward, 1 Marsh. 366.

So, where a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to an award, and, before award made, the defendant died, it was held that a subsequent award of a verdict for the defendant, and judgment thereon, could not be supported. Toussaint v. Hartop, 7 Taunt. 571; 1 Moore, 287; Holt, 335: S. C. Anon. 1 Chit. 187, n. (a).

So also if a juror be withdrawn, and the cause referred an award made after the defendant's death is bad. Id.

The rule seems to be, that, where all the matters referred under an order of Nisi Prius will be embraced in the verdict and judgment, the death of either of the parties before the award is made will not revoke the submission. Bower v. Taylor, cited in Rhodes v. Haigh, 3 D. & R. 610; 2 B. & C. 345.

But it is otherwise if the verdict and judgment will not embrace all the matters referred. Rhodes v. Haigh, 3 D. & R. 608; 2 B. & C. 345. And see McCl. 253.

In that case a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, by consent, in an action on the case for diverting a stream of water, subject to the award of an arbitrator, to whom, by an order of nisi prius, all matters in difference were referred, with liberty for him to regulate the future enjoyment of the stream, according to the respective rights of the parties, and one of them died before any award was made:—Held, that the arbitrator's authority was thereby revoked and determined; and the court set aside an award made by him subsequently thereto. Id.

It is clear that the death of either of the submitting parties will not determine the authority of the arbitrator, or vacate the subsequent proceedings upon the reference, where the deed or instrument of submission contains a proviso that the submission shall not vacate or expire through the death of either of the parties. Macdougall v. Robertson (in error), 2 Y. & J. 11; 1 M. & P. 147; 4 Bing. 435.

So, where matters in a suit in equity, and all disputes, &c., were ordered by the Vice Chancellor, with the consent of the attorneys of the parties in the suit, to be referred to arbitration, and there was a clause that in case any of the parties should happen to die before the making of the award, the reference was not to abate, but the executors and administrators of the parties so dying were to be considered and taken as parties to the order, in like manner as their testator or intestate:—Held, that the death of one of the parties before the award was made did not revoke the authority of the arbitrator, but that the executors were bound by his award made after the death of the testator. Dowse v. Cox, 10 Moore, 272; 3 Bing. 20; S. C. (in error) nom. Biddle v. Dowse, 9 D. & R. 404; 6 B. & C. 255.

So the authority of an arbitrator under a rule of court, which empowers him to deliver his award to the parties or their executors, does not determine by the death of one of the parties before the award is executed. Clarke v. Crofts, 4 Bing. 143; 12 Moore, 349.

So, where the plaintiff had died before award made, and the arbitrator had enlarged the time after his death:—Held, that an award made afterwards was valid, and binding upon the defendant. Tyler v. Jones, 4 D. & R. 740; 3 B. & C. 144.

An award against trustees and guardians of an infant tenant for life of the realty, who died before the award was made, is not binding. Bristow v. Binns, 3 D. & R. 184.

The death of the defendant after the making of an award in pursuance of a rule of court, where no verdict or judgment has been entered up, abates the suit, and the court will not enforce the performance of the award by attachment. Maffey v. Godwyn, 1 Nev. & M. 101.

If, after reference by bond, one of several of the obligees dies before the award is made, the arbitrator cannot award a payment to the survivors and executors of the deceased, and that they shall release the obligors. Quære, whether the award would have been good, if made on the surviving obligees only. Edmunds v. Cox, 2 Chit. 432; 3 Dougl. 406; 2 Tidd's Prac. 877.

Where a plaintiff obtained a verdict, subject to a reference, and the arbitrator died before making his award, and the parties agreed that another should be substituted in his stead, and one of them afterwards objected to such substitution, the court of C. P. refused to interfere, as the death of the arbitrator had the effect of opening the cause, and as execution could not be sued out on the verdict on account of such death. Harper v. Abrahams, 4 Moore, 3.

(b) Bankruptcy and Insolvency.

Whether bankruptcy revokes a submission to arbitration is not settled—Per Tenterden. Marsk v. Wood, 9 B. & C. 659; 4 M. & R. 504.

If one of two parties who have submitted disputes to arbitration become bankrupt, if all his interest in the matter in dispute pass to the assignees, the other may revoke the submission without being liable to an action; for the submission was no longer mutual, and therefore was not binding. Id.

Where a cause was referred by order of nisi prius, and the plaintiff became bankrupt after the reference, but before the making of the award:—Held to be no revocation of the submission. Andrews v. Palmer, 4 B. & A. 250; S. P. Snook v. Hellyer, 2 Chit. 43.

Proof upon an award made after an act of bankruptcy, was in one case expunged. Ex parte Kemshead, 1 Rose, 149.

After traverse of an extent in aid, the prosecutor and defendant agreed to refer to arbitration the amount of the debt due to the former; and an award was made for payment of money by defendant to the prosecutor: before which, however, the defendant was discharged under an insolvent act, having inserted this debt in his schedule. The crown being no party to the reference, the award was set aside, and the insolvency was held to exonerate the defendant from liability to an attachment for not performing it. Rex v. Bingham, 2 Tyr. 46; S. C. not S. P. 1 C. & J. 245.

(c) Act of the Party.

By stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39, the power and authority of arbitrators or umpires appointed by or in pursuance of any rule of court, or judge's order, or order of nisi prius in any action, or by or in pursuance of any submission to reference containing an agreement that such submission shall be made a rule of court, shall not be revocable by any party to such reference without leave of the court or a judge; and the arbitrators to umpires are to proceed with the reference notwithstanding any such revocation, and to make an award although the person making such revocation shall not afterwards attend; and the court or a judge thereof may from time to time enlarge the time for making the award.

Before the statute, it was held, that, where a cause is referred by order of nisi prius, either party has power to revoke the submission, and the court cannot vacate the revocation, or compel the party revoking to pay costs to the other party, unless a power to do so is given by the order of reference. Stee v. Coxon, 10 B. & C. 483.

A judge's order directed that a cause should be referred, and that either party wilfully preventing the arbitrator from making an award by affected delay or otherwise, should pay such costs as the court thought reasonable and just:—Held, that such order might be made a rule of court after one of the parties had revoked the authority of the arbitrator. Aston v. George, 2 B. & A. 395; 1 Chit. 204.

Where the reference is made an order of a court of equity, it is a high contempt to revoke. Haggett v. Welch, 1 Sim. 134; S. P. Harcourt v. Ramsbottom, 1 J. & W. 511.

A revocation may, under circumstances, be bad in equity though good at law. Id.

A submission by deed may be revoked by deed and notice of revocation before award made; but the arbitrators are right in afterwards proceeding to award, because the party continuing in submission is entitled to his action for damages on non-performance of the covenant to abide by the award. King v. Joseph, 5 Taunt. 452.

So, if bound in a penalty, the penalty is not avoided by the revocation. Id.

Where parties by bond have agreed to submit matters in difference between them to arbitration, and that the submission should be made a rule of court, it is competent to either, even since the statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, to revoke by deed his submission, and notify the same to the arbitrators before the authority be executed. Milne v. Gratrix, 7 East, 608.

A party is not liable to an attachment for not obeying an award, if made after a deed of revocation of the submission entered into, before the submission was made a rule of court, and notice thereof to the arbitrators. Id.

Where a cause was referred to arbitration under a judge's order, and one of the parties, before the award was published, and before the judge's order was made a rule of court, revoked his submission, and the arbitrator made an award notwithstanding such revocation, the court of C. P. set it aside, although the judge's order had been made a rule of court before any application to set aside the award was made. Clapham v. Higham, 7 Moore, 703; 1 Bing. 87.

So, where a cause was referred to arbitration by an order of nisi prius, and the arbitrator, after a notice of revocation in writing, made an award directing a verdict to be entered for the defendant, the court set aside the award, assuming it to be a nullity. Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown, 8 D. & R. 100; 5 B. & C. 384.

Where the parties have proceeded under an order made by consent for referring a cause to arbitration; quære, whether it is competent to either to withdraw. Crawshaw v. Collins, 1 Swans. 40.

The plaintiff having a claim on the defendant, under a charter-party, which the latter disputed, it was by bonds of submission referred to two arbitrators and an umpire; and the order of reference was made a rule of court. The umpire having conducted himself with partiality towards the defendant, the plaintiff revoked his authority to the arbitrators, and went to Scotland, where he resided. The arbitrators afterwards made an award, by which they found that nothing was due to the plaintiff, and directed him to pay half the costs of the reference; notwithstanding which, he commenced an action against the defendant on the charter-party, and recovered a verdict, and sued out execution. The court refused to stay the execution, although it was insisted that the plaintiff was liable to an attachment for non-performance of the award, and that he could not be served with process, he being out of the jurisdiction of the court, and that the defendant had commenced an action against him on the arbitration bond. Stewart v. Williamson, 2 M. & P. 765.

A. declared in covenant against B. and her husband, for that B., before her intermarriage, covenanted with A. by deed to leave certain accounts in difference between them to arbitration, and to abide by and perform the award, provided it were made during their lives; and A., protesting that B. had not, before her intermarriage, performed her part of the covenant, averred, that, after making the indenture and the intermarriage of the defendants, the arbitrator awarded B. to pay A. a certain sum; and then alleged a breach for non-payment of such sum. After verdict, on non est factum pleaded:—Held, that, upon this declaration, it must be taken that B. intermarried after the submission and before the award made; in which case, although the plaintiff could not recover upon the breach assigned for non-payment of the sum awarded, because the marriage was a countermand to the authority of the arbitrator; yet, as by the marriage itself, B. had, by her own act, put it out of her power to perform the award, the covenant to abide by the award was broken; and therefore judgment could not be arrested, on the ground that the marriage was a revocation of the arbitrator's authority, and that so the plaintiff could not recover as for a breach by non-performance of the award. Charnley v. Winstanley, 5 East, 266; 1 Smith, 433.

(d) Time of Revocation.

A submission to arbitration by a baron's order is revocable until the order is made a rule of court. Greenwood v. Misdale, M'Clel. & Y. 276.

An order of Nisi Prius may be made a rule of court after notice of revocation of the arbitrator's authority. Aston v. George, 1 Chit. 204; 2 B. & A. 395.

A judge's order of reference is not revoked by a revocation of the submission. Id.

Plaintiff who had taken a verdict subject to an award under order of Nisi Prius, after the case had been heard, and just before the award was about to be made, revoked the arbitrator's authority, with circumstances savouring of mala fides, and gave fresh notice of trial. The order of Nisi Prius not having been made a rule of court, the court refused to stay proceedings. Green v. Pole, 6 Bing. 443; 4 M. & P. 198.

(e) Proceedings for.

A revocation of a submission not under seal, before award made, is in effect a breach of an agreement to stand to, obey, abide, perform, &c. an award, for which assumpsit will lie. Brown v. Tanner, M'Clel. & Y. 464; 1 C. & P. 651.

A declaration for such breach may state that the defendant undertook to perform the agreement, and not to revoke the submission, and lay the revocation as a breach. Id.

Assumpsit will also lie on an agreement not under seal, when the parties bound themselves in a penalty "for the true and faithful observance and performance of the award which should be made," where one party revoked his submission before an award was made. Warburton v. Storer, 6 D. & R. 213; 4 B. & C. 103.

Semble, that no action can be maintained for refusing to nominate an arbitrator, in pursuance of a covenant to refer matters to arbitration. *Tattersall v. Groot*e, 2 B. & P. 131.

Where the first count of a declaration in covenant by deed to abide by an award, alleged breaches generally, that the defendant did not on request pay the money awarded, and delayed the arbitrators from making their award so soon as they would have done; and the defendant pleaded to such count, a revocation by deed of the authority of the arbitrators, before they made their award:—Held, on demurrer, that this plea was not a confession of the covenant, upon which the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. The second count alleged, "that the defendant did, before the making of the award, hinder and prevent the arbitrators from making their award by executing a deed, whereby he did revoke, &c. the arbitration, and thereby hindered the arbitrators from making their award," &c.:—Held, on demurrer, that an allegation of notice of the revocation to the arbitrators was not necessary, it being sufficient to aver the fact of revocation by deed to sustain this count, and call upon the defendant to plead issuably. Marsh v. Bulteel, 1 D. & R. 106; 2 Chit. 316; 5 B. & A. 507.

If it be doubtful whether arbitrators had made their award either previous or subsequent to their receiving notice of a deed of revocation, the Court of C. P. will not stay the proceedings, but leave the party to plead such award puis darrein continuance. Lowes v. Kermode, 2 Moore, 30.

II. EFFECT OF AGREEMENTS TO REFER.

Agreements or covenants, that, in case of disputes between the parties, all matters in difference shall be referred to arbitration, do not oust the courts of law or equity of their jurisdiction. Thompson v. Charnock, 8 T. R. 139; S. P. Mitchell v. Harris, 2 Ves. jun. 133; Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 822.

To covenant on a deed (made for the performance of several matters) the defendant cannot plead that in the deed there is a covenant, that, in case any difference should arise between the parties respecting any part of the agreement, it should be settled by three arbitrators, to be chosen, &c., and that he offered to refer the matter in dispute, &c., but that the plaintiff refused, &c. Id.

So an action on a policy of insurance lies although the policy says the matter shall be referred in case of a loss or dispute. Kill v. Hollister, 1 Wils. 129.

One of the conditions in a policy of insurance against fire, stated, that, if any difference should arise on any claim, it should be immediately submitted to arbitration; and, after directing how the arbitrators should be chosen, added, that no compensation should be payable until after an award determining thereof should be duly made. It was held, that the assured might maintain an action on such policy, notwithstanding the condition, where it appeared that the insurers denied the general right of the assured to recover any thing, and did not merely question the amount of damages. Goldstone v. Osborn (Bart.), 2 C. & P. 551—Best.

An agreement to refer to arbitration is not a bar to relief in equity. Nichols v. Chalie, 14 Ves. 270.

To a bill for discovery and relief, a plea of such an agreement to refer to arbitration was overruled. Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 815.

And a bill for the specific performance of such an agreement does not lie. Agar v. Macklow, 2 Sim. & Stu. 488.

Although an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration is generally no objection to a suit in a court of equity, yet in one case, upon the nature of the subject,—the management of the Opera House,—and the anxious provision of the parties for arbitration, the court refused upon motion to interfere before they had taken that course. Waters v. Taylor, 15 Ves. 10.

III. ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

By stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4 c. 42. s. 40, upon references by rule or order of court, or a judge, or of Nisi Prius, or by submission containing an agreement for making it a rule of court, the court by which the rule or order shall be made, or which shall be mentioned in the submission, or any judge, by rule or order may command the attendance and examination of any person to be named, or the production of any documents to be mentioned in such rule or order; and disobedience shall be deemed a contempt, if in addition to the service of such rule or order an appointment of the time and place of attendance in obedience thereto, signed by one at least of the arbitrators, or by the umpire, before whom the attendance is required, shall also be served, either together with or after the service of such rule or order: Provided, that the witness shall be entitled to the like conduct money, and payment of expenses, and for loss of time, as for and upon attendance at any trial; and provided, that the application for the rule or order shall set forth the county where such witness is residing at the time, or satisfy such court or judge that such person cannot be found: Provided also, that no person shall be compelled to produce any writing or other document that he would not be compelled to produce at a trial, or to attend at more than two consecutive days to be named in such order.

Before the statute, the Court of K. B. refused to compel a witness to attend before an arbitrator although the reference was by order of Nisi Prius. Wansel v. Southwood, 4 M. & R. 359.

IV. ARBITRATOR.

1. Power and duty.

(a) As to Evidence and Witnesses.

To administer Oath.—By stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 41, when it shall be ordered or agreed in any rule or order of reference, or submission containing an agreement to make it a rule of court, that the witnesses shall be examined upon oath, the arbitrator or umpire, or any one arbitrator, may and are required to administer an oath to such witnesses, or to take their affirmation in cases where affirmation is allowed by law instead of oath; and perjury may be assigned on such oath or affirmation.

And the court will not set aside an award, on the ground of the witnesses not having been examined on oath; if no such objection was made at the time of their examination. Ridout v. Pye, 1 B. & P. 91.

As to reception of Evidence.—Arbitrators are bound by those rules of evidence which govern the courts of law. Att. Gen. v. Davison, M'Clel. & Y. 160.

The clause in an order of reference, authorizing the arbitrator to examine the parties to the suit, on oath, if he thinks fit, empowers him to examine the plaintiff to a point upon which no other evidence can be adduced on the same side, Warne v. Bryant, 5 D. & R. 301; 3 B. & C. 590.

If arbitrators have power to examine the parties in the cause, they may waive the objection taken to the competency of a witness, that he has such an interest that he ought to have been made a party. Lloyd v. Archbottle, 2 Taunt. 324.

An arbitrator may direct a party to verify particular documents before a government commissary. Atkyns v. Baldwin, 1 Stark. 209—Gibbs.

All the witnesses of a party against whom the award is made must have been examined, and in his presence, or it will be a ground for setting the award aside; but that must be made clearly to appear. Bedington v. Southall, 4 Price, 232.

Quære, if it be not necessary to show that such examination was, in point of fact, required; or whether a witness having been named as to be examined, be not a requisition. Id.

The court refused to set aside the award of a barrister, on the ground that he had admitted an incompetent witness. Perryman v. Steggall, 9 Bing. 679; 3 M. & Scott, 93.

If an arbitrator, a barrister, reject a witness as inadmissible in point of law, the Court of Exchequer will not interfere to set his award aside on that ground, although the party applying offer to pay all the previous costs incurred, considering the parties bound by his decision. Campbell v. Twemlow, 1 Price, 81.

An award is not to be set aside because the arbitrator made use of the judgment of another person. Emery v. Wase, 5 Ves. 848.

Referees may take the opinion of a third person as evidence, but cannot previously be bound by it. Hopcraft v. Hickman, 2 Sim. & Stu. 130.

(b) As to Matters referred.

Authority of Arbitrator generally.—An arbitrator, on a general reference of all matters in difference, may go farther than the court could, to do complete justice, and therefore may relieve against a harsh right which in a court of justice would prevail. Knox v. Symonds, 1 Ves. jun. 369.

An arbitrator to whom all actions and causes of action, and all matters in difference whatsoever, in two actions subsisting between the same parties, have been referred, is not compelled to take matters of an equitable nature into consideration, but an award made by him in reference to the two actions only is final. Craven v. Craven, 1 Moore, 403; 7 Taunt. 644.

If an arbitrator chooses to put the law out of the question, and to award the payment of a conscientious demand, arising out of a transaction which he knows to be illegal, he may do so. Quære. Delver v. Barnes, 1 Taunt. 48.

Though an arbitrator on a question of mixed law and fact has allowed transactions apparently illegal, as premiums of insurance on a voyage to a hostile port, the court will not set aside the award. Wohlenberg v. Lageman, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

The plaintiff proceeded to, and obtained, outlawry against two partners, and, afterwards, the partnership being dissolved, one arrived in England, and was arrested. On a rule being obtained for reversing the outlawry, an order of reference of all matters in difference between the parties was made. The arbitrator refused to consider the claims of the defendants respecting the outlawry, but confined himself to the action commenced against them:—Held, that he was not bound to take the outlawry into consideration, as no joint specific injury was stated to have been sustained by both the defendants; and the court of C. P. refused to set aside the award. Garland v. Noble, 1 Moore, 187.

In an agreement of reference it was agreed that the arbitrator "shall or may" award a certain matter, with a proviso, &c. &c.:—Held, that the words "shall or may" were imperative on the arbitrator, and that he was bound to insert the proviso in his award, the context of the agreement, and the situation of the parties, requiring such a construction. Crump v. Adney, 1 C. & M. 355.

An arbitrator, to whom a cause was referred from Nisi Prius, found that the plaintiff was entitled to a right of way for carriages which he had at first claimed by his declaration, but afterwards abandoned:—Held, that this was an excess of jurisdiction, and the award was set aside pro tanto. Hooper v. Hooper, M'Clel. & Y. 509.

Entry of Verdict.—A submission to refer a cause, and the subject matter thereof, and the issue therein, to the award of a barrister, does not authorize him to order a verdict to be entered up. Hutchinson v. Blackwell, 8 Bing. 331; 1 M. & Scott, 513; 1 Dowl. P. C. 267.

Where an arbitrator, to whom a cause, before it came to issue, was referred, awarded thus—"I award and direct, that a verdict in this cause be finally entered for the plaintiff, with 284*l.* 12*s.* damages:"—Held, that he had exceeded his authority in directing the entry of a verdict; and that, as the award consisted of only one sentence, that direction could not be rejected, and the residue considered as an award that so much was due and to be paid; and that, therefore, the award could not be supported either by attachment or action. Semble, that, at whatever stage of proceeding a cause may have been referred, an arbitrator can in no case have authority of himself to direct the entry of a verdict. Jackson v. Clarke, M'Clel. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

An order of Nisi Prius, referring an action of debt on a money bond (where the issue was payment by a co-obligor), and all matters in difference, to arbitration, does not require the arbitrator to direct for what sum the verdict shall be entered; and the court refused to set aside an award directing the verdict to be entered generally for the plaintiff, on a suggestion that the arbitrator ought to have directed for what sum judgment and execution should have been taken out, without proof that there were other matters in difference between the parties. Cayme v. Watts, 3 D. & R. 224.

Upon the trial of an action of case, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to a reference of all matters in difference. The defendant claimed before the arbitrators a sum of money due to him upon the balance of an account, which was admitted by the plaintiff to be due. The award, without stating that it was made of and concerning the premises, directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff with damages:—Held, that this award was sufficient. Gray v. Gwennap, 1 R. & A. 106.

Upon a declaration of eleven special counts for negligence, and common counts for money paid, &c., an arbitrator, under an order of Nisi Prius, found that the plaintiff had "good cause" (not causes) of action for 23*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.*, and directed a verdict to be entered up for that sum:—Held, sufficiently certain, as the arbitrator had in effect ordered a general verdict to be entered for the plaintiff on the whole of the declaration. Dicas v. Jay, 2 M. & P. 448; 5 Bing. 281.

In an award, the direction to enter a verdict in favour of a plaintiff for a certain sum, is equivalent to an order to pay that sum. Cartwright v. Blackworth, 1 Dowl. P. C. 489.

Limit by Amount of Verdict.—Where a verdict is taken for a certain sum, subject to the award of an arbitrator, to whom all matters in difference are referred by a rule of Nisi Prius, he cannot award a greater sum than that for which the verdict was taken; and if he do, no assumpsit by implication will arise to pay even to the extent of the verdict so taken. Bonner v. Charlton, 5 East, 139; 1 Smith, 369.

But it seems that, under a reference of all matters in difference, the arbitrator will not of necessity be confined to the amount of the damages for which the verdict is taken. Pearse v. Cameron, 1 M. & S. 675.

The court will not give leave to increase the sum in the declaration and rule of reference, on an affidavit that a larger sum will probably be proved before the arbitrator. Id.

If an arbitrator awards a greater sum than the amount of the verdict, and judgment is entered for the whole, and it appears that a part of the sum is covered by a countervailing demand which never was a subject of dispute, so that only a balance less than the amount of the verdict is ultimately to be paid over; the court will reduce the judgment to the amount of the verdict, and grant execution for the sum really due. Prentice v. Reed, 1 Taunt. 151.

Where an arbitrator has power to order what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties respecting the matters in dispute: quære, whether he might not direct them to consent to an application to the court for enlarging the damages given by the verdict. Id.

Cases of Partnership.—If an arbitrator be appointed to arbitrate a certain measure contemplated between two parties, as a dissolution of partnership, he is not necessarily bound to direct that the partnership shall be dissolved. Simmonds v. Swaine, 1 Taunt. 549.

If two persons enter into partnership, and covenant, in case of the dissolution of the partnership, to submit all matters relating thereto to arbitration, the arbitrators are not thereby authorized to determine whether any part of the sum of money which was the consideration of the partnership should be refunded. Tattersall v. Groote, 2 B. & P. 131.

By submission to arbitration, it was agreed between two partners to dissolve partnership, and that all matters in difference between them, and the terms and conditions on which the co-partnership should be dissolved, should be referred to an arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded, that it should not be lawful for one, during the life-time of the other, to carry on business at the place they had done, or within thirteen miles:—Held, that the arbitrator had not exceeded his authority. Morley v. Newman, 5 D. & R. 317.

Six partners entered into two bonds of submission to arbitration; in the one, three gave a joint and several bond to the other three, conditioned for the due performance of the award; and the latter gave a similar bond to the three former; the arbitrator awarded that one of the three former should pay a certain sum to one of his co-obligors. In an action of debt on the award brought by the one against the other alone:—Held, that he might recover the sum awarded. Winter v. White, 3 Moore, 674; 1 B. & B. 350.

If a debt paid by one of two partners for the other on account of an illegal transaction, be referred together with other causes of dispute between the two to an arbitrator, who awards a sum due from one partner to the other for money so paid, the court will set aside that part of the award. Aubert v. Mase, 2 B. & P. 371.

Award of Interest.]—An arbitrator is not bound by a rule of practice adopted by courts of law for general convenience; and therefore, where, on a reference of a Chancery suit, and all matters in difference between the parties, the arbitrator had allowed interest, (when it would not be allowed by a court of law or equity,) the court refused to set aside the award on that ground. In re Badger, 2 B. & A. 691.

The time for making an award having been extended by the alteration and re-execution of the arbitration bonds:—Held, that the arbitrator had authority to award interest on the principal sum found to be due, beyond the date of the original submission, but within that of the re-execution, because the date of the submission had been extended to the time of re-execution. Watkins v. Phillpotts, M'Clel. & Y. 393.

Quære, whether an award of interest on a sum due on securities carrying interest, beyond the submission and till payment, be good. Id.

An award is not to be impeached for allowing compound interest, for it may be allowed in case of a contract for it, either express or to be inferred from the nature of the dealings between the parties. Morgan v. Mather, 2 Ves. jun. 15.

And see stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, ss. 28, 29, 30.

Future Direction.]—Where an arbitrator, in regulating the future use of a stream of water, the right to which was divided between two parties, interfered with the customary enjoyment by one of them of another stream, which exclusively belonged to him, and was not a matter in difference, and which joined the first:—Held, that he was empowered so to do, as being incidental to, and resulting from, his former direct and larger power. Winter v. Lethbridge (Bart.), M'Clel. 253; 13 Price, 533.

But if an arbitrator, after regulating on the subject matter referred to him in its then state, goes on and regulates prospectively on the same subject matter, reduced to a different state, and thereby in some degree altered: quære, whether that be not a proceeding beyond the scope of his authority. Id.

An arbitrator, to whom the question of the right of two records to the tithe of certain lands, was referred, had power to devise all means to prevent future litigation between the parties, and to settle all matters in difference between them, and to determine what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties, touching the matters in dispute:—Held, that he did not exceed his power by awarding undivided moieties of the tithes to the two rectors. Prosser (Clerk) v. Goringe, 3 Taunt. 426.

In an agreement for a lease for a term of years from the 1st of May, 1801, the lessee was to be allowed three years from that date, for winning a colliery, without payment of any rent: an arbitrator being authorized to give such directions for a lease, according to the agreement, as he should think fit, directed a lease for years from the 1st of May, 1804:—Held, that he had thereby exceeded his authority. Bonner v. Liddell, 1 B. & B. 80.

Other Things.]—An award between a lessee and his neighbour, awarding an act to be done for the benefit of the latter by the lessee, which would be waste upon the estate of the lessor, is bad. Alder v. Savill, 5 Taunt. 454.

The court of C. P. refused to set aside an award giving a great loss to the defendant on some goods which had been damaged at sea, and sold at a loss at the loading port, although it appeared that the goods had been afterwards sold at the port of delivery for nearly as much as if they had received no injury whatever. Hardy v. Innes, 6 Moore, 574.

A rule to refer all matters in difference between the parties to the master, in a case where a rescue had been returned by the sheriff, and the court, on hearing affidavits, had refused to set a small fine, thinking the return warranted, is not an authority to him to decide upon the reality of the rescue; and such rule is incorrectly drawn up. Rez v. Griffith, 1 Ld. Ken. 138.

It is competent to arbitrators to inquire whether a ransom, for which the plaintiff seeks to be repaid, were justified by an extreme necessity, within the stat. 45 G. 3, c. 72, s. 16, which enables a Court of Admiralty to allow such necessity. Miller v. Robe, 3 Taunt. 461.

Assignees of a bankrupt, having received 1500*l.* from a debtor to the bankrupt, as a debt due to his estate, and having commenced an action against him for a further demand on the same account, to which he had only pleaded the general issue, agree with him to refer their differences to arbitration, and the submission is that all matters in difference between the parties in the cause be referred; the arbitrator has power to award that the assignees shall repay a part of the sum already received, if it appear to have been paid by mistake. Malcolm v. Fullarton, 2 T. R. 645.

Where an action by assignees to recover money paid by a bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, to creditors, for goods bona fide sold in the ordinary course of trade, was referred at Nisi Prius to an arbitrator, who found specially a payment under arrest, and several other circumstances strongly tending to show knowledge in the creditors that the bankrupt was in insolvent circumstances, and awarded a verdict for the plaintiffs for the sum paid and costs, without stating on what ground he proceeded:—Held, that he must have concluded the defendants had notice of the insolvency, and that the award was sustainable on that ground. Teale v. Young, M'Clel. & Y. 497.

(c) Ex parte proceeding.

Manner of taking Evidence.—Where a cause is referred to arbitration (the mode of conducting it must be left to the arbitrators; and if they, after the first or second meeting, exclude both the parties and their attorneys, and examine witnesses privately, at their (the witnesses') houses, it seems that such conduct is no good ground of objection, provided it does not proceed from corrupt motives; at all events, if either party would take advantage of it, he must give notice at the time that he intends to rely on it as an objection; and if he lie by and suffer other meetings to take place, and when the arbitrators are ready to make their award revokes his admission, he is liable in an action to the other party, who was desirous of having the benefit of the award. Hewlett v. Laycock, 2 C. & P. 574—Abbott.

Commissioners, under an act of parliament which authorized them so to do, examined witnesses, and took down their depositions in writing, and afterwards communicated the effect of them to the party sought to be affected by the proceedings, but who had no opportunity of being present at the examination, or of cross-examining the witnesses. On a subsequent reference to arbitration of these accounts, the court held, that the arbitrators could not receive as evidence the depositions taken before the commissioners. Att. Gen. v. Davison, M'Clel. & Y. 160.

Where, in an action for not repairing, arbitrators made their award upon a view of the premises without calling the parties before them, it was set aside, as other facts might be necessary to be inquired into. Anon. 2 Chit. 44.

A cause having been referred to arbitration under an order by consent, the court will not make an order on the arbitrators to proceed. Crawshay v. Collins, 1 Swans. 40.

Where the arbitrator after having appointed several meetings to enable the defendant's witnesses to attend, at length gave the defendant's attorney notice that he should make his award if required by the plaintiff; and being required so to do, he awarded a sum to be paid to the latter: on the defendant's attorney swearing that he understood the arbitrator meant to call another meeting, the court of C. P. set aside the award, although no objection was made to the amount awarded, giving the plaintiff liberty to enforce the defendant's agreement to enter into the rule of Nisi Prius for reinstating the premises. Doddington v. Hudson, 1 Bing. 384; 8 Moore, 163.

Where an arbitrator, having by mutual agreement of the parties closed his examination, refuses the application of the defendant's attorney for another hearing, and makes his award: the court will not set aside the award, on the affidavit of the defendant's attorney, that he is in possession of evidence which would repel that on which the award was founded. Ringerv. Joyce, 1 Marsh. 404.

Improper conduct of an arbitrator in making his award, without allowing the defendant further reasonable time to bring forward and examine his witnesses, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action on the bond condition for the performance of the award; though one of the terms of submission is, that the arbitrator shall examine the witnesses to be produced by the parties, and though the whole of the time limited for the making of the award is occupied in the examination of the plaintiff's witnesses. Grazebrook v. Davis, 8 D. & R. 295; 5 B. & C. 534.

Where arbitrators, who had proceeded in a reference, informed the defendant, who was present at the meeting, that they would suspend their proceedings till books of account had been referred to:—Held, that having afterwards made an award in his absence, without examining such books, was a good ground for setting aside the award. Pepper v. Gorham, 4 Moore, 148.

It is no ground for setting aside an award, that one of the defendant's witnesses was re-examined by the arbitrator, after the evidence was closed on both sides, and the plaintiff's attorney gone; though, by a different testimony from what he gave at first, the arbitrator's opinion was influenced; unless such re-examination was brought about by the management of the defendant's attorney. Atkinson v. Abraham, 1 B. & P. 175.

An award was set aside where the arbitrator received evidence, after notice to the parties that he would receive no more, in which they acquiesced. Walker v. Frobisher, 6 Ves. 70.

Absence of Parties.—An arbitrator is not to consider himself agent for the person who appoints him. Calcraft v. Roebuck, 1 Ves. jun. 226.

One party having ineffectually attempted to revoke his submission and refused to attend, semble that the arbitrator may proceed ex parte, without giving him notice. Harcourt v. Ramsbottom, 1 J. & W. 512.

An arbitrator has a power subject to his discretion to proceed ex parte, if one of the parties will not attend. Wood v. Leake, 12 Ves. 412.

It is however irregular for two arbitrators to meet without notice to the third; but not a sufficient ground to set aside the award when the substance was settled in his presence. Goodman v. Sayers, 2 J. & W. 261.

On the evidence given by one of the parties at a meeting, of which the other had notice, but did not attend, the sum the party attending was to pay was decreased by the arbitrators. This private examination was held incorrect, and the award set aside. In re Hick, 8 Taunt. 694.

(d) Costs.

[For Rights of Parties as to Costs—See Costs.]

After a payment of money into court in a cause, the parties agreed to refer the settlement of the accounts between them to arbitration:—Held, that the arbitrators had no power over the costs in the cause up to the time of the payment into court. Stratton v. Green, 1 M. & Scott, 668; 8 Bing. 437.

Where an order of Nisi Prius is silent upon the subject of the costs of the reference and award, the arbitrator has no authority to adjudicate upon them, but each party must bear his own expenses of the reference, and the half of the award. Taylor v. Gordon, 2 M. & Scott, 725; 9 Bing. 570; S. P. Grove v. Cox, 1 Taunt. 165.

Where a cause and all matters in difference were referred, but nothing was said about costs:—Held, that the arbitrator had power over the costs of the cause, but not those of the reference. Firth v. Robinson, 1 B. & C. 277.

Where all matters in difference are referred to arbitration, except the costs of the action, and no notice is taken of the costs of reference, the latter are not in the discretion of the arbitrator. Strutt v. Rogers, 2 Marsh. 524; 7 Taunt. 213.

An award of costs sustained in the action does not include the costs of the reference. Brown v. Marsden, 1 H. Black. 223.

An arbitrator may award costs without any express authority for that purpose. Roe d. Wood v. Doe, 2 T. R. 644; S. P. Anon. Loft, 34.

Although the arbitrator may have exceeded their authority as to costs, it does not vitiate or invalidate the whole of the award. Aitchison v. Cargay, 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clel. 376.

Where a court of sessions referred an indictment for an assault to an arbitrator, and empowered him to settle all costs incident to the indictment and subsequent proceedings thereon:—Held, that such arbitrator did not exceed his authority, by awarding the previous as well as subsequent costs. Baker v. Townshend, 1 Moore, 120; 7 Taunt. 422.

Upon a submission by bond of all matters in difference between the parties in a cause, without making any mention of costs, the arbitrator has no authority to award costs as between attorney and client. But the plaintiff, waiving his costs, and having only demanded the principal sum awarded, took his attachment for that sum. Whitehead v. Firth, 12 East, 165.

Where the submission to an award is by bond merely, the arbitrators may award costs between attorney and client; and, though the arbitrators award the costs of the reference, which are not within the terms of the submission, that will not vitiate the award itself, but it will be good as to the remainder. Hartnell v. Hill. Forrest, 73.

An award in which no partiality appears, is not to be set aside on the ground that the arbitrators have given more money as costs than by calculation they would amount to. Turner v. Rose, 1 Ld. Ken. 393.

A special jury having been obtained on the motion of the defendant, the cause was referred, and by the order of reference, the costs of the cause were to abide the event, and the costs of the reference and of the special jury were left to the discretion of the arbitrator:—Held, that the arbitrator could not, after directing a verdict for the plaintiff, award that the latter should pay the costs of the special jury. Finlayson v. McLeod, 1 B. & A. 663.

Where the costs of the cause and of the special jury are distinctly and separately submitted to the discretion of arbitrators, they must distinctly adjudicate upon each, or the award is bad. George v. Lousley, 8 East, 13.

Where an arbitrator, authorized to tax costs in a cause, has allowed an item which it is insisted ought not to have been charged, the court will not refer the matter to the master. Anon. 1 Chit. 38.

Where a cause was referred to an arbitrator, to ascertain what verdict ought to be given, and his certificate was to be entered up as the verdict of a jury, and he certified that a verdict should be entered for the plaintiff for a certain sum; and told the parties that each should pay his own costs of reference, which was acceded to; and, upon a motion to set aside the certificate, the cause was referred back to him, when he certified to the same effect, but omitted to give any directions as to the costs of the second reference:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to such costs, as, in the absence of any specific direction, the costs must follow the verdict. Mackintosh v. Blyth, 8 Moore, 211; 1 Bing. 269.

An arbitrator, under a rule of reference which directs that the costs of the cause shall abide the event, has no power to direct those costs to be set off against the costs in a prior cause, although all matters in difference are referred. But the award is not to be set aside entirely, but only for that part which is incorrect. Hunsted v. Kidd, 1 Chit. 526.

(e) Altering Award.

After the delivery of an award, the arbitrator cannot, though within the time limited by the submission, correct a mistake in the calculation of figures, by making another award. Ervine v. Elton, 8 East, 54.

An alteration by the umpire of the sum awarded, though made on the same day, and after notice of the making, but before delivery of the award, is void; but the award is good for the original sum awarded, which was still legible. Henfree v. Bromley, 6 East, 309; 2 Smith, 400.

An arbitrator awarded that the plaintiff had no cause of action, and that a verdict should be entered for the defendant; and then, by mistake, directed that the costs of the reference and award should be paid by the defendant, meaning the plaintiff:—Held, that the arbitrator, having executed his award in this form, could not rectify it. Ward v. Dean, 3 B. & Adol. 234.

The plaintiff moved the court for a taxation of his costs as adjudged; or that the award which had been executed in duplicate, and one copy afterwards corrected by the arbitrator, might be set aside. The defendant not agreeing to this latter proposal, the court ordered a taxation. Id.

The court cannot interfere to alter the terms of an award in order to make them consist with the submission, even where the submission to arbitration gives minute directions for the course to be pursued by the arbitrator. Hall v. Alderson, 2 Bing. 476.

Where an arbitrator, who had made his award in the plaintiff's favour, was supposed to have made a mistake in calculating the sum which the plaintiff claimed a right to recover:—Held, that the court would not refer it back to the arbitrator to correct the mistake without the consent of the defendant. Ex parte Cuerton, 7 D. & R. 774.

A motion to refer back an award to the same arbitrator for reconsideration, on the ground that he had not sufficient materials before him when he made it, must be made before the last day of the next term after such award made, according to the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2, although the arbitrator be not charged with corruption or undue means. Zachary v. Shepherd, 2 T. R. 781. And see Synge v. Jervoise, 8 East, 466.

2. Remuneration.

Assumpsit on an implied promise to remunerate an arbitrator cannot be maintained. Virany v. Warne, 4 Esp. 46—Kenyon.

But semble, that an arbitrator may recover a compensation for his trouble. Swinford v. Burn, Gow, 7—Dallas.

Where an award is taken up by one party, and all the costs paid to two out of three arbitrators, the third arbitrator has no remedy against either party in the cause. Burroughes v. Clarke, 1 Dowl. P. C. 48.

Semble, an arbitrator has no action for his fees. Id.

If the submission to a reference mentions nothing respecting costs, the arbitrators have no power to award their own expenses to be paid by either party in particular. Bell v. Belson, 2 Chit. 157.

Quære, whether an award upon the reference of an action, directing the payment of costs of the award, without fixing the amount thereof, is bad in that point for uncertainty; or whether the amount may not be taxed by the officer of the court. Barrett v. Parry, 4 Taunt. 658.

The amount of the fee which an arbitrator, in a cause referred in the Court of C. P., awards to be paid to himself for his award, is examinable by the prothonotary. Fitzgerald v. Graves, 5 Taunt. 342.

If arbitrators award an excessive sum to be paid to themselves, the court of C. P. will refer it to the prothonotary to reduce it. Miller v. Robe, 3 Taunt. 461. And see Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 2 M. & Scott, 740.

V. UMPIRE.

When to be chosen.—If the bond be, that, if arbitrators do not make their award by the day named, then to abide the award of an umpire, to be chosen by the arbitrators, the time for the arbitrators to appoint an umpire commences when the time for their making their award expires. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Arbitrators may choose an umpire either before or after the time limited for making their own award, if the umpire be chosen within the time limited for his umpirage. Harding v. Watts, 15 East, 556. And see Doyley v. Pitslow, 15 East, 557, n.

Arbitrators having power to choose an umpire, may elect one before they enter upon the examination of the matter referred to them. Roe d. Wood v. Doe, 2 T. R. 644: S. P. Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

How to be chosen.—Where a cause is referred to two arbitrators, and their umpire in case of dispute, and it is afterwards agreed to appoint an umpire, such appointment must in no case be decided by chance. And, therefore, where each of two arbitrators had named a person to be umpire and neither was disapproved of, and it was thereupon proposed that the final choice should be determined by lot, which was accordingly done, in the presence and with the concurrence of the arbitrators and parties, an award made by the umpire so chosen was set aside. Ford v. Jones, 3 B. & Adol. 248.

A submission was made to two arbitrators, and to such third person as they should appoint; the award to be made by any two of the three. The two arbitrators met for the purpose of appointing a third, and, not being able to concur in such appointment, it was agreed between them that each of them should name two, and that the names of the four should be put into a hat, and the name drawn should be the third arbitrator; and the arbitrator was so appointed. The award was made by one of the arbitrators originally named and the person so appointed by the two:—Held, that the appointment of the third arbitrator was bad, inasmuch as the choice of the third ought to have been the act of the will and judgment of the two, and matter of choice, not of chance. In re Cassell, 4 M. & R. 555; 9 B. & C. 624.

Where the parties named two arbitrators, who were to choose a third, and the award was to be made by three, or any two of them; and each of the arbitrators proposed to the other a third, but not being able to agree which of the two should be selected, they agreed to decide the choice by lot:—Held, that this was within their authority, and that an award made by such third arbitrator, in conjunction with the one by whom he had been originally proposed, could not be impeached on that account. Neale v. Ledger, 16 East, 51.

But where the plaintiff's arbitrator won, on tossing up for the appointment, and appointed his own nominee, and the award was made in favour of the plaintiff by these two, the court set it aside, on the ground that this mode of appointing the third arbitrator was improper. Young v. Miller, 5 D. & R. 263; 3 B. & C. 407: S. P. Wells v. Cooke, 2 B. & A. 218.

Validity of Umpirage.]—An award made by an umpire is good, although the arbitrators had no authority to appoint one, and although he examined the parties separately, they having attended him, and made no objection at the time. Matson v. Trower, R. & M. 17—Abbott.

Where arbitrators determined on five points in dispute, and referred a sixth to an umpire, whom they were authorized to choose, the award made by the arbitrators and umpire was held bad, the arbitrators not being authorized by the terms of the submission to make the award upon some points in dispute, and refer others to the umpire. Tellis v. Saunders, 9 Price, 612.

The court will not set aside the award of an umpire, because he received the evidence from the arbitrators, without examining the witnesses; unless he were required to re-examine them before the making his award. Hall v. Lawrence, 4 T. R. 589.

Arbitrators, not agreeing in their award, choose an umpire, who makes umpirage, the arbitrators' joining with him does not vitiate it. Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474; 1 W. Black. 463.

Even although the arbitrators were functi officio. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Nor by a stranger joining. Id.

An award, after reciting that A. B. and C. D. had been appointed arbitrators, and that they had appointed E. F. umpire, proceeded, "We, the said arbitrators, do award," &c., and was signed by the two arbitrators and the umpire:—Held, that the latter, by signing the award, adopted the language as his. Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

A declaration upon an award, made under a submission to the award of two persons, who were authorized to appoint an umpire, if they should disagree, after stating the choice of an umpire, alleged that the arbitrators and umpire made the award:—Held, that, taking the whole together, it was substantially an allegation that the umpire made the award. Id.

Where the arbitrators were to make their award on or before a day certain, and an umpire, if they should differ, before a subsequent day; and the umpire made his award before the time given to the arbitrators had expired:—Held, that the umpirage need not state that the arbitrators had disagreed. Sprigens v. Nash, 5 M. & S. 193.

To prove that the umpire was appointed by the arbitrators according to the terms of the submission, it is not sufficient to prove that he acted with them, and put in an award executed by all three, though the appointment of the umpire be recited in the award. Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17—Ellenborough.

reasonable charges. Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 9 Bing. 605; 2 M. & Scott, 740; 1 Dowl. P. C. 722.

An award which is required to be made in writing, &c., and ready to be delivered at such a time, is complete if made in writing, and ready to be delivered by the arbitrator within the time, though not actually delivered. Brown v. Vawser, 4 East, 584.

The time for making an award was on or before the 1st day of Michaelmas term; it was afterwards enlarged till the 1st day of Hilary term: an award made on the 1st day of Hilary term is good. Knox v. Simmonds, 3 Bro. C. C. 358.

The amount of damages sustained, and to be thereafter sustained, by the plaintiff, by reason of the working of a mine by the defendants, was, by bond, referred to an arbitrator, who was to make his award, as to the damages already sustained, on or before the 20th December, 1830; and, as to the damages to be thereafter sustained, at the expiration of every two months from the said 20th December. The arbitrator duly made the first award, but the second was not made until the 13th July 1831, and it included damages sustained by the plaintiff from the 20th December, 1830, to the 26th April, 1831:—Held, that this was not an award made in pursuance of the bond, and was therefore void. Stephens v. Lowe, 2 M. & Scott, 44; 9 Bing. 32.

Where, by deed of arbitration, dated 1st June, the arbitrators were to make their award on or before the 1st of October, with power, in case they should not agree in making their award within the time, to appoint an umpire, and his award to be binding, so as to be made six months after the date of his appointment; and the arbitrators appointed an umpire within the time allowed to them, who made his umpirage within six calendar, but not within six lunar, months of his appointment:—Held, that the umpirage was ill made. In re Swinford and Horn, 6 M. & S. 226.

Held, that an umpirage might be made after the arbitrators had declared they would make no award, though before the time allowed them had expired. Smailes v. Wright, 3 M. & S. 559.

An award made within enlarged time, is good, though it do not recite that the arbitrators did enlarge the time. George v. Lousley, 8 East, 13.

To debt on an award made by arbitrators upon a submission to them generally without any time, a plea that the arbitrators did not make any award within a reasonable time, adjudged ill. Curtis v. Potts, 3 M. & S. 145.

By a deed of submission in the Scottish form, an award was to be made betwixt the                      and the                      day of                      next, or any other day to which the submission might be prorogated:—Held, that the absence of date was immaterial, as it was equivalent to a general authority to be executed within a reasonable time. Macdougall v. Robertson (in error) 1 M. & P. 147; 2 Y. & J. 11; 4 Bing. 435.

VI. AWARD.

1. Time of making.

When within Time.]—An award is to be considered as published when the parties have notice that it is ready for delivery on payment of the

Enlargement of Time by Consent of Parties.]
If the arbitrators cannot make their award with-terwards corrected by the arbitrator, might be set aside. The defendant not agreeing to this latter proposal, the court ordered a taxation. Id.

The court cannot interfere to alter the terms of an award in order to make them consist with the submission, even where the submission to arbitration gives minute directions for the course to be pursued by the arbitrator. Hall v. Alderson, 2 Bing. 476.

Where an arbitrator, who had made his award in the plaintiff's favour, was supposed to have made a mistake in calculating the sum which the plaintiff claimed a right to recover:—Held, that the court would not refer it back to the arbitrator to correct the mistake without the consent of the defendant. Ex parte Cuerton, 7 D. & R. 774.

A motion to refer back an award to the same arbitrator for reconsideration, on the ground that he had not sufficient materials before him when he made it, must be made before the last day of the next term after such award made, according to the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2, although the arbitrator be not charged with corruption or undue means. *Zachary v. The amount of the fee which an arbitrator, in a cause referred in the Court of C. P., awards to be paid to himself for his award, is examinable by the prothonotary. Fitzgerald v. Graves, 5 Taunt. 342.

If arbitrators award an excessive sum to be paid to themselves, the court of C. P. will refer it to the prothonotary to reduce it. Miller v. Robe, 3 Taunt. 461. And see Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 2 M. & Scott, 740.

V. UMPIRE.

When to be chosen.—If the bond be, that, if arbitrators do not make their award by the day named, then to abide the award of an umpire, to be chosen by the arbitrators, the time for the arbitrators to appoint an umpire commences when the time for their making their award expires. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Arbitrators may choose an umpire either before or after the time limited for making their own award, if the umpire be chosen within the time limited for his umpirage. Harding v. Watts, 15 East, 556. And see Doyley v. Pitslow, 15 East, 557, n.

Arbitrators having power to choose an umpire, may elect one before they enter upon the examination of the matter referred to them. Roe d. Wood v. Doe, 2 T. R. 644: S. P. Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

How to be chosen.—Where a cause is referred to two arbitrators, and their umpire in case of dispute, and it is afterwards agreed to appoint an umpire, such appointment must in no case be decided by chance. A submission was made to two arbitrators, and to such third person as they should appoint; the award to be made by any two of the three. The two arbitrators met for the purpose of appointing a third, and, not being able to concur in such appointment, it was agreed between them that each of them should name two, and that the names of the four should be put into a hat, and the name drawn should be the third arbitrator; and the arbitrator was so appointed. The award was made by one of the arbitrators originally named and the person so appointed by the two:—Held, that the appointment of the third arbitrator was bad, inasmuch as the choice of the third ought to have been the act of the will and judgment of the two, and matter of choice, not of chance. In re Cassell, 4 M. & R. 555; 9 B. & C. 624.

Where the parties named two arbitrators, who were to choose a third, and the award was to be made by three, or any two of them; and each of the arbitrators proposed to the other a third, but not being able to agree which of the two should be selected, they agreed to decide the choice by lot:—Held, that this was within their authority, and that an award made by such third arbitrator, in conjunction with the one by whom he had been originally proposed, could not be impeached on that account. Neale v. Ledger, 16 East, 51.

But where the plaintiff's arbitrator won, on tossing up for the appointment, and appointed his own nominee, and the award was made in favour of the plaintiff by these two, the court set it aside, on the ground that this mode of appointing the third arbitrator was improper. Young v. Miller, 5 D. & R. 263; 3 B. & C. 407: S. P. Wells v. Cooke, 2 B. & A. 218.

Validity of Umpirage.]—An award made by an umpire is good, although the arbitrators had no authority to appoint one, and although he examined the parties separately, they having attended him, and made no objection at the time. Matson v. Trower, R. & M. 17—Abbott.

Where arbitrators determined on five points in dispute, and referred a sixth to an umpire, whom they were authorized to choose, the award made by the arbitrators and umpire was held bad, the arbitrators not being authorized by the terms of the submission to make the award upon some points in dispute, and refer others to the umpire. Tellit v. Saunders, 9 Price, 612.

The court will not set aside the award of an umpire, because he received the evidence from the arbitrators, without examining the witnesses; unless he were required to re-examine them before the making his award. Hall v. Lawrence, 4 T. R. 589.

Arbitrators, not agreeing in their award, choose an umpire, who makes umpirage, the arbitrators' joining with him does not vitiate it. Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474; 1 W. Black. 463.

Even although the arbitrators were functi officio. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232.

Nor by a stranger joining. Id.

An award, after reciting that A. B. and C. D. had been appointed arbitrators, and that they had appointed E. F. umpire, proceeded, "We, the said arbitrators, do award," &c., and was signed by the two arbitrators and the umpire:—Held, that the latter, by signing the award, adopted the language as his. Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407.

A declaration upon an award, made under a submission to the award of two persons, who were authorized to appoint an umpire, if they should disagree, after stating the choice of an umpire, alleged that the arbitrators and umpire made the award:—Held, that, taking the whole together, it was substantially an allegation that the umpire made the award. Id.

Where the arbitrators were to make their award on or before a day certain, and an umpire, if they should differ, before a subsequent day; and the umpire made his award before the time given to the arbitrators had expired:—Held, that the umpirage need not state that the arbitrators had disagreed. Sprigens v. Nash, 5 M. & S. 193.

To prove that the umpire was appointed by the arbitrators according to the terms of the submission, it is not sufficient to prove that he acted with them, and put in an award executed by all three, though the appointment of the umpire be recited in the award. Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17—Ellenborough.

VI. AWARD.

1. Time of making.

When within Time.]—An award is to be considered as published when the parties have notice that it is ready for delivery on payment of the reasonable charges. Musselbrook v. Dunkin, 9 Bing. 605; 2 M. & Scott, 740; 1 Dowl. P. C. 722.

An award which is required to be made in writing, &c., and ready to be delivered at such a time, is complete if made in writing, and ready to be delivered by the arbitrator within the time, though not actually delivered. Brown v. Vawser, 4 East, 584.

The time for making an award was on or before the 1st day of Michaelmas term; it was afterwards enlarged till the 1st day of Hilary term: an award made on the 1st day of Hilary term is good. Knox v. Simmonds, 3 Bro. C. C. 358.

The amount of damages sustained, and to be thereafter sustained, by the plaintiff, by reason of the working of a mine by the defendants, was, by bond, referred to an arbitrator, who was to make his award, as to the damages already sustained, on or before the 20th December, 1830; and, as to the damages to be thereafter sustained, at the expiration of every two months from the said 20th December. The arbitrator duly made the first award, but the second was not made until the 13th July 1831, and it included damages sustained by the plaintiff from the 20th December, 1830, to the 26th April, 1831:—Held, that this was not an award made in pursuance of the bond, and was therefore void. Stephens v. Lowe, 2 M. & Scott, 44; 9 Bing. 32.

Where, by deed of arbitration, dated 1st June, the arbitrators were to make their award on or before the 1st of October, with power, in case they should not agree in making their award within the time, to appoint an umpire, and his award to be binding, so as to be made six months after the date of his appointment; and the arbitrators appointed an umpire within the time allowed to them, who made his umpirage within six calendar, but not within six lunar, months of his appointment:—Held, that the umpirage was ill made. In re Swinford and Horn, 6 M. & S. 226.

Held, that an umpirage might be made after the arbitrators had declared they would make no award, though before the time allowed them had expired. Smailes v. Wright, 3 M. & S. 559.

An award made within enlarged time, is good, though it do not recite that the arbitrators did enlarge the time. George v. Lousley, 8 East, 13.

To debt on an award made by arbitrators upon a submission to them generally without any time, a plea that the arbitrators did not make any award within a reasonable time, adjudged ill. Curtis v. Potts, 3 M. & S. 145.

By a deed of submission in the Scottish form, an award was to be made betwixt the                      and the                      day of                      next, or any other day to which the submission might be prorogated:—Held, that the absence of date was immaterial, as it was equivalent to a general authority to be executed within a reasonable time. Macdougall v. Robertson (in error) 1 M. & P. 147; 2 Y. & J. 11; 4 Bing. 435.

Enlargement of Time by Consent of Parties.] If the arbitrators cannot make their award within the time limited by the rule of court or order of Nisi Prius, a rule may be obtained by consent, but not otherwise, for enlarging it: or, where the submission is by agreement, without suit, the time may be enlarged simply by the consent of the parties. Teasdale v. Atkins, 2 Tidd's Prac. 880.

Where, in debt on a common arbitration bond, in which the time was limited for the arbitrator to make his award, the declaration stated that the time was afterwards, by mutual consent, enlarged:—Held, that no action would lie on the bond to recover the penalty for not performing the award made after the time first limited. Brown v. Goodman, 3 T. R. 592, n.

An agreement to enlarge the time for making an award must contain a consent that it shall be made a rule of court, otherwise no attachment will be granted for not performing an award made under it. Jenkins v. Law, 8 T. R. 87.

But where parties, by an indorsement in general terms on the bonds of submission to arbitration, agree that the time for making the award shall be enlarged, such agreement virtually includes all the terms of the original submission to which it has reference; amongst others, that the submission for such enlarged time shall be made a rule of court; and, consequently, the party is liable to an attachment for non-performance of an award made within such enlarged time, under the statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Evans v. Thomson, 5 East, 189; 1 Smith, 380.

A declaration on an arbitration bond averred, that, before the time limited had expired, the parties to the bond, by a deed-poll, indorsed on the back of the bond, agreed to give the arbitrators further time to make their award, and that it was accordingly made within the enlarged time, but not performed by the parties against whom it was so made:—Held, on special demurrer, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action on such declaration, for the recovery of the amount of the penalty contained in the bond. Greig v. Talbot, 3 D. & R. 446; 2 B. & C. 179.

Where the defendants in an extent in aid, withdrew their plea, and suffered judgment to be entered up, upon an agreement to submit to arbitration the question of the amount of what was due to the prosecutor, provided the award was made by a given time, and the arbitrator did not make his award till after the expiration of a further period, to which it had been agreed to extend the time, in consequence of the defendant's having delayed to furnish him with the name of a trustee, which was required to make part of the award, and the defendants' solicitor afterwards wrote a letter requiring that the arbitrator would take into consideration matters not before him during the reference, which was refused, as the reference was considered to be closed:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the delay in making the award had not invalidated it, as being made after the expiration of the arbitrator's authority; for that the conduct of the defendants and the solicitor's letter were equivalent to a consent to extend the time: and therefore the court of Exchequer refused to set aside the judgment and the proceedings thereon, and the award, and allow the defendants to plead to the extent. Rex v. Hill, 7 Price, 636.

A judge's order enlarging the time for an arbitrator to make his award, should show on the face of it that the time was enlarged with the defendant's consent, before the latter can be attached for not performing the award; but it seems that the defendant's consent may be collected from other circumstances, so as to cure the objection. Halden v. Glasscock, 8 D. & R. 151; 5 B. & C. 390.

Enlargement of Time by Arbitrator.]—When an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, he may enlarge it more than once. Payne v. Deakle, 1 Taunt. 509; S. P. Anon. 2 Chit. 45.

If an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, the court will expound it to mean to any other days. Berrett v. Parry, 4 Taunt. 658.

It is no plea to an action against sureties on a replevin bond, that the replevin cause was referred to an arbitrator; and that he, without their knowledge, enlarged the time for making his award. Aldridge v. Harper, 10 Bing. 118; 3 M. & Scott.

An objection that the time for making an award has not duly been enlarged, is waived by proceeding in the reference with a knowledge of that fact. Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 16.

By the terms of a reference to arbitration, two arbitrators were to appoint an umpire before entering into consideration of the matters in difference, and to make their award before a certain day, or such time as they, or any two of them, should appoint: the arbitrators, before appointing an umpire, enlarged the time, and afterwards held a meeting, at which the parties attended:—Held, that the latter being aware of these facts, and having attended, could not afterwards make any objection on the ground of the enlargement of the time having been made before the appointment of the umpire. In re Hick, 8 Taunt. 694.

Enlargement by Arbitrator and Judge.]—Where a cause is referred by a judge's order, empowering the arbitrator to enlarge the time as he shall appoint and a judge shall order, an enlargement by the arbitrator alone, is irregular, and an award made after such enlargement is void. Mason v. Wallis, 5 M. & R. 85; 10 B. & C. 107.

Where a cause was referred, under a judge's order, with a proviso that the arbitrator should make his award on or before a day certain; but, if he should not be then prepared, that the time should be enlarged from time to time, as he might require and a judge of the court might think reasonable and just:—Held, that the time for making the award was duly enlarged by the arbitrator indorsing on the order, on the day preceding the expiration of the original time, that he required further time; although the judge's order granting such further time was not obtained until a day subsequent. Reid v. Fryatt, 1 M. & S. 1.

And in a similar case, where the indorsement was made on a day subsequent, the court refused an attachment for non-performance. Good v. Wilks, 2 Tidd's Prac. 881.

By a judge's order, an award was to be made by the first day of Trinity term, or such further day as the arbitrator should appoint by indorsement on the order. The arbitrator enlarged the time by indorsement, and before the expiration of the enlarged time, one of the parties, at his request, procured a judge's order for a further enlargement, which was acted on by all parties, and the arbitrator made his award beyond the time of the first enlargement, but within the time so further enlarged, but made no further enlargement on the original order:—Held, that, as both parties had in effect assented to the enlargement, the award was valid, as the authority of the arbitrator had not expired. Leggett v. Finlay, 6 Bing. 255; 3 M. & P. 629.

Effect of Time running out.—When a verdict is taken with damages subject to the award of an arbitrator, if the arbitrator omit to make his award within the specified time, the court will send the cause down to a new trial, the defendant consenting to accept short notice of trial; but will refuse to allow the plaintiff to take out execution for the amount of the verdict. Hall v. Phillips, 2 M. & Scott, 167; 9 Bing. 89.

If the day for making the award have elapsed, without any award made, the court of C. P. will not grant an attachment against a party for disobedience to the order, unless notice of the enlargement of the time have been served upon him. Hilton v. Hopwood, 1 Marsh. 66.

A verdict was taken for 3,000*l.* subject to an award, to be made by a certain day, as to the amount of damages. The arbitrator accidentally let the day pass without making his award, and the defendant's attorney would not consent to the time being enlarged. The court granted liberty to the plaintiff to enter up judgment and issue execution forthwith for the whole amount of the verdict, unless the enlargement were consented to. But, at the instance of the bail, they ordered that no execution should issue against them before a certain time, when it appeared that the defendant, who was abroad, would probably be in England. Taylor v. Gregory, 2 B. & Adol. 774.

A verdict was taken for the plaintiff at the assizes, March 31st, subject to a reference, the award to be made on or before the first day of Easter term, April 16. The attorney for the plaintiff left the assize town for his own residence, having first directed his agents at the assize town to obtain the order of reference, and send it him. On the 4th of April, having again written to his agents respecting the order, he left home on business, and returned on the 14th, when he found that the order of reference had not been sent, and, in consequence, he was not able to obtain it till the time for making the award had expired. The defendant having declined submitting to a new order of reference on the former terms, the court of K. B. refused to grant a rule enabling the plaintiff to proceed upon his verdict in default of such submission. Doe d. Fisher v. Saunders, 3 B. & Adol. 783.

2. Form generally.

An award was held sufficient, although it was drawn up in the shape of an opinion. Matson v. Trower, R. & M. 17—Abbott.

By a judge's order made upon hearing the attorneys on both sides, and by their consent, a cause was referred to arbitration, and the award recited that the cause was referred by an order of Nisi Prius: it seems that such award is a nullity, and cannot be enforced by attachment. Christie v. Hamlet, 2 M. & P. 316; 5 Bing. 195.

Upon a bond for the performance of an award, "so as it be made in writing under the hands of the arbitrators," by such a day, the declaration averred that the arbitrators did, in due manner, and within the time limited, duly make their award in writing:—Held, in error, that the declaration was insufficient, because it did not allege that it was under their hands. Everard v. Patterson (in error), 2 Marsh. 304; 6 Taunt. 625.

Where an agreement of reference provides that the award shall be made by four persons or any three of them, and the award purports to be the award of the four, but is executed by three of them only, it is void. Thomas v. Harrop, 1 Sim. & Stu. 524.

It is no objection to an award, that it was prepared by the solicitor of one of the parties. Fetherstone v. Cooper, 9 Ves. jun. 67.

3. Certainty and Conclusiveness.

Generally.—A prima facie uncertainty, or want of conclusiveness in an award does not vitiate, if it be capable of being rendered certain or conclusive; and the award may be good or bad, according to the event. Aitchison v. Cargay (in error), 9 Moore, 381; 2 Bing. 199; M'Clel. 367; 13 Price, 639.

In construing an award it is the duty of the court to favour that construction which renders the award certain and final. Wood v. Griffiths, 1 Swans. 52.

If the terms of an award be clear upon the face of it, the Court of C. P. will not admit of an affidavit of one of the arbitrators to explain their intention. Gordon v. Mitchell, 3 Moore, 241.

An award, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a certain sum of money, unless, within twenty-one days, (which was after the time limited for making the award), the defendant should exonerate himself by affidavit from certain payments and receipts, in which case he was only to pay a less sum, is illegal and void, because uncertain and inconclusive. Pedley v. Goddard, 7 T. R. 73.

Where two parties agreed to be bound by the opinion of a professional man upon the construction of an act of parliament, and he gave his opinion in favour of one; such opinion was considered as final and conclusive, though it recommended the printed statute to be compared with the parliament roll before the matter was settled, under a doubt whether the statute was not misprinted. Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105.

An award that A. or B. shall do a certain act is bad, for uncertainty. Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 16.

In an action of ejectment:—Held, that an award was good, although the arbitrator did not find in terms that the plaintiff had any cause of action. Doe d. Williams v. Richardson, 8 Taunt. 697.

Upon a reference of all actions, controversies, &c. and also of two distinct matters of difference, if the arbitrator omit to decide one of such distinct matters, that vitiates the whole award, which cannot, therefore, be enforced by attachment. Randall v. Randall, 7 East, 81; 3 Smith, 90.

Under a submission of all matters in difference between A. & B., an award on matters in difference between A. and B., and C. and D. jointly, directing A. to pay B. a certain sum as a compensation for coals gotten by A., belonging to B., or to B. and others, and directing B. to give A. a bond to indemnify him against the claims of C. and D., is bad. Fisher v. Pimbley, 11 East, 188.

An award which found that a canal company took water from two streams during prohibited times, and when other streams did not overflow, and consequently that it was not done in pursuance of the act of incorporation, or in the execution of its powers and authorities, and therefore not within the protection of the act as to the time of commencing the action, was ill. Gaby v. Wilts Canal Company, 3 M. & S. 580.

An action on the case for a fraudulent representation of the circumstances of J. S. was referred to arbitrators, who found that the defendant had omitted to state to the plaintiff certain debts which J. S. owed to him; wherefore the defendant did not give a fair representation of what he knew concerning the credit of J. S., but that in what he said he did not mean to hold out any inducement for the plaintiff to trust J. S.; and acquitted the defendant of all collusion with J. S., and of all premeditated fraud, with a view to benefit himself at the plaintiff's expense, and of any intention at the time of making the representation, of withdrawing his credit from J. S.; and awarded in favour of the plaintiff:—Held, that such award was bad, as the arbitrator had, in substance, acquitted the defendant of any fraud or intention to deceive the plaintiff, without which such action could not be supported. Ames v. Milward, 2 Moore, 713.

Debt due.—Where the award was, that "nothing was due to the plaintiff," it must be considered as intending that the plaintiff had no right to recover in the action referred. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528.

Upon a reference to a surveyor, of a cause and all matters in difference, an award that defendant had over-paid plaintiff 34l.:—Held, not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to enforce the award by attachment. Thornton v. Hornby, 8 Bing. 13; 1 M. & Scott, 48; 1 Dowl. P. C. 237.

Attachment refused upon an award which found a debt, but contained no order to pay. Edgell v. Dallimore, 3 Bing. 634; 11 Moore, 541.

An award that money shall be paid to a stranger for the use of one of the parties to a submission, is sufficient. Snook v. Hellyer, 2 Chit. 43.

An award is not void for uncertainty, which directs an executor to pay a sum of money out of assets, but which does not determine whether in point of fact he has assets. Love v. Hencybourne, 4 D. & R. 814.

An award that two persons shall pay a debt in proportion to the shares which they held in a certain ship, the ratio of their shares not being a subject of dispute, is sufficiently certain. Wahlenberg v. Lageman, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

An award fixing the rule for calculating the amount of money to be paid, without stating the result of such calculation, is sufficiently certain. Higgins v. Willis, 3 M. & R. 382.

Where all matters in difference between the plaintiff and defendant were referred to an arbitrator, and the defendant made several claims against the plaintiff, which might be the subject of a cross action, and the arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant:—Held, that the award was sufficient; all matters in difference between the parties having been referred. Hayllar v. Ellis, 3 M. & P. 553; 6 Bing. 225.

The submission being of all matters in difference between the parties, an award of so much to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs on their banking account, and for which sum the plaintiffs were to give the defendant a release, is binding between them; for, no other matter in difference between them shall be intended unless it be shewn. And the award is good for so much, though the arbitrators also awarded a sum to be paid out of a partnership fund. Ingram v. Milnes, 8 East, 445. But see 2 Moore, 723.

An agreement of reference stated, that disputes had arisen between G. and a navigation company, respecting certain goods shipped by G. on board the company's vessels, and which G. complained had not been delivered; that G. had commenced an action in Scotland against the company for the recovery of the goods or their value, of the damage sustained by the non-delivery, and of the costs incurred in the action; and that the parties agreed to refer the said differences to arbitrators, the costs of the reference and award, and also of the action, to be in their discretion. The arbitrators awarded that 238l. were due from the company to G.; that the said sum, with 30l., the costs of the reference and award, should be paid by the company on a certain day; and that the company should keep the goods, which were then in their possession:—Held, (Parke, J., dubitante), that this was a sufficient adjudication upon all matters referred:—Held, also, that the award of the goods to the company was not void as an excess of authority. In re Gillon, 3 B. & Adol. 493.

An award that the sum of 230l. is due from defendants to plaintiffs, and that out of that sum defendants should pay to the arbitrators 93*l.*, being the expenses of preparing the agreement of reference and their award, and for their charge, trouble, and attendance on the reference and arbitration, and certain costs which they award to be paid to the solicitors of plaintiffs, in respect of certain actions mentioned in the agreement of reference, leaving the sum of 136*l.* which they award to be paid to plaintiffs:—Held, that the award was void for uncertainty in directing a sum in gross to be paid to the arbitrators for the objects above mentioned, without specifying the particular sum to be appropriated to each object. Robinson v. Henderson, 6 M. & S. 276.

Two surveyors, who it had been agreed should fix the price of an estate, stated in their valuation the sum to be paid and the quantity of land, and that if it proved to be less, either 84*l.* or 42*l.* should be deducted, according to the parts of the estate in which the deficiency occurred, but did not state the quantity contained in each part:—Held, the valuation was uncertain, and that specific performance could not be enforced. Hopcraft v. Hickman, 2 Sim. & Stu. 130.

Direction in the Alternative.—If an award direct one of two things to be done in the alternative, and either of the two is uncertain or impossible, it is incumbent on the party to perform the other of them which is capable of being performed. Simmonds v. Swaine, 1 Taunt. 549.

Although it might be impossible for the defendant to perform certain parts of an award, yet if the award in each instance, gives an alternative which he could perform, it is sufficient. Wharton v. King, 2 B. & Adol. 528.

Determination of Suit.—An award that certain actions be discontinued, and each party pay his own costs, is final and good, being in effect an award of a stet processus. Blanchard v. Lilly, and Rex v. Blanchard, 9 East, 497.

An award which settles the costs on both sides, is final. Hartnell v. Hill, Forrest, 73.

Where an action for a breach of covenant was pending, which, with all the matters in difference, was referred to arbitration, the costs of the suit to abide the event:—Held, that an award, that the plaintiff had no demand on the defendant, on account of any alleged breaches of covenant, or on any other account whatsoever, was final, although the suit was not in terms concluded. Jackson v. Yabeley, 5 B. & A. 848. But see Winter v. White, 2 Moore, 723.

Award, made upon submission of all disputes, reciting "that there had been a suit at law between the parties, which had run to great expense on both sides, and being left to the arbitrator to make an end of, he did determine that they should each of them pay their own charges at law, and that defendant should pay plaintiff 5*s.* for his making the first breach in law; this is certain and final. Hawkins v. Colclough, 1 Barr. 274; 2 Ld. Ken. 553.

By an order of Nisi Prius, an action at law, and all matters between the parties at law and in equity, including a chancery suit, were referred to an arbitrator, who, by his award, ordered that a sum of money should be paid to the plaintiff in the action, and that the bill in Chancery should be dismissed, and that all proceedings therein should utterly cease and determine:—Held, that, the suit in equity, and all matters in difference in that suit, and all matters in difference between the parties were thereby finally determined, although one of the matters in dispute in the Chancery suit was brought before the arbitrator as a matter of difference between the parties, and was not otherwise disposed of than by the ending of the Chancery suit. Pearse v. Pearse, 9 B. & C. 484.

Award of mutual Releases.—An arbitrator, by having awarded mutual and general releases, must be deemed to have adjudged and finally decided upon all matters, and the general release would be an answer to any action or claims founded upon them. Wharton v. King, 2 B. & Adol. 528.

Where the condition of an arbitration bond was, that G. F. should perform such award as should be made between plaintiff and J. F.; an award, that G. F., the defendant, should pay 298*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*, and that they should execute releases, was held good. Cayhill v. Fitzgerald, 1 Wils. 28, 58.

Where, in an award reciting that disputes had lately arisen between the plaintiff and defendants, concerning a roadway claimed by the latter through the mow-hay of the former, the arbitrators awarded, that all actions, quarrels, &c., depending between the parties for any manner of cause whatever touching the roadway to the date thereof should cease, and be no further prosecuted; and that each of them should pay their own costs concerning the premises; and that the defendants should quit all claim to the roadway in dispute, it appearing to them to be the property of the plaintiff; and that the defendants, at their own costs, should replace the hedge of the mow-hay there standing before the defendant's door, as it formerly stood before the dispute; and that they should enjoy the old roadway behind their house; and that they should pay to the plaintiff a certain sum for damage sustained by her on account of the roadway; and that the plaintiff and defendants, on payment of that sum and performance of the award, should execute releases; and the plaintiff in a declaration on the arbitration bond averred, that the defendants had not paid that sum:—Held, on demurrer, that it did not appear from the award that the defendants had any legal title to the road granted to them, it not stating that such road belonged to either of the parties. Harris v. Curnow, 2 Chit. 594.

4. Partial Validity.

An award may be good in part, and bad in part, where the subject is clearly capable of being separated. Addison v. Gray, 2 Wils. 293.

But not where all the matters are within the submission, and the award is upon the face of it entire. Asriol v. Smith, 1 Turn. & Russ, 128.

Though an award be bad in some respects, yet that does not vitiate those parts which are otherwise unobjectionable, and it may stand in toto until the particular contingency arise to which a prospective regulation made by the arbitrator applies. Winter v. Lethbridge, (Bart.), 1 M'Clel. 253; 13 Price, 533.

And also, if an award be bad as to the direction of mutual releases, where they are awarded, that will not vitiate the whole. Doe d. Williams v. Richardson, 8 Taunt. 697. See Caila v. Elgood, 2 D. & R. 193.

An award of general releases on a special reference is good for the matter referred, and void as to the rest. Pickering v. Watson, 2 W. Black. 1117.

If the arbitrator exceed his authority in going beyond the terms of the submission, to direct the mode in which any of the matters ordered by the award is to be done, that direction may be rejected as a nullity, forming no part of, and consequently not affecting, the award. Aitcheson v. Cargay (in error), 13 Price, 639; 2 Bing. 199; 9 Moore, 381; 1 M'Clel. 367.

An arbitrator, to whom a cause and all matters in difference were referred, directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, and certain works to be done by the defendant. He then added, that, as disputes might arise respecting the performance, the plaintiff, if dissatisfied with it, might (on giving notice to the defendant) bring evidence before the arbitrator of the insufficiency of the work, and the defendant might also give evidence on his part, in order that a final award might be made concerning the matters in difference; but, if no proceeding were taken by the plaintiff within two months after the work was done, the award then made should be final, and he enlarged the time for making his further and final award, if requested, to six months:—Held, that the latter part of this award was bad, as it assumed to reserve a power over future differences; but that it might be rejected, and the former part was final, and might stand. Manser v. Heaver, 3 B. & Adol. 295.

5. Performance of Award.

Where lessees of land and of coal mines, covenanted forthwith to proceed to sink for coal as far as could and ought to be accomplished, &c., or in default thereof to pay so much to the lessor, as arbitrators should award, and the lessees gave bond to the lessor, conditioned to perform the award, which was made:—Held, that, to an action on the bond, it was a sufficient answer, that they had proceeded to sink as far, &c. (in the words of the covenant), but that none could be found. Hanson v. Boothman, 13 East, 22.

Semble, that a person cannot be required to assign an interest in premises to A. B., his executors, administrators, and assigns, where the terms of the award were that he should assign to A. B. Russel v. Headington, 1 Stark. 13—Ellen.

Where, upon a reference of actions in C. P. and award of a sum to be paid by each party, the party entitled to the larger sum sued in

K. B. in order to make the defendant's set-off subject to the lien of his attorney for his costs, the former court would not interfere to enforce the set-off, nor would they order the award to be delivered up. Symonds v. Mills, 8 Taunt. 526.

Two several tenants of a farm agreed with the succeeding tenant to refer certain matters in difference respecting the farm to arbitration, and jointly and severally promised to perform the award: the arbitrator awarded each of the two to pay a certain sum to the third:—Held, that they were jointly responsible for the sum awarded to be paid by each. Mansell v. Burridge, 7 T. R. 352.

VII. SETTING ASIDE AWARD.

1. Mistake of Law.

Must be apparent on Award.—An award made by a barrister cannot be questioned, on the ground of any statement not appearing on the face of the award, or annexed to it. Williams v. Jones, 5 M. & R. 3.

It is final between the parties, unless the objection is apparent on the face of it. Sharman v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 504.

No objection can be taken on the ground of a mistake in point of law, unless the grounds of the objection appear upon the award, or in some authentic shape before the court. Price v. Jones, 2 Y. & J. 114; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 674; Doe v. Thompson, 1 Chit. 674, n.

The court refused to set aside an award, upon the face of which no objection appeared, on a mere statement of facts from which it might be inferred that the award was founded upon an incorrect notion of the law of the case. Delver v. Barnes, 1 Taunt. 48.

If an arbitrator profess to decide upon the law, and he mistake it, the court will set aside the award, although the arbitrator's reasons do not appear upon the face of the award, but only upon another paper delivered therewith. So it seems it would be, if such reasons appeared in any other authentic manner to the court. Kent v. Elstob, 3 East, 18.

So, if a mistake in point of law be made out by clear evidence on one side, and be not denied by the other: and a mistake in the judgment of the arbitrator is considered as a mistake in point of law. Wade v. Huntley, 2 Tidd's Prac. 894.

Where an arbitrator had awarded to an apothecary in London charges for attendances, the court refused to refer back the award to him for reconsideration. Gensham v. Germain, 11 Moore, 1. And see Handley v. Henson, 4 C. & P. 110.

A mistake in an award must be plain and gross in order to set it aside on that ground. Anon. Lofft, 554; S. P. Knox v. Symonds, 1 Ves. jun. 369.

A party cannot, in shewing cause against an attachment for not performing an award, impeach the award for defects not appearing on it. Holland v. Brooks, 6 T. R. 161.

But it is competent to the parties to object to the award, for any illegality apparent upon the face of it, though the time limited by 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, for applying to set it aside is expired. Pedley v. Goddard, 7 T. R. 73.

An award contrary to law may be impeached, for that is excess of power. Morgan v. Mather, 2 Ves. jun. 15.

But not unless the law be clear upon the subject. Richardson v. Nourse, 3 B. & A. 237.

Both Matters of Law and Fact referred.—The court will not open an award on a suggestion that the arbitrator is mistaken in the law; facts as well as law having been referred to him, and his award being silent as to the grounds of his decision. Beuttilier v. Thick, 1 D. & R. 366.

In such case the award is final and conclusive; and the court will not open it or set it aside, unless the principles upon which he has decided be apparent on the face of the award. Payne v. Massey, 9 Moore, 666.

Where a cause involving a question of law was referred to a barrister, and the question did not appear on his award, the court refused to open the award again on a suggestion of the barrister's mistake on the point of law, considering it the intention of the parties to refer questions of fact as well as of law. Chace v. Westmore, 13 East, 357. And see Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105.

Where a cause is referred to a layman, and he assumes to decide upon a point of law, and errs, the court will set aside his award: but, where the arbitrator is a barrister, both the law and the fact are left to his discretion; even though a question of law arise incidentally on the hearing, which could not have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of referring. Perryman v. Steggall, 3 M. & Scott, 93; 9 Bing. 679.

Matters of Law only referred.—If an arbitrator, under a general reference, meaning to decide according to law, make a mistake, the court will set that right; yet, if the parties choose to refer matters of law, meaning to have the judgment of the arbitrator upon them instead of that of the court, the award, though not agreeable to law, cannot be therefore impeached. Young v. Walter, 9 Ves. jun. 364.

Even where matters of law and not of fact are referred to a barrister, the court of C. P. will not set aside an award made by him, on the ground that it is contrary to law, unless the illegality appear on the face of the award itself. Cramp v. Symons, 7 Moore, 434; 1 Bing. 104.

An award made on a reference of a point of law is binding, though the arbitrator mistakes the law. Steff v. Andrews, 2 Madd. 6: S. P. Ching v. Ching, 6 Ves. jun. 282.

A cause was referred to an arbitrator, with liberty to him to state upon his award any point of law raised by either party in reference to the matters thereby referred. Certain points of law were accordingly submitted to the arbitrator, which he set out upon his award, but without reference to any particular state of facts, and certified that he had overruled them. The arbitrator's decision upon these points, as abstract propositions, being correct—the court refused either to refer it back to him to amend his award by setting forth the facts upon which the questions of law arose, or to set aside the award. Jay v. Byles, 3 M. & Scott, 86.

2. Collusion and Misbehaviour.

Although an award upon a general reference cannot be impeached for erroneous judgment upon facts, it may for corruption, misbehaviour, excess of power, and mistake, admitted by the arbitrators: there must however be satisfactory evidence against them, for the court favours awards. Morgan v. Mather, 2 Ves. jun. 15: S. P. Knox v. Symonds, 1 Ves. jun. 369.

An award may be set aside for collusion or gross misbehaviour of the arbitrators. Sturt v. Moggeridge, 2 Tidd's Prac. 894.

Partiality and improper conduct in the arbitrator is no answer to a motion for an attachment for non-performance of an award, although good reason for setting it aside. Brazier v. Bryant, 3 Bing. 167; 10 Moore, 587.

Partiality and improper conduct in an arbitrator, in making his award without hearing the defendant and his witnesses, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action on the bond conditioned for the performance of the award, but is only matter for application to the equitable jurisdiction of the court to set aside the award: neither can a parol agreement between the parties to wave and abandon the award be pleaded to such action. Bradick v. Thompson, 8 East, 344.

Nor can partiality in the arbitrators be given in evidence on nil debet in debt on an award. Wills v. Maccarmick, 2 Wils. 148.

By an agreement, after reciting that divers disputes and differences had arisen and were depending between the plaintiff and defendant as executrix respecting certain unsettled accounts between them, and that for finally settling such differences, it was agreed that the matters in dispute should be referred to the final award of two arbitrators. Plea by the executrix, that no evidence was offered of assets before the arbitrators, nor did she admit she had any:—Held, ill on general demurrer, as it imputed misconduct to the arbitrators, which is not the subject of a plea, but only a ground to apply to the court to set aside the award. Riddle v. Sutton, 2 M. & P. 345.

3. Stamp.

An award in writing, and under seal, need not have a deed stamp, unless delivered as a deed; but, being only delivered as an award, it is sufficient if it have the award stamp of 10s. Brown v. Vawser, 4 East, 584.

If an award be made on an improper stamp, and no application be made to enforce the award, the court will not set it aside. Preston v. Eastwood, 7 T. R. 95.

If an objection to the stamp be not alleged as a ground for obtaining a rule to shew cause why an award should not be set aside, it cannot be relied upon afterwards when cause is shewn. Liddell v. Johnstone, 2 Tidd's Prac. 897.

The appointment of an umpire made in writing by two arbitrators, requires no stamp. Routledge v. Thornton, 4 Taunt. 704.

On the fly-leaf of an arbitration bond was an indorsement, bearing date after the time limited by the bond for making the award, and stating that the parties within named had met that day by consent, on the award:—Held, that this memorandum, being evidence of a new agreement to refer, was not admissible in evidence without a stamp. Stephens v. Lowe, 2 M. & Scott, 44.

4. Other Grounds.

An award cannot be set aside on any ground which is a question of merits as between the original parties. Winter v. Lethbridge (Bart.), M'Clel. 253; 13 Price, 533.

The court on motion refused a rule to set aside an award, on the ground that the submission had been obtained by fraud; as the application should have been made to set aside the order. Sackett v. Owen, 2 Chit. 39.

The court will not entertain an application for setting aside an award, founded upon an indictment at the assizes for not repairing a road, though the question in dispute be of a civil nature. Rex v. Cotsbatch, 2 D. & R. 265.

The court granted a rule to set aside an award on the application of the party in whose favour it was made, on an acknowledgment by the arbitrator and defendant that a sum had been omitted by mistake to be awarded to him. Anon. 2 Chit. 44.

A declaration of one of the arbitrators, that, had he seen a letter, which being mislaid at the time, had not been proved, and known the contents, he would have acted otherwise, is not sufficient to set aside an award, on the ground of mistake. Anderson v. Darcy, 18 Ves. jun. 447.

The court refused to set aside an award, on the ground that, subsequently to the examination of the parties (by consent) before the arbitrator, the plaintiff had learned that the defendant had been sentenced to transportation, and had returned before the expiration of his term; it appearing that the arbitrator had expressly excluded from his judgment the entire testimony of both parties, conceiving neither of them worthy of credit. Smith v. Sainsbury, 2 M. & Scott, 53; 9 Bing. 31.

The mere fact of an arbitrator being indebted to one of the parties, is not of itself sufficient to set aside an award, though the other party was ignorant of the circumstance, and, as soon as he knew of it, objected to the arbitrator's proceeding. Morgan v. Morgan, 1 Dowl. P. C. 611.

5. Proceedings to set aside at Law.

(a) When to be adopted.

Where a cause has been referred to arbitration, the court cannot interfere to enter a nonsuit against the arbitrator's direction; but the party objecting to the award must move to set it aside. Peters v. Anderson, 1 Marsh. 238; 5 Taunt. 596.

So, a party must move to set the award aside if he be precluded by the terms of the rule from going into evidence of that which he is desirous to try. Doe d. Carlisle (Lord) v. Morpeth (Baillifs), 3 Taunt. 378.

After a submission of all matters in difference, an award made, a release given, and an acquiescence of nine years:—Held, that the award could not be set aside, nor the matters unravelled, upon a suggestion that the arbitrator had only particular matters under his consideration. Jones v. Bennett, 1 Bro. P. C. 528.

Where, by the terms of an order of Nisi Prius, referring matters in dispute to the award of an arbitrator, on the terms of the defendant paying the costs of the cause, and of the reference and award, the plaintiff, after having accepted the costs of the reference and of the award, was dissatisfied with the award:—Held, that he was precluded from moving to set it aside. Kennard v. Harris, 4 D. & R. 272; 2 B. & C. 801.

Where an award is void, and nothing can be done upon it without suit, the court will not interfere to set it aside, because such suit must fail. But, where a cause is referred by order of N. P., and the arbitrator has power to order a verdict to be entered for either party, and he makes an award, ordering a verdict to be entered; notwithstanding such award is void, the court will set it aside, for otherwise the party in whose favour the award is made, will have judgment upon the verdict, without any new proceeding to enforce the award. Doe d. Turnbull v. Brown, 5 B. & C. 384; 8 D. & R. 100.

(b) Limitation as to Time.

Awards under Stat. 9 & 10 Will. 3.—By this statute, Awards procured by corruption, or undue means, are void, and may be set aside by any court of law or equity, if complaint be made in the court where the rule is made before the last day of the next term after such award published.

If the motion be not made before the last day of the next term after such award is published, it is too late; and an attachment for the non-performance of it may issue. Freame v. Pinnager, Cowp. 23.

The limitation of time for application to the court to set aside awards, applies only to cases where an original authority is given to the court by that act; and though the court will, in general, adopt the same rule in cases where their authority existed independently of the act, yet, where they see sufficient reason for their interference, they will interpose their authority, though the time prescribed should have elapsed. Rogers v. Dallimore, 1 Marsh. 471; 6 Taunt. 111.

An application to set aside an award for objections apparent on the face of it, must be brought within the time limited by the statute. Lowndes v. Lowndes, 1 East, 276; S. P. Anon. 1 Ld. Ken. 118; Anon. Lofft. 437.

Where there is a palpable objection upon the face of an award, the court may refuse to enforce, but cannot set it aside, after the time limited by the statute has elapsed. Auriol v. Smith, 1 Turn. & Rom. 125.

Where an award under the statute was made after the assign day, but before the quarto die post:—Held, that it was made within the term, and that a motion to set it aside might be made at any time before the last day of the term next following. In re Burt, 5 B. & C. 668; 8 D. & R. 421.

The time limited by the statute for setting aside awards, made under submissions by virtue of that statute, does not attach on awards made under orders of Nisi Prius. Synges v. Jervoise, 8 East, 466.

Awards not under the Statute.]—A motion to set aside an award made under an order of Nisi Prius, not under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, must be made within the time allowed for moving for a new trial, unless sufficient reason for delay be shown. Rawsthorn v. Arnold, 6 B. & C. 629; 9 D. & R. 556.

Defendant gave plaintiff to understand he intended to move to set aside an award between them. Plaintiff, who intended to make the same motion, allowed a term to elapse, and then moved, the defendant having omitted to do so:—Held, no sufficient reason for the delay. Emet v. Ogden, 7 Bing. 258.

Motion to set aside an award under a reference at Nisi Prius, allowed to be made after the first four days of term, where the award was published too late in the vacation to take the necessary proceedings before. Bennett v. Skardon, 5 M. & R. 10.

A cause was referred at the assizes (without a verdict being taken) to a layman. The arbitrator, on the 19th of May, gave notice to the parties that his award was ready to be delivered to them, on payment of certain fees, which were deemed exorbitant. In Trinity Term following, the court made a rule absolute for referring the arbitrator's charge to the prothonotary for taxation. The prothonotary, after the expiration of the term, proceeded with the taxation, and reduced the fees. The defendant, on the 24th of November, paid those fees, and obtained the award. On the 26th, the last day of Michaelmas Term, the plaintiff moved to set aside the award:—Held, that the application was too late. Musselfbrook v. Dunkin, 9 Bing. 605; 2 M. & Scott, 740; 1 Dowl. P. C. 722.

A verdict was taken for the plaintiff at Nisi Prius, by consent, with leave for the defendant to move to set it aside; a rule having been obtained accordingly, the court ordered the verdict to stand, and the amount of damages to be referred to an arbitrator, who made his award in vacation:—Held, that an application to set aside the award must be made within the first four days of the next ensuing term. Thompson v. Jennings, 10 Moore, 110.

A defendant may move to set aside a judgment entered up on an irregular award, though the time of setting aside the award itself has elapsed, if the defect insisted on be apparent on the face of it; and an objection grounded on such defect need not be stated in the rule nisi. Manser v. Heaver, 3 B. & Adol. 295.

6. Practice.

What to be stated in Affidavit and Rule.]—Where a rule to shew cause is obtained to set aside an award, the several objections thereto intended to be insisted upon at the time of making such rule absolute, must be stated in the rule to shew cause. Reg. Gen. K. B. E. T. 2 Geo. 4; 4 B. & A. 539; C. P. M. T. 10 Geo. 4, 6 Bing. 349; 3 M. & P. 761.

The rule is the same in the Exchequer. Smith v. Briscoe, 11 Price, 57.

The court is not, however, precluded by the omission from entering into any valid objection that may be raised to the award. Dicas v. Jay, 2 M. & P. 448; 5 Bing. 281.

In moving to set aside an award made under a rule of court, the rule nisi ought to be drawn up, on reading the rule under which the matter was referred, and the objections to the award ought to be specified. Christie v. Hamlet, 4 Bing. 195; 2 M. & P. 316.

Strong facts are required, and they must be distinctly stated, on application for setting aside awards; and a denial of any such is conclusive. Bedington v. Southall, 4 Price, 232.

A rule nisi to set aside an award, because the arbitrator had not settled all matters in dispute, need not state what matters were unsettled; it is sufficient if they appear by the affidavit made to obtain the rule. Rawsthorn v. Arnold, 6 B. & C. 629; 9 D. & R. 556.

Where it is stipulated that in case of the breach of an agreement, the sum of 100*l.* should be received as a stipulated debt binding on each party, as to the amount; and an action for damages generally, for the breach of this agreement, was referred to an arbitrator, who awarded only 10*l.* damages:—Held, that, in order to entitle the party to come to set aside this award, it was necessary expressly to state in the affidavit, that this clause was pointed out to the arbitrator at the time, and that he was required to act upon it. Pinkerton v. Caslon, and Caslon v. Pinkerton, 2 B. & A. 704.

How Affidavit intituled.]—Affidavits in support of or in answer to a rule for setting aside an award made a rule of court under the statute, need not be intituled. Bainbrigge v. Houlton, 5 East, 21.

On motions to set aside awards where there is no cause pending, it is not necessary that the affidavits, on shewing cause, should be intituled with the christian and surnames of the parties, although the rule is generally drawn up with the names of the parties, as if there was a cause pending. Anon. 1 Smith, 358.

Other Matters.]—The courts will not hear a motion for a rule to set aside an award on the last day of term. Nettleton v. Crosby, 1 Tidd's Prac. 503.

Questions on awards are not to be heard on the last day of term in the Exchequer. Watkins v. Phillpotts, M'Clel. & Y. 393.

Nor will the courts grant a second rule to set aside an award, when a rule for that purpose has been already discharged. In re Hellyer, 2 Chit. 265.

Where counsel moved to make a rule absolute, which had been previously obtained to shew cause why an award should not be set aside on the grounds which appeared in the affidavit in support of the motion, on a suggestion that new evidence had been since discovered:—Held, that they should have applied to the arbitrator to delay making his award, and appoint another meeting to hear the additional evidence. Eardley v. Otley, 2 Chit. 42.

If a motion for setting aside an award be made on slight grounds, the rule will be discharged with costs. Snook v. Hellyer, 2 Chit. 43.

6. Proceedings to set aside in Equity.

Jurisdiction.—The jurisdiction in matters of award, referred under the statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, is altogether transferred to the court of which the submission is made a rule; and awards of that nature must be regulated by the statute with respect to the period within which application must be made to set them aside. Auriol v. Smith, 1 Turn. & Russ. 125.

Semble, a case of fraud does not constitute an exception. Id.

Where it is one of the terms of an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration, that the submission shall be made a rule of a court of common law, if either party require it; the court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to relieve against the award, although the submission has not been made a rule of court within the time limited by the statute. Davies v. Getty, 1 Sim. & Stu. 411.

Quære, whether a general reference to arbitration by parties in a suit then depending in chancery, made an order of a court of law, is an order within the statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, excluding the equitable jurisdiction, to affect the award for mistake of law apparent, and to restrain an application to the court of law to enforce it. Nichols v. Chalie, 14 Ves. jun. 265.

There is no jurisdiction in equity by injunction, to stay process of a court of law upon an award made a rule of court under statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, which confines the jurisdiction to set aside the award to the court of which the submission is made a rule. Gwinnett v. Banister, 14 Ves. jun. 530.

Course of Proceeding.—A bill in equity lies to set aside for fraud an award made a rule of a court of law under statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15. Lonsdale (Lord) v. Littledale, 2 Ves. jun. 151; S. P. — v. Mills, 17 Ves. jun. 419.

Where a party applies to set aside an award, on the ground of newly discovered fraud, he is bound to shew that it is a new discovery, and that he could not with due diligence have made the discovery before. Auriol v. Smith, 1 Turn. & Russ. 127.

A bill will not lie to set aside an award on a question of fact referred to arbitration, except for corruption, partiality, or irregularity of conduct in the arbitrators. Goodman v. Sayers, 2 J. & W. 249; S. P. Champion v. Winham, Amb. 245.

Where the objections to an award were such as might have been equally the subject of jurisdiction in the court of law, where the reference was made a rule of court, an injunction was dissolved. Fetherstone v. Cooper, 9 Ves. jun. 67.

An award on a general reference is not to be impeached in equity by exceptions, but by cross motions to set aside and confirm it. Knox v. Symonds, 1 Ves. jun. 369.

Matter of exception to an award must be confined to what arises from the face of it, compared with the proceedings in the cause, and cannot be introduced by affidavit: any thing dehors charging misconduct, &c. must come upon motion to set it aside, and there cannot be a partial inquiry. Dick v. Milligan, 2 Ves. jun. 24.

VIII. ENFORCING AWARD.

1. By Action.

An action may be maintained on an award, made under a submission by a judge's order, the parties having attended at the reference. Wharton v. King, 1 M. & Rob. 96—Tenterden.

Two persons assigned to the plaintiff all debts due to them, and gave him a power of attorney to receive and compound for the same; under which the plaintiff submitted to arbitration the matters in difference then subsisting between his principals and the defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action of assumpsit on the award in his own name. Banfill v. Leigh, 8 T. & R. 571.

The court will not presume that the matters in difference submitted to arbitration, arose subsequent to an indenture of assignment and power of attorney from principals; but such matter may be pleaded by way of defence to an action for the money: nor is it necessary in setting forth the assignment to make profert. Id.

In debt upon an award, the plaintiff needs shew forth nothing more than is necessary to support his claim, and entitle him to the thing demanded. Perry v. Nicholson, 1 Burr. 278; 2 Ld. Ken. 557.

In a declaration upon an arbitration bond, plaintiff must set forth his whole demand. Id.

Counts on an award may be joined with counts in assumpsit for the breach of an agreement to stand by, perform, and not revoke an award to be made; and the Judge at Nisi Prius will not put the plaintiff to elect which set of counts he will rest his case upon. Brown v. Tanner, 1 C. & P. 651; M'Clel. & Y. 464.

If an award be alleged to have been made after the making of the arbitration bond, and before the exhibiting plaintiff's bill, it is sufficiently positive. Bissex v. Bissex, 3 Burr. 1729.

Where matters of account in dispute are submitted to arbitration, but not by bond, and the arbitrator makes an award, the plaintiff may give the sum awarded in evidence on the common counts in assumpsit, without a special count, though the sum has been given in under a judge's order. Keen v. Batshore, 1 Esp. 194—Eyre.

Where there was a plea of no award to debt on an arbitration bond, to which the replication shewed an award, and assigned a breach, and the rejoinder averred that there were other matters pending, of which the arbitrators took no notice; this was a departure in the rejoinder from the plea. Harding v. Holmes, 1 Wils. 122.

Debt on bond, which was conditioned to perform an award: plea no award: replication setting out an award: rejoinder stating the whole award (in which were recited the bonds of submission, whereby it appeared that the award was not warranted by the submission); and then demurring:—Held, that the rejoinder was not inconsistent with, nor a departure from, the plea. Fisher v. Pimbley, 11 East, 188.

A replication shewing an award to pay 16l. 10s. and costs, and assigning as breach the non-payment of the 16l. 10s. only:—Held, good on demurrer to a plea of no award to debt upon an arbitration bond. Fox v. Smith, 2 Wils. 267.

Six partners entered into two bonds of submission to arbitration: in the one, three gave a joint and several bond to the other three, conditioned for the due performance of the award; and the three latter gave a similar bond to the three former: in the recitals of the bonds, the differences were stated to be depending between the above bounden three, and the above named three; and in setting out the bond in the declaration, the differences were laid to be depending between the six partners collectively:—Held, that this was no variance. Winter v. White, 3 Moore, 674; 1 B. & B. 350.

The defendant cannot dispute the validity of an award in an action. Swinford v. Burn, Gow, 5—Dallas.

2. By signing Judgment.

Where a verdict is taken pro forma at the trial for a certain sum, subject to the award of an arbitrator, the sum afterwards awarded is to be taken as if it had been originally found by the jury; and the plaintiff is entitled to enter up judgment for the amount without first applying to the court for leave so to do. Lee v. Lingard, 1 East, 401; S. P. Grimes v. Naish, 1 B. & P. 480. But see Haywood v. Ribbons, 4 East, 310.

If a verdict for a plaintiff be taken at Nisi Prius, subject to the award of an arbitrator, and the rule of reference be made a rule of court, the verdict may be entered according to his award, without any application to the court. Borrowdale v. Hitchener, 3 B. & P. 244.

If, in such case, the award be made before the term, the defendant can only impeach it within the four first days of term. Id.

And personal service of the award is not necessary to warrant the issuing of execution in such case, if the attorney of the defendant has been served with the award. Id.

The Court of C. P. will give leave, in the first instance, to enter up judgment on a verdict reduced by an award. Higginson v. Nesbitt, 1 B. & P. 97.

If an award be lost, the Court of C. P. will, nevertheless, permit judgment to be entered accordingly, upon an affidavit of its contents. Hill v. Townsend, 3 Taunt. 45.

Where a replevin cause was referred, after issue joined and before jury sworn, and the arbitrator found only one issue for the defendant, and awarded the payment of rent due to him, but ordered no verdict or judgment to be entered:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled, on motion, to enter up judgment in the action for the rent and costs to be taxed for him. Grundy v. Wilson, 7 Taunt. 700.

3. By Suit in Equity.

A court of equity will enforce an award made under an order of reference, by consent, in a cause; and it makes no difference that it is a part of the order that the parties should execute arbitration bonds. Ormond (Marq.) Kynnersley, 2 Sim. & Stu. 15.

The specific performance of an award may be compelled in equity, on the principle that the award only ascertains the terms of a previous engagement between the parties; and although the illegality of the acts of which it directs the execution, will afford a ground for refusing to decree the performance. Wood v. Griffith, 1 Swans. 43.

The court, considering an award as the decision of the judges chosen by the parties, will not examine whether it is unreasonable. Id.

IX. EFFECT OF ARBITRAMENT.

Arbitrament without performance is a good plea, where the parties have mutual remedies. Gascoyne v. Edwards, 1 Y. & J. 19.

But it is no answer to an action for a debt, where the amount only of such debt is referred, and the award merely ascertains the amount, and directs that it shall be paid in money. Allen v. Milner, 2 C. & J. 47; 2 Tyr. 113; 1 Price P. C. 142.

An award of a sum of money less than the amount of a money demand claimed by the action referred, is not a good bar to an action of indebitatus assumpsit for the original debt, without averring payment of the sum awarded. Id.

Under a submission to an arbitrator of all matters in difference between landlord and tenant, the arbitrator awarded, inter alia, that a stack of hay, left upon the premises by the tenant, should be delivered up by him to the landlord by a certain day, upon the tenant being paid or allowed a certain sum in satisfaction for it:—Held, that the property in the hay did not pass to the landlord on his tender of the money, so that the landlord could not maintain trover for it, but his remedy was upon the award. Hunter v. Rice, 15 East, 100.

I. OFFICERS.

Authority.]—The colonel of a regiment has no authority to order his servant to pay money towards lighting and warming a regimental school and school-master's salary. Warden v. Bailey, 4 Taunt. 67. And see S. C. (in error), nom. Bailey v. Warden, 4 M. & S. 400.

Nor, as it seems, to order the men to attend school to learn to read and write. Id.

A colonel of a regiment, on full pay, was appointed civil superintendent of a colony, and "to command such of his majesty's subjects as are now armed, or may hereafter arm, for the defence of the settlers." After acting both as military commander and civil superintendent some years, his regiment was disbanded, and he was reduced to half-pay; but still was recognized in both capacities by the authorities at home and in the colony:—Held, that his appointment to command all persons armed for the defence of the colony, gave him a right to command all the king's troops there, and that he did not lose that right by the disbandment of his regiment, and his reduction to half-pay; and, therefore, he was justified in putting under arrest, for disobedience to orders, a commissioned officer on full pay, holding equal regimental rank with himself. Bradley v. Arthur, 6 D. & R. 413; 4 B. & C. 292.

Liability to Actions.]—An action of trespass lies for an inferior military officer against his superior officer, (both being under martial law,) who imprisons him for disobedience to an order made under colour, but not within the scope of military authority; although the imprisonment be followed by a trial by a court-martial. Warden v. Bailey, 4 Taunt. 67. And see S. C. (in error), nom. Bailey v. Warden, 4 M. & S. 400.

In trespass against the adjutant of a regiment of local militia, for arresting and imprisoning a serjeant in the same regiment, upon a charge of unsoldier-like conduct, in exciting disobedience and mutiny, it is a good defence upon the general issue, that the action was not brought within six months after the fact committed; but, if the imprisonment be continued by the defendant, in pursuance of orders from the commanding officer of the regiment, to a period within six months, the action lies; unless the continuance of it be justifiable on the part of the commanding officer; and such continuance was held to be justifiable where it was in order to bring the plaintiff to a general court-martial, for uttering words in the presence of several serjeants and others of the same regiment, amounting to disorderly conduct on the part of plaintiff, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, within the 24th section of the Articles of War, art. 2, although the words uttered referred to an order made by the commanding officer, which he was not strictly competent to make, and although the plaintiff was acquitted by the sentence of the court-martial. Id.

A., being a captain in the navy, is accused by his commander in chief of neglect of duty, disobedience to orders, &c.; and being tried by a court-martial is honourably acquitted. A. then brings an action at law against his commander for a malicious prosecution:—Held, that no such action will lie. Sutton v. Johnstone (in error), 1 Bro. P. C. 76; 1 T. R. 493, 784.

A captain of a troop during the time of his absence, and while another officer is in the actual command of it, and by whom the orders for subsistence are issued, and the subsistence money is received from government, is not liable to pay for subsistence furnished to the men, though he was still entitled to a profit upon the sum issued on that account, and the troop still continued under his military orders. Myrtle v. Beaver, 1 East, 135.

Nor is the captain of a troop for which forage is furnished by the orders of a clerk appointed by such captain, liable for such forage, though present with the troop at the time; if it do not appear that he had received money for this purpose from the paymaster, to whom it is issued by government, and upon whom the captain is entitled to draw for a certain sum, regulated by the returns of the preceding month. Rice v. Chute, 1 East, 579.

Otherwise, if at the time he had received the money from the paymaster. Rice v. Everitt, 1 East, 583, n. And see Davis v. Edgar, 4 Taunt. 63.

The liability of the colonel of a regiment, for knapsacks furnished to the regiment by his order, depends upon the question whether they were supplied upon his personal credit. Where the tradesman who furnishes necessaries to a regiment, looks to the regimental fund as the medium through which he is to obtain payment, though by the assistance of the colonel, the latter is not personally responsible. Prosser v. Allen, Gow, 117—Dallas. And a new trial was granted after a verdict on a contrary supposition.

The officers of a regimental mess are only separately liable, each for his own share. Brown v. Doyle, 3 Camp. 51, n.—Kenyon.

Pay.]—The king may at any time stop the half-pay of an officer in the army, by signifying his pleasure that it shall no longer be paid. Macdonald v. Steele, Peake, 175—Kenyon.

The future half-pay of an officer is not assignable. Lidderdale v. Montrose (Duke of), 4 T. R. 248.

Neither is the full pay of a military officer. Barwick v. Reade, 1 H. Black. 627.

An assignment of the half-pay of an officer in the army, is bad in law and in equity. Stone v. Lidderdale, 2 Anst. 533.

Though an officer's half-pay is not assignable at law, yet the use of it may be assigned in equity; and, when so assigned, the assignor cannot maintain assumpsit for it, as money had and received to his use. Stuart v. Tucker, 2 W. Black. 1137.

By 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 47, all assignments, sales, and contracts for naval half-pay, allowances, or pensions, are void.

The plaintiff being representative of a deceased officer of artillery, of which corps the defendants were paymasters, they delivered to him an account current, in which they acknowledged themselves to have received, from the year 1806 to the year 1820, pay according to an increased rate allowed by an order of the Board of Ordnance, dated August 28, 1806:—Held, that they could not, in 1821, be permitted to say that this admission was by mistake, as, in 1816, the Board of Ordnance had announced, that, by the true construction of the order of 1806, persons in the situation of the deceased were not entitled to the benefit of it, this announcement of the Board never having been communicated to the deceased by the defendants till the year 1821. Skyring v. Greenwood, 6 D. & R. 401; 4 B. & C. 281; 1 C. & P. 517.

Commission.—An officer in the army cannot pledge or mortgage his commission. Collyer v. Fallon, 1 Turn. & Russ. 459.

A sum of money was paid by A. to B., for purchasing C.'s promotion in the army, and it remained unapplied in the hands of B. at the death of A. C. having been compelled, from the bad state of his health, to quit the army, and having no prospect of being able to enter into the service again, filed a bill for the money, and it was decreed to be paid to him. Leche v. Kilmorey (Lord), 1 Turn. & Russ. 207.

Other things.—Military officers in the service of the East India Company, are objects of their military laws so long as they remain on pay and in service. Vertue v. Clive (Lord), 4 Burr. 2472.

And they have not a right to resign whenever they please. Parker v. Clive (Lord), 4 Burr. 2419.

At the trial of an officer on an information for defrauding government by false returns of musters, it was held sufficient to prove that he acted in the character mentioned in the information, without proving his commission from the king. Rex v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513—Ellenborough.

II. PRIVATES.

The receiving pay as a soldier, subjects the receiver to military jurisdiction. Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Black. 69.

A soldier is gifted with all the rights of other citizens, and is bound to all their duties, and he is therefore as much bound to prevent a breach of the peace or a felony as any other person. If it be necessary for the purpose for preventing mischief, or for the execution of the law, it is not only the right of soldiers, but it is their duty, to exert themselves in assisting the execution of a legal process, or to prevent any crime or mischief being committed. Burdett (Bart.) v. Abbott, 4 Taunt. 449. And see S. C. 5 Dow, 165; 14 East, 1, 154.

By 1 Geo. 1, c. 47, upon an information filed in the court of K. B. for persuading soldiers to desert, and tried at the assizes, that court is the proper court to award punishment; and if they award imprisonment, besides the penalty of 40*l.*, they are bound also to award the pillory. Rex v. Read, 16 East, 404. And see Rex v. Fuller, 1 B. & P. 180.

Rule nisi for discharging an impressed soldier, made absolute, on the merits, but without costs. Rex v. Kessel, 1 Burr. 637: S. P. Rex v. Dawes, 1 Burr. 636.

Where A. applied to two soldiers, a drummer and a private, to enlist him, which they at first refused, but afterwards the drummer gave him a shilling for that purpose, on A.'s wanting to go away they detained him:—Held, that the drummer had no authority to enlist A., and therefore no right to detain him. Rex v. Longden, R. & R. C. C. 228; 1 Russ. C. & M. 439.

A person who has enlisted may be rendered by his bail in their own discharge. Bond v. Isaac, 1 Burr. 339.

An action will not lie for reducing a serjeant of the Guards to a common soldier, in Germany, the event having taken place out of the king's dominions. Barwis v. Keppel, 2 Wils. 314.

A justice, before whom a deserter is brought, and by whom committed to the county gaol, may, if the deserter be unable to bear the charges himself, direct the expenses of conveying him thither to be paid by the treasurer of the county to the constable of the parish who found and apprehended him in the parish, and conveyed him to the gaol. Rex v. Pierce, 3 M. & S. 62.

III. MILITIA.

Under the militia acts, 42 Geo. 3, c. 20, and 47 Geo. 3, c. 71, if a person balloted be found at the time of enrolment to be unqualified for the service, and another be balloted in his place out of the same list; this is a continuance of the same ballot, and is a legal ballot. Astley v. Ray, 2 Taunt. 214.

An attorney is not privileged from serving in the militia, or paying for a substitute in his stead. Gerrard's case, 2 W. Black. 1123.

If A., in consideration of a premium, undertakes to insure B. against being drawn for the militia under a particular statute, until a certain day; and represents, that, on that day all balloting under the statute will be completely secured by the insurance against the operation of the statute, A. is not thereby bound to indemnify B. in consequence of his being drawn for the militia under the statute, after the above-mentioned day: but, on account of the misrepresentation, the contract is void, and B. may recover back the premium, as money had and received. Duffell v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 401—Ellenborough.

A substitute must be considered as a militia-man. Rex v. Aston, 2 Burr. 1149.

A captain in the militia receiving his pay and contingent allowances before his qualification was properly authenticated, is not "executing any power" directed by the militia act of the 42 Geo. 3, c. 90, to be executed by captains, so as to bring him within the penalty of the fourteenth clause; the receipt of such pay and allowances not being provided for by that statute, even if any other than acts of military discipline were intended to be so prohibited. Robinson v. Garthwaite, 9 East, 296.

In an action of debt for a penalty, under 2 Geo. 3, c. 20, s. 16, for acting as a major of militia without being duly qualified, it is sufficient to aver that the defendant acted as such major, "not being in any manner qualified by the laws and statutes of the realm." Roberts v. Irvine, 3 Dougl. 194.

The parish to which the principal militia-man belongs is liable to reimburse the parish of the substitute the expenses of maintaining the substitute's family, though the substitute had more than one child when he was approved by the deputy-lieutenants, and inrolled. Rex v. Willis, 6 T. R. 179.

Semble, that, if the substitute be sworn and actually serve, his family are entitled to be relieved within the meaning of the 26 Geo. 3, c. 107, s. 24, and 33 Geo. 3, c. 8, s. 3, though the substitute were not previously approved by two deputy-lieutenants, or inrolled. Rex v. Ledbury, 7 T. R. 558.

An order for reimbursement under the 33 Geo. 3, c. 8, s. 3, made upon the parish for which a substitute in the militia serves, to indemnify the parish in which such substitute's family shall have become chargeable and been relieved under an order of maintenance, must be made by the same magistrate, and at the same time as the first order of maintenance; and notice of such order of reimbursement ought to be served upon the parish to be affected by it, before they can be proceeded against criminally for disobedience to it. Id.

A substitute in the militia fraudulently and falsely declaring at the time of his inrolment, that he had no wife or family, when in fact he had a wife and one child, is not entitled to any parochial allowance for their relief under stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 47, ss. 2, 5. Rex v. Preston, 13 East, 313.

Under 43 Geo. 3, c. 47 (militia act), it was the duty of the county treasurer who reimbursed payments made by overseers to the families of militia-men, to transmit an account of such reimbursements to the treasurer of the county for which such militia-men were serving. But it was not his duty to demand the amount or to take legal proceedings for obtaining payment, or to notify to the justices of the sessions the transmission of such account, and neglect of payment, or to transmit to the justices of the sessions an account of similar payments made by himself to the treasurer of another county, that they might make orders for repayment upon the overseers of the parishes for which such militia-men were serving. Farr v. Hollis, 4 M. & R. 230; 9 B. & C. 315.

IV. VOLUNTEERS.

Members of volunteer corps inrolled under the regulations of the stat. 42 Geo. 3, c. 66, are entitled to resign on due notification of such their intention; not being restrained from such liberty of resignation by the rules of the corps, or its conditions of service; and this liberty is not taken away by statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 95 (the general defence act), which distinguishes between volunteer corps, and volunteers under that act; that is, such as offer themselves voluntarily to serve in lieu of the compulsory levy. And the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 121, attaches only on corps of volunteers at the time of an actual invasion, and has also no retrospective operation on those who had ceased to bear that character before actual invasion. Rex v. Dowley, 4 East, 512; 1 Smith, 153.

V. BILLETING.

A deputy high constable, appointed by parol only, may billet soldiers, under the annual mutiny act. Midhurst v. Waite, 3 Burr. 1259; 1 W. Black. 350.

The foot guards may be billeted all over the kingdom, as well as the other troops. Rex v. Calvert, 7 T. R. 724.

Horses employed in drawing artillery are billeteable under the mutiny act, whether they belong to the ordnance or are furnished for the service by contract. Read v. Willan, 2 Dougl. 422.

Quære, whether alehouse keepers are bound to take in horses as well as soldiers. Rex v. Dimpsey, 2 T. R. 96.

VI. COURTS-MARTIAL.

Courts-martial in this country have jurisdiction over all persons receiving pay as soldiers, but are liable to the controlling authority which the courts of Westminster shall from time to time exercise for the purpose of preventing them from exceeding their jurisdiction. Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Black. 69.

The court of C. P. will not grant a prohibition to prevent the execution of the sentence of a court-martial passed against A., who has received pay as a soldier (but assumed the military character merely for the purpose of recruiting in the usual course of that service), though the proceedings of the court-martial appeared to be in some instances erroneous. Id.

Courts-martial are bound by the same principles and rules of evidence as the courts of law; and their proceedings, where not otherwise regulated by statute, must be in accordance therewith. Ship Bounty, 1 East, 313. Stratford's case, 1 East, 313.

Where the commander in chief directed a military inquiry to be held, to investigate the conduct of a commissioned officer in the army, who afterwards sued the president of such court of inquiry, for a libel stated to be contained in his report, and transmitted by him to the commander in chief:—Held, that such a report was a privileged communication, and properly rejected as evidence at the trial, and that an office copy thereof was also inadmissible. Home v. Bentinck (Lord), 4 Moore, 563; 2 B. & B. 130. And see S. C. 1 B. & B. 514.

By the mutiny act, the king may make articles of war, and constitute courts-martial, with power to try and punish, as well in Great Britain, &c. as in Gibraltar, &c. By a subsequent clause no soldier shall, by such articles of war, be subject to the punishment of death, or loss of limb, within Great Britain, &c. (omitting Gibraltar) for any crime not expressed to be so punishable by the act. Then, by the articles of war, persons found guilty by a court-martial at Gibraltar, of theft, robbery, &c., or of having used violence, or committed any offence against the persons or property of others, "shall suffer death, or such punishment, according to the nature and degree of the offence, as by the sentence of such court-martial shall be awarded:"—Held, that a court-martial had a discretionary power by such words, and were not restricted to pass such sentence on a delinquent as would be warranted by the law of England. But, supposing they were, yet that a return to a habeas corpus, stating that upon a certain charge exhibited against the defendant before such a court, for certain offences alleged to have been committed by him at Gibraltar, such proceedings were had, that the court-martial, after hearing the charge and the defence, found the defendant guilty of receiving certain goods named from the warehouse of W. (at G.) knowing them to be stolen, in breach of the articles of war, whereupon they sentenced him to transportation for fourteen years, is good; for such a sentence would be warranted here by the stat. 4 Geo. 1, c. 11, if the principal were convicted of the felony, and the receiver were indicted as accessory after the fact. Rex v. Suddis, 1 East, 306.

It is not incident to the duty of the office of a commander in chief of a squadron to hold a court-martial on an inferior officer. Johnstone v. Sutton (in error), 1 T. R. 493. Affirmed in Dom. Proc. 1 T. R. 784; 1 Bro. P. C. 76.

A declaration against a commander of a fleet, for delaying holding a court-martial for the trial of plaintiff, must aver that defendant had authority to hold a court-martial. Id.

The court granted a rule nisi for a habeas corpus, on behalf of an officer under military arrest for charges of misconduct, on an affidavit complaining that he had not been brought to trial, pursuant to the 23rd article of war, as soon as a court-martial could be conveniently assembled; but, it being stated upon the affidavit of the judge-advocate-general in answer, that proceedings were instituted as soon as could conveniently be, and according to the course of office, and that the trial had been postponed partly on account of the absence of the prisoner's witnesses, the court discharged the rule. Blake's case, 2 M. & S. 428.

A purser in the navy is liable by 22 Geo. 2, c. 33, to be tried by a court-martial for fraudulently and unlawfully charging blankets against seamen to whom none had been issued, and in making in order to such charge, certain false entries in one of the ship's books, that being, within the thirty-sixth article of war, "an offence not capital, committed by a person in the fleet not before mentioned in the act," and for which no punishment is thereby to be inflicted. Mann v. Owen, 9 B. & C. 595.

VII. ARMY AGENTS.

By the act 59 Geo. 3, c. 111, army agents are entitled to make the usual charge for passing accounts before that act; and are also entitled to charge commission on the full amount of pay, without being limited by the money actually passing through their hands. Drury v. Atkins, 1 Tamlyn, 75.

An army agent is responsible for the price of commissions sold by him for an officer on foreign service. Sturdy v. Ross, 1 Esp. 450—Kenyon.

Where the plaintiff, who was not an authorized army agent, negotiated the sale and purchase of a commission between G. and the defendant, at a price above that allowed by his majesty's regulations, and the defendant, who was the purchaser of the commission, after having paid a sum exceeding the regulation price to G., retained 38*l.*, the remainder of the price agreed upon, with directions from G. to pay it over to the plaintiff for his agency, which he promised the plaintiff to do:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover against the defendant the 38*l.* as money had and received to his use, for he could not be in a better situation than G., and by 48 Geo. 3, c. 15, s. 100, G. could not have recovered beyond the regulation price. Davis v. Edgar, 4 Taunt. 63.

Information, under 4 Geo. 3, c. 58, at the suit of the crown, against an army agent for a discovery and production of documents with a view to an account. Plea, 1st, that the accounts had been settled and closed at the war office, by the issuing of the clearing warrants, and setting out the warrants, and referring to them; 2nd, that the monies imprested in the agent's hands for the pay or arrears of pay of officers, were held by him as the banker or private agent of the officers by whom he was appointed; and that for such monies he was not accountable to the crown. The plea ordered by the court below to stand for an answer, with liberty to the attorney-general to except:—Held, by the House of Lords, that both parts of the plea were bad, for that the clearing warrants did not purport on the face of them to be a final settlement of accounts, and that an army agent was a public officer, and was accountable to the crown for monies received by him for the pay and arrears of pay of officers: that the plea might have been overruled, but its being ordered to stand for answer was more favourable to the agent: and the orders of the court below affirmed. Deare v. Att. Gen., 2 Dow & Clarke, 377.

I. FOR WHAT AN ARREST MAY BE MADE.

1. Cause of Action.

Damages unliquidated.]—A defendant cannot be arrested where the cause of action arises from the breach of an agreement. Waters v. Joyce, 1 D. & R. 150.

But a defendant who has guaranteed the payment of money for goods to be sold to another person, and undertaken to pay for them if he should fail to do so, to the extent of a sum certain, may be held to bail for the amount of goods sold within that sum, on the common affidavit. Cope v. Joseph, 9 Price, 155.

And a debt sworn to be due for use and occupation, will support an arrest. Lee v. Sellwood, 9 Price, 322.

And upon an agreement between two tradesmen to deal with each other by way of barter; if the one refuse to state the account, the other may arrest him for the whole value of the goods which he has furnished. Germain v. Burrows, 5 Taunt. 259.

A man cannot be arrested for a penalty, but only for the sum thereby secured. Hatfield v. Lingard, 6 T. R. 217; S. P. Edwards v. Williams, 5 Taunt. 247.

Therefore, in debt upon a bond conditioned for an indemnification, the defendant ought not to be held to bail for the penalty, but only for the amount of the damage incurred. Kirk v. Strickland, 2 Dougl. 449.

A defendant may be arrested for sums paid by plaintiff as obligor of an indemnity bond, as for liquidated damages, if the sum the plaintiff has been called on to pay can be ascertained. Anderson v. Bell, 2 Tyr. 732.

Upon a bond conditioned for paying a less sum by instalments and interest, though a part only of the instalments are due, the obligee may arrest for the aggregate amount of all the instalments, and the interest accrued due before the action brought. Talbot v. Hodson, 5 Marsh. 527; 7 Taunt. 251.

No person shall be held to bail in an action of trover or detinue, without an order of a judge. Reg. Gen. K. B. H. T. 48 G. 3; 9 East, 325.

So also in C. P. 1 Taunt. 203.

Nor can a defendant be arrested in an action on a policy, where there has been no adjustment, although the plaintiff swear to a total loss, and the defendant has made an unqualified offer to pay a fixed sum per cent. Lear v. Heath, 2 Marsh. 19; 5 Taunt. 201.

If an underwriter be held to bail for the amount of his subscription to a policy of insurance, the court will order the bail bond to be cancelled, and the plaintiff to pay the costs. Id.

As the policy is only a contract of indemnity. Lambe v. Dubois, 1 Marsh. 21 n.; 5 Taunt. 202.

A defendant cannot be held to bail, on an affidavit stating him to be indebted to the plaintiff in respect of a certain sale of land in the possession of the defendant. Sykes v. Ross, 2 Y. & J. 2.

On Judgments.]—Although formerly held, that, in an action on a judgment, though above the sum for which an arrest might be made, the defendant could not be held to bail, if the original demand was under that sum. Anon. Cowp. 128; S. P. Palmer v. Needham, 3 Burr. 1389. And see Belither v. Gibbs, 4 Burr. 2117.

A defendant may be arrested in an action on a judgment for a sufficient sum for damages and costs; though the original debt alone were under. Lewis v. Pottle, 4 T. R. 570.

But not in debt on a judgment in trespass, although the damages were above the sum. Cressy v. Kell, 1 Wils. 120.

A defendant may hold a plaintiff to bail, in debt on a judgment for the costs of a nonsuit. Nightingale v. Nightingale, 2 W. Black. 1274; S. P. contra Bush v. Bates, 5 Burr. 2660.

A defendant may be arrested in an action on a judgment where he was not held to bail in the first action. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

Notwithstanding error brought and bail therein. Kindal v. Carey, 2 W. Black. 786.

Even where the judgment in the former action has been reversed. Cartwright v. Keeley, 7 Taunt. 192.

But, where a plaintiff, by his own acts, waves his bail in an original action, he shall not arrest in an action on the judgment. Crutchfield v. Seyward, 2 Wils. 93.

A defendant having been arrested, but afterwards discharged, on account of the plaintiff declaring against him on a different cause of action from that mentioned in the writ and affidavit, may be again holden to bail in an action on the judgment. De la Cour v. Read, 2 H. Black. 278.

Plaintiff having recovered judgment, and levied part under a fi. fa., arrested the defendant for the residue in an action on the judgment, he not having been arrested in the original action: and the court of C. P. refused to discharge him. Hesse v. Stevenson, 1 N. R. 133; 2 Smith, 39.

So, if a fi. fa. on a judgment have been executed, but not returned, and the defendant be arrested in an action on the judgment, the court will not set aside the arrest. Green v. Elgie, 1 Dowl. P. C. 344.

If a defendant, being arrested upon process in K. B. give a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, and be afterwards holden to bail in C. P. in an action upon that judgment, the court will discharge him upon a common appearance. Salkeld v. Lands, 2 B. & P. 416.

On Awards.]—Where a cause is referred to arbitration, defendant may be arrested on the award, though he was arrested on the original action. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

And where a cause, in which the defendant has been holden to bail, is referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator awards to the plaintiff a sum exceeding the amount allowed for arrest, the defendant may be holden to bail again, in an action upon the award. Collins v. Powell, 2 T. R. 756.

Bail.]—There can be no arrest in an action of debt upon a recognizance of bail. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 172.

Nor can the bail to the sheriff be arrested. Brander v. Robson, 6 T. R. 336.

Nor can a defendant who has given a bail bond be arrested in an action brought by the sheriff on that bond. Mellish v. Petherick, 8 T. R. 450.

But bail in the original action, after judgment recovered against them on the bail bond, may be arrested in an action on such judgment. Prendergast v. Davis, 8 T. R. 85.

Other Cases.]—The court will discharge a defendant from arrest where the action is manifestly vexatious. Cox v. Chubb, 2 W. Black. 809.

And will examine whether a cause be bailable, though removed by habeas corpus. Hecklin v. Hartop, 2 W. Black. 886.

A defendant cannot be arrested for goods bargained and sold, unless they have been delivered. Hopkins v. Vaughan, 12 East, 398; S. P. Bell v. Thrupp, 2 B. & A. 596; 1 Chit. 331.

Nor in C. P., in an action founded on the prothonotary's allocatur for costs. Fry v. Malcolm, 4 Taunt. 705.

But held contra, in K. B. Powell v. Portherch, 2 T. R. 55.

A defendant, arrested for money won at play, discharged on entering a common appearance in C. P. Young v. Moore, 2 Wils. 67.

Semble, that a defendant may be arrested on a wager which is recoverable at law. Murray v. Kelly, 2 Selw. N. P. 1376.

A defendant may be arrested on a contract made abroad, although the foreign law may not authorize an arrest. De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 B. & Adol. 284.

2. Amount.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, no person shall be arrested upon any process issuing out of any court where the cause of action shall not have originally amounted to 20*l.* or upwards, over and above and exclusive of any costs, charges, and expenses that may have been incurred, recovered, or made chargeable in or about the suing for or recovering the same; where the cause of action is under that amount, they must be served with process, and all judgments contrary to the act are avoided—s. 1. See also 12 Geo. 1, c. 29; 5 Geo. 2, c. 27; 43 Geo. 3, c. 46; and 51 Geo. 3, c. 124, which fixed the amount to 10*l.* on bills and notes, and 15*l.* in other cases, which being a temporary act, was allowed to expire before the passing of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71.

On the statute 51 Geo. 3, c. 124, s. 1, it was held that it did not avoid the plaintiff's proceedings and judgment, by reason of his arresting for a sum exceeding 15*l.* and recovering less than 15*l.* Spink v. Hitchcock, 1 Moore, 131; 7 Taunt. 435. And see Ball v. Swan, 1 B. & A. 393.

Under that statute, where an attorney arrested a defendant, and held him to bail for a bill for 15*l.*, which was afterwards reduced to less than that sum, the court refused to order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. Thwaites v. Piper, 4 D. & R. 194.

If a plaintiff after making an affidavit of debt, receive part of the debt, and the debt is thereby reduced to an amount insufficient to warrant an arrest, and the defendant is, notwithstanding, afterwards arrested for the whole debt, the bail bond will be ordered to be set aside with costs. Short v. Cunningham, 1 Dowl. P. C. 662.

3. Second Arrest.

(a) Generally.

In general, a defendant cannot be held to bail twice for the same cause; but, if he be discharged out of custody the first time for some act for which the plaintiff is not answerable—e. g. an alteration in the warrant to arrest by the sheriff's officer, without the plaintiff's knowledge—the defendant may be again arrested for the same cause of action. Housin v. Barrow, 6 T. R. 218.

A second arrest must be vexatious in order to induce the court to discharge the defendant. Anon. 1 Chit. 276.

A second action is always considered vexatious until the contrary be shewn. Williams v. Thacker, 4 Moore, 294; 1 B. & B. 514.

Where a defendant is let out of custody at his own request, in order that he may attend to his business, he may be again arrested on the same affidavit. Penfold v. Maxwell, 1 Chit. 275, n.: S. C. nom. Puckford v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 52.

A. arrested B. and died: the executors of A. again arrested B. for the same cause of action:—

Held, that the second proceeding was not vexatious, and that the defendant was not entitled to be discharged out of custody on entering a common appearance. Mellin v. Evans, 1 C. & J. 82.

Where a plaintiff arrests a defendant, and on the trial recovers part of his demand and his costs, he cannot afterwards hold the defendant to bail for another part of the same demand, although he offered no evidence as to the other part. Hamilton v. Pitt, 1 Dowl. P. C. 209; 7 Bing. 230: S. C. nom. Hamilton v. Jones, 4 M. & P. 868.

Quere, whether a party can be arrested a third time for the same cause of action. Wells v. Gurney, 8 B. & C. 769.

Where a defendant had been twice arrested, in two different counties, for the same cause of action, and had put in bail to two writs, the court refused to grant a rule absolute for setting aside the proceedings in one of the two actions brought against the defendant, as there was in fact but one action, and the proper course was to move that an exoneretur might be entered on one of the bail-pieces. Powell v. Henderson, 1 Chit. 392.

(b) After Nonpros, Nonsuit, or Discontinuance.

Leave of the Court.—After nonpros, nonsuit, or discontinuance, the defendant shall not be arrested a second time without the order of a judge. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh. N. S. 594.

In what Cases after Discontinuance.—Before the rule a defendant might have been arrested a second time, where the plaintiff had discontinued the first suit by reason of a mistake. Bates v. Barry, 2 Wils. 381.

But not where the first arrest was before the cause of action accrued. Wheelright v. Joseph, 5 M. & S. 93.

As, where the credit was not expired. Anon. 1 Chit. 274.

In such cases, semble, the defendant had his remedy by action for damages. Swancott v. Westgarth, 4 East, 75.

It was for the plaintiff to shew that he discontinued on account of a mistake or misrepresentation, and that the second arrest was not vexatious. Archer v. Champneys, 3 Moore, 607.

The defendant was arrested in C. P. after a nonpros in the Exchequer, for the same cause of action:—Held, that he was entitled to be discharged on entering a common appearance, as the plaintiff did not shew that the second arrest was not vexatious. Williams v. Thacker, 4 Moore, 294; 1 B. & B. 514.

After a discontinuance the plaintiff could not arrest the defendant a second time, until the costs of the first action were taxed. Anon. 1 Chit. 161.

For, the discontinuance was not complete until the costs were taxed. Molling v. Buckholtz, 3 M. & S. 153. And see Howarth v. Samuel, 1 B. & A. 566; 1 Chit. 633.

But he might after the costs have been taxed and paid. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

A defendant being in custody within a local jurisdiction, the plaintiff lodged a detainer against him, but discontinued the action for fear of a plea to the jurisdiction, and then arrested the defendant in K. B., without having paid his own costs of the first suit:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to be discharged on filing common bail, the second suit not being vexatious. Paine v. Gaudery, 3 D. & R. 33.

After Serviceable Process.]—Where the first action is notailable, the court will not set aside an arrest in a subsequent action, though the first be still pending at the time. Davidson v. Cleworth, 1 Chit. 275, n.

And has not been discontinued. Bishop v. Powell, 6 T. R. 616.

But, if a plaintiff sues out serviceable process, and, without discontinuing, sues outailable process for the same cause of action, the defendant may plead the pendency of the former suit, and the court will not relieve the plaintiff. Prescott v. Stevens, 1 Dowl. P. C. 57.

Where a plaintiff sued out serviceable process, and an order for particulars was made, and, two terms after suing out the serviceable process, he arrested the defendant:—Held, that the arrest was regular, although the order for particulars operated as a stay of proceedings in the first action. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 59.

Where the defendant was arrested by an indorsee, on five promissory notes of 100l. each, payable one day after date, but was discharged out of custody on terms, one of which was the payment of two of the notes; and the indorsee afterwards served the defendant with process for the balance, but did not file a declaration; and eventually indorsed the three remaining notes, which were over-due, to J. S., who took them without making any inquiry, and held the defendant to bail:—Held, that he was entitled to be discharged out of custody as to the last action, on entering a common appearance; but not to a stay of proceedings until the two former actions should be discontinued. McClure v. Pringle, 11 Dowl. 2; 13 Price, 8.

After Nonsuit.]—Before the rule, there could not be a second arrest after a nonsuit on the merits. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 175.

But after a nonsuit on the ground of a variance, the defendant might be again arrested for the same cause in a second action. Kearney v. King, 1 Chit. 273.

Cassatur Bills.]—One of two partners on being arrested for a joint debt, pleaded the partnership in abatement, and the plaintiff entered a cassatur bill:—Held, that he might be arrested again for the same debt in a new action against both partners. Salisbury v. Whiteall, 1 Tidd's Prac. 175: S. P. 1 Chit. 274.

(c) After Supersedeas.

Where a defendant is arrested or detained in custody after being superseded, or supersedeable, in a former action by the laches of the plaintiff, the court will discharge him on common bail, even though he be arrested on a note given subsequent to the supersedeas. Cookson v. Foster, 1 Tidd's Prac. 175: S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

A defendant could not be arrested where he was discharged for default of the plaintiff in not declaring against him in time, the first affidavit to hold to bail being adapted to a demand in trover for goods, and the second for money had and received, upon a supposition that the goods had been sold by the defendant for the plaintiff, and the money received to his use. Imlay v. Ellefsen, 3 East, 309.

A defendant, superseded for want of being charged in execution, cannot be held to bail again upon bills given by him before he was rendered as a collateral security for the damages and costs recovered against him in the former action, and upon agreement for a stay of execution till default made in payment of the bills. Daniel v. Dodd, 1 East, 334.

A defendant superseded for want of being charged in execution within two terms after judgment, cannot be arrested in an action on the judgment; but he may be charged in execution after judgment obtained in the second action. Blandford v. Foote, Cowp. 72.

Where a defendant was arrested in the mayor's court at Hereford, and, by the practice of that court, a plaintiff was not bound to deliver a declaration without a rule to shew cause for that purpose, and the defendant, without conforming to the practice, superseded the action for want of a declaration, and was again arrested in London for the same cause of action; the court discharged him on filing common bail. England v. Lewis, 3 D. & R. 189.

(d) After Compromise.

Where the first action is compromised, and a second is brought for the same cause, the court will not set aside the bail-bond, unless the proceedings are vexatious. Brown v. Davis, 1 Chit. 161.

A party discharged from arrest, on giving security, cannot be arrested again if the security turn out to be worthless, unless he has been guilty of fraud. Wilson v. Hamer, 8 Bing. 54; 1 M. & Scott, 120; 1 Dowl. P. C. 248.

Though, in one case, where A., having been arrested by B., gave him a draft for part of the demand, and agreed to settle the remainder in a few days, and the draft was dishonoured; on which B. again arrested him on the same affidavit: it was held regular. Puckford v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 52; S. C. nom. Penfold v. Maxwell, 1 Chit. 274, n.; 275, n.

(e) Proceedings in Foreign and other Courts.

Foreign Courts.]—After an arrest in a foreign country upon a judgment obtained there, the defendant, having escaped, may be again arrested here in an action on that judgment. Aliven v. Furnival, 1 Dowl. P. C. 614.

A defendant who had been arrested in America, may be again arrested here for the same cause of action. Maule v. Murray, 7 T. R. 470.

A defendant having given a bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money, if a sentence of a vice-admiralty court should be affirmed on appeal, and the appeal having been dismissed for want of prosecution, the defendant was arrested; the appeal being restored upon petition, the action was suspended and the bail discharged; but being again dismissed, a new action on the bond was commenced, and the defendant was again arrested;—from this second arrest the defendant applied to be discharged; but the court rejected the application. Woodmeston v. Scott, 1 N. R. 13.

There is no objection to an arrest here, after an arrest in a foreign country, where it does not distinctly appear that the defendant could have the same redress and benefit by the proceedings abroad as here. Imlay v. Ellefsen, 2 East, 453.

Semble, where under process from the supreme court of New South Wales (established by act 4. Geo. 4, c. 96), the goods of a defendant are attached and rendered to the plaintiff in execution, or bail are put in to pay the condemnation money, he cannot be arrested for the same cause of action in this country. Naylor v. Eagar, 2 Y. & J. 90.

In such a case, where a defendant applied to be discharged from custody on entering a common appearance, and deposed that by the practice of that court when process was issued, and a non est inventus returned, an attachment issued (which proceeding had been adopted by the plaintiffs against him in New South Wales) whereupon the defendant's goods were seized and rendered to the plaintiff in execution, unless bail were put in to pay the condemnation money; and that either the one or the other must have taken place against him at the suit of the plaintiffs, according to the practice of that court: the court refused to discharge him, being of opinion that the affidavit did not shew clearly that the plaintiffs had the same remedy in the colony which they might have in this country. Id.

Other Courts.—A defendant may be arrested a second time in a court which proceeds by different methods of redress from that in which the first action was brought. Wood v. Thompson, 1 Marsh. 395; 5 Taunt. 851: S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

A defendant may be arrested in an action in a court at Westminster, after having surrendered in discharge of a foreign attachment in an action in the mayor's court of London for the same cause. Id.

So, after having put in bail to a foreign attachment in an action in the mayor's court of London for the same debt. Bromley v. Peck, 1 Marsh. 397, n.; 5 Taunt. 852.

On the dissolution of a partnership between B. and C., the latter filed a bill in equity for an account. I. S. admitted that he owed a balance to both the partners, and was made a defendant in the suit. C. applied for a writ of ne exeat regno against I. S. for a much larger sum than that admitted by him to be due to the partnership, alleging that sum to be the balance due to the partnership. The court of Chancery granted the writ for the smaller sum only; and I. S. was accordingly held to bail for its amount, which he paid into court. B. became bankrupt, and his assignees, of whom C. was one, arrested I. S. for the larger sum. The court of C. P. refused to discharge I. S. out of custody, on the ground that he could not be considered as having been twice arrested for the same cause of action; and as a rule to set aside proceedings on account of a suit pending in equity, had never been granted. Musgrave v. Medex, 8 Taunt. 24.

4. Detainer.

When the sheriff arrests a defendant in one action, it operates virtually as an arrest in all the actions in which the sheriff holds writs against him at the time; therefore, where the first arrest is, by the act of the sheriff, illegally made, the subsequent detainers founded thereon are illegal also. Barratt v. Price, 2 M. & Scott, 634; 9 Bing. 566; 1 Dowl. P. C. 725.

Nor does it make any difference that the writs upon which such detainers take place were lodged previously to the arrest. Ex parte Ross, 1 Rose, 260: S. P. Ex parte Hawkins, 4 Ves. jun. 691.

A defendant wrongfully (by the act of the party) arrested is not entitled to be discharged from subsequent detainers, unless there has been collusion between the plaintiffs in those causes and the person by whom the defendant was originally arrested. Callaway v. Bond, 1 Chit. 580.

Where a plaintiff arrested a defendant and discontinued the action and paid him the costs, but, before he was actually discharged out of custody, lodged a detainer against him for a larger debt arising out of the same cause of action:—Held, that such detainer was irregular, and that the defendant was entitled to be discharged out of custody on filing common bail. White v. Gompertz, 1 D. & R. 556. But see S. C. contra, 5 B. & A. 905.

A plaintiff may lodge a detainer against a defendant in custody upon mesne process, after his bail have justified, the defendant not having completed his discharge, but being still within the prison: and he is not entitled to his discharge upon an affidavit that the sum for which the detainer was lodged was due at the time of the first arrest. Quin v. Reynolds, 3 M. & S. 144.

A defendant, not privileged from arrest at the time, was arrested on an insufficient affidavit, and afterwards, on that ground, discharged out of custody; during his imprisonment, another creditor, without collusion with the former, lodged a detainer against him:—Held, that such detainer was properly lodged. Barclay v. Faber, 2 B. & A. 743; 1 Chit. 579.

Where the defendant had been arrested on process issued out of K. B. and was discharged on the ground of a defect in the affidavit of debt, and a new detainer for the same cause of action was lodged against him on the day of the discharge, in the Fleet prison, where he was then confined, and the action in K. B. had been discontinued, but the costs not paid:—Held, that such detainer was irregular; and the court ordered the defendant to be discharged out of custody. Cloughton v. Farquharson, 7 Moore, 312.

A defendant in custody at the suit of one plaintiff, is not privileged from arrest at the suit of another, unless there be some collusion, although the prior custody may be illegal. Hovson v. Walker, and Crowden v. Same, 2 W. Black. 823.

The Court of C. P. refused a detainer against a principal in custody. Barling v. Waters, 6 Bing. 423; 4 M. & P. 125.

II. AFFIDAVIT OF DEBT.

1. When necessary.

By 12 Geo. 1, c. 29, s. 2, when the cause of action is such as to warrant an arrest, an affidavit must be made and filed of such cause of action; it must be made before any judge or commissioner of the court out of which the process shall issue authorized to take affidavits in such courts, or else before the officer who shall issue such process, or his deputy.

The writ cannot be issued before an affidavit filed. Hawkins v. Baskerville, 2 Ld. Ken. 374.

A latitat was a continuance of a bill of Middlesex, and therefore it was sufficient, to satisfy the statute, that an office copy of the affidavit, sworn in the bill of Middlesex office, was filed at the office of the signer of the writs, previously to issuing the latitat, without swearing a fresh affidavit. Baker v. Allen, 7 B. & C. 526; 1 M. & R. 232.

So, if a defendant put in bail to a special capias issued upon an affidavit sworn at the bill of Middlesex office, he waived the irregularity. Dalton v. Barnes, 1 M. & S. 230.

If a writ of capias be issued into one county, on an affidavit of debt, and no proceedings be taken, another original writ of capias may be issued into another county, on the same affidavit. Rodwell v. Chapman, 1 C. & M. 70; 1 Dowl. P. C. 634.

Where a first capias is issued on an affidavit of debt filed with the filacer of one county, if, instead of a testatum, a second capias is issued into another county, a new affidavit of debt must be filed with the filacer of the second county. Dorville v. Whomwell, 3 Bing. 39; 10 Moore, 318.

Where a plaintiff proceeds by a second original capias instead of a testatum capias, the omission of a second affidavit will not so far vitiate subsequent proceedings as to induce the court on motion to discharge a defendant from arrest. Boyd v. Darand, 2 Taunt. 161.

And where bailable process sued out previous to 37 Geo. 3, c. 45, was renewed four times without a new affidavit, and on the last writ the defendant was arrested subsequent to the statute; the court of C. P. held the affidavit was sufficient, though not according to the statute. Crookes v. Houlditch, 1 B. & P. 174.

Quære, whether in such a case it is necessary to file an office copy of the affidavit with the filacer of the second county. Id.

A capias into Cambridgeshire issued on an affidavit filed with the filacer for that county; a testatum capias into Devonshire afterwards issued before the return of the capias, without a new affidavit or an office copy of the original affidavit, the same officer being filacer for both counties: the court refused to set aside the testatum. Martin v. Bidgood, 12 Moore, 236; S. C. nom. Evans v. Bidgood, 4 Bing. 63.

An affidavit of debt must not be defamatory or scandalous. Anon. Lofft, 433.

Two or more defendants in different actions cannot be held to bail upon one affidavit. Gilly v. Lockyer, 1 Dougl. 217. And see Crooke v. Davis, 5 Burr. 2690.

An affidavit to hold to bail continues in force for a year, and for that time only. Pitches v. Davey, and Stewart v. Freeman, 1 Tidd's Prac. 192.

2. How intituled.

Affidavits of debt sworn before a judge of any of the Courts of K. B., C. P., or Exchequer, shall be received in the court to which such judge belongs, though not intituled of that court; but not in any other court, unless intituled of the court in which they are to be used. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T., 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S., 593.

By statute 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 4, every judge may transact such business depending in any of the courts, as relates to matters over which the courts have common jurisdiction.

An affidavit, purporting to have been sworn "at the King's Bench Office, Inner Temple, London, before Thomas Chambre," was held sufficient, although not intituled in any court, as the court conceived themselves bound to notice that Thomas Chambre was an officer of the court, attending at the King's Bench Office, and authorized to take affidavits. Howell v. Wilkinson, 7 B. & C. 783.

It is no objection to an affidavit that it is not intituled "in the King's Bench," or that it appears to have been taken before "A. B. a commissioner, &c." without adding "of the court of K. B.," if in fact he were a commissioner of that court. Kennet and Avon Canal Comp. v. Jones, 7 T. R. 451.

So, an affidavit not intituled in the court, but purporting at the foot to have been sworn before J. Y., deputy filacer, is sufficient. Bland v. Drake, 1 Chit. 165.

But, where a similar affidavit had only the words "by the court," written at the bottom of the jurat, it was held not sufficient. Malling v. Poland, 3 M. & S. 157.

An affidavit intituled "In the Common Place," held sufficient. Rolfe v. Burke, 4 Bing. 101; 12 Moore, 298.

Affidavits to hold to bail are not to be intituled in any cause; nor read if filed so intituled. Reg. Gen. K. B., T. T., 37 Geo. 3; 7 T. R. 454.

So held in C. P. Green v. Redshaw, 1 B. & P. 227.

And if they be intituled "Plaintiff and Defendant," it is bad. Hollis v. Brandon, 1 B. & P. 36.

In one case, the defendant was discharged on common bail, because the affidavit was intituled; there being no cause then in court. King, q. t. v. Cole, 6 T. R. 640.

But afterwards the Court of K. B. refused to discharge a defendant out of custody, on the ground that the affidavit was intituled in the cause. Clarke v. Cawthorne, 7 T. R. 321; S. P. Levi v. Ross, and Gaunt v. Marsh, 7 T. R. 321, n.

3. By whom and how made.

(a) Who may make.

It is not necessary that the creditor should himself swear to the debt; it suffices for another person to swear positively that defendant is indebted to plaintiff, without shewing that deponent is the agent of, or connected with, plaintiff. King v. Turner (Lord), 1 Chit. 58; S. P. Pieters v. Luytjes, 1 B. & P. 1; Lee v. Sellwood, 9 Price, 322; Brown v. Davis, 1 Chit. 161.

Consequently, it is no objection that it states that the plaintiff resides in a foreign country, and that it does not appear how the deponent could know that fact. Andrioni v. Morgan, 4 Taunt. 231.

A plaintiff, convicted of a conspiracy, is not incompetent to make an affidavit to hold a defendant to bail. Park v. Strockley, 4 D. & R. 144.

Nor when convicted of perjury, unless such conviction was followed by judgment. Lee v. Gansell, Cowp. 3.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, a positive affidavit made by the clerk to the plaintiff's attorney, is sufficient. Anon. 1 Chit. 58, n.

So, an affidavit by a bankrupt, for his assignees, is sufficient. Tucker v. Francis, 4 Bing. 142; 12 Moore, 347.

Where an affidavit made by A. in respect of a debt due to B. before his discharge under an insolvent act, whereby B.'s estate became vested in the clerk of the peace, negatived a tender in bank-notes to the knowledge or belief of A.: the court held, that it ought to have shewn that A. usually transacted B.'s business when out of town, and that, at the time when the affidavit was made, B. was out of town, and that an immediate arrest was necessary, as the defendant was about to sail on a voyage. Lawson v. McDonald, 2 B. & P. 590.

If an affidavit to hold to bail be made by a person prima facie incompetent to make it, quære, whether circumstances proving him to be competent can be shewn by affidavit for cause against a rule for discharging the defendant on a common appearance. Bolt v. Miller, 2 B. & P. 420.

(b) Deponent's Addition.

The addition of every person making an affidavit to hold to bail, must be inserted therein. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 593.

It ought to give the true place of abode of the party making it, as well as the addition. D'Argent v. Vivant, 1 East, 334.

Otherwise the defendant will be discharged on common bail. Jarrett v. Dillon, 1 East, 18. But see Anon. 2 Smith, 207.

The addition of "manufacturer" is sufficient. Smith v. Younger, 3 B. & P. 550.

Where the deponent described himself as of "Dorset Place, Clapham Road, Middlesex," and his true residence was "Dorset Place, Clapham Road, Surrey," the court ordered the bail-bond to be cancelled, and a common appearance entered. Collins v. Goodyer, 4 D. & R. 44; 2 B. & C. 563.

But if he be described as "of the city of London, merchant," it is sufficient. Vaissier v. Alderson, 3 M. & S. 166.

The residence of a clerk may be described to be at the office in which he is employed. Anon. 2 Chit. 15.

Thus, in an affidavit by an attorney's clerk, he may state the place of business of his employer as his residence. Alexander v. Milton, 1 Dowl. P. C. 570; 2 C. & J. 424; 2 Tyr. 495.

Or he may be described as residing with his employer, whose addition is stated. Anon. 1 Chit. 464.

Even though at night he sleeps at another place. Haslope v. Thorne, 1 M. & S. 103.

An affidavit, sworn by a clerk of the plaintiff, need not disclose the residence of the plaintiff. Hague v. Levy, 2 M. & Scott, 729; 9 Bing. 595; 1 Dowl. P. C. 720.

A foreigner, whose general residence is abroad, and who only landed here for a temporary purpose, viz. to make the affidavit, may properly describe his place of abode to be in his own country, and not at the place where the affidavit was sworn, within the meaning of the rule of court, M. T. 15 Car. 2. Bouhett v. Kittoe, 3 East, 154.

A description, as "late" of a place, is not sufficient under that rule. Sedley v. White, 11 East, 528.

But where a deponent had been a few days before discharged out of prison, but, by permission, had still continued to lodge there at night, having no other place of residence, his describing himself bona fide as "late" of such prison, was sufficient. Id.

There is no occasion to insert the addition and description of the defendant. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 179.

4. Before whom and where sworn.

Made before Officers issuing Process.—By 12 Geo. 1, c. 29, s. 2, it is provided, that an affidavit of debt shall be made before the officer who issues the process, or his deputy:—Held, that the deputy must be appointed for issuing process, and not merely for taking affidavits. Rogers v. Jones, 7 B. & C. 86; 9 D. & R. 878.

The prothonotary of the Palace Court, being the officer whose duty it is to issue process, appointed A. B. his deputy, and gave him authority to employ other persons to assist him in discharging the duties; and the latter, it being impossible for him to discharge all the duties of the office, employed C. D. to assist him, but C. D. was not known even by name to the prothonotary:—Held, that C. D. was not a sufficient deputy of the prothonotary, and that an affidavit to hold to bail taken before him, was invalid. Hughes v. Jones, 1 B. & Adol. 388.

On an affidavit sworn before and filed with the filacer for Devon, a capias ad respondendum issued to the sheriff of that county against the defendant; and he not being found there, an office copy of such affidavit was filed with the filacer for London, upon which another capias issued, directed to the sheriffs of London, under which the defendant was arrested:—Held, that this was irregular, as an affidavit should have been sworn before the filacer for London; but, as the defendant had put in bail, he had waived the irregularity. Anderson v. Hayman, 2 Moore, 192.

So, it was irregular to issue a special capias on an affidavit sworn at the bill of Middlesex office; but the defendant waived the irregularity by putting in bail. Dalton v. Barnes, 1 M. & S. 230.

Before the Attorney.—Affidavits to hold to bail may be sworn before the attorney for the party, or his clerk, if they are authorized by commission to take affidavits. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4: 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 169; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 593.

Made Abroad.—The court will take cognizance of affidavits sworn before foreign magistrates, if properly authenticated. Dalmer v. Barnard, 7 T. R. 251.

An affidavit of debt made by a plaintiff residing abroad, before a foreign magistrate, whose signature to the jurat, and his authority to administer oaths and take affidavits there, are verified by affidavit in this country, is a sufficient foundation for a judge's order to hold to bail. Omealy v. Newell, 8 East, 364.

The court refused to discharge on common bail a defendant held to bail on a judge's order granted upon the copy of an affidavit of debt made at Hamburgh, authenticated by the magistrates of that city, and corroborated by persons here, to the credit of the party making the affidavit. Bovara v. Bessessti, 3 Dougl. 336.

And where an affidavit contained no place in the jurat, but purported to have been sworn before the Chief Justice of the King's Bench of Ireland, and was signed by him, and such signature was verified by affidavit here:—Held, that it was sufficient to arrest under a judge's order. French v. Bellew, 1 M. & S. 302.

Semble, that an affidavit made before a British vice-consul abroad, in the absence of the consul, is sufficient. Anon. 1 Chit. 463, 721.

But quære, if a British consul in a foreign country has authority to administer an oath; the judges being equally divided in opinion. Pickardo v. Machado, 7 D. & R. 478; 4 B. & C. 886. And see Ex parte Hutchinson (Lady), 4 Bing. 606; 1 M. & P. 599.

An affidavit made in this country, to verify the handwriting of the British vice-consul, before whom an affidavit of debt had been made abroad, must contain the addition of the deponent; and the defendant's obtaining a habeas corpus does not cure the omission. Thurlt v. Faber, 1 Chit. 465, 721.

An affidavit, though made in Ireland, if made for the purpose of being used in this country, ought to contain all those requisites that are essential in an affidavit made in England. Nesbitt v. Pym, 7 T. R. 376, n.

5. Jurat.

The court will give credit to its own officers, that they have observed all proper forms in taking affidavits. Therefore, where the jurat to an affidavit of debt made by a foreigner, certified "that the affidavit was interpreted by F. C., of &c., professor of languages (he having first sworn that he understood the French and English languages), to the deponent, who was afterwards sworn to the truth thereof:"—Held, that the jurat was sufficient, though it did not appear thereby that the deponent understood the language in which the affidavit was interpreted, or that the interpreter was sworn truly to interpret. Rose v. Solliers, 6 D. & R. 514; 4 B. & C. 358.

Semble, that it is sufficient to state that a notary public was sworn to interpret, without stating that he actually did so. Anon. 1 Chit. 660, n.

Where an affidavit was sworn by an administrator, a Frenchman, and the jurat did not state that the interpreter understood the French and the English languages, and the plaintiff's attorney acted as interpreter; and the process described the plaintiff as suing in his own right, and the affidavit stated the debt to be due in his representative character; and, on search at the Prerogative Office, Doctors' Commons, but at no other ecclesiastical office, no letters of administration appeared to have been granted of the estate of the deceased to any one; but the jurat stated that the affidavit had been read over and explained to the deponent in the French language, and that the interpreter was sworn upon his interpretation: the affidavit was held sufficient, and the court refused to discharge the defendant out of custody on filing common bail. Marzetti v. Comte Du Jouffroy, 1 Dowl. P. C. 41.

The court will not order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, because the place where the affidavit was sworn is not mentioned in the jurat. Symmers v. Wason, 1 B. & P. 105.

The jurat of an affidavit, sworn before a commissioner in the country, must state him to be a commissioner. Howard v. Brown, 4 Bing. 393; 1 M. & P. 22.

Such an affidavit was held insufficient, although intituled in the court; and the court would not allow a supplemental affidavit, to aid the defect, to be filed. Id.

Affidavits made by illiterate persons must be certified to have been read to and understood by the deponent in the presence of the officer of the court or person administering the oath. Reg. Gen. K. B., E. T., 31 Geo. 3, 4 T. R. 284; Exch. T. T. 1 Geo. 4, 8 Price, 501; H. T. 40 Geo. 3, 8 Price, 504.

Where an affidavit is sworn by several deponents, the names of all must be specified in the jurat. Houldon v. Fasson, 6 Bing. 236; S. C. nom. Holden v. Fasson, 3 M. & P. 559. Reg. Gen. K. B. M. T. 37 Geo. 3, 7 T. R. 82.

6. Under a Judge's Order.

Swearing to the belief of a debt due on promissory notes, &c., is sufficient to ground a judge's order to hold to bail. Allen v. Barry, 1 Chit. 168.

If a defendant be arrested under a judge's order, a material fact being concealed from the judge, which would probably have induced him to refuse the order; the court will on application discharge the defendant, even though there was a sufficient affidavit of debt, independent of the order. Davies v. Chippendale, 2 B. & P. 282.

But they will not discharge him from a detainer lodged against him by a third person, while in custody under the judge's order. Id.

When a defendant has been arrested in an action of trover by a judge's order, the court will not enter into the question of merits for the purpose of discharging him on filing common bail. Brackenbury v. Needham, 1 Dowl. P. C. 439.

The court will not make an order to hold a tenant to bail, under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 3, for double the amount of goods clandestinely and fraudulently removed from premises on which arrears of rent have accrued. Sutton v. Oswald, 1 Dowl. P. C. 348.

7. Statement of Cause of Action.

(a) Positive Statement of Debt due.

Generally.—An affidavit to hold to bail must shew on what account the debt became due. Polleri v. De Souza, 4 Taunt. 154; S. P. Cooke v. Dobree, 1 H. Black. 10.

And the statement of the cause of action must be positive. Van Masel v. Julian, 1 Wils. 231; S. P. Pomp v. Ludvigson, 2 Burr. 655; Champion v. Gilbert, 4 Burr. 2126.

A mere statement of the circumstances under which it arose being of themselves insufficient. Long v. Linch, 3 Wils. 154; 2 W. Black. 740.

So, though concluding "by reason thereof the defendant stands indebted, which he hath refused and still refuses to pay." Fowler v. Morton, 2 B. & P. 48.

So, an affidavit, stating a promise made by the defendant, executor, &c., to pay a legacy of 100*l.* bequeathed by his testatrix, and confessing assets to the amount of 280*l.*; but "that plaintiff, not receiving the said sum, caused several applications to be made to the defendant without effect, therefore that the defendant was indebted," &c., is not sufficiently positive. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 1 T. R. 716.

Stating that "the plaintiff, on &c., gave the defendant notice to quit on &c., and that the latter held over &c., by reason of which, and by force of the statute, an action has accrued to the plaintiff to demand of the defendant &c." (double rent), is not sufficient. Wheeler v. Copeland, 5 T. R. 364.

So, stating "that E. I. is indebted in 33*l.*, being the amount due to the informant from the said G. P. E. I. for his subscription as member of a certain reading-club, according to the rules and regulations of the same," is bad in form as well as in substance. Waters v. Joyce, 1 D. & R. 150.

In an affidavit made by plaintiff's agent, the plaintiff himself being abroad, if it be positively sworn that defendant is indebted on a judgment, a subsequent allegation, "which said judgment is still in force and unpaid, as this deponent believes," will not vitiate. Bland v. Drake, 1 Chit. 165.

An affidavit stating that the defendant is indebted "for money paid, laid out, and expended, and wages due to the plaintiff for his services on board the defendant's ship," is sufficient, without expressly stating that the debt is due from the defendant. Symons v. Andrews, 1 Marsh. 317; 5 Taunt. 752.

Reference to Documents.—An affidavit by a third person, that defendant is justly indebted to plaintiff in certain sums, and that the deponent is more strongly and better assured that the said sums of money are due, by means of deponent's having transmitted to him, and in his custody, certain documents:—Held insufficient. Brown v. Phepoe, 3 Dougl. 370.

So, a statement that defendant "is indebted, as appeared by an account stated and under the defendant's own hand." Anon. 1 Wils. 121.

So, that he is indebted in a certain sum, as appears by the master's allocatur. Powell v. Portherch, 2 T. R. 55. And see Fry v. Malcolm, 4 Taunt. 705.

So, "that the defendant is indebted in 20*l.*, according to the bill delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant." Williams v. Jackson, 3 T. R. 575.

So, that defendant is indebted on a bill of exchange, as "appears by such bill." Rollin v. Mills, 1 Wils. 279; S. P. Bright v. Purrier, 3 Burr. 1687.

So, "as appears by the bond, and an acknowledgment by the defendant." Kelly v. Devereux, 1 Wils. 339.

So, "as appears by agreement." Jennings v. Martin, 3 Burr. 1447.

But a statement that defendant was indebted in such sum, as the deponent computes, was held sufficient. Moulby v. Richardson, 2 Burr. 1032.

Executors.—An affidavit by an executor, stating the debt to be due, "as appears by the testator's books," is not sufficient, without the words "and which the deponent believes to be true." Garnham v. Hammond, 2 B. & P. 298: S. P. Sheldon v. Baker, 1 T. R. 83.

So, "as appears from a statement made from the testator's books by an accountant employed by the deponent," is insufficient. Rowney v. Dean, 1 Price, 402.

So, if the clerk of a testator make the affidavit. Ethrington v. ———, 1 Tidd's Prac. 182.

Bankrupts' Assignees.]—In an action by assignees, an affidavit made by a clerk of the bankrupt, stating that the defendant is indebted, as appears by the bankrupt's books, is bad, if it do not state the deponent's belief that the debt is due. Lowe v. Farley, 1 Chit. 92: S. P. Ethrington v. ———, 1 Tidd's Prac. 182.

If an assignee and others sue jointly, the former may hold the defendant to bail, on an affidavit, "as appears by the bankrupt's books, and as the deponent believes." Swayne v. Crammond, 4 T. R. 176: S. P. Torma v. Edwards, 4 Burr. 2283.

Without alleging that the books are in the deponent's possession. Hatten v. Bristow, 11 Moore, 504.

So, an affidavit by assignees, stating "as appears to them by the last examination of the bankrupt, and as they verily believe, and that they have not received the debt or any part of it, but believe it to be still due," is sufficient where the bankrupt had refused to make the affidavit. Berclay v. Hunt, 4 Burr. 1992.

But in trover by assignees, "that the defendant possessed himself of the goods, and has refused to deliver them, and has converted them to his own use, as appears by the books of account of the bankrupts, and by the letters of S. (the agent), and letters of plaintiffs, as the deponent believes," was holden not to be sufficiently certain to shew a conversion. Molling v. Buckholtz, 2 M. & S. 563.

Foreign Money and Claims.]—An affidavit on an Irish judgment must shew the value of Irish money. Storie v. Ball, 3 Chit. 16.

An affidavit made before a British consul in a foreign country, stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain number of pounds sterling:—Held, by three justices, that the affidavit was insufficient, inasmuch as it did not appear with certainty, whether the defendant was indebted in British or Irish sterling money. Abbott, C. J. diss. It ought to have said "pounds sterling English." Pickardo v. Machado, 7 D. & R. 478; 4 B. & C. 886.

An affidavit stating that defendant was indebted to plaintiff, "as liquidator of an estate duly appointed by the law of France," is defective for not shewing that plaintiff, as liquidator, is by the law of France entitled to sue. Tenon v. Mars, 3 M. & R. 38; 8 B. & C. 638.

An affidavit stating that A. was indebted to B. for goods sold and delivered in Holland, and that the debt was assigned to C. according to the laws of that country; concluding with a statement, that the assignee of a debt may sue the debtor according to the laws of Holland, "as deponent is informed and believes;" is sufficient to hold the defendant to bail in this country. Scuerhop v. Schmanuel, 4 D. & R. 180.

(b) Defendant's Benefit.

An affidavit for goods sold and delivered, and materials found and work done by deponent for the defendant, was held bad for not stating that the goods were sold and delivered to, and the work done for, the defendant. Young v. Gatien, 2 M. & S. 603: S. P. Bell v. Thrupp, 2 B. & A. 596: 1 Chit. 331.

But an affidavit, which stated that the defendant was indebted "for the hire of divers carriages of the plaintiff to and for the use of the defendant," was held sufficient without stating that they were hired of the plaintiff, or by whom they were hired. Brown v. Garnier, 2 Marsh. 83; 6 Taunt. 389.

And it is sufficient to state that the defendant is indebted "for money had and received on account of the plaintiff," without adding received "by the defendant." Coppinger v. Beaton, 8 T. R. 338.

An affidavit that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in 20l., for money lent on a bill of exchange, drawn by S., accepted by defendant, and overdue and unpaid, was held sufficient, without saying "lent to defendant." Bennett v. Dawson, 4 Bing. 609; 1 M. & P. 594.

An affidavit "for money paid, laid out, and expended, and lent and advanced, by the plaintiff to the defendant, and at his request," is bad, for not distinctly shewing that the money paid, laid out, and expended, was so paid, &c., to the use of the defendant, and at his request. Fricks v. Poole, 4 M. & R. 448; 9 B. & C. 543.

An affidavit, that "R. Sutton is indebted to plaintiff for money paid and laid out to the use of the said R. Jackson:"—Held, well enough. Hughes v. Sutton, 3 M. & S. 178.

It is a sufficient statement of the cause of action, that it is for the use and occupation of premises of the creditor, and if the statement proceed to say, "as tenant thereof," it is no objection that there was not added, "to the creditor." Lee v. Sellwood, 9 Price, 322.

An affidavit, for work and labour done by the plaintiff for the defendant, as his servant, is sufficient. Bliss v. Atkins, 5 Taunt. 756; 1 Marsh. 317, n.

(c) Defendant's Request.

Affidavits, to hold to bail, for money paid to the use of the defendant, or for work and labour done, shall not be deemed sufficient, unless they state the money to have been paid, or the work and labour to have been done, at the request of the defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Ex., H. T., 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 170; 2 Tyr. 341; 4 Bligh, N. S. 594.

Since the rule, it has been held that an affidavit for money paid, &c. must allege that the money was so paid, &c. at the request of the defendant. Reeves v. Hucker, 2 C. & J. 44; 2 Tyr. 161; 1 Price's P. C. 137.

An affidavit "for money paid, laid out, and expended, to and for the use of the defendant," which did not state that the money was paid, &c. "at the request" of the defendant, was held bad. Marshall v. Davison, 2 Tyr. 315; S. P. contra, before the rule, Eyre v. Hulton, 5 Taunt. 704; S. C. nom. Hulton v. Eyre, 1 Marsh. 315.

So, in another case, in K. B., an affidavit for money lent, and for goods sold and delivered, and for work and labour done, is irregular if it omit to state that it was "at the instance and request of the defendant;" although it stated that it was "to and for his use, and on his behalf." Durnford v. Messiter, 5 M. & S. 446.

But in one case an affidavit for work done for the defendant, without adding "at his request," was held sufficient. Anon. 1 Chit. 331.

So, in another case, an affidavit for money paid, without adding "at his request," was held sufficient. Pitt v. New, 3 M. & R. 129; 8 B. & C. 654.

So, in C. P., of money advanced to defendant, as it was said that such request must be generally inferred. Berry v. Fernandes, 8 Moore, 332; 1 Bing. 338.

An affidavit stating that defendant was indebted to plaintiffs in 130*l.* and upwards for work and labour done, and for paper found by plaintiffs and their servants, in and about the printing of a certain book of defendant, and at his request, was held to be sufficient to shew that the work was done, and the materials found for the defendant at his instance. Gale v. Leckie, 6 M. & S. 228.

(d) Agreements.

Ordinarily.—An affidavit on articles of agreement should state the consideration. Walker v. Gregory, 1 Dowl. P. C. 24.

Stating "that the defendant was indebted in the sum of 1000*l.* upon and by virtue of a certain memorandum in writing, bearing date, &c. and signed by the defendant, whereby he promised the plaintiff, that, when he returned in the month of March or April then next, he would marry her, or pay her the sum of 1000*l.*," without shewing any mutual consideration on the part of the plaintiff to sustain the defendant's promise, is insufficient, as the court can take nothing by indentment in an affidavit of debt. Macpherson v. Lovie, 2 D. & R. 69; 1 B. & C. 108.

Stating that defendant was indebted upon breach of articles, bad, as too general. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 183.

So, stating that the defendant is indebted in so much upon promises. Cope v. Cooke, 2 Dougl. 467.

An affidavit stating that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in a certain sum, under a deed by which defendant had covenanted to pay certain sums "at certain times and on certain events now past and happened"—was held sufficient. Barnard v. Neville, 3 Bing. 126; 10 Moore, 475.

But, an affidavit stating that defendant was indebted to plaintiff so much "for interest money, under and by virtue of an agreement," is not sufficient. Brook v. Trist, 10 East, 358.

It is not sufficient to state "that the defendant was indebted for money lent by plaintiff to defendant for the use of another, and for which the defendant promised to be accountable and to repay, or cause to be secured to the plaintiff," &c., it not appearing in the affidavit but that the money had been secured according to the agreement. Jacks v. Pemberton, 5 T. R. 552.

An affidavit that the defendant was indebted in 1000*l.* "under an agreement in writing, whereby the defendant undertook to pay the plaintiff the balance of accounts, &c., which said balance is still due and unpaid," without stating that the balance was 1000*l.*, was held to be defective. Hatfield v. Linguard, 6 T. R. 217.

Stating that the plaintiffs had furnished goods to the amount of 2000*l.* to one N., for whom the defendant undertook to be answerable; that N. had since failed, and paid 4*s.* in the pound only; and that 1000*l.* remained due to the plaintiffs:—Held sufficient. Collins v. Wallis, 11 Moore, 248.

An allegation "that the defendant was indebted in a certain sum, upon and by virtue of a certain charter-party of affreightment, bearing date, &c. for and on account of the hire of a certain ship called the S., let to hire by the plaintiff to the defendant, and by him taken for a certain voyage from the port of L. to P.:"—was held sufficiently certain. Skeen v. McGregor, 8 Moore, 107; 1 Bing. 242.

Stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff by virtue of certain articles of agreement, by which the latter agreed to sell, and the former agreed to purchase certain lands, and that the defendant had been let into possession in pursuance of the agreement, is insufficient, without stating that a conveyance had been tendered to the defendant. Young v. Dowlman, 2 Y. & J. 31.

An affidavit, that the defendant had undertaken to be answerable to the creditors of J. and W. M. for the amount of the debts of such creditors, on their, the creditors, undertaking not to issue a commission of bankrupt against J. and W. M. before the 16th of August; that J. and W. M. owed plaintiffs 1000*l.*; that neither plaintiffs, nor, as they were informed and believed, any other of the creditors of J. and W. M. sued out a commission of bankrupt against J. and W. M. before the 16th of August; that neither J. and W. M., nor defendant, paid plaintiffs the 1000*l.* due to them from J. and W. M.; and that defendant owed plaintiffs 1000*l.* upon his said undertaking:—Held insufficient, the undertaking by the creditors being a condition precedent, which ought to have been averred. Elworthy v. Maunder, 5 Bing. 295; 2 M. & P. 482.

Where a plaintiff seeks to hold a defendant to bail for a sum of money to which he alleges he has rendered himself liable for the defendant, he must shew clearly that the liability has been incurred. Townsend v. Barns, 1 Dowl. P. C. 562; 2 C. & J. 468: S. C. not S. P. 1 C. & M. 177.

An affidavit stated that the defendant was indebted in 25*l.*, by virtue of an agreement, whereby the plaintiff agreed to procure a lease to be granted to the defendant, and the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff, his solicitor, or agent, 25*l.* in full for his share or proportion of the costs and expenses of the agreement, and of the lease and counterpart, and of a proposal to be laid before a master in Chancery for a grant of the lease; the lease and counterpart being to be prepared by the plaintiff's solicitor; and that the plaintiff did procure a lease to be granted, which was prepared by the plaintiff's solicitor; but did not state that the plaintiff had paid the solicitor, or had himself borne or incurred the expenses:—Held, insufficient. Id.

Where there is a Penalty.—A party cannot be held to bail for a penalty, but only for the sum secured by the penalty. Hatfield v. Lingard, 6 T. R. 217.

If a tenant bind himself in a penalty of 100*l.* for performance of repairs within a certain time, the court will not permit him to be holden to bail for the 100*l.* upon an affidavit which does not shew in what respect, and to what amount he has violated his contract. Edwards v. Williams, 5 Taunt. 247.

And an affidavit for stipulated damages for non-performance of an agreement must state a breach of the agreement. Stinton v. Hughes, 6 T. R. 13.

So, an affidavit for a certain sum for the breach of an agreement, must shew that the sum demanded is stipulated damages, and not merely a penalty. Willey v. Thornton, 2 East, 409.

(e) Awards.

An affidavit of debt on an award ought to state the fact of the submission to, and the making of, the award, and that the money was due at a day now past. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 5.

Where there was a submission to two arbitrators, with power to them to name an umpire, if they could not agree, so as the umpire made his award on or before a certain additional day, and the arbitrators having named an umpire who made an award in the plaintiff's favour, but after the time limited had expired, and the plaintiff held the defendant to bail, without stating in his affidavit the fact of the time having expired:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to be discharged on filing common bail. Masel v. Angel, 6 D. & R. 15.

An affidavit on an award, directing money to be paid by defendant to plaintiff upon demand, not alleging a demand, is insufficient. Driver v. Hood, 1 M. & R. 324; 7 B. & C. 494.

But an affidavit "for damages awarded, and for costs and expenses taxed and allowed," is sufficiently certain; for, it will be inferred that the award and taxation are such as will support the action. Jenkins v. Law, 1 B. & P. 365.

(f) Bills and Notes.

Must state Tenor of Instrument.—Affidavits on bills and notes must state the tenor of the instrument: therefore, a statement that the debt was due "upon a certain instrument called a bill of exchange," without further stating the tenor of the bill, was held bad. Dewsbury v. Willis, M'Clel. 366.

So, stating "that defendant is indebted to plaintiff in 450*l.*, as indorsee of a promissory note made by defendant," without stating the date of the note, or that it was payable on demand, is insufficient. Jackson v. Yate, 2 M. & S. 148.

It is not necessary to express the sum for which the bill was drawn. Hanley v. Morgan, 1 Dowl. P. C. 322; 2 C. & J. 331: S. P. Lewis v. Gompertz, 1 Dowl. P. C. 319; 2 C. & J. 352; 2 Tyr. 317.

Stating "that defendant was indebted to plaintiff on a bill drawn by M. D. upon and accepted by defendant, and indorsed by M. D. to the plaintiff," without saying that the bill was drawn payable to order:—Held, sufficient. Hughes v. Brett, 6 Bing. 239; 3 M. & P. 566.

Certainty required.—Stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum upon the balance of a bill of exchange, drawn by the plaintiff upon and accepted by the defendant, and due at a day past, is sufficient. Walmsley v. Dibdin, 4 M. & P. 10.

So, a statement that the debt arose "on a bill of exchange or order for, &c.," drawn by A. upon, and accepted by the defendant, payable to the plaintiff, was sufficient. Wilks v. Adcock, 8 T. R. 27.

So, stating "that W. C. is justly and truly indebted in 44*l.* 11*s.*, being the amount of a certain inland bill of exchange drawn by the said W. C. on this deponent, and by him accepted for the honour of the said W. C., payable to the order of the said W. C. at a day now past, and which said bill of exchange was paid by this deponent," discloses a sufficient cause of action. Brooks v. Clarke, 2 D. & R. 148.

So, a statement that B. was indebted, "as the acceptor of a certain bill of exchange, bearing date, &c., drawn by A., for a valuable consideration on, and accepted by B., payable at two months after the date thereof, and due at a day now passed," was held sufficient. Warmesley v. Macey, 2 B. & R. 338; 5 Moore, 52.

So, affidavits by A. B. stating C. D. to be "justly and truly indebted to this deponent in a certain sum, as indorsee of bills of exchange drawn by E. F. upon, and accepted by C. D., payable to the order of the said E. F. at a certain day now passed, and indorsed to this deponent;" and by A. B. stating G. H. to be "justly and truly indebted to this deponent in a certain sum, as indorsee of a certain bill of exchange, drawn by E. F. upon, and accepted by the said G. H., payable to the order of the said E. F. at a certain day now past:—Held, to contain a sufficient description of the respective debts of C. D. and G. H. Lamb v. Newcombe, 2 B. & B. 343; 5 Moore, 14.

Stating that R. S., H. A., R. R., and B. S. were jointly indebted to the plaintiff on a bill of exchange "accepted (in the name and firm of A. & Co.) by the said R. S., H. A., R. R., and B. S., or one of them:"—Held, insufficient. Harmer v. Ashby, 10 Moore, 323.

Must show that it is due.—It is necessary to state when the bill or note is payable, or that it is overdue. Kirk v. Almond, 1 Dowl. P. C. 318; 2 C. & J. 354; 2 Tyr. 316: S. P. Bill v. Rogers, 12 Price, 194; Jackson v. Yate, 2 M. & S. 148.

An affidavit against the acceptor of a bill, must shew that the bill was due. Holcombe v. Lambkin, 2 M. & S. 475: S. P. Edwards v. Dick, 3 B. & A. 495.

So, held also, in C. P., upon an affidavit which also contained other causes of action; and the court refused a supplemental affidavit. Sands v. Graham, 4 Moore, 18.

But the actual day when due need not be stated. Eltone v. Mortlake, 1 Chit. 648.

Stating "that the defendant was indebted in a certain sum, as indorsee of a bill drawn by E. F. upon, and accepted by the defendant, payable to the order of E. F. at a day then past," is equally sufficient and certain. Lamb v. Edwards, 5 Moore, 14; 2 B. & B. 343.

In C. P., in one case, an affidavit which stated the defendant to be indebted as indorsee of a bill of exchange, without alleging the bill to have become due, was held sufficient. Davison v. March, 1 N. R. 157.

Must shew Title to sue.—An affidavit on bills or notes must shew how the plaintiff became entitled to recover upon them. Balbi v. Batley, 1 Marsh. 424; 6 Taunt. 25.

In an affidavit by an indorsee of a bill, it must be stated by whom the bill was indorsed; it is insufficient to state that the bill was duly indorsed. Lewis v. Gompertz, 1 Dowl. P. C. 319; 2 C. & J. 352; 2 Tyr. 317: S. P. Woolley v. Escudier, 2 M. & Scott, 392.

Thus, an affidavit which stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff upon a promissory note for 10,000*l.*, drawn in favour of Inglis, Ellice, & Co., and duly indorsed to the plaintiff, was held insufficient, because it did not state any indorsement from the payee (the defendant) to the plaintiff. M Taggart v. Ellice, 4 Bing. 114; 12 Moore, 326.

So, an affidavit on a promissory note should state, that the holder is payee or indorsee. Bill v. Rogers, 12 Price, 194.

Stating that the defendant is indebted, as indorsee of a bill of exchange, drawn by one T. W. at a day now past, is not sufficient without stating in what character the defendant became liable. Humphries v. Williams, 2 Marsh. 231: S. C. nom. Humphries v. Winslow, 6 Taunt. 531.

Nor is a statement that the defendant is indebted "on a bill of exchange, drawn by the defendant, upon, and accepted by A. B.; and on another drawn by the plaintiff, upon, and accepted by the defendant;" without stating the dates of the bills, or that they were due and unpaid. Semble, that it is not necessary, in such case, to state the character in which the plaintiff is entitled to sue upon them. Machu v. Fraser, 2 Marsh. 483; 7 Taunt. 171.

But, in one case, an affidavit stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff on a bill of exchange, payable to a third person at a day now past, was held sufficient, without shewing the connection between the payee and the plaintiff. Eltone v. Mortlake, 1 Chit. 648.

So, a statement that the defendant was "justly indebted to the plaintiff in 100*l.*, upon and by virtue of a certain bill of exchange drawn by the defendant, and long since due and unpaid," was held sufficient, without stating in what character the bill was due to the plaintiff, whether as payee or indorsee. Bradshaw v. Saddington, 7 East, 94; 3 Smith, 117.

In an action by indorsee against drawer, the affidavit must allege the default of the acceptor. Buckworth v. Levy, 7 Bing. 251; 5 M. & P. 23; 1 Dowl. P. C. 211: S. P. Cross v. Morgan, 1 Dowl. P. C. 122; Banting v. Jadis, 1 Dowl. P. C. 445.

(g) Bonds.

An affidavit on a bond must shew that the bond is due and payable at the time of the arrest. Smith v. Kendal, 7 D. & R. 232.

A statement "that defendant is indebted to plaintiff in 6000*l.* upon a bond, bearing date, &c. and made and entered into by defendant to plaintiff in the penal sum of 25,000*l.*," without shewing the condition of the bond, is insufficient. Bosanquet v. Fillis, 4 M. & S. 330.

An affidavit, stating the defendant to be indebted to the plaintiff generally, on a bond conditioned for the performance of an award, which award directed one E. F. to pay a sum of money on demand: was held defective, as it did not appear how the defendant was indebted, and that no demand was expressed to have been made on E. F. for payment. Armstrong v. Stratton, 1 Moore, 110; 7 Taunt. 405.

But a statement that the defendant was indebted, "for principal and interest due on a bond," was held sufficient to express that such bond was conditioned for the payment of money, without setting forth the condition. Byland v. King, 1 Moore, 24; 7 Taunt. 275.

A bond was given conditioned for the payment of bills of exchange drawn in England on A. in the East Indies, in case such bills should be returned to England protested for non-payment. The affidavit, after stating "that he was indebted to the deponent in a certain sum," stated also the condition of the bond, and "that the said bills were not paid to his knowledge or belief in India, or elsewhere; but that they were protested for non-acceptance in India, and were still unpaid." It was no objection in this affidavit, that it was stated that the bills were unpaid to the knowledge and belief of the plaintiff; but it was bad, because it introduced a new term, not mentioned in the condition of the bond, viz. a protest for non-acceptance. Hobson v. Campbell, 1 H. Black. 245.

The affidavit must shew that the number of defaults in payment amounts to 20l. Chambers v. Ward, 1 Dowl. P. C. 139.

(h) Goods.

An affidavit for goods sold must state that they were delivered as well as sold. Loisada v. Morryseph, 8 Moore, 366; S. C. nom. Lascar v. Morryseph, 1 Bing. 357.

Therefore a defendant cannot be held to bail on an affidavit stating, that he is indebted for goods "bargained and sold," without saying also "delivered." Hopkins v. Vaughan, 12 East, 398; S. P. Bell v. Thrupp, 2 B. & A. 596; 1 Chit. 331.

It must also state that they were sold by the plaintiff. Perkes v. Severn, 7 East, 194; 3 Smith, 339; S. P. Taylor v. Forbes, 11 East, 315; Cathrow v. Hagger, 8 East, 106. Anon. 1 Chit. 331.

It is not sufficient to state the debt to be for goods sold and appraised to the defendants, without saying "by the plaintiff." Fenton v. Ellis, 1 Marsh. 535; 6 Taunt. 192.

It is necessary to allege that the goods were sold and delivered to the defendant, as well as by the plaintiff. Snell v. Anderson, 3 M. & P. 269.

Stating that the defendant is indebted "for goods sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant," has been held sufficient, though it omit to add "at his request." Rowley v. Bayley, 11 Moore, 383.

(i) Money.

In an affidavit for a certain sum of "money had and received," and "money lent," it is not necessary to distinguish how much is due on each account. Hague v. Levi, 1 Dowl. P. C. 720; 9 Bing. 595; 2 M. & Scott, 729.

Stating that the defendant is indebted in 1000l. "on balance of account for money paid, laid out, and expended by the plaintiff to and for defendant, and at his request, and for money had and received by the defendant for the plaintiff, and for interest of monies due by the defendant to the plaintiff," is not sufficiently certain. Viager v. Delegal, 2 B. & Adol. 571; 1 Dowl. P. C. 333.

Stating "that B. owed to A. so much money, laid out and expended, and upon the balance of account," was held insufficient. Eicke v. Evans, 2 Chit. 15.

Stating that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff "as secretary to a tontine society," for money had and received "to his use," was held bad for uncertainty. Whitchurch v. Whiting, 3 Anst. 797.

(j) Statutes.

Seemle, that an affidavit on a penal statute should specify the nature of the offence, and aver that the defendant has incurred the forfeiture; but the offence need not be described circumstantially; nor is the plaintiff obliged to swear, that the defendant is indebted to him to the amount of the penalty. Davis v. Mazzinghi, 1 T. R. 705.

If an affidavit for a penalty on a statute mistake the year in which the statute was passed, it is a fatal objection, although the title of the act be properly set forth. Watson v. Shaw, 2 T. R. 654.

Cases of affidavit for penalties for unlawful insurances under the lottery act 27 Geo. 3, c. 1. Davis v. Mazzinghi, 1 T. R. 705; Watson v. Shaw, 2 T. R. 654; Holland v. Bothmar, 4 T. R. 228; Pritchett v. Cross, 2 H. Black. 17; Rex v. Decker, 3 Anst. 862.

(k) Trover.

In C. P. held that an affidavit that the defendant "was indebted to the plaintiff in trover," is bad. Hubbard v. Pacheco, 1 H. Black. 219.

So, stating "that the plaintiff's cause of action against the defendant was for converting and disposing of divers goods of the plaintiff of the value of 250l., which he refused to deliver, though the plaintiff had demanded the same, and that neither the defendant nor any person on his behalf had offered to pay to the plaintiff the 250l. or the value of the goods," was holden to be insufficient. Woolley v. Thomas, 7 T. R. 550.

So, "that the defendant had possessed himself of certain goods of the plaintiff, and of other persons," was held bad for uncertainty. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 186.

So, an affidavit in trover for a bill of exchange, is bad, if it do not state that the bill remains unpaid. Clarke v. Cawthorne, 7 T. R. 321.

But held, "that the defendants have possessed themselves of divers goods belonging to the plaintiff, and have refused to deliver them up, and that they or some of them have converted and disposed of them to their own use," was sufficient. Charter v. Jacques, Cowp. 529.

So, an affidavit that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in 103l. for goods, which defendant converted to his own use, was held sufficient to hold a custom-house officer to bail in trover. Emmerson v. Hawkins, 1 Wils. 335.

(l) Assignment of Choses in Action.

An assignee of a bond may make an affidavit without joining the assignor. Anon. 1 Chit. 58; S. P. Byland v. King, 1 Moore, 24; 7 Taunt. 275.

A co-assignee of a debt arising out of bills of exchange in his own possession may hold the defendant to bail on his own affidavit; swearing positively as to all the facts required which are within his own knowledge, and to the best of his knowledge and belief, as to such as are within the knowledge of his principal and co-assignees. Cresswell v. Lovell, 8 T. R. 418.

An affidavit shewing that, "at the time of the assignment thereafter mentioned, the defendant was indebted to plaintiff on a bill, and that the latter afterwards assigned the debt by indenture to third persons in trust, one of whom then deposed, that, at the time of the affidavit being made, the defendant was indebted to the trustees as such trustees and assignees as aforesaid:"—Held, insufficient, because it did not deny that the debt had been satisfied to the plaintiff between the assignment and the time of the affidavit being made. Mann v. Sheriff, 2 B. & P. 355.

But a supplemental affidavit was allowed. Id.

In an action on a bond at the suit of the obligee, for the benefit of the assignee, against the obligor, the affidavit was made jointly by the plaintiff (the obligee) and the assignee, the former swearing that a certain sum was due for principal and interest on the bond, and that he had assigned it to the latter; and the latter, that the sum due on the bond still remained unpaid, and due and owing to him as assignee:—Held, sufficient. Fairman v. Farquharson, 1 M. & P. 179.

8. Defects in.

Clerical Errors.—An affidavit was held good although the word "oath" was omitted, it being "maketh that B. is indebted," instead of "maketh oath." Anon. Loft, 85.

But considered bad where the mistake was "in" indebted, instead of "is" indebted. Reeks v. Gro-neman, 2 Wils. 224.

An affidavit under a judge's order disclosing circumstances which shew that the plaintiff has been damnified to such an amount, is sufficient, although it improperly state that the defendant was indebted to that amount, and disclose the special circumstances. Imlay v. Ellefsen, 2 East, 453.

Taking advantage of.—In K. B. the affidavit to hold to bail is part of the process to bring the defendant into court; any irregularity in it must be taken advantage of in the first instance; and is waved by the defendant's putting in bail. D'Argent v. Vivant, 1 East, 330.

Objections must be made in a reasonable time after the error committed. Desborough v. Coppinger, 8 T. R. 77; 1 East, 19, c.

Therefore not after plea. Levy v. Dupont, 7 T. R. 376, n.

Nor will the court admit any objection after notice of executing a writ of inquiry on a judgment by default. Desborough v. Coppinger, 8 T. R. 77; 1 East, 19, (c).

Nor after putting in bail. D'Argent v. Vivant, 1 East, 330.

Nor if bail above has been put in and perfected. Chapman v. Snow, 1 B. & P. 132; S. P. Jones v. Price, 1 East, 81; Reeves v. Hucker, 2 Tyr. 161; 2 C. & J. 44; 1 Price's P. C. 137.

Nor after the time for putting in bail above has elapsed. Tucker v. Colegate, 2 C. & J. 489; 2 Tyr. 496; 1 Dowl. P. C. 574.

Nor after the defendant has given bail to the sheriff, and bail to the action, who have rendered him. Shapman v. Whalley, 6 Taunt. 185.

If a defendant, on being informed that a bailable writ has been issued against him, voluntarily give a bail bond, he cannot afterwards object to the insufficiency of the affidavit. Norton v. Danvers, 7 T. R. 375.

But where several persons have separately incurred penalties for printing illegal schemes of the lottery, a separate affidavit must be made and filed against each of them; and if they be all joined in one affidavit, the irregularity is not waved by their putting in bail; but the court, on motion, will stay the proceedings against all of them. Goodwin v. Parry, 4 T. R. 577.

And taking steps in a cause does not wave the irregularity of joining as defendants two persons in one affidavit on one stamp, who are liable to the plaintiff in different capacities (as maker and indorser of a note). Hussey v. Wilson, 5 T. R. 254.

An affidavit stated that the debt arose on "a bill of exchange or order for," &c., drawn by A. upon, and accepted by the defendant, payable to the plaintiff; and upon the affidavit alone the court refused to order the bail bond to be delivered up: but the instrument declared upon, appearing not to be a bill of exchange, the court on reading the affidavit and the declaration, ordered the bail bond to be given up, on the defendant's filing common bail. Wilks v. Adcock, 8 T. R. 27.

If an affidavit state two sums of money to be due from the defendant to two plaintiffs, though only one writ be sued out on it, the court will set aside the proceedings on that one writ. Exeter, (Dean, &c.) v. Seagell, 6 T. R. 688.

Where an affidavit for several causes is defective as to some of them, it will be bad in toto, so as to entitle the defendant to be discharged out of custody on filing common bail. Baker v. Wills, 1 C. & M. 238; 1 Dowl. P. C. 631.

Thus, if an affidavit on several promissory notes is defective as to some of them, the court will discharge the defendant on filing common bail, and will not order bail to be taken to the amount of the note, as to which the affidavit is sufficient. Kirk v. Almond, 1 Dowl. P. C. 318; 2 C. & J. 354; 2 Tyr. 316.

9. Supplemental Affidavits.

It was the invariable practice in K. B. not to allow defects to be supplied by supplementary affidavits. Jacks v. Pemberton, 5 T. R. 552; Molling v. Buckholtz, 2 M. & S. 563.

But this rule was relaxed in C. P.; and supplemental affidavits were in many instances received in that court, when the court chose to exercise their discretion upon the subject, but they always said such discretion should be very sparingly exercised. Armstrong v. Stratton, 7 Taunt. 405; 1 Moore, 110.

Now, however, by a general rule of all the courts, no supplemental affidavit shall be allowed to supply any deficiency in the affidavit to hold to bail. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch. Hil. Term, 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 184; 8 Bing. 289; 1 M. & Scott, 416; 3 B. & Adol. 375; 2 C. & J. 170; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 594.

It will, therefore, be necessary in this place only to refer shortly to the cases which have been decided on the subject of the reception or rejection of supplemental affidavits:—

Allowed in C. P. in Garnham v. Hammond, 2 B. & P. 298; Roche v. Carey, 2 W. Black. 850; Mann v. Sheriff, 2 B. & P. 355; Hobson v. Campbell, 1 H. Black. 245; Lawson v. McDonald, 2 B. & P. 590.

Refused in Fenton v. Ellis, 1 Marsh. 535; 6 Taunt. 192; Macku v. Fraser, 7 Taunt. 171; Armstrong v. Stratton, 1 Moore, 110; 7 Taunt. 405; Howard v. Brown, 4 Bing. 393; Green v. Renshaw, 1 B. & P. 227; Sands v. Graham, 4 Moore, 18.

10. Contradictory Affidavits.

A counter affidavit to contradict or do away the effect of an affidavit to hold to bail on the merits, is not allowed; but there have been cases in which the courts of law have permitted an explanation of the circumstances by the affidavit of the defendant, particularly between foreigners, and upon foreign transactions; and, where an abuse of the process appeared, they have directed common bail to be filed. D'Carrieu v. Calonne, 4 Ves. jun. 590.

But though such counter affidavit might be received to shew that the defendant had been before holden to bail for the same cause of action; yet it will not avail to shew that he was before so holden to bail in a foreign country. Imlay v. Ellefson, 2 East, 543.

A rule nisi to discharge the defendant out of custody on filing common bail, was granted by K. B. where the debt sworn to was 600*l.* on the balance of an account, and a counter affidavit had been made on the part of the defendant, that the account had been settled at a much smaller sum. Jackson v. Tomkins, 2 Chit. 20.

An affidavit that plaintiff is a transported felon, cannot be read in answer to an affidavit to hold to bail made by a competent agent. Anon. 1 Chit. 165.

Nor will a counter affidavit be allowed to lessen the bail in an action for an assault. Smith v. Fraser, 1 W. Black. 192.

In a recent case, an affidavit made and tendered by a defendant in support of a motion to set aside an affidavit of debt, stating that nothing was in fact due from him to the plaintiff, was altogether rejected as inadmissible. Bill v. Rogers, 12 Price, 194.

11. Negative of Tender.

By the statute for the resumption of cash payments, the bank restriction acts, by which a tender of notes of the Bank of England was made sufficient to prevent an arrest, were repealed; it is not now therefore necessary to negative a tender of the debt in Bank of England notes, as was the case when the restriction acts were in operation. In consequence of the change effected by the statute, the cases decided upon the sufficiency of the tender have become nugatory; and it has been thought better to omit the substance of this class of cases, and quite sufficient to arrange them in a tabular form, so that they may be referred to if thought necessary.

If the affidavit of debt to hold to bail omitted wholly to negative the tender of the debt in bank notes, the defendant was entitled to be discharged upon filing common bail; but a mere slip or defect in the manner of denying such a tender was aided by the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 18. *Wood v. ## III. PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST.

1. King's Household, &c.

The King's servants, taken in execution, are entitled to be discharged on motion, on account of privilege. Bartlett v. Hebbes, 5 T. R. 686.

A menial servant of his Majesty is not liable to arrest, although he publicly carries on trade, and the debt was contracted in the course of his trade. King v. Foster, 2 Taunt. 167.

Where the question of privilege is doubtful, the court will not, upon motion, discharge the party out of custody, but leave him to his writ of privilege. Luntley v. Battine, 2 B. & A. 234; S. P. Whittingham v. De la Rieu, 2 Chit. 53.

Quære, whether a gentleman of the King's privy chamber be privileged from arrest. Id.

The court refused to discharge a prisoner in execution for debt, claiming privilege from arrest on the ground that he was one of the gentlemen of the king's privy chamber, it appearing that he was not a menial servant, had no stated duties to perform, received no fees in virtue of his office, and had no writ of privilege. Tapler v. Battine, 1 D. & R. 79.

One of the King's yeomen of the guard having been arrested on process issued out of the Palace Court, without leave of the Lord Chamberlain, and that court having refused to discharge him out of custody on filing common bail, he removed the cause into K. B. and put in and perfected bail:—Held, that an exoneretur could not be entered on the bail-piece, even supposing the defendant to be privileged from arrest. Sard v. Forrest, 2 D. & R. 250; 1 B. & C. 139.

The candle and fire lighter to the yeomen of the guard at St. James's palace is privileged from arrest on meane process. Hatton v. Hopkins, 6 M. & S. 271; S. P. Forster v. Hopkins, 2 Chit. 46.

But the court refused to discharge the major of the Tower out of custody, on the ground that he was arrested when returning from an attendance on the Prince Regent, it not appearing that he had been attending by command of his Royal Highness, although the defendant swore that he could not leave the Tower but on business connected with his official situation. Batson v. McLean, 2 Chit. 48.

So the deputy-governor of the Tower is not privileged as such. Id.

One of the wardens of the Tower was arrested, and informed at the time that the plaintiff would be satisfied if he would enter an appearance. He, however, claimed his privilege, but afterwards executed a bail bond. The court refused to order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. Bidgood v. Davies, 6 B. & C. 84; 9 D. & R. 153.

An indictment will not lie against an officer of the Palace Court for arresting a person not of the King's household, against whom a writ has issued out of that court, though no leave to make the arrest has been obtained from the Board of Green Cloth. Rex v. Stobbs, 3 T. R. 735.

2. Peers and Members of Parliament.

An Irish peer who has voted in the election of representative peers, cannot be arrested. Coates v. Hawarden (Lord), 1 M. & R. 110; 7 B. & C. 388.

Defendant having voted at the election of Scotch peers:—Held, as a Scotch peer, entitled to be discharged from arrest, although his vote had been protested against, his claim to the title disputed, and never recognised by the House of Lords, or at court. Digby v. Stirling (Lord), 8 Bing. 55; 1 M. & Scott, 116; 1 Dowl. P. C. 248.

The court will not order a bail bond given by a person claiming privilege from arrest as being an Irish peer, to be cancelled on motion, unless his peerage be clearly proved. Storey v. Birming- ham, 3 D. & R. 418; 1 M. & P. 111, n. And see Wade v. Birmingham, 1 M. & P. 111, n.

The statute 10 Geo. 3, c. 50, takes away the privilege from arrest from servants of peers, though necessarily employed about their persons and estates, and therefore the court refused to discharge the defendant on common bail, who was employed as surveyor on the estate of a peer. Connelley v. Smith, 1 Chit. 83.

Privilege from arrest continues to those who have been members of the House of Commons for a reasonable time after a dissolution of parliament. Barnardo v. Mordaunt, 1 Ld. Ken. 125.

3. Ambassadors' Domestics.

Statute.—By 7 Anne, c. 12, s. 3, (which is considered as merely declaratory of the common law), No ambassador or public minister of any foreign state, nor any of their domestic servants, shall be arrested, or their goods distrained, seized on, or attached; provided, s. 5, that no merchant or trader within the bankrupt laws, who may be such domestic servant, shall be protected; and that the name of such domestic servant be registered in the office of one of the secretaries of state, and by him transmitted to the sheriffs of London and Middlesex, to be hung up in their respective offices.

A person claiming privilege as servant to an ambassador, must be really and bona fide his menial and domestic servant at the time of the arrest. Flint v. De Loyant, 1 Tidd's Prac. 193; S. P. Heathfield v. Chilton, 4 Burr. 2015; Poitier v. Croza, 1 W. Black. 48.

And must also shew the nature of his service, and swear to the actual performance of it. Fountainier v. Heyl, 3 Burr. 1731.

Although an ambassador's servant may be privileged as to his person, it does not follow that all his goods are privileged also, so as to enable the sheriff to apply to set aside a fi. fa. issued against them: and a clear case of privilege must be made out to the satisfaction of the court, or else they will not interfere, either on behalf of the sheriff or the person privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 Dowl. P. C. 588; 1 C. & M. 117.

On an application by the sheriff to quash a rule to return a writ of fi. fa. it is not sufficient to shew that the defendant's name is in the list transmitted by the secretary of state to the sheriff's office, of persons privileged as attached to an embassy, in pursuance of the statute, but it must be clearly shewn that the defendant is in the actual and bona fide service of the ambassador. Id.

And in an action against the sheriff for a false return, the plaintiff may shew that the appointment was merely colourable. Delvalle v. Plomer (Knt.), 3 Camp. 47—Ellenborough.

The statute does not extend to consuls, who are therefore liable to arrest. Viveash v. Becker, 3 M. & S. 284. And see Clarke v. Cretica, 1 Taunt. 106.

Proceedings are not to be stayed because the plaintiff is protected as the servant of a foreign ambassador. Devies, q. t. v. Solomon, 1 Tidd's Prac. 580.

Who are Servants.—A land waiter at the custom-house cannot claim protection as such domestic servant. Masters v. Manby, 1 Burr. 401.

Privilege denied to a domestic physician to a public foreign minister, where it appeared to be a mere scheme to screen him from his debts. Lockwood v. Coysgarne, 3 Burr. 1676.

The chaplain to an ambassador is not protected from arrest if he do no duty in the house. Seacombe v. Bowlney, 1 Wils. 20.

Nor is an ambassador's interpreter, who does not live in the house. Malachi Carolino's case, 1 Wils. 78.

Protection to the English secretary of an ambassador was disallowed, because it appeared he was purser of a ship of war. Durling v. Atkins, 3 Wils. 33.

But in another case it was allowed, although formerly he had been a trader, and the case arose under very suspicious circumstances. Triquet v. Bath, 3 Burr. 1478; 1 W. Black. 471.

The secretary of a foreign minister is privileged from arrest, though his name be not registered at the office of either of the secretaries of state. Hopkins v. De Roebeck, 3 T. R. 79.

Where the wife of a foreign ambassador's secretary was arrested upon a writ issued against husband and wife, the court refused to quash the writ, though the husband swore that before and at the time of the arrest, he was in the actual employment of the ambassador, and in daily attendance upon him, in writing despatches and other official documents. English v. Caballero, 3 D. & R. 25.

A British born subject employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador's chapel, is not protected by the statute. Novello v. Toogood, 2 D. & R. 833; 1 B. & C. 554.

But semble, that a chorister, bona fide employed by an ambassador in the performance of religious worship in his chapel, is privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 C. & M. 117; 1 Dowl. P.C. 588.

4. Persons attending Judicial Proceedings.

(a) Generally.

The privilege from arrest extends to all persons who have any relation to a cause which calls for their attendance in court, whether compelled by process or not, and whether parties, attorneys, witnesses, or bail, &c. And in general, the courts will discharge them on motion, without suing out a writ of privilege or filing common bail. Walpole v. Alexander, 3 Dougl. 45; 1 Tidd's Prac. 198, 199, 213; S. P. Ex parte King, 7 Ves. jun. 312.

A witness coming from abroad without subpoena is privileged. Id.

The protection extends to their going, staying, and returning. Anon. Lofft, 434.

A defendant when discharged from legal custody, has no privilege from arrest in returning home. Anon. Dowl. P. C. 157.

A party coming up on habeas corpus, is protected from seizure during his return, as well as during the coming and staying. Rex v. D'Laval, 1 W. Black. 416.

(b) What an Attendance.

A party who has attended his cause all day in court, and retires in the evening to dine with his attorney and witnesses at a tavern, is privileged from arrest, causa redeundi. Lightfoot v. Cameron, 2 W. Black. 1113.

Therefore trespass will not lie where the plaintiff was arrested by legal process, but at a time when privileged redeundo from attending the court. Id.

So, a plaintiff is protected, who, whilst attending the sittings in expectation of his cause being tried, is waiting at a coffee-house in the vicinity, before the day of trial. Childerston v. Barrett, 11 East, 439.

Semble, if a trial be over in the afternoon, and a witness stay in the town till eleven o'clock the next morning, his home being distant only twelve miles, his subpoena is no protection to him from arrest in the town. Anon. 1 Smith, 355.

But, where an attorney, who had been attending a cause which was put off, went with his witnesses to a coffee-house, and was arrested three hours after the rising of the court, on an attachment for non-payment of money:—Held, that he was properly arrested, not being allowed so long a time to speak to his witnesses on such an occasion before he went home. Rex v. Priddle, 1 Tidd's Prac. 198.

A person who is served with a subpoena in London, and is at the time resident there, is not protected from arrest in the interval between the service of the subpoena and the day appointed for his examination. Gibbs v. Phillipson, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 19.

Semble, a witness, who comes to London in order to be examined, is protected from arrest during the whole time that he remains in London bona fide for the purpose of giving evidence. Id.

A witness is not protected in going, three days before the day appointed by the examiner for his examination, to the solicitor's office to look at the interrogatories, with a view to prepare himself to give his evidence accurately. Id.

A witness from Gravesend having attended the court of bankruptcy, pursuant to a summons, being arrested for debt in Pancras Lane, City, while waiting for the conveyance home, was discharged; although he had, on leaving the court, gone to Catherine Street, Strand. Ex parte Clarke, 2 Deac. & Chit. 99.

But without costs, as against the officer, he not having been shewn the summons to attend the court. Id.

(c) Attendance before Commissioners of Bankrupt.

Commissioners of bankrupt were considered a court of justice, for the purpose of protecting witnesses before them. Ex parte Russell, 19 Ves. jun. 165.

A witness attending before commissioners in order to tender his testimony on a subject of inquiry then before them, without having been summoned for that purpose, is privileged from arrest during such attendance, and returning; but, quære, if he is protected eundo? Ex parte Byrne, 1 Rose, 451; 1 Ves. & B. 316.

Though having left the room by order, for the purpose of separate examination. Id.

A creditor, attending to prove his debt before commissioners of bankruptcy, is privileged from arrest. List's case, 2 Ves. & B. 373; 2 Rose, 24: S. P. Ex parte King, 7 Ves. jun. 312.

So, any person attending under a summons of commissioners of bankrupt, is privileged from arrest. Id.

A person arrested on his return from proving a debt at Guildhall, discharged, with costs of application. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Madd. 49.

A petitioning creditor attending the commissioners for the purpose of watching the progress of the commission, and proposing himself as assignee, is protected from arrest eundo, morando, et redeundo; and it is for the party who seeks to oust him of his privilege, to shew an unreasonable delay, or an improper deviation from his course home. Selby v. Hills, 1 Dowl. P. C. 257; 1 M. & Scott, 253; 8 Bing. 166.

The court will not discharge a person in custody by process of the sheriff's court, in a cause afterwards removed into K. B., because he was arrested while attending commissioners of bankrupt to prove a debt. Kinder v. Williams, 4 T. R. 377.

(d) Attendance before Arbitrators.

A party in a cause attending an arbitrator to be examined under a rule of court, is privileged from arrest eundo, morando, et redeundo. Spence v. Stuart, 3 East, 89.

The summons of an arbitrator, to whom a cause has been referred by order of the court of Chancery, protects a party from arrest under process of K. B., when acting in bona fide obedience to such summons. Moore v. Booth, 3 Ves. jun. 351.

But, where a party residing in L. was summoned to attend an arbitrator at E., and was required to bring with him certain papers then at C., and he went to the latter place, where all his papers were, to make a selection, and having staid there more than twenty-four hours for that purpose and necessary refreshment, was arrested; the majority of the court held that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody, having no right to stop and sort his papers. Randall v. Gurney, 1 Chit. 679; 3 B. & A. 252.

But held by the majority of the court of Exchequer, that a defendant was, under similar circumstances, privileged from arrest; and that the application might be made either to the court, under whose process the privilege is claimed, or to the court out of which the process issued upon which the party was arrested. Ricketts v. Gurney, 1 Chit. 682; 7 Price, 699.

A witness attending arbitrators under an order of court, is protected from arrest. Ex parte Temple, 2 Ves. & B. 395.

And the protection exists during the attendance, though there is an interval of an adjournment to another period of the same day, at the same place. Id.

(e) Other Cases.

Barristers upon the circuit are protected from arrest. Meekins v. Smith, 1 H. Black. 636.

So are bail when attending to justify. Rimmer v. Green, 1 M. & S. 638.

A person attending the insolvent debtors' court, for the purpose of opposing the discharge of a debtor, is privileged from arrest, in the same manner as when in attendance upon any other court. Willingham v. Matthews, 2 Marsh. 57; 6 Taunt. 356.

A witness is not privileged from being arrested by his bail, for the purpose of being surrendered, on his return from giving evidence in a cause; as a person who has given bail is always supposed to be in the custody of his bail. Ex parte Lyne, 3 Stark. 132—Abbott.

A witness attending to give evidence in a court of justice, who has absconded from his bail, may be retaken by the bail in the court; and he is not protected by his subpoena. Horn v. Swinford, 1 D. & R. N. P. C. 20—Richards.

A capital burgess of a borough, attending an election of co-burgesses, under a summons from the mayor, issued, in obedience to a mandamus, directing the corporation to proceed to such election, is not privileged from arrest during his attendance there for that purpose. Nixon v. Burt, and Reed v. Same, 1 Moore, 413; 7 Taunt. 682.

This privilege extends to a person going to make an affidavit before a master. List's case, 2 Ves. & B. 373; 2 Rose, 24.

A defendant who had been attending a warrant before the master to produce papers, and was arrested on leaving the master's office, discharged from the arrest. Franklyn v. Colquhoun, 1 Madd. 580: S. P. Sidgier v. Birch, 9 Ves. jun. 69.

So a solicitor arrested in his returning from attending the master, was discharged in the original action and subsequent detainers. Ex parte Ledwich, 8 Ves. jun. 598.

(f) Proceedings to Liberate.

The application to discharge on the ground of the party being privileged as attending a judicial proceeding, must be to the court of which the proceeding is a contempt. List's case, 2 Ves. & B. 373; 2 Rose, 24.

A defendant arrested by quo minus, while protected by the privilege of C. P. as a suitor there, may be discharged by that court or the court of Exchequer. Walker v. Webb, 3 Anst. 941.

If a party coming to attend the trial of his cause be arrested, the judge at Nisi Prius will grant a habeas corpus to discharge him, and will put off the trial until he be released, without payment of costs, if any collusion can be shewn to exist between the opposite party and the creditor who arrested him; otherwise only on payment of costs. Solomon v. Underhill, 1 Camp. 229—Ellenborough.

A country witness, who is arrested upon his arrival in town to attend a cause, should obtain a habeas corpus returnable before a judge at chambers. Ex parte Tillotson, 1 Stark. 470—Ellenb.

If a plaintiff, while attending the execution of a writ of inquiry in an action brought by him in C. P. against the defendants, who had suffered judgment by default, be arrested on a quo minus at the suit of a third person; the under-sheriff, before whom such inquiry is executed, cannot discharge him; but the court will do so on motion. Walters v. Rees, 4 Moore, 34.

A plaintiff in his return from attending a motion against him in the cause was arrested, and a detainer lodged against him in another action: he was discharged from both; the Court of Chancery examining the parties personally, not by affidavit. Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. jun. 2.

A solicitor arrested on his way from his residence to Lincoln's Inn Hall, without deviation, for the purpose of attending a bankrupt petition as solicitor, was discharged upon personal examination by the Lord Chancellor: the oath being administered by the registrar. Castle's case, 16 Ves. jun. 413.

In another case, a solicitor was discharged upon examination viva voce of him and the officer taken, and the oath administered personally by the Lord Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy, the registrar therefore not present. Gascoigne's case, 14 Ves. jun. 183.

A person having been taken in execution upon a ca. sa. within the outer door of the Vice-Chancellor's court in Lincoln's Inn, while the court was sitting; the Lord Chancellor ordered the officer to attend with his prisoner forthwith, and having examined the officer, discharged the prisoner immediately. Orchard's case, 5 Russ. 159.

5. Other Persons.

(a) Soldiers and Seamen.

By 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 80, no petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or private marine, shall be arrested for any debt, unless contracted before entering the service. And see 44 Geo. 3, c. 13.

Semble, that the privilege from arrest for any demand under 20*l.*, given to soldiers by the mutiny act, is confined to civil actions. Rex v. Archer, 2 T. R. 270. And see Rex v. Bowen, 5 T. R. 156; Nolan, 186.

Volunteer drill-serjeants, &c., though under the mutiny act, according to stat. 44 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 21, are not privileged from arrest for debts under 20*l.* as regular soldiers. Rickman v. Studwick, 8 East. 105.

But a serjeant in the guards is. Goodall's case, 1 Wils. 216.

Generally, a serjeant is privileged from arrest, as well as a private man. Lloyd v. Wooddall, 1 W. Black. 29.

A soldier voluntarily enlisting is not privileged from arrest, within the 30 Geo. 2, c. 8. Turner v. Turner, 1 Burr. 466.

If a non-commissioned officer have been arrested and given bail, the court will not, after judgment recovered against the bail, set aside the proceedings and cancel the bail-bond. Bryan v. Woodward, 4 Taunt. 557.

An action lies upon the stat. 44 Geo. 3, c. 13, s. 4, by a common informer, suing for himself and the king, to recover a penalty against the sheriff for the misconduct of his bailiff in wilfully suffering a seaman to go at large who had been taken out of the king's service by arrest on civil process, on which he was afterwards bailed, instead of delivering him over to the charge of a proper naval officer: the statute which speaks of sheriffs, jailors, or other officers, arresting, apprehending, or taking in execution such seamen, or in whose custody they may be, and who are made liable for their escape, meaning by "other officers," such as may be charged with the execution of criminal warrants against such seamen, or to whom any process may properly be directed for their arrest, detention, or discharge; and not the inferior officers of the sheriff. And the sheriff may be charged in such action for wrongfully and wilfully permitting the escape. Sturmy, q. t. v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 11 East, 25.

(b) Public Officers.

If an officer be privileged from arrest by his warrant or commission, such warrant should be shewn to the court. Batson v. M'Lean, 2 Chit. 48.

One who had been appointed consul-general from the Porte, but was dismissed several months before from his employment, and another person resident here appointed in his room, is not privileged from arrest; though at the time of the arrest he had not received any official notification of his dismissal, or the appointment of the other to succeed him. Marshall v. Cretico, 9 East, 446.

Quære, whether a consul is privileged from an arrest. Clarke v. Critico, 1 Taunt. 106.

A resident merchant of London, who is appointed and acts as consul to a foreign prince, is not now exempted from arrest upon mesne process. Viveash v. Becker, 3 M. & S. 284.

(c) Insane Persons.

The court will not discharge a defendant out of custody on filing common bail, on the ground that he has become insane since the arrest. Kernot v. Norman, 2 T. R. 390.

Even where it appeared that he was insane at the time of the arrest. Nutt v. Verney, 4 T. R. 121.

And the court of Common Pleas will refuse to discharge him even where a commission of lunacy has issued. Steel v. Alan, 2 B. & P. 362.

The court will not discharge the bail on the ground of the defendant's having become a lunatic since the commencement of the action. Ibbotson v. Galway (Lord), 6 T. R. 133.

IV. DISCHARGE FROM ARREST.

1. No Debt due.

If a defendant be held to bail for a debt which is clearly and manifestly not due, it seems the court will discharge him out of custody; but in general they will not try the merits on affidavit. McGinnis v. McCurling, 6 D. & R. 24.

The court will not set aside an arrest upon the merits, unless it be clear from the affidavits that the plaintiff could not have had any cause of action. Burton v. Haworth, 1 Nev. & M. 318.

Semble, that the circumstances of the action being brought for purposes of intimidation, would not be a ground for such interference. Id.

The court will not discharge a defendant on common bail, merely on the ground that an affidavit in contradiction to the affidavit of debt, which was upon a note, states that the note has been satisfied, unless it be conclusively shewn that the defendant is not indebted to the plaintiff. McGinnis v. McCurling, 6 D. & R. 24. And see Masel v. Angel, 6 D. & R. 15.

Where a plaintiff, shortly before his making an affidavit of debt, had written a letter stating that the defendant was a creditor of his, the court interfered summarily to discharge the defendant out of custody, on affidavits denying the debt, the plaintiff not having negatived the writing of such letter by him, or alleged that the debt due to him had arisen subsequently to it. Nizetich v. Bonacich, 5 B. & A. 904.

A defendant ordered to be discharged upon the performance of a prior agreement with the plaintiff for the arrangement of the debt. Anon. Lofft, 546.

If a plaintiff be in execution at the suit of a defendant for costs, alleged to have been paid to the latter by the Treasury, the court of C. P. will not discharge such plaintiff out of custody on an affidavit of that fact, unless it be also sworn that the costs have been paid for the plaintiff. Butt v. Conant, 6 Moore, 65; 3 B. & R. 3.

Where it appeared by affidavit, that a defendant had been taken under a ca. sa., and had in order to procure his liberation paid the undersheriff the amount; that he did not know the plaintiff, and had never had any dealings with any person of his name, nor been applied to by him, nor been ever served personally or otherwise with any process, or received any notice of the cause of action till he was taken in execution, the court ordered the sheriff to repay the money so levied, and the plaintiff to pay the costs occasioned by the levy. Morgan v. Short, 4 Bing. 147.

If there be probable ground to suspect that the securities, upon which the defendant is held to bail, are illegal, the court will discharge him upon filing common bail. Wightwick v. Banks, Forrest, 153.

Where the defendant was held to bail on a bill, the court refused to order the bail bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, on an affidavit that the bill was founded and given on an usurious transaction. Isaacs v. Silvester, 11 Moore, 348.

Where a defendant is arrested on a contract, the legality of which is doubtful, and which may eventually subject the plaintiff to a penalty, the Court of C. P. will discharge him on entering a common appearance. Sumner v. Green, 1 H. Black. 301.

Where the affidavit to hold to bail was regular, and the defendant did not swear that he was unacquainted with the plaintiff, the court refused to cancel the bail bond on the ground that the defendant could not find the plaintiff. Brown v. Moore, 4 Bing. 148; 12 Moore, 361.

I. WHEN MAINTAINABLE.

1. Generally.

Assumpsit lies to recover the balance of a banker's account, however voluminous it may be; and the plaintiff in such case is not obliged to bring account. Tomkins v. Wiltshire, 1 Marsh. 115: S. C. nom. Tomkins v. Willshear, 5 Taunt. 431. But see Scott v. McIntosh, 2 Camp. 238.

General indebitatus assumpsit will lie for tolls. Seward v. Baker, 1 T. R. 616.

And copyhold tolls and fines. Whitefield v. Hunt, 2 Dougl. 727.

So for goods and chattels. Falmouth (Earl) v. Penrose, 6 B. & C. 385.

And for petit customs. Exeter (Mayor) v. Trinlet, 2 Wils. 95.

It lies also for the breach of an agreement to arbitrate, which arises from a revocation of the submission before award made. Brown v. Tanner, M'Clel. & Y. 465; 1 C. & P. 651.

But it will not lie to recover money promised for doing an illegal act; nor if the money be paid, will it lie to recover it back. Webb v. Bishop, Bull. N. P. 132.

Where a plaintiff fails in proving a special agreement count in assumpsit, if his evidence be sufficient to warrant an action on the general counts, he may resort to them. Harris v. Oke, Bull. N. P. 140: S. P. Payne v. Bacomb, 2 Dougl. 651.

Where plaintiff sued for breach of an agreement, which was void by the statute of frauds, being for an interest in land, and not being in writing:—Held, that he might recover on the count for an account stated, having proved a distinct promise of defendant's to pay plaintiff the expenses he had been put to in consequence of the breach of agreement. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459; 1 M. & P. 227; 3 C. & P. 170.

To support a plea that the trustees under a private act of parliament did not "allow or permit" the defendant to have the exclusive privilege of collecting dust and ashes in a certain place, it is necessary to prove some positive act of obstruction on their part; and it is not enough to prove that a third party took it away, having a right to it. Townson v. Green, 2 C. & P. 110—Abbott.

And it seems that this fact is no answer to an action on a written contract to pay a certain sum for the dust of the parish, but the party must seek relief in equity. Id.

A. pays a sum of money into a banker's hands for a specific purpose; the banker's clerk, by mistake, pays the money to B.:—Held, that A. could not maintain an action against B. to recover it back. Rogers v. Kelly, 2 Camp. 123—Ellenborough.

Where a bill of exchange, payable at the house of A. the defendant, had been presented there for payment, and dishonoured, and the acceptor on the following day remitted a sum to A. for the purpose of paying that bill and another; and A. in answer stated that the bill had been dishonoured, but added, that the money received should be carried to the acceptor's account, and afterwards paid the other bill:—Held, that the holder of the original dishonoured bill could not maintain an action against A. for money had and received, unless some agreement had taken place between them. Yates v. Bell, 3 B. & A. 643.

A., being indebted to B. in 700*l.*, applied to C. to lend him that sum, who agreed so to do, provided A. would allow him to deduct therefrom 80*l.* due from B. to himself from stock-jobbing transactions; accordingly C. advanced 620*l.*, and A. gave him a promissory note for 700*l.*; A. then paid over to B. the 620*l.*, who gave him a discharge for the whole 700*l.*; the promissory note for 700*l.* given by A. being paid when due, B. brought an action against C. to recover 80*l.* as money had and received by C. to his use:—Held, that B. could not maintain the action, but that it must be brought by A. if by any one. Shooley v. Daniel, 2 B. & P. 540.

2. In respect of Special Contract.

(a) Contract rescinded.

Where there is a special agreement, which is conditional, the plaintiff must declare specially; and if he affirm that the agreement was cancelled, he must prove the acquiescence of the defendant. Davis v. Nichols, 2 Chit. 320.

And if the contract be broken, assumpsit for money had and received will not lie to recover money paid under it, the remedy being a special action for the breach of contract, unless it has been wholly rescinded or put an end to. Davis v. Street, 1 C. & P. 18—Park. And see Damer v. Langton, 1 C. & P. 158.

Assumpsit for money had and received lies when a payment has been made on a contract which is put an end to. Towers v. Barrett, 1 T. R. 133: S. P. Weston v. Downes, 1 Dougl. 23.

But if it continue open, the plaintiff can only recover damages, and then he must state the special contract and the breach of it. Id.

The distinction between those cases where the contract is open, and where it is not so, is this: if the contract be rescinded, as where by the original terms of the contract no act remains to be done by the defendant himself, or by a subsequent assent by the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to recover back his whole money; and then an action for money had and received will lie; but if the contract be open, the plaintiff's demand is not for the whole sum, but for damages arising out of it; and then he must declare specially. Id.

Where some act is to be done by each party under a special agreement, and the defendant, by his neglect, prevents the plaintiff from carrying the contract into execution, the plaintiff, in an action for money had and received, may recover back any money paid under it. Giles v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 181.

Where money has been paid under a written agreement, but which agreement one party is unable to perform, the other may maintain an action for money had and received generally, and is not bound to declare on the special agreement. Farrier v. Nightingal, 2 Esp. 639—Kenyon.

A contract cannot be rescinded by one party for the default of the other, unless both can be put in statu quo, as before the contract. Hunt v. Silk, 5 East, 449; 2 Smith, 15.

In an action by the vendee, on an agreement for the purchase of a public-house, with mutual stipulations, and liquidated damages for non-performance:—Held, both parties having made default under the agreement, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his deposit. Clarke v. King, R. & M. 394; 2 C. & P. 286—Best.

Where the master and part-owner of a vessel agreed to purchase the remaining moiety of his partner, and having paid the purchase money, and received the title-deeds, which he deposited with a third person as a security, required entire possession of the ship, but his partner afterwards refused to execute a bill of sale or refund the money:—Held, that assumpsit for money had and received would not lie to recover the purchase-money, as the parties could not be restored to their original situation. Reed v. Blandford, 2 Y. & J. 278.

The plaintiff, having declared upon an agreement to deliver soil or breeze, with a count for money had and received, proved that the defendant having agreed to deliver soil, he, the plaintiff, paid 2*l.* 5*s.* for earnest, but that the defendant refused to deliver the soil:—Held, that he could not recover the 2*l.* 5*s.* upon the second count, because the agreement was still in force. Cooke v. Munstone, 1 N. R. 351: S. C. nom. Clarke v. Manstone, 5 Esp. 239; 1 Chit. 60, a.

Plaintiff engaged to let defendant land on building leases, and to lend him 4000*l.* to assist him in the erection of twenty houses, the money to be repaid by June, 1828. Defendant agreed to build the houses, to convey them as security for the loan, and repay the money. When six houses were built, and 1168*l.* had been advanced, plaintiff requested defendant not to go on with the other fourteen houses; defendant desisted:—Held, that, after June, 1828, the plaintiff might recover the 1168*l.* on a count for money lent; and that it was not necessary to sue on the agreement, which was rescinded by consent. James v. Cotton, 7 Bing. 266; 5 M. & P. 26.

By an agreement between A. and B. made on the 31st of March, the former agreed to grant a lease to the latter of a public-house for the term of twenty-one years, to run from the 29th of September then next, in consideration of 1000*l.*, of which 10*l.* was immediately paid down, 90*l.* was to be paid on the 13th of April, and the residue on having possession of the premises. B. being required to pay the 90*l.*, called upon A. to prove his title, which being refused, he gave notice that he would rescind the contract, and brought an action to recover the 10*l.* which he had paid:—Held, that he had a right so to do, and that he was not bound to wait until the 29th of September, from which time the lease was to run. Roper v. Coombes, 9 D. & R. 562; 6 B. & C. 534.

An agreement in writing may be dissolved by parol. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. jun. 25.

A parol dispensation of the performance of a contract, in respect to the times of the delivery of goods, is not within the statute of frauds; and the defendant was held liable for not accepting the residue within a reasonable time afterwards. Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & S. 21.

(b) Exchange of Goods.

Upon an agreement between two traders to supply each other on the footing of goods for goods; after a balance struck between them, such balance is to be paid in money, and may be sued for on the general counts. Ingram v. Shirley, 1 Stark. 185—Ellenborough.

Plaintiff agreed to exchange his horse, warranted sound, with defendant, for another horse and a sum of money: the horses were exchanged, but defendant refused to pay the money, alleging that plaintiff's horse was unsound. In assumpsit on the special agreement, with indebitatus counts for horses sold, held that plaintiff might recover the money on the common counts, though he failed to prove the agreement as stated in the special count. Selden v. Cox, 5 D. & R. 277; 3 B. & C. 420.

If trefoil be sold, to be paid for partly in goods and partly in money, the seller must declare specially on the contract, and not generally for goods sold and delivered. Talver v. West, Holt, 178—Gibbs.

B. agrees to purchase of A. a gun, for the sum of forty-five guineas; but it is stipulated that A. shall take a gun of B.'s, valued at thirty guineas, in part payment: B. having refused to deliver his gun and complete the contract, A. is entitled to recover in indebitatus assumpsit the sum of forty-five guineas as the stipulated price. Forryth v. Jervis, 1 Stark. 437—Ellenborough.

If A. and B. agree to exchange horses, and B. give a sum of money to A. to bind the bargain, A. may maintain an action against B. for not delivering his horse, without alleging any delivery of, or offer to deliver his own to B.; for the payment of earnest money vests the property of the plaintiff's horse in B. Back v. Owen, 5 T. R. 409.

But in such an action A. must allege a demand on B. for his horse; stating that B. did not deliver, "though often requested so to do," is not sufficient, and such a defective allegation may be taken advantage of on a general demurrer. Id.

(c) Other Cases.

The plaintiff purchased stock, which the defendant agreed to transfer on a given day. In consequence of a rise, the loss on the sale amounted to 45*l.*, which the defendant refused to pay.

The plaintiff afterwards paid that sum to another broker, by whom the transfer was made:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in an action for money paid, but that he should have declared specially on the contract with the defendant, as his claim was in the nature of unliquidated damages. Lightfoot v. Creed, 2 Moore, 255; 8 Taunt. 268.

A contract to satisfy a debt, by providing a cargo of wine, must be declared upon specially; and an action will not lie for the old debt. Hoppe v. Symonds, 2 Chit. 324.

A. delivers to B. a quantity of cordage as the consideration for a special undertaking by B., A. is not precluded by the special contract from recovering, under the common counts, for the excess of cordage delivered beyond the quantity stipulated for as the consideration (provided that amount be adjusted), although it may be necessary to give in evidence the terms of the special contract. Dunn v. Body, 1 Stark. 220—Ellenb.

Under an agreement between A. and B. that B. should take an assignment of a lease of a farm from A. and the fixtures and crops at a valuation, B. entered and took possession of the fixtures, and the crops were valued to him, but the lease was never assigned:—Held, that indebitatus assumpsit would not lie for the price of the fixtures and crops, and that his only remedy was a special action on the agreement. Neal v. Viney, 1 Camp. 471—Ellenborough.

A. agreed with B. to let him land rent-free, on condition that A. should have a moiety of the crops; while the crop was on the ground it was appraised for both parties: A. declared in indebitatus assumpsit for a moiety of the value of the crop sold to B., without stating the special agreement; and held that he might well do so, as the special agreement was executed by the appraisement, and the action arose out of something collateral to it. Poulter v. Killingbeck, 1 B. & P. 397.

A. was indebted to B. in a sum of 868*l.*, for which he was arrested. C., who was clerk to B.'s attorney, directed him to be discharged on paying 700*l.* only. B. threatened to complain to C.'s employers, to prevent which C. advanced 100*l.*, B. agreeing that it should be repaid whenever the balance of 168*l.* should be recovered from A. After the death of B. and C. the balance was recovered:—Held, that the representatives of C. might recover the 100*l.* from the representatives of B. on a count for money had and received to their use, and that there was no necessity to declare specially. Platts v. Lean, 3 C. & P. 561—Tenterden.

Indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold and delivered. Plea, plene administravit. It appeared that the goods were sold to be paid for on the marriage of the plaintiff, which did not happen till fifteen years after the sale. Objection at the trial, that this, being a special contract, could not be given in evidence under this form of declaration. Verdict for plaintiff. On motion for new trial:—Held, that whether the form of declaration was right or not, the court would look to the merits; and as no injustice had been done, they would not grant a new trial. Stokes v. Saunders, 3 Dougl. 401.

II. CONSIDERATION TO SUPPORT.

1. What sufficient generally.

Any act which is a detriment to the plaintiff is a sufficient consideration for a promise to pay money. Williamson v. Clements, 1 Taunt. 523.

In order to facilitate the making of an agreement, for which there was sufficient consideration between the plaintiff and a third person, the defendant, who received no benefit to himself by the agreement, became party thereto:—Held, that as the agreement was such as the plaintiff would not have made unless the defendant had acceded, there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise. Bailey v. Croft, 4 Taunt. 611.

A moral obligation is a good consideration for a promise to pay, and therefore may be the ground of an action of assumpsit. Lee v. Mugeridge, 5 Taunt. 36. And see Smith v. Jameson, 5 T. R. 603.

Where there is a moral obligation to pay, and a distinct promise, it is binding, even though the original contract is void. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459; 1 M. & P. 227; 3 C. & P. 170.

Therefore, where defendant agreed to pay plaintiff in consideration of her becoming his tenant, 20l. to repair the house, and to make certain alterations, and plaintiff became tenant under a lease in which this agreement was not stated, and did the repairs, and the defendant promised to repay her:—Held, that defendant was liable on this promise on the account stated, though plaintiff could not recover on his special count, on account both of the lease and the agreement being void by the statute of frauds. Id.

Semble, that a moral obligation is not in every case a sufficient consideration for a promise. Littlefield v. Shee, 2 B. & Adol. 811.

A person borrowed a sum of money in the year 1807; in the year 1815 he stated by parol to the attorney of the party entitled to it, that he had made provision by his will, and had directed his executors to pay it at his death. He died in 1825, without making such provision:—Held, in an action against the executor, that the promise was good, and the money recoverable; that neither the statute of frauds, nor the statute of limitations, applied to the case, and that a moral obligation to pay was a sufficient consideration for the promise. Wells v. Horton, 2 C. & P. 383—Best. Rule nisi discharged after argument.

So, the defendant's having received a benefit by the permission of the plaintiffs, is a good consideration. Davis v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 42; 4 B. & C. 8.

A. having paid to B. the whole of a demand claimed by B., but part of which was due to C., B. afterwards engaged to indemnify A. against any claim by C.: this promise was held to be supported by a sufficient consideration, although it was made after the payment of the money. Suffield (Lord) v. Bruce, 2 Stark. 175—Ellenb.

The plaintiff had agreed with J. C. for the purchase of certain houses; the defendant, in writing, agreed to give the plaintiff 40l. for his bargain; the houses were afterwards, at plaintiff's request, conveyed to the nominee of the defendant:—Held, that the transfer of the bargain was a sufficient consideration for the promise of the defendant. Price v. Jeaman (in error), 7 D. & R. 14; 4 B. & C. 525; R. & M. 195.

Any five or more trustees, under a turnpike act, being authorised to make turnpikes, with such suitable out-buildings and conveniences as they should think necessary, on the intended line of road: the owner of the soil next adjoining a toll-house (erected in pursuance of the act), contracted with one of the trustees, on behalf of the rest, to sink a well for the convenience of the toll-house, the expense to be borne by each party equally:—Held, in an action to recover a moiety of the expense of the well, brought in the name of the clerk of the trustees, that their consent through the medium of one, that the well should be sunk, was a good consideration to support the action. Newman v. Fletcher, 1 D. & R. 202.

A mere accord, not being a ground of action, is not a sufficient consideration to support assumpsit. Lynn v. Bruce, 2 H. Black. 317.

There must be a good consideration for a promise in writing to pay the debt of another, as well as for any other promise. Barrett v. Trussell, 4 Taunt. 117.

The defendant promised to pay the plaintiff 5l. if he would provide a tenant for certain premises, and get him 350l. for his lease. The plaintiff procured one S., with whom the defendant entered into an agreement, and received 50l. as a deposit; but afterwards consented to release him from the further performance of it, but retained the 50l.; the court held, that this was a substantial performance of the condition on the part of the plaintiff, and that he was therefore entitled to recover the 5l. Horford v. Wilson, 1 Taunt. 12.

On an agreement to pay 100l. if the plaintiff would not send herrings for a twelvemonth to the London market, and particularly to the house of J. S.; and the plaintiff proved he had sent no herrings during the twelvemonth to that house:—Held, sufficient to entitle him to recover, no proof being given by the defendant that the plaintiff had sent herrings within the year to the London market. Calder d. Rutherford, 7 Moore, 158; 3 B. & B. 302.

2. Contracts of Forbearance.

[For the extent to which Contracts for the abandonment of Legal Proceedings are valid, see CONTRACT.]

A promise by the defendant to pay a judgment debt obtained against him, in consideration that the plaintiff would stay execution thereon, is no ground to raise an assumpsit. Otherwise, if the promise be by a third person. Anon. Cowp. 129.

Where the plaintiff declared that A., since deceased, was indebted to him so much, and that after his death, in consideration of the premises, and that he, at the instance of the defendant, would forbear and give day of payment of the debt (not stating to whom he was to forbear), the defendant promised, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, to be no consideration for the promise; for a promise can only be sustained on a consideration of benefit to the defendant, or of detriment to the plaintiff; and unless there were some person whom the plaintiff could have sued for his debt, his forbearance was no detriment to him. Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East, 455; 1 Smith, 188.

A., having recovered judgment against B., and a fi. fa. being delivered to the sheriff; in consideration that A., at the special instance and request of C., had requested the sheriff not to execute the writ, C. promises to pay A. the debt and costs, together with the sheriff's poundage, bailiff's fees, and other charges: on a judgment by default, and error brought, the promise was holden to be binding on C., though it was not averred that the sheriff did in fact desist from the execution, nor what the amount of the poundage, &c., was, nor that the defendant had notice of such amount. Pullin v. Stokes (in error), 2 H. Black. 312.

Declaration stated, the plaintiff, at the request of E. B. and M. B., sold and delivered to them goods of a certain value, and that in consideration thereof, and also in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, would forbear and give day of payment of the said sum of money, defendant by a certain note or memorandum in writing signed by him, undertook to pay him the money, and then alleged, that plaintiff, relying on the promise of defendant, did forbear and give day of payment of the said sum, &c. After verdict for plaintiff, the court refused to arrest the judgment, on the ground of the declaration not stating to whom the forbearance was given. Marshall v. Birkenshaw, 1 N. R. 172.

Where the cause of action is to recover any costs or expenses which have been incurred in a cause, as the existence of such cause is the foundation of the action, it is a material averment in the declaration. Herbert v. Jones, 1 Esp. 422—Eyre.

Assumpsit; in consideration that plaintiff, at defendant's request, would consent to suspend proceedings against another person, defendant promised to pay the debt on a certain day; averment, that plaintiff did suspend the proceedings. The agreement proved was in writing as follows:—"The plaintiff having, at my request, consented to suspend proceedings, &c.:"—Held, that as the request must have preceded the consent to suspend proceedings, the contract was properly declared on as an executory contract; secondly, that the consideration for the promise was good, as it must be taken as a consent to suspend proceedings, at least until the day defendant was to pay the debt; thirdly, that, after verdict, the averment that "plaintiff had suspended proceedings" was sufficient, without specifying for what period. Payne v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 423; 1 M. & R. 708.

Declaration that C. K. was indebted to the firm of B. and S.; that plaintiff had been appointed, by the court of Chancery, receiver of the debts of the firm, whereby C. K. became liable to pay plaintiff when requested; that, in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff, as such receiver, would give C. K. two months' time to pay, defendant promised to pay, in case C. K. omitted to do so within that time. Breach; that C. K. omitted, and that defendant never paid:—Held, on arrest of judgment, that sufficient authority appeared for the plaintiff to contract and sue, and sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise. Willatts v. Kennedy, 8 Bing. 5; 1 M. & Scott, 35.

Forbearance by plaintiff, at defendant's request, to enforce a fi. fa. against the goods of a third person for 60*l.*, is a valid consideration for defendant's promise to pay plaintiff 107*l.* in seven days. Smith v. Algar, 1 B. & Adol. 603.

The abandoning a suit, instituted to try a question in respect of which the law is doubtful, is a good consideration for a promise to pay a stipulated sum: therefore, where a ship, having on board a pilot required by law, ran foul of another vessel, and proceedings were instituted by the owners of the latter to compel the owners of the former to make good the damages; and the former vessel was detained until bail was given; and, pending such proceedings, the agents of the owners of the vessel detained, agreed, on the owners of the damaged vessel renouncing all claims on the other vessel, and on their proving the amount of the damages sustained, to indemnify them, and to pay a stipulated sum by way of damages:—Held, that there being contradictory decisions as to the point, whether ship-owners were liable for an injury done while their ship was under the control of a pilot required by law, there was a sufficient consideration to sustain the promise made by the agents of the owners of the detained vessel to pay the stipulated damages. Longridge v. Dorville, 5 B. & A. 117. And see 1 B. & P. 306, and 2 Esp. 659.

And an agreement between parties to a suit in Chancery, binding themselves, their executors, and administrators, made an order of that court, and acted upon therein as such, may be the ground of an assumpsit at law. Smith v. Whalley, 2 B. & P. 482.

3. Agreements which are Nuda Pacta.

As to promises within the doctrine of nudum pactum, see Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350, n.; 4 Bro. P. C. 27.

There is a distinction between a mere voluntary promise, which is nudum pactum, that will not maintain an action, and a promise upon the faith of which another does some act, as entering into engagements, or paying money; the latter forms a consideration that will support an action. Crosbie v. McDoual, 13 Ves. jun. 148.

Where A., after drawing a bill of exchange on B., who accepted it, indorsed it to C., who reindorsed it to A., in pursuance of an agreement (without consideration) that he should do so as a security for the payment of it by the acceptor, and for the purpose of rendering the bill more negotiable; on demurrer to a declaration against C. upon the bill, in the usual form, alleging the special circumstances under which the defendant became the indorser:—Held, that the agreement to indorse was void, for want of consideration. Britten v. Webb, 3 D. & R. 650; 2 B. & C. 483.

So, where A. agreed in writing, that, in consideration that B. would appoint him to receive a sum of money for a lace machine (agreed for between B. & C.), he would take the machine, and pay the balance, should there be any default on the part of C.; and C. did make default:—Held, that this agreement or promise was void for want of consideration, and, consequently, that an action of assumpsit could not be maintained thereon. Bates v. Cort, 3 D. & R. 676; 2 B. & C. 474.

C., in consideration of a loan of 400*l.*, mortgaged lands in fee to W. & Co., in trust, to sell the same, and, after repaying themselves the money advanced, to pay over the surplus to his executors or administrators: before any sale was effected, C. died, having devised all his real and personal estates to trustees, whom he also appointed his executors, in trust, to sell the same, and pay debts and discharge incumbrances: in the lifetime of these trustees, W. & Co., the original mortgagees sold the estate, and paid over the surplus into the hands of the attorney or agent of the testator's trustees and executors: before the money was disposed of, the trustees and executors, and also their attorney, died, the latter leaving the defendant his executor. The plaintiffs took out administration de bonis non, with the will of C. annexed, and sued the attorney's executor in assumpsit for money had and received:—Held, that an express promise by the defendant to pay the plaintiffs the money in question was a nudum pactum, they having no title to it in a court of law; and that the action was not maintainable, as the money in the defendant's hands was equitable and not legal assets. Clay v. Willis, 2 D. & R. 539; 1 B. & C. 364.

Where the defendant having purchased certain shares of an East Indiaman, commanded by the plaintiff, and chartered by the East India Company for four voyages, proposed to the plaintiff that he should resign the command in favour of the defendant's nephew, upon receiving in exchange the command of another ship, then chartered for one voyage, and to which the plaintiff assented, and the company acceded to the exchange; and it was agreed that, in case the defendant's nephew died, or resigned, before the expiration of the four voyages, the plaintiff should succeed him: and, as a further inducement to the plaintiff to resign the command of the ship, chartered for the four voyages, the defendant undertook to procure a beneficial alteration in the destination of the other, chartered for one voyage only; and the person who negotiated the affair on the part of the plaintiff, undertook, without the plaintiff's knowledge, to pay the defendant a certain sum, if the plaintiff should refuse to resign; and the exchange was ultimately approved of by the company, and the destination of the latter vessel altered; and the plaintiff and defendant's nephew sailed on their respective voyages, and the former became bankrupt on his return from his voyage, and the nephew died in the course of his second voyage; and the defendant, having refused to appoint the plaintiff to succeed him, was sued in assumpsit for a breach of the agreement, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that, after verdict, there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's agreement, whereon to found such an action. Richardson v. Mellish, 9 Moore, 435; 2 Bing. 229; 1 C. & P. 241; R. & M. 66.

The statement of a consideration that A., at his own expense, would procure an administration, and furnish evidence to enable B. to receive certain dividends, will not support a promise to pay over the dividends when received. Parker v. Bayliss, 2 B. & P. 73.

III. FOR MONEY PAID.

1. Request and Payment.

[See Spragg v. Hammond, 4 Moore, 431; 2 B. & B. 59.]

Request.—Assumpsit lies to recover money paid for another at his request. Alcinbrook v. Hall, 2 Wils. 309.

But in such an action, the plaintiff must prove some authority, either express or implied, from the defendant to make the payment on his account. Tappin v. Broster, 1 C. & P. 112—Hullock.

Assumpsit for money paid, laid out, and expended, will not lie, when the money has been paid against the express consent of the party for whose use it is supposed to have been paid. Where two parishes had been a long time united, and had jointly paid one sexton, but afterwards one of them, upon claiming a right of electing a separate sexton, gave notice to the other of their intention, and did so elect:—Held, that they could not maintain an action for money paid, laid out, and expended, to the use of the other parish for their quota of the sexton's salary. Stokes v. Lewis, 1 T. R. 20.

What is a Payment.—One of the makers of a joint and several note, after it had become due, gave his bond to the holder for the amount, but before the commencement of the action no money had been paid upon the bond:—Held, that until he had paid money upon the bond, he could not maintain assumpsit for money paid, in order to recover contribution against any of the other makers of the note. Marwell v. Jameson, 2 B. & A. 51.

If a party give a promissory note for the debt of another, which the creditor accepts in payment, it is a payment of money to the debtor's use, and may be recovered as such. Barclay v. Gooch, 2 Esp. 571—Kenyon.

If the indorser of a dishonoured bill promise the indorsee, that, if he will sue the acceptor, he (the indorser) will pay the expenses; to entitle the indorsee to recover on this promise, it is not necessary for him to prove that he paid the attorney, he being liable to do so is sufficient. Bullock v. Lloyd, 2 C. & P. 119—Abbott.

The plaintiff, an occupier of lands, having been sued by the vicar for tithes, gave up the occupation, and quitted the parish during the progress of the suit; upon which the defendant undertook to indemnify him from all costs of the suit, if he would suffer the defendant to defend in his the plaintiff's name. The vicar having succeeded in the suit, the plaintiff's attorney paid him the costs incurred before as well as after the defendant's promise of indemnity. The plaintiff afterwards gave his attorney a promissory note for the amount of the costs so paid, but which was not paid at maturity when he sued the defendant on his promise:—Held, that the payment of such costs by the plaintiff's attorney was equivalent to a payment by the plaintiff himself, as the attorney might be considered his agent for the purpose of making such payment. Adams v. Densey, 4 M. & P. 245; 6 Bing. 506.

2. On Distresses.

Where a man by compulsion of law is obliged to pay a debt, he has a remedy against those who by law were bound to pay, but did not. Exall v. Partridge, 8 T. R. 308; 3 Esp. 8.

The goods of a stranger on the premises of another were distrained by the landlord for the rent in arrear, and the stranger was obliged to pay the rent to redeem them:—Held, that the stranger might maintain assumpsit for money paid to the use of the original lessees, who were bound by their covenant to the landlord, although some of them had, to the knowledge of the plaintiff, before he placed his goods on the premises, assigned their interest to one of their co-lessees, who was in the exclusive possession at the time. Id.

An under-tenant, whose goods were distrained and sold by the original landlord for rent due from his immediate tenant, cannot immediately maintain assumpsit against him for money paid; for, on the sale under the distress, the money paid by the purchaser vested in the landlord in satisfaction of the rent, and never was the money of the under-tenant. Moore v. Pyrke, 11 East, 52.

A tenant under a lease cannot maintain assumpsit on an implied promise for money paid under a distress by a superior landlord, being excluded by the express contract. The remedy is on the covenant. Schlenker v. Moxey, 5 D. & R. 747; 3 B. & C. 789; 1 C. & P. 178.

A tenant, shortly after he had paid half a year's rent to his landlord, due at Lady-day preceding, was called upon by the agent of the ground landlord for ground-rent due previously to Lady-day, and which the landlord had refused to pay:—Held, that the payment of such ground-rent by the tenant was not a voluntary payment, although the agent of the ground landlord gave him time for that purpose. Carter v. Carter, 2 M. & P. 723; 5 Bing. 406.

By an act of the 41 Geo. 3, for draining lands in the county of Lincoln, it was declared, "that the taxes to be charged and assessed by virtue of the same, should be paid by the tenants of the lands, &c. charged with the same respectively, who might deduct and retain the same out of the rents payable to their respective landlords;" and also, that, in case of neglect to pay, the tax might be levied by distress on the goods and chattles which should be found on the lands charged with the tax in arrear; and that, "if the same should be untenanted, or no sufficient distress could be found, the lands and grounds chargeable should remain as a security for the payment thereof, and might be taken possession of, and let in discharge of the tax." Where, therefore, a tenant had quitted lands liable to a drainage tax under this act, and, after he had left, the collector levied the tax in arrear upon property which he had left in the possession of the succeeding tenant:—Held, that the tenants to be charged with the tax were those in whose time the tax accrued due, and not the tenant for the time being; and, therefore, that the plaintiff might maintain assumpsit against the landlord for money paid to his use. Dawson v. Linton, 1 D. & R. 117; 5 B. & A. 521.

3. Damages and Costs.

If the indorser of a bill is compelled by the holder to pay him part of the amount, he may recover it back from the acceptor in an action for money paid to his use. Pownal v. Ferrand, 9 D. & R. 603; 6 B. & C. 439.

The drawer of an accommodation bill is liable to the acceptor for the amount of the costs of an action on the bill, defended by the acceptor, although there was no express request by the drawer to defend the action. Jones v. Brooke, 4 Taunt. 464—Per Mansfield, J. sed quære.

A. defends an action at the desire of B., in which action B. is concerned, and may be benefited by the event, and A. has a verdict against him. B. is liable to pay the expenses of the defence. Howes v. Martin, 1 Esp. 162—Kenyon.

Where an annuity has been made void by reason of a defect in the memorial, and the attorney who prepared the conveyances is sued by the grantee for negligence, and a verdict recovered against him to the amount of the consideration money paid for the annuity, which he pays, he cannot recover it over against the grantor as money paid to his use. Burden v. Webb, 2 Esp. 527—Kenyon.

A person indemnified cannot charge the person indemnifying with the costs of defending an action for a debt clearly due, unless authorized by him to defend. Gillett v. Rippon, M. & M. 406—Tenterden.

Quære, whether the drawer of a bill of exchange, which he was obliged to pay, after an action brought against him, may not sue the ac-

indorsed it to A., in pursuance of an agreement (without consideration) that he should do so as a security for the payment of it by the acceptor, and for the purpose of rendering the bill more negotiable; on demurrer to a declaration against C. upon the bill, in the usual form, alleging the special circumstances under which the defendant became the indorser:—Held, that the agreement to indorse was void, for want of consideration. Britten v. Webb, 3 D. & R. 650; 2 B. & C. 483.

So, where A. agreed in writing, that, in consideration that B. would appoint him to receive a sum of money for a lace machine (agreed for between B. & C.), he would take the machine, and pay the balance, should there be any default on the part of C.; and C. did make default:—Held, that this agreement or promise was void for want of consideration, and, consequently, that an action of assumpsit could not be maintained thereon. Bates v. Cort, 3 D. & R. 676; 2 B. & C. 474.

C., in consideration of a loan of 400*l.*, mortgaged lands in fee to W. & Co., in trust, to sell the same, and, after repaying themselves the money advanced, to pay over the surplus to his executors or administrators: before any sale was effected, C. died, having devised all his real and personal estates to trustees, whom he also appointed his executors, in trust, to sell the same, and pay debts and discharge incumbrances: in the lifetime of these trustees, W. & Co., the original mortgagees sold the estate, and paid over the surplus into the hands of the attorney or agent of the testator's trustees and executors: before the money was disposed of, the trustees and executors, and also their attorney, died, the latter leaving the defendant his executor. The plaintiffs took out administration de bonis non, with the will of C. annexed, and sued the attorney's executor in assumpsit for money had and received:—Held, that an express promise by the defendant to pay the plaintiffs the money in question was a nudum pactum, they having no title to it in a court of law; and that the action was not maintainable, as the money in the defendant's hands was equitable and not legal assets. Clay v. Willis, 2 D. & R. 539; 1 B. & C. 364.

Where the defendant having purchased certain shares of an East Indiaman, commanded by the plaintiff, and chartered by the East India Company for four voyages, proposed to the plaintiff that he should resign the command in favour of the defendant's nephew, upon receiving in exchange the command of another ship, then chartered for one voyage, and to which the plaintiff assented, and the company acceded to the exchange; and it was agreed that, in case the defendant's nephew died, or resigned, before the expiration of the four voyages, the plaintiff should succeed him: and, as a further inducement to the plaintiff to resign the command of the ship, chartered for the four voyages, the defendant undertook to procure a beneficial alteration in the destination of the other, chartered for one voyage only; and the person who negotiated the affair on the part of the plaintiff, undertook, without the plaintiff's knowledge, to pay the defendant a certain sum, if the plaintiff should refuse to resign; and the exchange was ultimately approved of by the company, and the destination of the latter vessel altered; and the plaintiff and defendant's nephew sailed on their respective voyages, and the former became bankrupt on his return from his voyage, and the nephew died in the course of his second voyage; and the defendant, having refused to appoint the plaintiff to succeed him, was sued in assumpsit for a breach of the agreement, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that, after verdict, there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's agreement, whereon to found such an action. Richardson v. Mellish, 9 Moore, 435; 2 Bing. 229; 1 C. & P. 241; R. & M. 66.

The statement of a consideration that A., at his own expense, would procure an administration, and furnish evidence to enable B. to receive certain dividends, will not support a promise to pay over the dividends when received. Parker v. Bayliss, 2 B. & P. 73.

A person indemnified cannot charge the person indemnifying with the costs of defending an action for a debt clearly due, unless authorized by him to defend. Gillett v. Rippon, M. & M. 406—Tenterden.

Quære, whether the drawer of a bill of exchange, which he was obliged to pay, after an action brought against him, may not sue the acceptor for the costs of the action. Stoom v. Taylor, 1 Nev. & M. 250. See Dawson v. Morgan, 9 B. & C. 618.

The plaintiff had accepted a bill for 148*l.*, for the accommodation of T., who gave it to N. for a particular purpose; N. borrowed 10*l.* of the defendant, and gave him this bill as a security. This sum of 10*l.* was repaid by N., but the bill was not given up, and the defendants indorsed it for value to K., who, when it was dishonoured, caused both the plaintiff and T. to be arrested, and the plaintiff paid the amount of the bill, and the costs of both arrests:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the bill from the defendant, but not the costs of the two arrests. Roach v. Thompson, 4 C. & P. 194—Tenterden.

If money be paid after judgment signed, it cannot be considered as a voluntary payment. Garratt v. Hooper, 1 Dowl. P. C. 28.

Declaration that plaintiff at the request of defendant, and upon defendant's undertaking to indemnify, defended an action for the recovery of money in which the defendant claimed an interest; that judgment was given against the plaintiff for 42*l.*; and that he was imprisoned and paid the money under a ca. sa.:—Held, that he might recover against the defendant this sum under this count, upon proof of the judgment, without proof of the capias; or even on a count for money paid to the defendant's use; the defendant having taken out a summons to be permitted to pay such sum in discharge of plaintiff's demand. Williamson v. Henley, 6 Bing. 299; 3 M. & P. 731.

4. Contribution.

(a) Of Damages.

If a plaintiff recover in an action of tort against two defendants, and levy the whole damages on one, that one cannot recover a moiety against the other for his contribution. Merryweather v. Nissen, 8 T. R. 186.

Otherwise, where the recovery against the two was in assumpsit. Id.

But held at Nisi Prius, that if a party recover damages in case against one of two joint coach-proprietors for an injury sustained by the negligence of their servants, such proprietor may maintain an action against his co-proprietor for contribution, if he prove at the trial that he was not personally present when the accident happened. Woolley v. Batte, 2 C. & P. 417—Park.

If one of two parties to a warrant of attorney has paid the whole of the money, and sues the other for contribution, he may prove the circumstances of the case and payment of the money, without the production of the warrant of attorney. Bayne v. Stone, 4 Esp. 13—Kenyon.

The plaintiff and defendant entered into a joint and written contract with the owner of a vessel, to supply her with colonial produce at Jamaica by a given time. The contract not being complied with, the owner made a demand on the plaintiff alone, who agreed to refer the amount of the damage sustained by such owner to arbitration, without the knowledge or consent of the defendant. The arbitrator having awarded a certain sum to be due to the owner, the plaintiff paid the amount, and brought an action for money paid against the defendant, for a moiety thereof:—Held, that he was entitled to recover. Burnell v. Minot, 4 Moore, 340.

Bail being fixed, if one of them, having paid the debt, bring his action against his co-bail for contribution, he must prove the judgment as well as the execution. Belldon v. Tankard, 1 Marsh, 6.

(b) Without legal Proceedings.

Generally, one joint contractor, who pays money for another under an equitable claim may recover it from the other as money paid to his use. Hutton v. Eyre, 1 Marsh. 603; 6 Taunt. 289.

But in all cases of partnership in illegal transactions, one partner cannot recover back money paid for the other, unless he has received express directions for such payment. Webb v. Brooke, 3 Taunt. 11. And see Simpson v. Bloss, 2 Marsh. 542; 7 Taunt. 246.

If two persons jointly engage in a stock-jobbing transaction, and incur losses, and employ a broker to pay the differences, and one of them repay the broker the whole sum, with the privity and consent of the other, he may recover a moiety of such sum in an action for money paid, notwithstanding the 7 Geo. 2, c. 8. Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 418. But see Aubert v. Maze, 2 B. & P. 371. See also Steers v. Lashley, 6 T. R. 61; 1 Esp. 166; Brown v. Turner, 7 T. R. 630; 2 Esp. 631; and Child v. Morley, 3 T. R. 610.

Twenty parishioners joined at a vestry in signing an order for the repairs of the church, and one of them, a churchwarden, paid the artificers, but the rate for reimbursing him was quashed:—Held, that he could not sue for contribution from the persons who signed the order. Lanchester v. Frewer, 2 Bing. 361; 9 Moore, 688. See Spratt v. Powell, 3 Bing. 478.

Where plaintiff and defendant were two of a committee, appointed at a vestry meeting, for the purpose of prosecuting nuisances on the waste lands and highways of the parish, which committee appointed an attorney, who prosecuted and obtained a verdict, and afterwards sued plaintiff for his bill of costs, which was referred to arbitration, and 235*l.*, with costs of the action, were awarded against plaintiff:—Held, that plaintiff might maintain assumpsit against the defendant for contribution. Holmes v. Williamson, 6 M. & S. 158.

A. and B. being joint prize agents, A. is imposed on by persons falsely pretending to be sailors, to whom he pays a sum of money, which he is subsequently compelled to pay again to the persons really entitled. B. is not bound to contribute to the sum so paid. McIlreath v. Margetson, 4 Dougl. 278.

5. Money paid by Sheriffs.

No cause of action can arise out of a breach of duty; therefore, if an officer permit a prisoner to go at large on his promise to pay the debt, and in consequence he is himself obliged to pay it, he cannot recover the money from the debtor. Pitcher v. Bailey, 8 East, 171.

If a sheriff voluntarily permit an escape, and be afterwards obliged to pay the debt, he may maintain an action for money paid against the debtor. Morris v. Berkeley, 8 East, 172, n.; Peake, 144, n.

But if the warden of the Fleet have been guilty of suffering an escape, and pay the debt, he cannot afterwards maintain an action against the debtor for money paid to his use. Eyles v. Feikney, 8 East, 172, n.; Peake, 144, n.

And where a bailiff pays money in consequence of an attachment against the sheriff, it is doubted whether he can maintain an action against the defendant, whom he has liberated on the attorney's undertaking. Griffin v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 383—Eyre.

A sheriff's officer, who discharges a defendant on payment of the sum sworn to, and is afterwards obliged to pay the residue of the debt, may recover it from the defendant as money paid to his use. Cordron v. Masserene (Lord), Peake, 143—Buller.

An action for money paid to the use of the defendant may be maintained by a sheriff's officer who has paid the debt and costs on an attachment against the sheriff, bail above not having been put in, through the misconduct of the defendant in imposing insufficient bail upon the sheriff, and the defendant having promised to indemnify the officer, both before and after the payment; but the officer cannot recover above the debt. White v. Leroux, M. & M. 347—Tenterden.

Assumpsit will not lie upon an implied promise to repay a sheriff the expenses incurred in seizing and keeping possession under a fi. fa. at the request of the party suing out the writ, although they were not sold, on account of his refusing to give an indemnity against the claims of third persons. Bilke v. Havelock, 3 Camp. 374—Ellenborough.

A levy is made on the goods of a trader after he has committed an act of bankruptcy, and the money levied is paid over to the party; an action of trover is afterwards brought by the assignees against him, the sheriff, and the bailiff, in which damages are recovered, and these, together with the costs, are paid by the bailiff:—Held, that there is no implied promise on the part of the plaintiff in the original suit to indemnify the bailiff, or to contribute to the damages and costs in the action of trover; but that the bailiff might maintain money had and received, to recover back the levy money paid over. Wilson v. Milner, 2 Camp. 452—Ellenborough.

6. Expenses of Bail.

Where a person becomes bail above for another, he is entitled to recover all the expenses he has been put to by reason of it, and may, therefore, recover his expenses in sending after the principal to take him, in order to render him; but not the expenses of a suit improperly defended. Fisher v. Fallows, 5 Esp. 171—Ellenb.

But not for trouble and loss of time in going to a place to become bail. Reason v. Wirdnam, 1 C. & P. 434—Parke.

But, prima facie, the charges of the bail for putting in bail above are due from the bail to the sheriff. Hector v. Carpenter, 1 Stark. 190—Ellenborough.

The court will not interfere in a summary way, upon the breach of a parol promise, to save bail harmless. Beal v. Langstaff, 2 Wils. 371.

Assumpsit will not lie on a promise to bail to render a defendant, according to the course of practice, made by a third person, when the bail are proceeded against pending a writ of error. Bayley v. Tucker, 2 N. R. 458.

IV. FOR MONEY LENT.

Indebitatus assumpsit will lie for a loan to the wife at the request of the husband. Stevenson v. Hardie, 2 W. Black. 872.

But it will not lie against a defendant for money lent to a third person; and a judgment that it would, was held bad, even after a verdict and award of judgment. Marriott v. Lister, 2 Wils. 141.

A party may recover the amount of an I. O. U. on a count for money lent. Childers v. Boulnois, 1 D. & R. N. P. C. 8.

So, upon an account stated. Payne v. Jenkins, 4 C. & P. 324—Tenterden.

It is not evidence of itself to establish a loan of money by plaintiff to defendant, to prove that the defendant received cash for a draft or check drawn by the plaintiff on his bankers, and payable to him by name, out of money of the plaintiff's then in the bank. Cary v. Gerriah, 4 Esp. 9—Kenyon.

To prove the payment of a check for 100*l.*, the loan of which constituted the petitioning creditor's debt, it was shewn that the check was in the hands of the drawer, and that on the day after the date of the check his bankers had paid to the bankers of the bankrupt 100*l.* on his account. The petitioning creditor was one of the assignees of the bankrupt, and in that character had possession of all his papers:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the mere fact of his having this check was not evidence of its payment. Bleasby v. Crossley, 11 Moore, 327.

If there is a loan of money by A. to B. it is not to be inferred from the bare fact that A. delivered a sum of money to B., which A. had borrowed from another. Welch v. Seaborn, 1 Stark. 474—Ellenborough.

An instrument in the following terms, "nine years after the date hereof, I promise to pay to, &c., with lawful interest, provided D. M. shall not return to England, or his death be duly certified, in the mean time," is no evidence of money lent, either on a special or indebitatus count. Morgan v. Jones, 1 C. & J. 162; 1 Tyr. 21.

The words "value received with interest," occurring in an instrument, which is not negotiable as a promissory note or bill of exchange, do not of themselves import a money consideration, so as to satisfy an averment that money was lent by plaintiff to defendant. Morgan v. Jones, 1 C. & J. 162; 1 Tyr. 21.

Upon an allegation of a loan of lawful money of G. B. it is no variance that the loan is proved to have been of foreign coin, as pagodas. Harrington v. Macmorris, 5 Taunt. 228; 1 Marsh. 33.

V. FOR MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED.

1. Generally.

The action of assumpsit for money had and received is a liberal action, in which the party waves all tort, trespasses, and damages. Anon. Loft, 320. And see Cowp. 419; and Lee v. Shore, 2 D. & R. 198; 1 B. & C. 94.

It will lie for one who has subscribed money into a public fund, and the Christian name of another person has been inserted as a subscriber by mistake. South Sea Company v. Curson, 2 Bro. P. C. 502.

But it will not lie for East India Stock. Nightingale v. Devesme, 5 Burr. 2589; 2 W. Black. 684.

In an action for money had and received, the plaintiff must prove to what specific sum he is entitled. Harvey v. Archbold, 5 D. & R. 500; 3 B. & C. 626; R. & M. 184.

The rule of law, that the title to land cannot be tried in an action for money had and received, does not apply to cases where only the past-gone rents of land are in question. Monypenny v. Bristol, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 117.

Money had and received will not lie where the plaintiff upon the same transaction would be liable to a cross action to recover damages to an equal amount. Simpson v. Swan, 3 Camp. 291—Ellenborough.

Where a factor, selling goods, takes a security, payable to himself, from the purchaser, and gives his own security to his employer for the net proceeds, without disclosing the name of the purchaser; if the latter become insolvent before payment of his security, the factor cannot compel the principal to refund the money received by him as the price of the goods. Id.

General indebitatus assumpsit for money had and received will lie for the assignee of a respondentia bond; the obligor having before-hand engaged, by an indorsement, to pay the same to any assignee. Fenner v. Meares, 2 W. Black. 1269.

A. having money due to him from B., who was also indebted to other persons, took a warrant of attorney for the whole amount of the several debts, in the usual terms. A. afterwards assigned his interest in the warrant of attorney to C. for a valuable consideration, who entered up judgment, and took out execution against B.'s effects; and the money was levied by the sheriff, who paid it over to B.'s assignees (he having become bankrupt), upon an indemnity.

Semble, that an action of assumpsit, for money had and received to the bankrupt's use, would lie at the suit of C. against the assignees. Cooper v. Wrench, 1 D. & R. 482.

In an action for money had and received, if the defendant shew a deed of assignment of the money to himself, and a receipt for the consideration money indorsed, it is a good discharge, though there is pregnant evidence of suspicion that the consideration is falsely recited, and that the money never was paid. Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141.

The relief on the ground of imposition is in equity. Id.

2. To try the Right to an Office.

The action of assumpsit for money had and received to recover fees was introduced in lieu of an assize. Boyster v. Dodsworth, 6 T. R. 681.

Money given to A., and claimed by B., as perquisites of office, cannot be recovered by B. in an action for money had and received, unless such perquisites be known and accustomed fees. Id.

It will not lie by the nominee of a perpetual curacy for the profits thereof, against a defendant who was in possession and claimed likewise to be curate. Powell v. Milbank, 1 T. R. 399, n.

But it does lie in the case of a donative, because the party is in full possession immediately on the nomination. Rex v. Chester (Bishop), 1 T. R. 396, 403.

But, semble, where a donative has been twice augmented, the nominee cannot maintain this action without the bishop's license. Id.

It lies to try the right to the office of underusher and cryer of the court of K. B. Green v. Hewitt, Peake, 182—Kenyon.

3. For Foreign Money and Securities.

Indebitatus assumpsit for money had and received, &c. will not lie to recover the value of foreign securities paid to the defendant, where it appears that he had no opportunity of converting such securities into British money. McLellan v. Evans, 1 Y. & J. 380.

But a debt incurred in foreign coin is recoverable, as for lawful money of Great Britain. Harrington v. Macmorris, 1 Marsh. 33; 5 Taunt. 228.

In an action brought in England to recover the value of a given sum, Jamaica currency, upon a judgment obtained in that island, the value is that sum in sterling money which the currency would have produced according to the actual rate of exchange between Jamaica and England at the date of the judgment. Scott v. Bevan, 2 B. & Adol. 78.

4. To recover Money paid.

(a) On moral Obligation.

Where a man has actually paid what the law would not have compelled him to pay, but what in equity and conscience he ought, he cannot recover it back again in an action for money had and received. Bize v. Dickeson, 1 T. R. 285.

Nor where a man has paid a debt which would otherwise have been barred by the statute of limitations, or a debt contracted during his infancy, which in justice he ought to discharge, though not compellable by law, can he call on the payee to refund; but where money is paid under a mistake which there was no ground to claim in conscience, the party may recover it back again by this kind of action. Id.

Money paid voluntarily cannot be recovered back in assumpsit for money had and received. Cartwright v. Rowley, 2 Esp. 723—Kenyon.

A. in consideration of advancing 45*l.* for which he takes the borrower's note of hand, payable on demand, stipulates to have half of the profits upon a re-sale of certain goods intended to be purchased by the borrower with the money; two hours after the purchase, A. demands payment of the note, and the same night puts a person in possession jointly for himself and the borrower. The net profits upon the re-sale were 5*l.* The bargain is unconscionable, and therefore A. shall not recover his share of the profits in an action for money had and received. Jestons v. Brooke, Cowp. 793.

A voluntary payment is conclusive both in equity and at law, on the principle that litigation is not to be multiplied. Goodman v. Sayers, 2 J. & W. 263.

(b) To recover Money paid on compulsion of Law.

A voluntary payment of an illegal demand, the party knowing the demand to be illegal, without an immediate and urgent necessity, (as to redeem or preserve your person or goods), is not the subject of an action for money had and received. Fulham v. Down, 6 Esp. 26, n.—Kenyon.

Where money has been paid by the plaintiff to the defendant under the compulsion of legal process, which is afterwards discovered not to have been due, the plaintiff cannot recover it back in an action for money had and received. Marriott v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269; 2 Esp. 546.

But held in C. P. that the action for money had and received lies, to recover back money which has been obtained by compulsion under colour of process, by an excess of authority, although it has been paid over. Snowdon v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359.

Where money has been paid under compulsion of legal process, the party paying it knowing the cause of action for which the process was sued out before he paid the money, and there being no fraud on the part of the payee, the money so paid cannot be recovered back in an action for money had and received; although it may afterwards be discovered to have been not really due. Hamlet v. Richardson, 2 M. & Scott, 811; 9 Bing. 644.

Where a party, sued on a claim which he knows to be unfounded, pays it voluntarily and with notice, it is not recoverable; he cannot recover it back in assumpsit, though at the time he pays it, he declares he pays it without prejudice to his right to recover. Brown v. McKinnally, 1 Esp. 279—Kenyon.

There is no remedy in equity for the recovery of money paid on compromise of an action, where the party had full knowledge of the facts, and the means of proving them at the trial. Goodman v. Sayers, 2 J. & W. 249.

But assumpsit may be maintained to recover back money paid upon a compromise, after another action had been brought for it by the defendant against the plaintiff, and an interlocutory judgment had, and a writ of inquiry executed thereon; where it appeared that there was no real consideration for the payment, and the money had in fact been paid under a compromise, and not under the judgment of a court. Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 432, n.—Kenyon.

Where a party threatened with a distress for rent pays money where he might legally have defended himself, it is not a payment by compulsion, and can neither be recovered back, nor set off against another demand. Knibbs v. Hall, 1 Esp. 84: S. C. not S. P. Peake, 210—Kenyon.

But it will not lie to recover back money paid for the release of cattle damage feasant, though the distress were wrongful. Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414.

Held, that where goods, distrained by the plaintiff, are delivered by him to the defendant on his promising to pay the rent, an action for money had and received will not lie for the value of the goods, though the defendant do not pay the rent. Leery v. Goodson, 4 T. R. 687.

Where a broker who had distrained on a tenant for rent was requested not to sell, and promised his charges in consideration of such forbearance, and time was given and the charges paid, but the tenant objected to the amount of the charges:—Held, that this was not a voluntary payment; and that if the charges were irregular, they might be recovered back in an action for money had and received. Hills v. Street, 5 Bing. 37; 2 M. & P. 96.

The payment of illegal fees cannot generally be considered as voluntary, so as to preclude a plaintiff from recovering them back in assumpsit for money had and received. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729: S. P. Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & A. 562; 1 Chit. 295.

Plaintiff paid the sheriff the amount of a forfeited recognizance, in order to prevent a sale of his goods; the sessions afterwards mitigated the recognizance to a small sum, for which alone the sheriff rendered an account to the Exchequer:—Held, that as the sessions were not authorized in mitigating the recognizance, the plaintiff could not recover against the sheriff for the surplus of the money, though he had made an express promise to repay it. Haynes v. Hayton, 7 B. & C. 293; 2 C. & P. 621.

Assumpsit for money had and received, lies against an overseer, to recover money which had been levied on a conviction which was afterwards quashed. Feltham v. Terry, 1 T. R. 387, n.; B. N. P. 24; Cowp. 419: S. C. nom. Felpham v. Tyrrell, Lofft, 207, 261.

If one person obtain possession of goods intrusted to another to be sold at a fixed price, and at the time when the goods are to be delivered, or the price accounted for, refuse to do either, and the person to whom they were intrusted, being threatened with an action, pays the fixed price to the owner, such person may recover against him who took possession in an action for money had and received, perhaps for money paid. Longchamp v. Kenny, 1 Dougl. 137.

(c) To recover Money paid on Claim of Lien.

Money paid, as the only means of recovering possession of property to which the party is entitled, constitutes a compulsory payment, and may be recovered back. Shaw v. Woodcock, 9 D. & R. 889; 7 B. & C. 73.

Therefore, a party may recover money paid to obtain possession of property on which the party in possession claims a lien, though he had no pressing necessity to obtain possession of the property, and the right of lien was doubtful. Id.

If a man buy property which is in the hands of a third person, who sets up an unfounded claim, and who will not deliver unless that claim is paid, and the purchaser several months afterwards go and pay the demand, he is bound to give notice to the seller; and if he does not, he cannot recover the money so paid from the seller. Bevan v. Waters, 3 C. & P. 520—Best.

(d) To recover Money paid under Mistake of Facts.

Money paid by one, with full knowledge, or the means of such knowledge in his hands, of all the circumstances, cannot be recovered back again on account of such payment having been made under an ignorance of the law. Bilbie v. Lumley, 2 East, 469; S. P. Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 143; Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & A. 562; 1 Chit. 295.

Quære, where the knowledge of the facts is uncertain. Chatfield v. Paxton, 2 East, 471. And see Lowrie v. Bourdieu, 2 Dougl. 467; and Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38.

Money paid under a mistake of facts, there being no laches on the part of the payee in not availing himself of means within his power of knowing those facts, may be recovered. Milnes v. Duncan, 6 B. & C. 671; 9 D. & R. 731.

Therefore, where the indorser paid the holder the amount of a dishonoured bill (but which he had neglected to present in due time), under the idea that it was void for want of a proper stamp, and it afterwards appeared to have a proper stamp, being drawn in Ireland, but which did not appear on the face of the bill:—Held, that the indorser might recover back the money. Id.

A bill bearing several indorsements was dishonoured, but was taken up for the honour of one of the supposed indorsers by plaintiff, who struck out the subsequent indorsements. The plaintiff having discovered that the signatures of the drawer, the acceptor, and the supposed indorser to the bill were forgeries, communicated the same to defendant, and demanded the money back; notice of the dishonour was in time to have been sent to the prior indorsers by the same day's post. In assumpsit for the amount of the bill:—Held, that the erasure of the indorsements did not deprive the defendant of his remedy against the prior indorsers, and that the plaintiff, having paid the money in mistake, was entitled to recover it back from the defendant. Wilkinson v. Johnston, 5 D. & R. 403; 3 B. & C. 429.

Where the captain of a king's ship brought home in her public treasure, upon the public service, and treasure of individuals for his own emolument; and received freight for both, and paid over one third of it, according to the usage heretofore established in the navy, to the admiral under whose command he sailed; discovering that the law does not compel captains to pay to admirals one third of the freight, the captain brought an action for money had and received, to recover it back from the admiral's executrix:—Held, that he could not recover back the private freight, because the whole of that transaction was illegal, nor the public freight, because he had paid it with full knowledge of the facts, although in ignorance of the law, and because it was not against conscience for the executrix to retain it. Brisbane (Knt.) v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 143.

Where a defendant received from his principal abroad a bar of silver, and took it to plaintiff, who melted it, and sent a piece to an assayer to be assayed at defendant's expense, and paid a price for the bar to defendant, as for the number of ounces of silver which by the assay it was calculated to contain, which number was afterwards discovered to exceed the true number:—Held, that plaintiff might, after having offered to return the bar, have money had and received against defendant for the price thus paid to him under a mistake, although defendant had forwarded his account to his principal, and in it had placed the price received to the credit of his principal. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 344. And see Gomery v. Bond, 3 M. & S. 378.

Where the agents for the grantor and grantee of an annuity rendered an account to the latter, in which they gave him credit for instalments due from the former, stating at the same time that the money had not been received, and allowed the grantee to draw upon them for the amount; and the agents having, in about twelve months afterwards, become bankrupts, and neglected to apprise the grantee in the interval that the instalments still remained unpaid by the grantor, who had become insolvent:—Held, that the money so advanced to the grantee was not recoverable back by the assignees of the agents. Shaw v. Picton, 7 D. & R. 201; 4 B. & C. 715.

So, army agents, who had allowed an officer to draw for what they conceived were increased allowances due to him in the shape of pay, (but which allowances were not in fact intended by government to be given to officers in that situation), and had sent in an account admitting the receipt of the full amount, were not allowed after a lapse of time, when they found out the mistake, to retain the surplus from the representatives of the officer. Skyring v. Greenwood, 6 D. & R. 401; 4 B. & C. 281; 1 C. & P. 517.

If a bill is filed to compel the performance of a contract and payment of money, and the defendant puts in no answer, and is obliged to pay the money; if he afterwards discover that he was deceived in the contract, he shall not be barred from his action by having paid the money, if he comes recently after discovering the fraud. Jendwine v. Slade, 2 Esp. 573—Kenyon.

(c) To recover Money paid on illegal Contracts.

[What Contracts are illegal, see CONTRACT.]

Assumpsit for money had and received will not lie to recover back money paid for doing an illegal act. Webb v. Bishop, Bull. N. P. 132. And see Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197, 334; 2 Dougl. 698, n.; Browning v. Morris, Cowp. 790; Lowry v. Bourdieu, 1 Dougl. 451; Mitchell v. Cockburn, 2 H. Black. 379.

And if a party knowingly engage with another in an illegal transaction, the money advanced by him in such business is not recoverable in assumpsit: aliter, where a party has been ignorantly drawn in by the craft or imposition of such person. Drummond v. Deey, 1 Esp. 152—Kenyon.

But where A. had received money to the use of B., on an illegal agreement between B. and C.:—Held, in an action of assumpsit brought by B. for money had and received, that he could not be allowed to set up the illegality of the contract as a defence. Tennant v. Elliott, 1 B. & P. 3.

If A. receive money of B., to the use of C., it may be recovered by C. in an action for money had and received, though the consideration on which B. paid it be illegal. Farmer v. Russel, 1 B. & P. 296.

Quere, whether the case would be varied if A. were a party to the contract between B. and C. Id.

The plaintiffs, a Frenchman and a Swiss, carrying on trade at Lisbon under the name of the defendant, a Portuguese, shipped a cargo from thence for a port of France, which cargo being captured by a British cruiser, and libelled for condemnation in the court of Admiralty, as French and enemy's property, was ordered to be restored to the defendant on his putting in and establishing, with the plaintiff's privity and consent, a claim to it as his own property:—Held, that the plaintiffs were, by thus colluding with the defendant to withdraw from the Admiralty the decision of the true question, by establishing a false fact, estopped from maintaining an action for money had and received against the defendant for the proceeds, by shewing the true fact, that the property was their own, and that the defendant was their agent. De Metton v. De Mello, 12 East, 234; 2 Camp. 420.

A testator having borrowed money on a respondentia contract prohibited by the laws of this country, his executors refunded the money to the lenders:—Held, that the executors could not maintain an action for money had and received to recover back this money, notwithstanding the lenders could not have compelled them to pay it. Mearns v. Stokes, 4 T. R. 561.

But where A., in consideration of 210*l.* paid by B., gave a bond for the payment of an annuity to the latter of 100 guineas, till the hop duties should amount to a certain sum: before this event had taken place, B. brought an action for money had and received, to recover back the 210*l.* of A.:—

Held, that the action was maintainable. Tapscott v. Randall, 2 B. & P. 467.

(f) To recover Money paid on Failure of Consideration.

In an action for money had and received, to recover back money paid to the defendant on failure of consideration, it is not necessary to shew that he was not entitled to receive it. Robinson v. Anderton, Peake, 94—Kenyon.

Where money is advanced to A. as the manager of an institution, for the purpose of purchasing shares therein, and there is no proof of a misapplication of the money by him, the person advancing it cannot recover it back from A. on the failure of the institution: to enable the person advancing to recover from A., he must shew either fraud in the receipt of the money, or a misapplication of it. Lloyd v. Sandilands, Gow, 13—Dallas.

Money being advanced for procuring a commission in the marines, and the purchaser, after six months, being discovered to have been a livery-servant, was discharged, the money was decreed to be refunded with interest. Morris v. McCulloch, Amb. 432; 2 Eden, 190.

The plaintiff remitted to defendant the price of some hay he had sold for defendant, before the money had been paid by the purchaser, and then sent defendant's servant with the hay to the purchaser. The servant having been cheated of the hay before he arrived at the purchaser's:—Held, the defendant was liable to refund the money remitted. Gingell v. Glascock, 8 Bing. 86; 1 M. & Scott, 125.

Rent paid by A. to B., claiming as devisee, the amount of which A. is afterwards compelled to pay to the heir, may be recovered back by A. as money had and received to his use, B. setting up no title to the lands when the action is brought, or at the trial. Newsome v. Graham, 5 M. & R. 64; 10 B. & C. 237.

A defendant supposing himself the legal representative of lessee for years, sold the term, and delivered the lease to plaintiff, but without any assignment or formal conveyance, saying "the premises were his, and if any thing happened, he would see the plaintiff righted":—Held, the plaintiff may maintain an action against him for money had and received, the rightful administrator of the tenant for years having ousted the plaintiff by ejectment. Cripps v. Reade, 6 T. R. 606.

A., by will, devised to B., C., D., and E. two parcels of land upon trust, to sell and divide the money among his brother's and sister's children: B., C., D., and E., the latter being one of twenty-four persons entitled under the will to a share of the money, were proceeding to sell, when it was agreed by the three first trustees, and the twenty-three other persons entitled to the money, that E. should become the purchaser of the two parcels of land, paying 300*l.* for one, and 700*l.* for the other: a conveyance was accordingly prepared and executed by B. and C. only, upon which E. took possession of the lands, and paid the purchase money, which was divided among the several persons entitled under the will: E., being afterwards evicted from the smaller parcel in consequence of a defect in the title derived under the will, brought an action for money had and received against one of the twenty-three persons, to recover the share of the 300*l.* received by him, at the same time refusing to give up the parcel of land for which 700*l.* had been paid:—Held, that he was entitled to recover. Johnson v. Johnson, 3 B. & P. 162.

Assumpsit will lie to recover the expenses of the conveyances, and interest of the money procured to purchase an annuity, where the grantor has misrepresented the charges affecting the estate to be charged with the annuity. Richards v. Barton, 1 Esp. 267—Kenyon.

A., a loan contractor, in October, 1822, delivered to B. certain scrip receipts, stating that B. had paid him 10*l.* per cent. deposit in respect of a certain quantity of Neapolitan stock, and that on payment of the balance before the 1st February, 1823, the bearer would be entitled to certificates for that amount of stock. B. transferred the receipts to C. for a valuable consideration, A., by advertisement, offered the holders of the receipts, upon certain conditions, an extension of time for payment of the balance due on them: requiring also that the receipts should be left at his office for the purpose of being marked, as holden under the new conditions. The receipts transferred by B. to C. were by him sent to A.'s office, when indorsed by A. with C.'s name. The latter having failed to comply with the new conditions, A. refused to deliver the certificates or return the deposit. C. claimed the return of the deposit as being retained by A. without consideration:—Held, that C. was not entitled to recover the same, because B. had full consideration for the deposit in the option which the scrip receipts gave him to become the proprietor of so much stock, by payment of the balance of the price, on the day named. Rothschild v. Hennings, 9 B. & C. 470, overruling S. C. nom. Hennings v. Rothschild, 4 Bing. 315; 12 Moore, 559.

Assuming that C. had any right of action against A.; quære, if money had and received could have been maintained. Id.

(g) To recover Money Obtained by Fraud.

If money have been obtained by fraud, an action for money had and received lies to recover it back, to which it is no answer that the defendant is really entitled to the money, if his right to it depend upon a question which is not of common law jurisdiction. Crockford v. Winter, 1 Camp. 124—Ellenborough.

So, if one recover money mala fide, by suit in an inferior court, assumpsit for money had and received will lie in K. B. to make him refund. Moses v. Macpherlan, 2 Burr. 1005; 1 W. Black. 219.

Where the defendants, knowing a check to be post dated, and that the drawers were insolvent, presented it for payment to the plaintiffs, who were bankers, and who, without knowledge of these facts, paid it, although they had no funds of the drawers in their hands at the time, but expected some in a few days:—Held, that they were entitled to recover it back in assumpsit for money had and received. Martin v. Morgan, 3 Moore, 635; 1 B. & B. 289; Gow, 122.

An action for money had and received will lie against an infant, to recover money which he had embezzled. Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. 172; Peake, 223—Kenyon.

If a person undertake to procure for another an appointment, which he knows at the time he is unable to do, and receive in consideration a sum of money to be paid back in three months if he failed in his undertaking; the other person may immediately commence an action to recover it back without waiting till the end of the three months. Hogan v. Shee, 2 Esp. 522—Kenyon.

A sale of goods effected by fraud does not change the property in them; therefore, where the defendant fraudulently induced the plaintiff to sell goods to I. S., who could not pay for them, and on a nominal re-sale of those goods by I. S., in which the defendant was concerned, obtained the money paid on such re-sale:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover from the defendant the value of the goods unpaid for by I. S. in an action for money had and received. Abbotts v. Barry, 5 Moore, 98; 2 B. & B. 369.

If A. fraudulently procure a bill of exchange from B. and afterwards become bankrupt, and his assignees receive the money for the bill, B. may recover it from them in an action for money had and received. Harrison v. Walker, Peake, 111—Kenyon.

The plaintiff was, by means of a fraud, induced to draw and pay away two cheques on his banker amounting to 1330*l.* Six days after the date of the cheques the defendants, acting bona fide, gave cash for them to a third person (who had not given value for them), presented the cheques, and obtained payment. In an action by the plaintiff to recover back this money:—Held, that the cheques could not be treated as bills over-due, and therefore taken by the defendants at their peril, but that the real question in the cause was, whether the defendants had acted bona fide and with due caution. Rothschild v. Corney, 9 B. & C. 388.

(h) To recover Money paid on Forgery of Securities.

If a forged bill be accepted and paid by the drawee, he cannot recover the money back from the indorsee to whom he paid it. Price v. Neale, 3 Burr. 1354; 1 W. Black. 390.

If the banker of a supposed acceptor of a forged bill discount it for the agent of one of the indorsers; on the discovery of the forgery, he may recover back the sum paid on the bill, in an action for money had and received; notwithstanding he was the banker of the supposed acceptor, and therefore might be taken to know his handwriting. Fuller v. Smith, 1 C. & P. 197; R. & M. 49—Abbott.

A person who discounts a forged navy bill for another, who passed it to him without knowledge of the forgery, may recover back the money as had and received to his use, upon the failure of the consideration. Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488; 1 Marsh. 157.

So, a person who receives forged bank notes in payment. Id.

So of a victualling bill, although the full apparent amount has been paid by the office on presentment. Bruce v. Bruce, 1 Marsh. 165; 5 Taunt. 495, n.

A bill of exchange with a forged acceptance, purporting to be payable at the house of A. and Co., bankers, in London, with whom the supposed acceptor keeps cash, is indorsed to B. for a valuable consideration: B. indorses it to his agent in London, who presents it on the 23rd of April at the house of A. & Co. for payment; A. & Co. pay it, and send it on the 30th of April to the supposed acceptor, who disavows it: A. & Co. immediately give notice of the forgery to B. and demand repayment, which B. refuses; all parties are ignorant of the fraud:—Held, that A. & Co. by paying the bill, without ascertaining that the acceptance was genuine, were precluded from recovering the amount from B. Smith v. Mercer, 1 Marsh. 453; 6 Taunt. 76.

Where a check was so carelessly drawn as to be easily altered by the holder to a larger sum, so that the bankers, when they paid it, could not distinguish the alteration:—Held, that the loss must fall on the drawer, as it was caused by his negligence. Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253; 12 Moore, 484.

A customer drew upon his banker a check for 3*l.*, and paid it away. The amount of the check was altered by the holder to 200*l.*, in such a manner that no one, in the ordinary course of business, could have observed it, and presented, and the 200*l.* paid by the banker:—Held, that the banker was liable to the customer for 197*l.*, the difference between the amount of the genuine and the altered check. Hall v. Fuller, 8 D. & R. 464; 5 B. & C. 750.

Fauntleroy being one of three co-trustees, proprietors of stock, and also one of three co-partners in a banking-house, forged the names of his co-trustees to a power of attorney, under which he sold the stock, and paid the money into his banking-house. Neither of his co-trustees were privy to the transaction. Fauntleroy was executed for forgery. The surviving trustees sued the surviving partners for the money. On an issue from Chancery, directing that no objection should be taken that Fauntleroy had been interested both as a trustee and a partner in the banking-house:—Held, that the money constituted a debt due from the bankers to the trustees. Stone v. Marsh, 9 D. & R. 643; 6 B. & C. 551; R. & M. 364; 8 D. & R. 71.

5. By Owners of lost Securities.

An action for money had and received will lie by the true owner of money or notes against a third person, into whose hands they have come mala fide; provided their identity can be traced and ascertained. Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197, 334; 2 Dougl. 698, n.

But bank-notes cannot be followed into the hands of bona fide holders for valuable consideration without notice. Lowndes v. Anderson, 13 East, 130; 1 Rose, 99.

For possession is prima facie evidence of property in negotiable instruments. King v. Milson, 2 Camp. 5—Ellenborough.

Therefore, in trover for a bank-note, it is not a prima facie case for the plaintiff to prove that the note belonged to him, and that the defendant afterwards converted it; and the defendant will not be called upon to shew his title to the note, without evidence from the other side that he got possession of it mala fide, or without consideration. Id.

A bank-note, though stolen, becomes the property of him who gives valuable consideration for it, having no notice or knowledge of the robbery. Miller v. Rice, 1 Burr. 452; 2 Ld. Ken. 189.

The plaintiff having lost a check five days after it bore date, which was taken by the defendants for value, but under such circumstances as ought to have excited their suspicion:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action for money had and received against them for the amount of it, though he gave no evidence of how he lost it, or how it got out of his possession. Quære, whether such evidence would have been necessary, if the check had been received by the defendants on the day it bore date. Downe v. Halling, 6 D. & R. 455; 4 B. & C. 330; 2 C. & P. 11. And see Gill v. Cubitt, 1 C. & P. 163, 487; 5 D. & R. 324; 3 B. & C. 460.

In actions for money had and received, brought by the owners of lost bank-notes, against those who may have got them into their hands without giving value; it is not absolutely necessary for the plaintiff to give direct evidence of the loss; it is sufficient if such circumstances are shewn as satisfy the jury of the fact of the loss. Holiday v. Sigil, 2 C. & P. 176—Abbott.

A party taking a bank-note in payment of a bet from a stranger on a race-course is not bound to use the same precaution as would be requisite if the note were taken by a tradesman. Snow v. Sadler, 11 Moore, 506; 3 Bing. 610.

Defendant, according to one witness, having admitted taking "from his banker's, or at Doncaster," and according to another, "from a stranger at Doncaster races, for bets won," a 30*l.* bank of England note, without inquiring or taking any account of the number of the note, and the jury, in an action by the plaintiffs, who had lost the note and duly published their loss, having found a verdict for them, the court granted a new trial. Id.

A bank-note for 500*l.* was stolen from a servant of the plaintiff. The fact of the robbery was advertised in the Hue and Cry Gazette, and in another paper. Some time afterwards the note was received at the banking house of the defendants in the country, where it had been presented for change by a stranger, of whom no questions were asked as to the manner he became possessed of it. In trover, to recover the value, the judge left it to the jury to say whether or not due notice had been given by the plaintiffs, and whether or not, under the circumstances, due caution had been observed by the defendants in taking the note:—The jury thought defendants had not exercised due caution, and accordingly found for the plaintiffs. The court held that this direction was proper, and refused to disturb the verdict. Snow v. Peacock, 11 Moore, 286.

The plaintiff was robbed of a pocket-book, containing, amongst other things, a bill of exchange. In advertising the loss he merely stated that the pocket-book contained "papers of no use to any but the owner." The bill was shortly afterwards presented at the banking-house of the defendants by a stranger, who stated that he was the son of the indorser; the defendants discounted it. In an action the judge left to the jury to say, first, whether they thought that the plaintiff had done all that his duty required of him, in advertising and making known his loss; secondly, if due diligence had been used in this respect, whether the defendants had acted bona fide, and used due caution in receiving the bill; telling them, that, if they were of opinion that the plaintiff had failed in giving proper notice of the robbery, the defendants were entitled to a verdict. The jury having found for the defendants, the court refused to disturb the verdict, holding the direction proper. Beckworth v. Corral, 11 Moore, 335.

The plaintiff, coming from Tonbridge to London, placed a 100*l.* bank post bill in her reticule on her arm; arrived at Smithfield, she left the reticule in a hackney-coach. Upon discovering her loss, she made application at the hackney-coach office in Essex-street, and caused handbills to be circulated at all the coach-stands, and at the adjoining public-houses; and also once advertised the loss in a daily paper. On the morning of the day on which the last-mentioned advertisement appeared, the bill in question was cashed by the defendant, a banker at Brighton, for a stranger, of whom no questions were asked, except his name and address, which he wrote on the back of the bill in a vulgar manner, and which afterwards proved to be fictitious. It was left to the jury to say, first, whether the plaintiff had used due and proper caution in her mode of conveying the bill; secondly, whether she had exercised a due and proper degree of diligence in the steps she had taken to make known to the world her loss; thirdly, whether the defendant himself had exercised proper caution in receiving a bill of such large amount from a total stranger without making some inquiry as to where he put up, or whether he was known to any person at Brighton. The jury found for the plaintiff; the court refused to disturb the verdict. Strange v. Wigney, 4 M. & P. 470; 6 Bing. 677.

A bank of England note, which had been feloniously stolen in England in February, 1826, was remitted in May, 1827, by a foreign merchant to his correspondent in this country, to whom he was indebted in a sum exceeding the amount of the note. The latter demanded payment; the bank refused to pay, on the ground that the note had been stolen. At the time when the correspondent was informed of this, he had not made the foreign merchant any advance on the credit of the note:—Held, first, that, in trover for the note, the correspondent must be considered the agent of the foreign merchant, and that he could therefore recover upon his title only; secondly, that, in such action, it having been proved that the note had been stolen, it was incumbent on the plaintiff to shew that the foreign merchant had given full value for it. De la Chamette v. Bank of England, 9 B. & C. 208.

6. To recover Money from Stakeholders and others.

Stakeholders.—Assumpsit will not lie between two parties who have by consent deposited money with a stakeholder, unless it be proved that the defendant refused to permit the plaintiff to receive the money. Robson v. Hall, Peake, 127—Kenyon.

In order to recover a share of a stake from a stakeholder, the plaintiff must shew his exact proportion of the sum deposited. Robson v. Andrade, 2 Chit. 263; 1 Stark. 372.

Where money in litigation between two parties has by mutual consent been paid over to a trustee in trust for the party entitled, it can only be sued for and recovered from the stakeholder by the party entitled to it, and not from the original party who was indebted, though he agreed to waive all objections to form. Ker v. Osborne, 9 East, 378. And see Edwards v. Hodding, 1 Marsh. 377; 5 Taunt. 815.

A. took from the Board of Works a piece of ground at Westminster for the erection of galleries at the king's coronation, and underlet part of it to B. on the same terms. The rent was paid by B. to A., who deposited it in the hands of his bankers, with a condition, that, if the coronation did not take place, and the rent was in consequence remitted by the Board of Works, the money was to be returned to B. The coronation took place; but, in consequence of the speculation being unprofitable to the parties, the crown remitted the whole rent to A., who refused to return the money paid him by B.:—Held, that B. might maintain an action of assumpsit for money had and received against the bankers as stakeholders. Truscott v. Marsh, 2 D. & R. 712.

Trustees.—Where money is paid into the hands of a trustee for a specific purpose, it cannot be recovered back in assumpsit for money had and received, until it be shewn that the trust is closed, and that a balance is left. Case v. Roberts, Holt, 500—Burroughs.

If the indorsee of a bill of exchange, who has received a navy bill assigned to the drawee, as security to him (the indorsee) till the bill of exchange be accepted, deposit such navy bill with the drawee, and the drawee receives the money upon it, he is answerable for the amount in an action for money had and received to the use of the indorsee, though he may have done nothing that amounts to an acceptance of the bill of exchange. Pierson v. Dunlop, Cowp. 571.

Other Persons.]—The brokers to a ship charged their employers certain sums of money for work done to their ship under the head of stevedore. The labour of a stevedore was performed by a man whom they employed, and to whom they paid several sums of money, but far less in amount than their own charges; the ship-owners were aware that the brokers charged them more than they paid the workmen, but made no objection on account of their zeal and diligence:—Held, that one of the workmen under such circumstances could not maintain an action for the larger sums received by the brokers, as money had and received to his use. Wilson v. Colley, 2 C. & P. 363—Gaselee.

Three ship-brokers agreed in writing with a ship-owner to freight his vessel at a certain commission, dividing profits of commission. One of the brokers alone paid and received money on account of the ship; and delivered to the owners an account, charging a liquidated sum for commission. The owner acquiesced in the accuracy of the account, but objected to the charge for commission, but which the broker retained in his hands. There was no adjustment of account between the brokers:—Held, that money had and received would not lie by the two brokers against the third for their share of the commission. Becill v. Hammond, 9 D. & R. 186.

Where agents in England effected a policy of insurance for a correspondent abroad, on which a loss happened, and he drew a bill upon them, which was presented for acceptance by an indorsee, but they said they could not accept it, having no funds in hand, but that on a settlement taking place with the underwriters it should be paid:—Held, that after they had received a sum from the underwriters less than the amount of the bill, it might be recovered from them by the indorsee as money had and received to his use. Langes v. Corney, 4 Camp. 176—Gibbs.

Assumpsit will not lie for money paid by the tenant of the bankrupt to the defendant, as grantee of an annuity granted by the bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy, and charged on the estate of which the payer of the money was tenant. Anon. Woodf. L. & T. 507.

A. (Wharton), B. (Thompson), and C. (Craven), being separate traders, agreed to a joint speculation in importing corn. The agent for buying the corn abroad knew that the speculation was on the joint account of A., B., and C., and was to consign to A., drawing on him at two or three months. Corn was bought, and bills for the value drawn on and accepted by A., payable at a banker's in London, the correspondents of the plaintiffs who were bankers at Hull. A. had a banking account with the latter, who, being in the habit of paying his acceptances at the house of their London correspondents, paid the above among other acceptances, not then knowing of the joint speculation of A., B., and C. A., by way of part security to the plaintiffs, indorsed to them two accommodation bills drawn by himself on B., these were unpaid, and A. and B. became bankrupts; C. had contributed his third of the purchase, but did not appear to have known from what source A. obtained his funds for that purpose:—Held, that the Hull bankers could not recover against C., as for money lent, or had and received, the amount of the bills drawn by A. on B., though they had given A. credit for them in his account, as partly liquidating their advances to pay for the corn bought for A., B., and C., at their joint profit or loss. Smith v. Craven, 1 Tyr. 308.

VI. ON ACCOUNT STATED.

The defendant's admission of something being due, without specifying how much, does not entitle the plaintiff to a verdict for nominal damages on an account stated. Kirton v. Wood, 1 M. & Rob. 253—Tindal.

On that count the amount must be shewn. Bernasconi v. Anderson, M. & M. 123—Tenterden.

Plaintiff demanded 40*l.* upon an agreement by defendant, an incoming tenant, to pay for growing crops; the defendant offered to pay 17*l.*:—Held, no evidence to support a count upon an account stated. Wayman v. Hilliard, 7 Bing. 101; 4 M. & P. 729.

A verbal agreement having been made for the purchase of some turnips growing in a field; after the purchaser had removed the principal part of them, the seller said to him, "You owe me 3*l.*;" the purchaser answered, "I will send it before I draw any more turnips." He afterwards drew all the turnips, but did not send the 3*l.*:—Held, that it was recoverable on the account stated. Pinchon v. Chilcott, 3 C. & P. 236—Best.

A qualified acknowledgment of a sum due to the plaintiff will not entitle the plaintiff to recover upon a count on an account stated. Evans v. Venty, R. & M. 239—Littledale.

Evidence of an account stated, whereby the defendant admitted a certain balance due to the plaintiff, is not done away, but confirmed in support of an assumpsit, by evidence of a foreign judgment recovered by the plaintiff for the same sum, with a stay of execution for six months to enable the defendant to prove a counter demand, if he had any: and the plaintiff not having declared till after that period, it was held no objection that the writ was sued out and the defendant arrested before. Hall v. Odber, 11 East, 118.

An admission by a defendant that he has received 300*l.* from a bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, will not support the count on an account stated with the assignee. Stafford v. Clark, 2 Bing. 377; 2 C. & P. 403.

Under the general issue in assumpsit, a judgment recovered for the same cause of action may be given in evidence. Id.

Proof of the acknowledgment of one item of debt only is good to support a count upon an account stated. Higmore v. Primrose, 5 M. & S. 65; 2 Chit. 333.

An admission by a defendant, that so much was agreed to be paid to the plaintiff for the sale

III. PROCEEDINGS UNDER, 172.

I. WHEN GRANTED.

1. Against Officers of the Court.

Where the process of the court has been abused, and undue means have been used in its execution, an attachment, and not an information, is the proper remedy. Anon. 2 Ld. Ken. 372.

But, where the officer who executes process has behaved improperly, as well as those who resisted him, the court will not in general grant extraordinary process for contempt. Gregory v. Onslow, Loft, 35.

An attachment was granted for arresting the plaintiff while attending arbitrators under a rule of court, on purpose to prejudice his cause. Rex v. Hall, 2 W. Black. 1110.

But altering a sheriff's warrant is no ground for an attachment, unless an ill use be made of it. Hale v. Castleman, 1 W. Black. 2.

The sealer of writs is not guilty of a contempt in refusing to seal a writ on St. Luke's day, being one of the holidays appointed by statute 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 3, to be observed; and the Court of C. P. will not grant an attachment for such refusal. Martin v. Bold, 7 Taunt. 182; 2 Marsh. 487.

2. For contempt of Process.

The court will not grant an attachment where there is a remedy by action, and the matter is doubtful. Hanington v. Jennings, Loft, 188.

In one case, the court refused an attachment in the first instance for not obeying a rule of court, but granted a rule to go before the master, otherwise an attachment nisi. Anon. Loft, 159.

A defendant being served with a copy of a capias tore it in pieces, and threw it at the officer:—Held, not to amount to a contempt of court for which an attachment might be granted. Myers v. Wills, 4 Moore, 147.

So where a person, on being served with process, collared and shook the officer serving it, and ordered him to quit his presence:—Held, that this did not amount to a contempt of court and obstruction of its process, for which an attachment might be granted. Adams v. Hughes, 1 B. & B. 24.

Although an attachment may issue against a peer for refusing to obey the process of the court of K. B.; quære, whether in ecclesiastical affairs, the writ should not be moved against the chancellor, commissary, or official, instead of the bishop. Rex v. St. Asaph (Bishop), 1 Wils. 332.

Service of all processes intended to bring a party into contempt should be personal, if possible; but if it can be made appear to the court of Exchequer that service cannot be effected personally, and that there was probable cause to suspect that the party kept out of the way for the purpose of avoiding such personal service, that court will grant a rule nisi for an attachment; and order that service, by leaving the rule at the dwelling-house, shall be efficient. Weston v. Faulkener, 2 Price, 2.

Where a mandamus had been granted for the election of a mayor, under the 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 2, and a rule made that public notice should be affixed in the market-place, which had been done accordingly, the court granted an attachment for disobedience of the mandamus, against a member of the corporation who was served with a copy of the rule, notwithstanding neither the original mandamus nor the rule was shewn him at the time; for the public notice directed by the act is prima facie sufficient. Rex v. Edyeon, 3 T. R. 352.

But the application for the attachment would be well answered, if the party could shew that he had no notice of the mandamus. Id.

Where a rule had been granted for an information in the nature of a quo warranto against A., to shew by what authority he claimed to be mayor of G., on the relation of some of the corporators, and another rule in that cause for inspecting all the corporation books, papers, &c. directed to the town-clerk; an inspection of such only as related to the election and office of mayor, was held to be a sufficient compliance with the rule, so as to protect the town-clerk from an attachment as for a contempt of the court, it appearing that he had acted bona fide. Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 579.

If, a plaintiff having sued out a fi. fa., the defendant pays the plaintiff's attorney the debt and costs, without the writ being delivered to the sheriff, it is no contempt of the court of C. P. to attach the same money in the hands of the plaintiff's attorney, for a debt due from the plaintiff to the defendant:—But quære, whether the debt is such whereon an attachment can be supported. Gwinness v. Brown, 4 Taunt. 472.

An attachment will not lie for disobedience to a judge's order until it is made a rule of court, though the order has been acquiesced in and acted upon. Baker v. Rye, 1 Dowl. P. C. 689.

An attachment granted in term for non-payment of costs, under a baron's order on the master's allocatur, set aside, the order not having been first made a rule of court. Ex parte Arden, 1 Price's, P. C. 149.

A wife named with her husband in a rule of court, directing costs to be paid to them, is entitled to the advantage of it, if she survives her husband; and an attachment upon the rule issues of right. Tilt v. Bartlett, 1 Ld. Ken. 104.

A party in contempt for filing a bill in Chancery to set aside an award, after entering into a rule of K. B. to abide by it, was discharged without any fine, rather than set a small one for so high an offence. Rex v. Wheeler, 3 Burr. 1256.

On an attachment for rescue, a defendant may be fined without answering to interrogatories. Rex v. Elkins, 2 Burr. 2129; 1 W. Black. 460.

An attachment granted against rescuers, upon a return by the sheriff of rescue from his bailiff. Gobby v. Dewes, 10 Bing. 112.

Costs were granted upon an attachment for contempt, to the person who had purged himself of the contempt upon examination. Rex v. Plunket, 3 Burr. 1329.

3. For Non-payment of Money.

An attachment for non-payment of costs is in the nature of an execution, so much so that the parties are not bailable. Anon. Lofft, 305: S. P. Rex v. Stokes, Cowp. 137.

An attachment for non-payment of money is in the nature of mesne process. Lewis v. Morland, 2 B. & A. 56: S. P. Rex v. Curwen, 1 Moore, 494.

In the court of Exchequer, an order nisi for costs for not proceeding to trial is served on the clerk in court, which brings the parties into contempt; and upon service of the allocatur, and demand and refusal of costs, an attachment is granted. Merritt v. Meek, 3 Anst. 656.

An order of the court of Exchequer, that a defendant pay a certain sum of money, being shewn to the defendant at the time of making a personal demand of it, a copy of such order not having been personally served on the defendant himself, although a copy had been previously served on his attorney, is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to an attachment. Brodenik v. Teed, 1 Price, 401.

If a defendant in a penal action obtain a rule to stay proceedings on paying a sum agreed upon between him and the plaintiff, it is an undertaking by him to pay that sum, and for the non-payment of it the court will grant an attachment. King v. Clifton, 5 T. R. 257.

Where a defendant in a penal action obtains a rule to stay proceedings on payment of part of the penalties, the court of C. P. will grant an attachment against him for non-payment. Hart v. Draper, 2 Marsh. 358; 7 Taunt. 43.

Though the plaintiff discontinue on the common rule on payment of costs, he is not liable to an attachment for non-payment. Stokes v. Woodson, 7 T. R. 6.

If a party obtain a rule for setting aside judgment and execution, on condition of his paying costs, the court will not issue an attachment in the first instance for not paying those costs. — v. Mynde, 1 Chit. 158.

The order made on motion to pay money into court, that the defendant shall pay the costs, is imperative in that respect in the court of Exchequer; and if not paid when taxed, the plaintiff may have an attachment against the defendant for non-payment; which process is final, and in the nature of an execution, and therefore not bailable: the plaintiff may, however, proceed to try the cause if the costs are not paid, as is his only course in the court of King's Bench. Plummer v. Savage, 6 Price, 126.

An attachment granted on the master's allocatur for costs due from the plaintiff to his attorney, although the attorney be disqualified, the plaintiff having received the whole of the debt and costs from the defendant. Dimond v. Clarke, 1 Chit. 222.

By the master's allocatur, an attorney was ordered on the 12th May to pay over to his client a sum of 15*l.*; on the 20th June the attorney became bankrupt and afterwards obtained his certificate:—Held, that it was then too late to move for an attachment for not paying the money pursuant to the master's allocatur. Baron v. Martell, 9 D. & R. 390.

An alias attachment lies for non-payment of money pursuant to a rule of court, founded on an award, where defendant has been suffered to go at large upon the original attachment, upon terms which he has failed to comply with. Good v. Wilks, 6 M. & S. 413; 2 Tidd's Prac. 1070.

4. For Non-performance of Awards.

Nature of the Proceeding.—All attachments for non-performance of awards are only in the nature of civil executions, though formerly considered of a criminal nature. Rex v. Myers, 1 T. R. 266. And see Rex v. Curwen, 1 Moore, 494.

An attachment may issue if the motion to set aside the award be not made before the last day of the next term after the award is published. Freame v. Pinneger, Cowp. 23.

An attachment goes of course for non-performance of an award; and in order to get rid of it, the award must be set aside. Anon. Lofft, 451: S. P. Anon. Lofft, 321.

The court of C. P. will not infer personal service of an award to bring a party into contempt. Brander v. Penleaze, 5 Taunt. 813.

The court of C. P. will not grant an attachment for non-performance of an award pending an action brought on the award; nor allow the plaintiff to waive the action in order to apply for the attachment. Badley v. Loveday, 1 B. & P. 31.

By and against whom granted.—The court will not grant an attachment against a peer for not paying a sum of money awarded, though the defendant consent on condition that the attachment shall lie in the office for a certain time. Walker v. Grosvenor (Earl), 7 T. R. 171.

Nor against a member of parliament. Cutmur v. Knatchbull (Bart.), 7 T. R. 448.

An attachment was issued against a party for non-performance of an award, which had been made a rule of the court of C. P.; although such party resided out of the jurisdiction of that court, as it was in the nature of a civil process; and the court were not bound to inquire whether it could be served with effect or not. Hopcraft v. Fernor, 8 Moore, 424; 1 Bing. 378.

An executor may have, without scire facias, or other process of revivor, an attachment for non-performance of an award made in favour of his testator in a cause referred and decided in his lifetime, though the suit abated by his decease. Rogers v. Stanton, 7 Taunt. 575.

So, if a stranger to the cause become, by rule of court, party to a reference made in the cause before any jury is sworn, and if, after the award made, but before judgment, one of the parties to the cause die, though the cause abate, the rule of court is not vacated as to the stranger, but an attachment shall go thereon for non-performance of the award. Id.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-payment of costs payable under an award, at the instance of the personal representative of a deceased party, to which party they were to have been paid. Rex v. Maffey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 538.

Where a submission to arbitration between A. and B., the parties on the record, had been made a rule of court, and the award not having been made in time, the dispute had been referred to a second arbitrator, by B. and C., who were the real parties in the suit:—Held, that no attachment could issue against B. for not obeying the award made by the second arbitrator, because the reference should have been made by the parties on the record; and even if it had, there should have been another rule to make the second submission a rule of court. Owen v. Hurd, 2 T. R. 643.

And as the court had no jurisdiction in this case they could not go into the merits, though B. consented to waive the objection. Id.

For what granted.]—The court refused to grant an attachment where there appeared to be objections to the award which were pleadable to any actions brought upon it, though they were not such as to make them set it aside on motion. In re Cargey, 2 D. & R. 222; S. C. (in error), 2 Bing. 199; 9 Moore, 38, and M'Clel. 367; 13 Price, 639. And see Cargey v. Aitcheson, 3 D. & R. 433; 2 B. & C. 176.

The refusal by the court to enforce an award by attachment, does not decide on the validity of the award, considered as the subject of an action. Jackson v. Clarke, M'Clel. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

The court granted an attachment for non-performance of an award, and would not drive the plaintiff to his action on the submission bond, on an affidavit that the arbitrators, after having appointed one umpire who refused to act, appointed another, who accepted the authority; but he being objected to by the defendant, the arbitrators each proposed another, but could not agree on the person to be substituted, and another was not substituted, though the respective attorneys agreed on a third person; in consequence of which the umpire objected to was called on to proceed, and made his award within time. Oliver v. Collings, 11 East, 367.

An attachment ordered to issue for non-performance, where it appeared that the excuses made were frivolous and vexatious. Lodge v. Porthouse, Loft, 388.

Where one only of two defendants who attended an arbitrator under a reference by order of Nisi Prius, made the order a rule of court, and demanded costs from the plaintiff under a taxation to him only:—Held, that an attachment would not lie for the non-payment of the costs to the one defendant only. Semble, that the master had not power to tax the costs separately to the several defendants. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528.

If an arbitrator award, among other things, that each party shall pay a moiety of the costs of the arbitration, and of making the submission a rule of court; and one party, in order to get the award out of the hands of the arbitrator, pay the whole, he may have an attachment against the other party, if he refuse to pay his moiety. Hicks v. Richardson, 1 B. & P. 93.

So, where the arbitrator awarded a sum together with the costs of the award, the party to whom the money was awarded was allowed, upon taking out the award, and paying the whole costs, to have an attachment against the defendant for the sum awarded and his share of the costs. Stokes v. Lewis, 2 Smith, 12.

The court will grant an attachment for the non-payment on demand of money awarded, after an action on the award commenced and discontinued, where the action was not pending at the time of demand. Higgins v. Willes, 3 M. & R. 382.

Previous Demand.]—An attachment for not paying a sum of money pursuant to an award cannot issue before a personal demand has been made; even though the time and place for payment of the money be specified in the award. Brandon v. Brandon, 1 B. & P. 394.

But personal knowledge of an award and rule of court makes the party liable to an attachment for not performing the award, although he has not been personally served with such award and rule. In re Bower, 1 B. & C. 264.

If the party in whose favour an award is made, demand more than is due to him, he cannot have an attachment for the non-payment on that occasion of the sum which is due. Stratt v. Rogers, 7 Taunt. 213; 2 Marsh. 524.

Where an arbitrator awarded that A. should fulfil an agreement for the purchase of land of B., and should pay the purchase money, on B. conveying the land with a good title, the court of C. P. refused to grant an attachment against A. for non-performance, on an affidavit that B. had required A. to pay the money, assuring him of his readiness to convey with a good title, without further stating that B. had tendered a conveyance executed. Standly v. Hemington, 2 Marsh. 276; 6 Taunt. 561.

On demanding the execution of a deed, directed by an arbitrator, where such demand is made by a third person, it is not necessary that such person should be empowered by deed or power of attorney, in order to enable the party to have an attachment, though it may be so where the demand is of money directed to be paid to the party. Kenyon v. Grayson, 2 Smith, 61.

Though a party is at one time in contempt for not paying costs which have been duly demanded; yet, if, before an attachment be moved for, the sum due becomes reduced in amount, a fresh demand of the reduced sum must be made to ground a motion for an attachment. Spivy v. Webster, 1 Dowl. P. C. 696.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-performance of an award, the performance of which is demanded by a third person acting under a power of attorney, unless the subscribing witness makes an affidavit of its execution, and a copy of the power of attorney is left with the party upon whom the demand is made. Laugher v. Laugher, 1 Dowl. P. C. 284; 1 C. & J. 398; 1 Tyr. 352.

An attachment for contempt in not paying money pursuant to the prothonotary's allocatur on demand made by a third person, who acted under a power of attorney, may be supported on an affidavit stating that he shewed the original rule and allocatur to the party charged, at the time of the demand; and it seems that it was not necessary to shew him the power of attorney. Sed quære. Bass v. Maitland, 8 Moore, 44.

Held, in K. B. that the application could not be supported on an affidavit of demand of the money by a clerk, without shewing a power of attorney. Hartley v. Barlow, 1 Chit. 229.

In the court of Exchequer, affidavits whereon to ground a rule nisi for an attachment against a defendant for non-payment of money and costs pursuant to an award, and the master's allocatur, where the demand has been made by a third person, under a power of attorney, should state, that the original power was shewn to the defendant at the time the demand was made. Jackson v. Clarke, 13 Price, 208; M'Clel. 72.

5. For other Things.

An attachment lies in C. P. to compel a plaintiff to produce deeds. Bateman v. Phillips, 4 Taunt. 157.

Where an order was made on the defendant to produce indentures of apprenticeship; and it appeared by affidavit that he never had them in his possession, and that, although he had made diligent search for them, he had been unable to find any trace of them:—Held, that he was not liable to an attachment for their non-production. Cooke v. Tinswell, 2 Moore, 513; 8 Taunt. 131.

The court of Exchequer will not on motion discharge a defendant from custody under an attachment for contempt in not producing deeds, papers, &c. before the master, on an affidavit that the defendant has not, nor ever had, any such in his possession or within his power. Hurd v. Partridge, 12 Price, 689.

Such an application refused with costs. Id.

The course is to have an affidavit of the fact in the master's office, when, on obtaining his certificate, the defendant will be discharged, as a matter of course. Id.

It was made part of the terms of a subsequent successful application for the defendant's discharge, that he should pay the costs of that application, and of the previous irregular motion. Id.

Where a defendant is served with an order of court, forthwith to re-instate premises belonging to the plaintiff, an attachment cannot issue against him for disobedience of such order, unless a personal demand of performance is made on the party at the time of the service. Doddington v. Hudson, 8 Moore, 510; 1 Bing. 410.

But an attachment was afterwards issued against such defendant for not commencing such re-instatement, in compliance with the order, within four days after it was served, although it would have taken him a much longer time to re-instate the premises. Id.

An attachment was granted against one for threatening a prosecution with danger of being hanged, but refused against the defendant who indicted the prosecutor for perjury in his affidavit, on which an information was granted. Rex v. Carroll, 1 Wils. 75.

II. PRACTICE ON.

1. Rule and Writ.

When Rule absolute.—An attachment is absolute in the first instance, on a return by the sheriff; but on affidavits, the party must have an opportunity of answering. Adamson v. Gibbon, 1 Tidd's Prac. 169.

No rule for an attachment to be absolute in the first instance, except for non-payment of costs upon the prothonotary's allocatur. Chaunt v. Smart, 1 B. & P. 477; S. P. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 486.

But even in that case the rule is only a rule nisi, when the allocatur is founded on an award. Thompson v. Billingsby, 2 Chit. 57; S. P. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 80.

On motion for an attachment for not paying money under a previous order of the court of Exchequer, on a party who has been called on by the former rule, to shew cause why that money, and the costs of such application, should not be paid, and against which order no cause has been shewn: the rule for the attachment will be granted absolutely in the first instance. King v. Price, 1 Price, 341.

An attachment is absolute in the first instance for non-delivery of possession pursuant to a rule of court. Davies d. Povey v. Doe, 2 W. Black, 892.

Nor against a member of parliament. Cutmur v. Knatchbull (Bart.), 7 T. R. 448.

An attachment was issued against a party for non-performance of an award, which had been made a rule of the court of C. P.; although such party resided out of the jurisdiction of that court, as it was in the nature of a civil process; and the court were not bound to inquire whether it could be served with effect or not. Hopcraft v. Fermor, 8 Moore, 424; 1 Bing. 378.

An executor may have, without scire facias, or other process of revivor, an attachment for non-performance of an award made in favour of his testator in a cause referred and decided in his lifetime, though the suit abated by his decease. Rogers v. Stanton, 7 Taunt. 575.

So, if a stranger to the cause become, by rule of court, party to a reference made in the cause before any jury is sworn, and if, after the award made, but before judgment, one of the parties to the cause die, though the cause abate, the rule of court is not vacated as to the stranger, but an attachment shall go thereon for non-performance of the award. Id.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-payment of costs payable under an award, at the instance of the personal representative of a deceased party, to which party they were to have been paid. Rex v. Maffey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 538.

And as the court had no jurisdiction in this case they could not go into the merits, though B. consented to waive the objection. Id.

For what granted.—The court refused to grant an attachment where there appeared to be objections to the award which were pleadable to any actions brought upon it, though they were not such as to make them set it aside on motion. In re Cargey, 2 D. & R. 222; S. C. (in error), 2 Bing. 199; 9 Moore, 38, and M'Clel. 367; 13 Price, 639. And see Cargey v. Aitchison, 3 D. & R. 433; 2 B. & C. 176.

The refusal by the court to enforce an award by attachment, does not decide on the validity of the award, considered as the subject of an action. Jackson v. Clarke, M'Clel. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

The court granted an attachment for non-performance of an award, and would not drive the plaintiff to his action on the submission bond, on an affidavit that the arbitrators, after having appointed one umpire who refused to act, appointed another, who accepted the authority; but he

An attachment ordered to issue for non-performance, where it appeared that the excuses made were frivolous and vexatious. Lodge v. Porthouse, Loft, 388.

Where one only of two defendants who attended an arbitrator under a reference by order of Nisi Prius, made the order a rule of court, and demanded costs from the plaintiff under a taxation to him only:—Held, that an attachment would not lie for the non-payment of the costs to the one defendant only. Previous Demand.—An attachment for not paying a sum of money pursuant to an award cannot issue before a personal demand has been made; even though the time and place for payment of the money be specified in the award. Brandon v. Brandon, 1 B. & P. 394.

But personal knowledge of an award and rule of court makes the party liable to an attachment for not performing the award, although he has not been personally served with such award and rule. In re Bower, 1 B. & C. 264.

If the party in whose favour an award is made, demand more than is due to him, he cannot have an attachment for the non-payment on that occasion of the sum which is due. Strutt v. Rogers, 7 Taunt. 213; 2 Marsh. 524.

Where an arbitrator awarded that A. should fulfil an agreement for the purchase of land of B., and should pay the purchase money, on B. conveying the land with a good title, the court of C. P. refused to grant an attachment against A. for non-performance, on an affidavit that B. had required A. to pay the money, assuring him of his readiness to convey with a good title, without farther stating that B. had tendered a conveyance executed. Standly v. Hemington, 2 Marsh. 276; 6 Taunt. 561.

On demanding the execution of a deed, directed by an arbitrator, where such demand is made by a third person, it is not necessary that such person should be empowered by deed or power of attorney, in order to enable the party to have an attachment, though it may be so where the demand is of money directed to be paid to the party. *Kenyon v. An attachment for contempt in not paying money pursuant to the prothonotary's allocatur on demand made by a third person, who acted under a power of attorney, may be supported on an affidavit stating that he shewed the original rule and allocatur to the party charged, at the time of the demand; and it seems that it was not necessary to shew him the power of attorney. Sed quere. Bass v. Maitland, 8 Moore, 44.

Held, in K. B. that the application could not be supported on an affidavit of demand of the money by a clerk, without shewing a power of attorney. Hartley v. Barlow, 1 Chit. 229.

II. PRACTICE ON.

1. Rule and Writ.

When Rule absolute.—An attachment is absolute in the first instance, on a return by the sheriff; but on affidavits, the party must have an opportunity of answering. Adamson v. Gibson, 1 Tidd's Prac. 169.

No rule for an attachment to be absolute in the first instance, except for non-payment of costs upon the prothonotary's allocatur. Chaunt v. Smart, 1 B. & P. 477; S. P. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 486.

But even in that case the rule is only a rule nisi, when the allocatur is founded on an award. Thompson v. Billingsby, 2 Chit. 57; S. P. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 80.

On motion for an attachment for not paying money under a previous order of the court of Exchequer, on a party who has been called on by the former rule, to shew cause why that money, and the costs of such application, should not be paid, and against which order no cause has been shewn: the rule for the attachment will be granted absolutely in the first instance. King v. Price, 1 Price, 341.

An attachment is absolute in the first instance for non-delivery of possession pursuant to a rule of court. Davies d. Povey v. Doe, 2 W. Black, 892.

The rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs pursuant to the master's allocatur is absolute in the first instance, although four years have elapsed since the taxation. Rex v. C. D. 1 Chit. 723.

The rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs, between attorney and client, pursuant to the master's allocatur, is nisi in the first instance. Bray v. Yates, 1 Dowl. P. C. 459.

The rule for an attachment, for not accounting to the Legacy Office, is a rule nisi, which makes itself absolute by a certain day, unless in the mean time cause be shewn. In re Vivian, 1 C. & J. 409.

In some cases, the rule to shew cause why an attachment should not be granted, will be discharged with costs. Jackson v. Clarke, M'Clel. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

Writ.]—An attachment must be directed to elisors, when against the coroners for not attaching the sheriff. Andrews v. Sharp, 2 W. Black. 911; S. P. Rex v. Peckham, 2 W. Black. 1218.

An attachment is not in the nature of an original, and therefore does not require fifteen days between the teste and return. Anon. Lofft, 273.

An attachment will be irregular if it be for more than the precise sum allowed, however small the difference. Daniel v. Bishop, M'Clel. 61; 13 Price, 129.

When to be moved for.]—Whenever an attachment is absolute in the first instance, it may be moved for on last day of term. Anon. Lofft, 301.

But not where there is only a rule nisi. Anon. 3 Smith, 118.

An attachment cannot be moved for on the last day of term, except for non-payment of costs, or against a sheriff for not returning a writ. Anon. 1 Burr. 651.

An attachment for non-payment of costs may be moved for on the last day of term. Rex v. York, 5 Burr. 2686.

The ten days after demand of costs under a recognizance, taken by virtue of stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 2 & 3, must elapse, before an attachment can be granted against the party refusing to pay them. Rex v. Ireland, 3 T. R. 512.

2. Affidavits.

How intituled.]—Affidavits for attachments in civil suits are proceedings on the civil side of the court until the attachments issue, and are to be intituled with the names of the parties; as soon as the attachments issue, the proceedings are on the crown side, and from that time the king is to be named as the prosecutor. Wood v. Webb, 3 T. R. 253.

And affidavits to set aside attachments which have been granted (though not issued), must be intituled in the name of the king, &c. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 T. R. 439, 527.

Which title is sufficient, without naming the cause, although it is convenient to do so. Rex

v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 5 B. & C. 389; 8 D. & R. 149.

So, the affidavits made in answer to a rule nisi for an attachment, must be intituled on the civil side of the court, in the cause out of which the motion arises; but after the rule is granted, the affidavits must be intituled on the crown side. Whitehead v. Firth, 12 East, 165.

Affidavits in support of a rule for an attachment against the sheriff for not bringing in the body, must be intituled with the names of all the parties to the suit; and though the affidavits correspond with the rule for the attachment; yet, if all the parties be not inserted in the affidavits, the court will set aside the attachment. Etherington v. Kemp, 1 Chit. 727, n.

Where a submission to an award is made a rule of court under the statute, there being no action, the affidavits on which to apply for an attachment for disobeying the award need not be intituled in any cause, but the affidavits in answer must. Bevan v. Bevan, 3 T. R. 601.

A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to an award was intituled "in the matter of A. and B," but the affidavit of service was intituled, "between A. B. plaintiff and C. D. defendant:"—Held irregular, as the affidavit should have been intituled the same as the rule. In re Houghton, 2 M. & P. 452.

Contents of Affidavits generally.]—An affidavit to support a rule for an attachment for a contempt, must state that the defendant was served personally with a copy of the rule, and that the original was shewn to him at the same time. Rex v. Smithies, 3 T. R. 351; S. P. 7 D. & R. 612; Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., Ex., H. T., 2 W. 4.

On a motion for an attachment for filing a bill in equity contrary to an order of reference, an affidavit that notice of the motion to make the order a rule of court had been served on the party's servant, &c., is not sufficient. Hilton v. Hopwood, 1 Marsh. 66.

In cases of Awards.]—An affidavit, upon which a rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs pursuant to an award made under a rule of court and the master's allocatur is obtained, must state the due execution of the award, the service of a copy of the award, and of the rule and allocatur on the defendant, the due execution of the letter of attorney, a demand of the costs, and refusal to pay. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 80.

The court refused an attachment for non-performance of an award, where the award was made out of the time originally allowed, but authority had been reserved to the arbitrator to enlarge the time, and though the award stated upon the face of it that the arbitrator had enlarged the time; because there was no affidavit of that fact, and it did not appear to them judicially, that the arbitrator had any authority to make the award, without which the court had no jurisdiction. Moule v. Stowell, 15 East, 99, n.

Where an award appears to have been made out of the time originally given to the arbitrator by the rule of court, but which rule reserved to him the power of enlarging the time, it is not enough, for obtaining an attachment for non-performance of the award, that the arbitrator states in his award that he had enlarged the time, without verifying the fact by affidavit; and it should also appear that the defendant had notice of such enlargement of the time within which the award was made, when served with the rule for the attachment. Davis v. Vass, 15 East, 97.

The arbitrator had power to enlarge the time for making his award by indorsement on the order of reference; that order, together with two indorsements for enlarging the time, was made a rule of court:—Held, on moving for an attachment for not performing the award, it was not necessary to produce an affidavit that the indorsements were duly made. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285.

Where a cause is referred by a judge's order, made by consent of the parties, and the time for making the award is afterwards enlarged by a judge's order; on moving for an attachment for not performing the award, it must be shewn that the order enlarging the time was made by consent. Halden v. Glasscock, 5 B. & C. 390; 8 D. & R. 151.

Where arbitrators have power to enlarge the time for making their award, and have enlarged it, and made their award in the additional time, in order to bring the defendant into contempt for non-performance of the award, there must be an affidavit that the time has been enlarged, that the award was made within the enlarged time, and that the defendant has been personally served with notice of those facts. Wohlenberg v. Lagemaen, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

Seemle, that the affidavit for an attachment for non-performance of an award, must, contrary to the usual practice, always state the time of execution of the award. Id.

It is necessary that the affidavit of the due execution of an award should state that the deponent on a certain day saw the arbitrators execute it, in order to shew that it was executed before the arbitrators were functi officio. It is not sufficient to state merely that he saw them execute an award bearing date on such a day. Harvey v. Harvey, Tidd's Prac. Forms, 13.

3. Service of Rule.

The rule nisi for an attachment must be personally served. Dezman v. Golding, 2 Tidd's Prac. 981.

Even when against an attorney. In re ——— (Gent.), 1 D. & R. 529.

And the affidavit must shew it. Anon. 2 Chit. 66.

The court refused to order that service at the dwelling-house should be deemed good service of a rule for an attachment, upon an affidavit that the defendants were "shy and difficult to be met with," and that the deponent had tried all the means in his power, for two months, before he could serve the defendant personally with the award, for the non-performance of which the attachment was sought to be enforced. Garland v. Goulden, 2 Y. & J. 89.

Serving an order of the court of Exchequer for an attachment on the servant of the party, was held insufficient. Anon. 2 Price, 4.

The court will not grant a rule, that service of an attachment on the defendant's attorney shall be sufficient, though it be sworn that repeated attempts have been made to serve him personally with a copy of the award, but he was not to be found, and although it is suggested that the defendant keeps out of the way to avoid being served. Read v. Fore, 1 Chit. 170.

The court will not grant a rule to dispense with the personal service of the master's allocatur for costs, with a view to an attachment, on an affidavit that the tenant keeps out of the way to avoid being served. Anon. 1 Chit. 503.

Before an attachment will be granted for non-payment of costs, a copy of the rule, with the officer's allocatur thereon, must be personally served on the party liable; and at the same time the original rule should be shewn to him, and a demand of payment made. Pope v. Smith, and Hubbard v. Horton, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1029.

And before he is in contempt for the non-payment, he must have refused payment to the principal, and not to a mere clerk. Hartley v. Barlow, 1 Chit. 229.

An affidavit of the service of the master's allocatur, on the taxation of costs of a prosecution against a parish, in order to ground a motion for an attachment against those on whom it was served, must state that they are the same persons as were defendants in the prosecution. Rex v. Kendal, 1 Chit. 650, n.

An affidavit of the service of a rule with an allocatur of costs, and a demand thereof on or about such a day, is insufficient to obtain an attachment for non-payment of costs. Wadham v. Brett, 2 Wils. 227.

An affidavit to support a rule for an attachment for not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur must shew that, at the time of serving the copy, the original was shewn to the defendant. Reid v. Deer, 7 D. & R. 612.

A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to the master's allocatur cannot be served on a Sunday. M'Ilham v. Smith, 8 T. R. 86.

The Court of C. P. will not open the rule for an attachment on the mere affidavit of the party that he has not been served; at least unless he shew some mistake in the service. Hopley v. Granger, 1 N. R. 256.

4. Bail.

An action on the case on the stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, will not lie against a sheriff for refusing to take bail on an attachment out of Chancery; that statute referring only to process in courts of common law. Studd v. Acton, 1 H. Black. 468.

For although a sheriff may, if he chooses, take a bail bond on an attachment out of Chancery, he is not compellable to take bail thereupon. Morris v. Hayward, 6 Taunt. 569; 2 Marsh. 280.

The sheriff may recover on a bail bond so taken. Id.

But such bail bond is not assignable under the statute 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 20. Miller v. Palfreyman, 4 B. & Adol. 146.

The statute 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, does not authorize a sheriff to take a bail bond from a defendant who is in custody under an attachment for non-payment of costs, because such a process is in the nature of an execution. Phelips v. Barrett, 4 Price, 23.

No arrest to be made on attachments for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, unless for a bailable cause of action, and the writ be duly marked and indorsed for bail. Reg. Gen. T. T. 1 Will. 4, Ex., 1 Price's P. C. 31; 1 Tyr. 519.

A defendant arrested, and in the county jail, in custody of the sheriff, on a writ of attachment for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, discharged by order of court, on a rule to shew cause made absolute, (the cause of action being a debt under 20*l.*), on terms of entering a common appearance to the writ of subpoena, and undertaking not to bring any action. The attachment set aside for irregularity, with costs. Worboys v. Adkins, 1 Price's P. C. 44.

It is the duty of the sheriff to execute a writ of attachment, issued for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum; and he must return the writ as having been executed (in whatever manner), or that the party is not found in his bailiwick. Masters v. Cooper, 1 Price's P. C. 8.

Where a defendant has been held to bail upon an attachment for contempt, in not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, the Court of Exchequer will not grant a messenger to bring up the body, if bail have been given to the sheriff; because the plaintiff has a remedy on the bail bond, (although the penalty (40*l.*) be, in almost all instances, very inadequate to the occasion,) if the condition should be broken. Birdwood v. Hart, 6 Price, 32.

Two days' notice of bail on an attachment is not required, nor any justification of such bail. Rex v. Hall, 2 W. Black. 1110.

A defendant may be admitted to bail, and sworn to answer interrogatories upon an attachment for contempt, although a defective notice of bail have been served on the prosecutor. In re ———, 4 D. & R. 393.

5. Interrogatories.

Where attachments have issued in order to compel any person to answer upon interrogatories, the name of the cause shall be inserted in the list of motions to come on peremptorily in the ensuing terms. Reg. Gen. K. B. H. T. 34 Geo. 3, 5 T. R. 547; Id. 723.

Interrogatories filed and exhibited to persons, against whom attachments have been ordered, must be signed by counsel. Reg. Gen. K. B., M. T. 34 Geo. 3, 5 T. R. 474.

A defendant under attachment must answer interrogatories; he cannot come in and confess the contempt before he does so. Rex v. Edwards, 4 Burr. 2105; 1 W. Black. 637.

On an attachment for rescue, the defendant may submit to a fine without answering interrogatories. Rex v. Elkins, 1 W. Black. 640; 2 Burr. 2129.

But where a defendant is brought up, it is the practice of the court to put interrogatories to him, although he do not deny the charge in the affidavits, unless the prosecutor waives putting them. Rex v. Horsley, 5 T. R. 362.

The report of the prothonotary is not conclusive against parties who have given bail to answer interrogatories before him, but they may except to such report on any material point; where, therefore, after the prothonotary had made his report that the parties were in contempt, the interrogatories not having been sufficiently answered, and he was directed to inspect an account-book belonging to one of them, which had been accidentally omitted to be delivered to him in the first instance, and which tended to support the answers given by the parties: the Court of C. P. refused to allow the clerk, who made the entries in such book, to be examined by the prothonotary, on an application made by the prosecutor for that purpose. In re Isaacson, 8 Moore, 214; 1 Bing. 272.

Nor would they allow affidavits to be received, that two of the parties were too poor to take office copies of the interrogatories filed against them. Id.

The report of the master of the crown office, that a defendant and his attorney were in contempt for not obeying an award and filing a bill, is to be taken as a conviction; and on the defendant's being brought up for judgment, the court will not receive affidavits in denial of the contempt, but only in mitigation of punishment. Coulson v. Graham, 2 Chit. 57.

The master's report upon interrogatories of contempt cannot be moved for on the last day of term, without the previous leave of the court, unless upon extraordinary cases, and personal service of notice. Rex v. Wheeler, 1 W. Black. 311.

III. PROCEEDINGS UNDER.

Taking an unreasonable quantity of goods under process of attachment does not make the officer a trespasser ab initio. Moore v. Taylor, 5 Taunt. 70.

On attachment of goods, the officer cannot legally continue in possession of the defendant's house or keep the goods therein for a long and unreasonable time; but must remove them to a place of safe custody; else he is a trespasser ab initio. Read v. Harrison, 2 W. Black. 1218.

ATTAINDER.

A person attainted can be heard as a suitor in a court of justice only for the direct purpose of reversing the attainder, not in prosecution of a civil right. Ex parte Bullock, 14 Ves. jun. 452; S. C. nom. Rex v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 82; 2 Leach, C. C. 966.

A civil action will lie against one attainted of treason. Ramsay v. McDonald, 1 W. Black. 30; S. C. nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

And quære, whether a commission of bankruptcy cannot issue against a person attainted, as he may be sued in a civil action. Id.

By attainder all the personal property and rights of action in respect of property accruing to the party attainted, either before or after attainder, are vested in the crown without office found; and, therefore, attainder may be well pleaded in bar to an action on a bill of exchange indorsed to the plaintiff after his attainder. Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & A. 258. And see Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138.

By the statutes 4 Geo. 1, c. 11, and 8 Geo. 3, c. 15, the mere transportation of an offender to a place appointed, does not amount to an actual pardon, but he still remains in the situation of an attainted felon, until he has served the period of transportation; and when he returns by the permission of the governor of New South Wales, under the provisions of the 30 Geo. 3, c. 47, he is only to have the same advantage as if his Majesty had signified his intention of pardoning under the sign manual, and is to have his name inserted in the next general pardon under the great seal; and a return under such circumstances is not sufficient to restore him to all his rights and privileges until such pardon be passed under the great seal. Id.

Personal property not belonging to a felon, convicted of simple larceny, and sentenced to transportation, at the time of conviction, but accruing due to him afterwards, before his term of transportation has expired, is forfeited to the crown. Roberts v. Walker, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 752.

A grant of a liberty in a manor of goods and chattels of tenants in such manor attainted of felony, is confined to the goods, &c. of felons, being locally situate within the manor, and does not pass goods, &c. lying out of it. Rex v. Capper, 5 Price, 217.

I. ARTICLED CLERKS.

1. Persons contracting.

Statutes.]—By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, no person is to act as an attorney or solicitor unless he has served a clerkship of five years to an admitted attorney or solicitor, under a contract in writing; who is not to have more than two clerks at the same time; except that prothonotaries and secondaries may have three.

By 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 7, no person shall take a clerk after discontinuance or leaving off business, or during such time as he shall not actually practise.

By s. 16, sworn clerks in the six clerks' office, and persons bound to them, may be admitted solicitors.

By 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 1, (amended by 3 Geo. 4, c. 16), persons who shall have taken at Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, a degree of bachelor of arts or of law within six or eight years after matriculation, need only serve a clerkship of three years, if commenced within four years after graduation; the qualification as to the time within which the degree must be taken not to apply to persons who had taken degrees at the time of passing the act 7 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 5.

By s. 2, persons bound for five years may serve part of that time, not exceeding one year, as pupil with a practising barrister, or certificated special pleader.

Who may be Articled Clerks.]—A person who holds a situation, and receives a salary from government, as surveyor of assessed taxes, is not sui juris to enter into a contract for service as an articled clerk to an attorney; and where a person so situated was articled to an attorney, and nominally served him for five years, retaining his situation under government all the time, and then commenced practising as an attorney, the court ordered him to be struck off the roll. In re Tay- lor, 6 D. & R. 428; 4 B. & C. 341; 5 B. & A. 538.

An attorney of K. B. having by mere collusion, and with intent to secure the business arising from the prisoners, taken one of the turnkeys of the King's Bench prison for his articled clerk, the articles were cancelled in court. Fraser's case, 1 Burr. 291.

Who may take Clerks.]—No attorney, retained or employed as a writer or clerk by any other attorney, shall, during the time of such employ, take or have any clerk under articles; and no service to any such attorney shall be deemed good service. Reg. Gen. K. B., T. T. 31 Geo. 3, 4 T. R. 379.

2. Service under Articles.

The statutes 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 5, and 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 8, require the clerk to continue during the whole period specified in the contract in the service of his master, and to be actually employed by him or his agent in the proper business of an attorney or solicitor; and the latter statute requires an affidavit of that fact to be made before admission.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 46, no person who has regularly served his clerkship is disqualified from being admitted by reason of the master having omitted to take out his annual certificate.

Under the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, the clerk must actually serve the five years under articles; and the statute is not complied with by the clerk serving part of the time with another attorney with his master's consent, and the rest of the time with his master. Ex parte Hill, 7 T. R. 456.

It appearing upon affidavit, that, during more than three of the five years for which he was bound, the service of a clerk had been given to the attorney to whom he was articled, and that he afterwards bound himself to another attorney and served him for two years; it was held, that his service under the first articles could not be coupled with his service under the second. In re Taylor, 4 B. & C. 341; 6 D. & R. 428; 5 B. & A. 538.

An articled clerk performing all his master's business, may, at leisure hours, work for wages with another attorney. Ex parte Blunt, 2 W. Black. 764.

An articled clerk who had served under the articles two years and a half, when he was prevented by illness from giving regular attention to business during the rest of the term, but attended as his health permitted, was allowed by the court to be admitted an attorney. Ex parte Matthews, 1 B. & Adol. 160.

If, during the five years, an articled clerk has been absent two months, by consent of his master, at his father's house, and at the end of the five years has served two additional months, he will be entitled to admission. Ex parte Hubbard, 1 Dowl. P. C. 438.

No person who shall enter into articles with an attorney shall be at liberty to serve the agent of such attorney under such articles for a longer time than one year of his clerkship; and any such service beyond that time shall not be deemed good service. Reg. Gen. K. B., T. T. 31 Geo. 3, 4 T. R. 379.

3. Assignment and Discharge of Clerk.

By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 12, and 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 9, on the death of the master, or his leaving off practice, or when the contract is vacated by mutual consent, or when the clerk is legally discharged by rule or order of court, before the expiration of the five years, the clerk may be assigned to any other attorney or solicitor by contract in writing, and service under it shall be as effectual as if the clerk had continued under the original contract.

By statute 34 Geo. 3, c. 14, s. 8, the words are more extensive—"or on any other event."

The court refused to compel an attorney to assign his clerk, who had been guilty of crim. con. with his master's wife, even after a promise to assign. Ex parte Briggs, 1 Tidd's Prac. 63.

A rule nisi can only be granted to discharge an articled clerk, where the attorney had become bankrupt and absconded; and the rule must be served at the last place of abode of the attorney to the commission, and stuck up in the King's Bench Office. Anon. 2 Chit. 62: S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 558, n.

Since the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, the five years' service need not be continuous. Ex parte Hill, 2 W. Black. 957.

An articled clerk, who has served part of his clerkship with an attorney who died before the clerkship was completed, is at liberty, after an interval of six years from that time, to serve the remainder of his clerkship with another attorney, with a view to his admission. In re Smith, 1 D. & R. 14.

But where a clerk had served part of his time with a master who afterwards left this country, and before his articles were assigned to another master, an interval of ten months had elapsed, during which time he did not serve under any articles, but served the remainder of the time specified under the assignment; the court would not allow him to be admitted until he had served the remaining ten months under new articles. Ex parte Rowle, 2 Chit. 61.

A gentleman who had taken the degree of bachelor of arts at Cambridge, articled himself to an attorney for three years, but served only two months, and abandoned the contract. After the expiration of the three years mentioned in the original articles, he was assigned to another attorney, with whom he served two years and ten months:—Held, that as the original articles had expired previously to the assignment, the service under the assignment was not a service within the terms of the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 1. Ex parte Unthank, 2 M. & P. 453.

4. Inrolment of Articles.

The 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, requires an affidavit of the execution of articles to be made, and filed within three months; and a book to be kept for entering the names and places of abode of the attorney and clerk.

The stat. 34 Geo. 3, c. 14, s. 2, requires that the indentures of an attorney's clerkship shall be inrolled or registered with the proper officer of the court, together with an affidavit of the time of executing the same, before the clerk shall be admitted to practise as an attorney; and enacts, that unless the indentures are inrolled or registered within six months next after execution, together with the affidavit of the time of execution of such contract, the service shall be deemed to commence from the time of inrolment or registry only.

Where a clerk had been articled to an attorney in the country, and the indentures had been sent to London to be inrolled in the master's office, pursuant to the statute; and after the clerkship had been served, no trace of the indentures could be discovered in that office; the court refused to admit him, although it appeared from the books of the town agent, that a clerk of the latter had tendered the fees payable in the master's office upon inrolment, contemporaneously with the time when the inrolment was supposed to have taken place. Ex parte Pilgrim, 2 D. & R. 429; 1 B. & C. 264.

So, in C. P. every person (not before an attorney or solicitor), must, before his admission, file his articles with the secondary, together with an affidavit of the execution thereof, and of due service under the same. Reg. Gen. C. P., T. T. 37 Geo. 3, 1 B. & P. 90.

The court will allow a copy of articles of clerkship to an attorney to be inrolled, where the original articles are lost; and the party may be afterwards admitted, on production of the copy of the articles, and the usual affidavits and notices. Ex parte Clarke, 3 B. & A. 610. And see 2 B & A. 314; 1 Chit. 102.

II. ADMISSION.

Statutes.—By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, no person is to practise as an attorney or solicitor unless he has taken the oath (or made affirmation, if a quaker, 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 8,) and been admitted and inrolled in the court in which he practises; the judges of which are to examine candidates for admission as to their fitness and capacity.

By sect. 21, Sworn attornies may be admitted solicitors, and solicitors in one court of equity may be admitted into any other court; and, by 6 Geo. 2, c. 27, s. 2, attornies of superior courts may be admitted in inferior courts. And see 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 7.

So, by 23 Geo. 2, c. 26, s. 15, solicitors may be admitted attornies.

By 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 10, attornies of K. B. and C. P. may practise in the Exchequer; and attornies of the courts of Great Sessions in Wales (abolished by the act) may be admitted as attornies of the courts at Westminster.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 10, all attornies and solicitors of the courts of law and equity at Westminster may be admitted to practise in the court of bankruptcy.

of standing trees, made after the trees had been felled and taken away by the defendant, will support a count upon an account stated, though not for goods sold and delivered. Knowles v. Michel, 13 East, 249.

Semble, that money paid cannot be given in evidence under a count on an account stated. Pinley v. Bagnall, 3 Dougl. 155.

Where the particulars of the plaintiff's demand were on an account stated, "as appears by a memorandum under the hand of the defendant of this date," and the memorandum was inadmissible for want of a promissory note stamp:—Held, that the account stated might be proved by other evidence than the memorandum:—Held, also, that verbal evidence was admissible of an admission of the money being due, and a promise to pay it by instalments, though such admission and promise were made at the time of signing the memorandum, and were embodied in it. Singleton v. Barrett, 2 C. & J. 368.

In assumpsit for use and occupation, 4l. were paid into court on the account stated. The plaintiffs proved that the defendant, being indebted to them as surviving executors of T., and having no other account with them, was called upon by them for payment, and refused, saying that he had a cross demand on the funds of the testator. The plaintiffs gave evidence of a debt exceeding 4l., and contended that these, with the admission implied by the payment into court, entitled them to recover the larger sum on the account stated, the other counts proving inapplicable:—Held, that they could not so recover, for that the averment of an account stated could only refer to a single occasion; and the above-mentioned answer of the defendant, with the subsequent payment into court, merely shewed that upon that accounting, which alone was in question, the defendant was found indebted 4l. Kennedy v. Withers, 3 B. & Adol. 467.

Plaintiff was allowed to recover on a subsequent promise, under the count on an account stated, where the original agreement was void by the statute of frauds. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459; 1 M. & P. 227; 3 C. & P. 170.

A promise to pay plaintiff the expenses he had been put to by defendant not performing an agreement, is evidence under the account stated count, where the plaintiff failed on his special count, the agreement being void by the statute of frauds. Id.

In assumpsit for goods sold, and on an account stated, to recover the value of growing poles purchased from the plaintiff by the defendants, and afterwards carried away by them; it appeared in evidence, that, at the time of the bargain, some memorandums in writing had been made, but which were neither stamped nor signed by the parties; and it was also proved, that the defendants, after the poles were carried away, admitted that a balance was due to the plaintiff, who, under these circumstances, was nonsuited:—Held, that such nonsuit was proper, as it was not proved that the defendants had admitted a precise and definite sum to be due to the plaintiff; and, therefore, that he could not recover on the account stated, without reference to the memorandums, which were not admissible in evidence: but as the contract had been executed by the defendants, they having carried away the poles, the court of C. P. granted the plaintiff a new trial, on payment of costs. Teall v. Asty, 4 Moore, 542; 2 B. & B. 99.

To support a count on an account stated, there must be an acknowledgment of a subsisting debt. Tucker v. Barrow, 1 M. & R. 518; 7 B. & C. 623; M. & M. 139; 3 C. & P. 85, 89.

Semble, that a compulsory admission made before commissioners of bankrupt, is not evidence of an account stated. Id.

An admission by the defendant, that he had received a sum of money on account of the bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, but not that it was a subsisting debt, is not evidence to support a count on an account stated with the assignees. Id.

Whether a conversation between the defendant and a witness is sufficient to entitle a plaintiff to recover on an account stated, is a question of law and not of fact. Bishop v. Chambre, 3 C. & P. 55; M. & M. 116—Tenterden.

VII. PLEADING IN ASSUMPSIT.

Indebitatus Assumpsit.—A declaration in assumpsit, alleging that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain quantity of wheat for tolls, without stating the value, is bad on special demurrer. Reading (Mayor, &c.) v. Clarke, 4 B. & A. 268.

A count stating a promise to pay a sum of money to the plaintiff, without alleging to whom the promise was made, is insufficient. Price v. Easton, 1 Nev. & M. 303.

But it was held in C. P. in the case of a bill of exchange, that a promise similarly alleged was sufficient. Bancks v. Camp, 9 Bing. 604.

It is no objection, on general demurrer, that the promise is stated under a "whereas." Semble, that it would be no objection on special demurrer. King v. Roxbrough, 2 C. & J. 418.

Every material and traversable fact must be laid with time and place. A count in indebitatus assumpsit stated the time of the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff's testator in his lifetime, and of his making the promise on the 2nd day of January, 1833, and stated the time of the grant of letters of administration to the plaintiff, on the 11th of January, 1831:—Held, on special demurrer, that the allegations were inconsistent, and the count bad; and that one of the allegations of time could not be rejected as surplusage, as then a material and traversable fact would be laid without a time. Id.

A count in indebitatus assumpsit stated the promise to pay several sums of money, in consideration of being indebted in those sums for the several matters respectively stated in the count:—Held, that it was no objection to the whole count, on special demurrer, that one of the matters stated was insufficient and bad, as a consideration for that part of the promise which related to it. Id.

Special Assumpsit.—It is not necessary in assumpsit, in declaring on a parol agreement, to set out the whole of the instrument: it is sufficient to set out that part of it only to which the particular breach applies. Ward v. Smith, 11 Price, 19.

If the part omitted do not qualify that which is stated. Tempest v. Rawlings, 13 East, 18.

So, it is sufficient if the declaration shew so much of the terms beneficial to the plaintiff in a contract, as comprehends the point for the failure of which the plaintiff sues. Cotterill v. Cuff, 4 Taunt. 285.

In declaring upon a contract, not under seal, consisting of several distinct parts and collateral provisions, it is sufficient to state so much of it as contains the entire consideration for the act, and the entire act or duty which is to be done, (including the time, manner, and other circumstances of its performance,) in virtue of such consideration, the breach of which act or duty is complained of; but such part of the contract, which respects only the liquidation of damages, after a right to them has accrued by a breach of the contract, is not necessary to be set forth in the declaration, but is only matter of evidence, to be given to the jury in reduction of damages. Clarke v. Grey, 6 East, 564; 2 Smith, 622; 4 Esp. 177.

In an action of assumpsit for not delivering bonds and other securities, pursuant to an agreement, where the consideration money was to be paid on the receipt of the securities; it is not necessary to aver an actual tender of the money, an allegation of the plaintiff's being ready and willing to pay is sufficient. Levy v. Herbert (Lord), 1 Moore, 56; 7 Taunt. 314.

In a special action on a promise to deliver up a bond, pledged upon payment of money borrowed of the defendant, a breach assigned that defendant refused to deliver up the bond, was held well enough, although it is not laid that the money was paid and tendered, it having been proved at the trial that the money was tendered and refused. Alcorn v. Westbrook, 1 Wils. 115.

If a promise to pay money purports on the face of it to have been given for consideration, the plaintiff is not bound to set out the consideration in his declaration: therefore, a declaration on a note, in general terms, stating the promise by the defendant to pay the money sought to be recovered, is sufficient to sustain the action, although the note, when produced, shews on the face of it, that it was given to pay the debt and costs of an action against a third person. Coombs v. Ingram, 4 D. & R. 211.

In an action upon an agreement to deliver possession for certain considerations, subject to a forfeiture on failure by either party; the person who was to deliver possession cannot sue for the forfeiture, without shewing in his declaration a possessory title in himself. Luxton v. Robinson, 2 Dougl. 620.

Mutual promises are a good consideration in an action of assumpsit without an averment of the performance of the promise of the plaintiff. Martindall v. Fisher, 1 Wils. 88.

Where the first count of a declaration in assumpsit, stating an agreement between two persons, omitted the mutual promises: on motion in arrest of judgment, held, that the agreement imported a promise. Mountfort v. Horton, 2 N. R. 62.

Where goods consigned to an agent to be sold on commission by a proprietor, who still retains the absolute control over them, have been shipped and despatched, but are not yet arrived, the consignor, pending the voyage, may, in pleading, still describe the sending them as a thing future and executory. Smith v. Brown, 6 Taunt. 340; 2 Marsh. 41.

Where an agreement in writing is to be performed on a certain day, and the parties agree to enlarge the time, a declaration on the day stated in the agreement, though the evidence is of a different day, will support the action. Thresh v. Rake, 1 Esp. 53—Kenyon.

In assumpsit on a special agreement, the plaintiff must aver performance of what is to be done on his part, or shew that he was ready to perform it. Collins v. Gibbs, 2 Burr. 899.

But where the defendant has incapacitated himself from performing his contract, it renders any thing further to be done by the plaintiff unnecessary. Knight v. Crockford, 1 Esp. 190—Eyre. And see Sadler v. Robins, 1 Camp. 253; and Williamson v. Watts, 1 Camp. 552.

Where it is not material to aver a request at all, a request laid in the declaration to pay the debt before it is due, is not bad. Frampton v. Coulson, 1 Wils. 33.

In assumpsit on an agreement, whereby plaintiff agreed to procure a lease to be granted to defendant, and defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff, his solicitor, or agent, on request, the sum of 25*l.* in full for his share or proportion of the costs and expenses of the agreement, and of the lease:—Held, that the declaration was good without an averment that any costs or expenses had been incurred. Twinsend v. Burns, 1 C. & M. 177: S. C. not S. P. 2 C. & J. 468; 1 Dowl. P. C. 562.

In assumpsit for the breach of an agreement in not paying a certain sum in exchange of an old for a new portable threshing machine, the plaintiff averred, that he made the new machine for the defendant, and put it up at T., and took down the old one, and took the same at 20*l.*, according to the provisions of the said agreement:—Held, that these latter words applied to the whole of the sentence; and that the averment was sufficient on general demurrer, although, by the agreement, certain conditions precedent were to be performed by the plaintiff, namely, that the new machine should be capable of threshing a certain quantity of wheat in a day, to be worked by four horses, and to be erected on the spot at T., where the old one stood. Varley v. Manton, 2 M. & Scott, 484.

III. PROCEEDINGS UNDER, 172.

I. WHEN GRANTED.

1. Against Officers of the Court.

Where the process of the court has been abused, and undue means have been used in its execution, an attachment, and not an information, is the proper remedy. Anon. 2 Ld. Ken. 372.

But, where the officer who executes process has behaved improperly, as well as those who resisted him, the court will not in general grant extraordinary process for contempt. Gregory v. Onslow, Loft, 35.

An attachment was granted for arresting the plaintiff while attending arbitrators under a rule of court, on purpose to prejudice his cause. Rex v. Hall, 2 W. Black. 1110.

But altering a sheriff's warrant is no ground for an attachment, unless an ill use be made of it. Hale v. Castleman, 1 W. Black. 2.

The sealer of writs is not guilty of a contempt in refusing to seal a writ on St. Luke's day, being one of the holidays appointed by statute 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 3, to be observed; and the Court of C. P. will not grant an attachment for such refusal. Martin v. Bold, 7 Taunt. 182; 2 Marsh. 487.

2. For contempt of Process.

The court will not grant an attachment where there is a remedy by action, and the matter is doubtful. Hanington v. Jennings, Loft, 188.

In one case, the court refused an attachment in the first instance for not obeying a rule of court, but granted a rule to go before the master, otherwise an attachment nisi. Anon. Loft, 159.

A defendant being served with a copy of a capias tore it in pieces, and threw it at the officer:—Held, not to amount to a contempt of court for which an attachment might be granted. Myers v. Wills, 4 Moore, 147.

So where a person, on being served with process, collared and shook the officer serving it, and ordered him to quit his presence:—Held, that this did not amount to a contempt of court and obstruction of its process, for which an attachment might be granted. Adams v. Hughes, 1 B. & B. 24.

Although an attachment may issue against a peer for refusing to obey the process of the court of K. B.; quære, whether in ecclesiastical affairs, the writ should not be moved against the chancellor, commissary, or official, instead of the bishop. Rex v. St. Asaph (Bishop), 1 Wils. 332.

Service of all processes intended to bring a party into contempt should be personal, if possible; but if it can be made appear to the court of Exchequer that service cannot be effected personally, and that there was probable cause to suspect that the party kept out of the way for the purpose of avoiding such personal service, that court will grant a rule nisi for an attachment; and order that service, by leaving the rule at the dwelling-house, shall be efficient. Weston v. Faulkener, 2 Price, 2.

Where a mandamus had been granted for the election of a mayor, under the 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 2, and a rule made that public notice should be affixed in the market-place, which had been done accordingly, the court granted an attachment for disobedience of the mandamus, against a member of the corporation who was served with a copy of the rule, notwithstanding neither the original mandamus nor the rule was shewn him at the time; for the public notice directed by the act is prima facie sufficient. Rex v. Edyeon, 3 T. R. 352.

But the application for the attachment would be well answered, if the party could shew that he had no notice of the mandamus. Id.

Where a rule had been granted for an information in the nature of a quo warranto against A., to shew by what authority he claimed to be mayor of G., on the relation of some of the corporators, and another rule in that cause for inspecting all the corporation books, papers, &c. directed to the town-clerk; an inspection of such only as related to the election and office of mayor, was held to be a sufficient compliance with the rule, so as to protect the town-clerk from an attachment as for a contempt of the court, it appearing that he had acted bona fide. Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 579.

If, a plaintiff having sued out a fi. fa., the defendant pays the plaintiff's attorney the debt and costs, without the writ being delivered to the sheriff, it is no contempt of the court of C. P. to attach the same money in the hands of the plaintiff's attorney, for a debt due from the plaintiff to the defendant:—But quære, whether the debt is such whereon an attachment can be supported. Gwinness v. Brown, 4 Taunt. 472.

An attachment will not lie for disobedience to a judge's order until it is made a rule of court, though the order has been acquiesced in and acted upon. Baker v. Rye, 1 Dowl. P. C. 689.

An attachment granted in term for non-payment of costs, under a baron's order on the master's allocatur, set aside, the order not having been first made a rule of court. Ex parte Arden, 1 Price's, P. C. 149.

A wife named with her husband in a rule of court, directing costs to be paid to them, is entitled to the advantage of it, if she survives her husband; and an attachment upon the rule issues of right. Tilt v. Bartlett, 1 Ld. Ken. 104.

A party in contempt for filing a bill in Chancery to set aside an award, after entering into a rule of K. B. to abide by it, was discharged without any fine, rather than set a small one for so high an offence. Rex v. Wheeler, 3 Burr. 1256.

On an attachment for rescue, a defendant may be fined without answering to interrogatories. Rex v. Elkins, 2 Burr. 2129; 1 W. Black. 460.

An attachment granted against rescuers, upon a return by the sheriff of rescue from his bailiff. Gobby v. Deices, 10 Bing. 112.

Costs were granted upon an attachment for contempt, to the person who had purged himself of the contempt upon examination. Rex v. Plunket, 3 Burr. 1329.

3. For Non-payment of Money.

An attachment for non-payment of costs is in the nature of an execution, so much so that the parties are not bailable. Anon. Lofft, 305: S. P. Rex v. Stokes, Cowp. 137.

An attachment for non-payment of money is in the nature of mesne process. Lewis v. Morland, 2 B. & A. 56: S. P. Rex v. Curwen, 1 Moore, 494.

In the court of Exchequer, an order nisi for costs for not proceeding to trial is served on the clerk in court, which brings the parties into contempt; and upon service of the allocatur, and demand and refusal of costs, an attachment is granted. Merritt v. Meek, 3 Anst. 656.

An order of the court of Exchequer, that a defendant pay a certain sum of money, being shewn to the defendant at the time of making a personal demand of it, a copy of such order not having been personally served on the defendant himself, although a copy had been previously served on his attorney, is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to an attachment. Brodenik v. Teed, 1 Price, 401.

If a defendant in a penal action obtain a rule to stay proceedings on paying a sum agreed upon between him and the plaintiff, it is an undertaking by him to pay that sum, and for the non-payment of it the court will grant an attachment. King v. Clifton, 5 T. R. 257.

Where a defendant in a penal action obtains a rule to stay proceedings on payment of part of the penalties, the court of C. P. will grant an attachment against him for non-payment. Hart v. Draper, 2 Marsh. 358; 7 Taunt. 43.

Though the plaintiff discontinue on the common rule on payment of costs, he is not liable to an attachment for non-payment. Stokes v. Woodeson, 7 T. R. 6.

If a party obtain a rule for setting aside judgment and execution, on condition of his paying costs, the court will not issue an attachment in the first instance for not paying those costs. — v. Mynde, 1 Chit. 158.

The order made on motion to pay money into court, that the defendant shall pay the costs, is imperative in that respect in the court of Exchequer; and if not paid when taxed, the plaintiff may have an attachment against the defendant for non-payment; which process is final, and in the nature of an execution, and therefore not bailable: the plaintiff may, however, proceed to try the cause if the costs are not paid, as is his only course in the court of King's Bench. Plummer v. Savage, 6 Price, 126.

An attachment granted on the master's allocatur for costs due from the plaintiff to his attorney, although the attorney be disqualified, the plaintiff having received the whole of the debt and costs from the defendant. Dimond v. Clarke, 1 Chit. 222.

By the master's allocatur, an attorney was ordered on the 12th May to pay over to his client a sum of 15*l.*; on the 20th June the attorney became bankrupt and afterwards obtained his certificate:—Held, that it was then too late to move for an attachment for not paying the money pursuant to the master's allocatur. Baron v. Martell, 9 D. & R. 390.

An alias attachment lies for non-payment of money pursuant to a rule of court, founded on an award, where defendant has been suffered to go at large upon the original attachment, upon terms which he has failed to comply with. Good v. Wilks, 6 M. & S. 413; 2 Tidd's Prac. 1070.

4. For Non-performance of Awards.

Nature of the Proceeding.—All attachments for non-performance of awards are only in the nature of civil executions, though formerly considered of a criminal nature. Rex v. Myers, 1 T. R. 266. And see Rex v. Curwen, 1 Moore, 494.

An attachment may issue if the motion to set aside the award be not made before the last day of the next term after the award is published. Freame v. Pinneger, Cowp. 23.

An attachment goes of course for non-performance of an award; and in order to get rid of it, the award must be set aside. Anon. Lofft, 451: S. P. Anon. Lofft, 321.

The court of C. P. will not infer personal service of an award to bring a party into contempt. Brander v. Penlease, 5 Taunt. 813.

The court of C. P. will not grant an attachment for non-performance of an award pending an action brought on the award; nor allow the plaintiff to waive the action in order to apply for the attachment. Badley v. Loveday, 1 B. & P. 31.

By and against whom granted.—The court will not grant an attachment against a peer for not paying a sum of money awarded, though the defendant consent on condition that the attachment shall lie in the office for a certain time. Walker v. Grosvenor (Earl), 7 T. R. 171.

Nor against a member of parliament. Cutmur v. Knatchbull (Bart.), 7 T. R. 448.

An attachment was issued against a party for non-performance of an award, which had been made a rule of the court of C. P.; although such party resided out of the jurisdiction of that court, as it was in the nature of a civil process; and the court were not bound to inquire whether it could be served with effect or not. Hopcraft v. Fernor, 8 Moore, 424; 1 Bing. 378.

An executor may have, without scire facias, or other process of revivor, an attachment for non-performance of an award made in favour of his testator in a cause referred and decided in his lifetime, though the suit abated by his decease. Rogers v. Stanton, 7 Taunt. 575.

So, if a stranger to the cause become, by rule of court, party to a reference made in the cause before any jury is sworn, and if, after the award made, but before judgment, one of the parties to the cause die, though the cause abate, the rule of court is not vacated as to the stranger, but an attachment shall go thereon for non-performance of the award. Id.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-payment of costs payable under an award, at the instance of the personal representative of a deceased party, to which party they were to have been paid. Rex v. Maffey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 538.

Where a submission to arbitration between A. and B., the parties on the record, had been made a rule of court, and the award not having been made in time, the dispute had been referred to a second arbitrator, by B. and C., who were the real parties in the suit:—Held, that no attachment could issue against B. for not obeying the award made by the second arbitrator, because the reference should have been made by the parties on the record; and even if it had, there should have been another rule to make the second submission a rule of court. Owen v. Hurd, 2 T. R. 643.

And as the court had no jurisdiction in this case they could not go into the merits, though B. consented to waive the objection. Id.

For what granted.—The court refused to grant an attachment where there appeared to be objections to the award which were pleadable to any actions brought upon it, though they were not such as to make them set it aside on motion. In re Cargey, 2 D. & R. 222; S. C. (in error), 2 Bing. 199; 9 Moore, 38, and M'Clel. 367; 13 Price, 639. And see Cargey v. Aitcheson, 3 D. & R. 433; 2 B. & C. 176.

The refusal by the court to enforce an award by attachment, does not decide on the validity of the award, considered as the subject of an action. Jackson v. Clarke, M'Clel. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

The court granted an attachment for non-performance of an award, and would not drive the plaintiff to his action on the submission bond, on an affidavit that the arbitrators, after having appointed one umpire who refused to act, appointed another, who accepted the authority; but he being objected to by the defendant, the arbitrators each proposed another, but could not agree on the person to be substituted, and another was not substituted, though the respective attorneys agreed on a third person; in consequence of which the umpire objected to was called on to proceed, and made his award within time. Oliver v. Collings, 11 East, 367.

An attachment ordered to issue for non-performance, where it appeared that the excuses made were frivolous and vexatious. Lodge v. Porthouse, Loft, 388.

Where one only of two defendants who attended an arbitrator under a reference by order of Nisi Prius, made the order a rule of court, and demanded costs from the plaintiff under a taxation to him only:—Held, that an attachment would not lie for the non-payment of the costs to the one defendant only. Semble, that the master had not power to tax the costs separately to the several defendants. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528.

If an arbitrator award, among other things, that each party shall pay a moiety of the costs of the arbitration, and of making the submission a rule of court; and one party, in order to get the award out of the hands of the arbitrator, pay the whole, he may have an attachment against the other party, if he refuse to pay his moiety. Hicks v. Richardson, 1 B. & P. 93.

So, where the arbitrator awarded a sum together with the costs of the award, the party to whom the money was awarded was allowed, upon taking out the award, and paying the whole costs, to have an attachment against the defendant for the sum awarded and his share of the costs. Stokes v. Lewis, 2 Smith, 12.

The court will grant an attachment for the non-payment on demand of money awarded, after an action on the award commenced and discontinued, where the action was not pending at the time of demand. Higgins v. Willes, 3 M. & R. 382.

Previous Demand.—An attachment for not paying a sum of money pursuant to an award cannot issue before a personal demand has been made; even though the time and place for payment of the money be specified in the award. Brandon v. Brandon, 1 B. & P. 394.

But personal knowledge of an award and rule of court makes the party liable to an attachment for not performing the award, although he has not been personally served with such award and rule. In re Bower, 1 B. & C. 264.

If the party in whose favour an award is made, demand more than is due to him, he cannot have an attachment for the non-payment on that occasion of the sum which is due. Strutt v. Rogers, 7 Taunt. 213; 2 Marsh. 524.

Where an arbitrator awarded that A. should fulfil an agreement for the purchase of land of B., and should pay the purchase money, on B. conveying the land with a good title, the court of C. P. refused to grant an attachment against A. for non-performance, on an affidavit that B. had required A. to pay the money, assuring him of his readiness to convey with a good title, without further stating that B. had tendered a conveyance executed. Standly v. Hemington, 2 Marsh. 276; 6 Taunt. 561.

On demanding the execution of a deed, directed by an arbitrator, where such demand is made by a third person, it is not necessary that such person should be empowered by deed or power of attorney, in order to enable the party to have an attachment, though it may be so where the demand is of money directed to be paid to the party. Kenyon v. Grayson, 2 Smith, 61.

Though a party is at one time in contempt for not paying costs which have been duly demanded; yet, if, before an attachment be moved for, the sum due becomes reduced in amount, a fresh demand of the reduced sum must be made to ground a motion for an attachment. Spivy v. Webster, 1 Dowl. P. C. 696.

The court will not grant an attachment for the non-performance of an award, the performance of which is demanded by a third person acting under a power of attorney, unless the subscribing witness makes an affidavit of its execution, and a copy of the power of attorney is left with the party upon whom the demand is made. Laugher v. Laugher, 1 Dowl. P. C. 284; 1 C. & J. 398; 1 Tyr. 352.

An attachment for contempt in not paying money pursuant to the prothonotary's allocatur on demand made by a third person, who acted under a power of attorney, may be supported on an affidavit stating that he shewed the original rule and allocatur to the party charged, at the time of the demand; and it seems that it was not necessary to shew him the power of attorney. Sed quære. Bass v. Maitland, 8 Moore, 44.

Held, in K. B. that the application could not be supported on an affidavit of demand of the money by a clerk, without shewing a power of attorney. Hartley v. Barlow, 1 Chit. 229.

In the court of Exchequer, affidavits whereon to ground a rule nisi for an attachment against a defendant for non-payment of money and costs pursuant to an award, and the master's allocatur, where the demand has been made by a third person, under a power of attorney, should state, that the original power was shewn to the defendant at the time the demand was made. Jackson v. Clarke, 13 Price, 208; M'Clel. 72.

5. For other Things.

An attachment lies in C. P. to compel a plaintiff to produce deeds. Bateman v. Phillips, 4 Taunt. 157.

Where an order was made on the defendant to produce indentures of apprenticeship; and it appeared by affidavit that he never had them in his possession, and that, although he had made diligent search for them, he had been unable to find any trace of them:—Held, that he was not liable to an attachment for their non-production. Cooke v. Tanswell, 2 Moore, 513; 8 Taunt. 131.

The court of Exchequer will not on motion discharge a defendant from custody under an attachment for contempt in not producing deeds, papers, &c. before the master, on an affidavit that the defendant has not, nor ever had, any such in his possession or within his power. Hurd v. Partington, 12 Price, 689.

Such an application refused with costs. Id.

The course is to have an affidavit of the fact in the master's office, when, on obtaining his certificate, the defendant will be discharged, as a matter of course. Id.

It was made part of the terms of a subsequent successful application for the defendant's discharge, that he should pay the costs of that application, and of the previous irregular motion. Id.

Where a defendant is served with an order of court, forthwith to re-instate premises belonging to the plaintiff, an attachment cannot issue against him for disobedience of such order, unless a personal demand of performance is made on the party at the time of the service. Doddington v. Hudson, 8 Moore, 510; 1 Bing. 410.

But an attachment was afterwards issued against such defendant for not commencing such re-instatement, in compliance with the order, within four days after it was served, although it would have taken him a much longer time to re-instate the premises. Id.

An attachment was granted against one for threatening a prosecution with danger of being hanged, but refused against the defendant who indicted the prosecutor for perjury in his affidavit, on which an information was granted. Rex v. Carroll, 1 Wils. 75.

II. PRACTICE ON.

1. Rule and Writ.

When Rule absolute.—An attachment is absolute in the first instance, on a return by the sheriff; but on affidavits, the party must have an opportunity of answering. Adamson v. Gibson, 1 Tidd's Prac. 169.

No rule for an attachment to be absolute in the first instance, except for non-payment of costs upon the prothonotary's allocatur. Cheant v. Smart, 1 B. & P. 477; S. P. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 486.

But even in that case the rule is only a rule nisi, when the allocatur is founded on an award. Thompson v. Billingsby, 2 Chit. 57; S. P. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 80.

On motion for an attachment for not paying money under a previous order of the court of Exchequer, on a party who has been called on by the former rule, to shew cause why that money, and the costs of such application, should not be paid, and against which order no cause has been shewn: the rule for the attachment will be granted absolutely in the first instance. King v. Price, 1 Price, 341.

An attachment is absolute in the first instance for non-delivery of possession pursuant to a rule of court. Davies d. Povey v. Doe, 2 W. Black, 892.

The rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs pursuant to the master's allocatur is absolute in the first instance, although four years have elapsed since the taxation. Rex v. C. D. 1 Chit. 723.

The rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs, between attorney and client, pursuant to the master's allocatur, is nisi in the first instance. Bray v. Yates, 1 Dowl. P. C. 459.

The rule for an attachment, for not accounting to the Legacy Office, is a rule nisi, which makes itself absolute by a certain day, unless in the mean time cause be shewn. In re Vivian, 1 C. & J. 409.

In some cases, the rule to shew cause why an attachment should not be granted, will be discharged with costs. Jackson v. Clarke, McClell. & Y. 200; 13 Price, 28.

Writ.]—An attachment must be directed to elisors, when against the coroners for not attaching the sheriff. Andrews v. Sharp, 2 W. Black. 911; S. P. Rex v. Peckham, 2 W. Black. 1218.

An attachment is not in the nature of an original, and therefore does not require fifteen days between the teste and return. Anon. Lofft, 273.

An attachment will be irregular if it be for more than the precise sum allowed, however small the difference. Daniel v. Bishop, McClell. 61; 13 Price, 129.

When to be moved for.]—Whenever an attachment is absolute in the first instance, it may be moved for on last day of term. Anon. Lofft, 301.

But not where there is only a rule nisi. Anon. 3 Smith, 118.

An attachment cannot be moved for on the last day of term, except for non-payment of costs, or against a sheriff for not returning a writ. Anon. 1 Burr. 651.

An attachment for non-payment of costs may be moved for on the last day of term. Rex v. York, 5 Burr. 2686.

The ten days after demand of costs under a recognizance, taken by virtue of stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 2 & 3, must elapse, before an attachment can be granted against the party refusing to pay them. Rex v. Ireland, 3 T. R. 512.

2. Affidavits.

How intitled.]—Affidavits for attachments in civil suits are proceedings on the civil side of the court until the attachments issue, and are to be intitled with the names of the parties; as soon as the attachments issue, the proceedings are on the crown side, and from that time the king is to be named as the prosecutor. Wood v. Webb, 3 T. R. 253.

And affidavits to set aside attachments which have been granted (though not issued), must be intitled in the name of the king, &c. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 T. R. 439, 527.

Which title is sufficient, without naming the cause, although it is convenient to do so. Rex

v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 5 B. & C. 389; 8 D. & R. 149.

So, the affidavits made in answer to a rule nisi for an attachment, must be intitled on the civil side of the court, in the cause out of which the motion arises; but after the rule is granted, the affidavits must be intitled on the crown side. Whitehead v. Firth, 12 East, 165.

Affidavits in support of a rule for an attachment against the sheriff for not bringing in the body, must be intitled with the names of all the parties to the suit; and though the affidavits correspond with the rule for the attachment; yet, if all the parties be not inserted in the affidavits, the court will set aside the attachment. Etherington v. Kemp, 1 Chit. 727, n.

Where a submission to an award is made a rule of court under the statute, there being no action, the affidavits on which to apply for an attachment for disobeying the award need not be intitled in any cause, but the affidavits in answer must. Bevan v. Bevan, 3 T. R. 601.

A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to an award was intitled "in the matter of A. and B," but the affidavit of service was intitled, "between A. B. plaintiff and C. D. defendant:"—Held irregular, as the affidavit should have been intitled the same as the rule. In re Houghton, 2 M. & P. 452.

Contents of Affidavits generally.]—An affidavit to support a rule for an attachment for a contempt, must state that the defendant was served personally with a copy of the rule, and that the original was shewn to him at the same time. Rex v. Smithies, 3 T. R. 351; S. P. 7 D. & R. 612; Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., Ex., H. T., 2 W. 4.

On a motion for an attachment for filing a bill in equity contrary to an order of reference, an affidavit that notice of the motion to make the order a rule of court had been served on the party's servant, &c., is not sufficient. Hilton v. Hopwood, 1 Marsh. 66.

In cases of Awards.]—An affidavit, upon which a rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs pursuant to an award made under a rule of court and the master's allocatur is obtained, must state the due execution of the award, the service of a copy of the award, and of the rule and allocatur on the defendant, the due execution of the letter of attorney, a demand of the costs, and refusal to pay. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 80.

The court refused an attachment for non-performance of an award, where the award was made out of the time originally allowed, but authority had been reserved to the arbitrator to enlarge the time, and though the award stated upon the face of it that the arbitrator had enlarged the time; because there was no affidavit of that fact, and it did not appear to them judicially, that the arbitrator had any authority to make the award, without which the court had no jurisdiction. Moule v. Stawell, 15 East, 99, n.

Where an award appears to have been made out of the time originally given to the arbitrator by the rule of court, but which rule reserved to him the power of enlarging the time, it is not enough, for obtaining an attachment for non-performance of the award, that the arbitrator states in his award that he had enlarged the time, without verifying the fact by affidavit; and it should also appear that the defendant had notice of such enlargement of the time within which the award was made, when served with the rule for the attachment. Davis v. Vass, 15 East, 97.

The arbitrator had power to enlarge the time for making his award by indorsement on the order of reference; that order, together with two indorsements for enlarging the time, was made a rule of court:—Held, on moving for an attachment for not performing the award, it was not necessary to produce an affidavit that the indorsements were duly made. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528; S. C. nom. Dickins v. Smith, 8 D. & R. 285.

Where a cause is referred by a judge's order, made by consent of the parties, and the time for making the award is afterwards enlarged by a judge's order; on moving for an attachment for not performing the award, it must be shewn that the order enlarging the time was made by consent. Halden v. Glasscock, 5 B. & C. 390; 8 D. & R. 151.

Where arbitrators have power to enlarge the time for making their award, and have enlarged it, and made their award in the additional time, in order to bring the defendant into contempt for non-performance of the award, there must be an affidavit that the time has been enlarged, that the award was made within the enlarged time, and that the defendant has been personally served with notice of those facts. Wohlenberg v. Lageman, 6 Taunt. 254; 1 Marsh. 579.

Seemingly, that the affidavit for an attachment for non-performance of an award, must, contrary to the usual practice, always state the time of execution of the award. Id.

It is necessary that the affidavit of the deponent on a certain day saw the arbitrators execute it, in order to shew that it was executed before the arbitrators were functi officio. It is not sufficient to state merely that he saw them execute an award bearing date on such a day. Harvey v. Harvey, Tidd's Prac. Forms, 13.

3. Service of Rule.

The rule nisi for an attachment must be personally served. Denman v. Golding, 2 Tidd's Prac. 981.

Even when against an attorney. In re — (Gent.), 1 D. & R. 529.

And the affidavit must shew it. Anon. 2 Chit. 66.

The court refused to order that service at the dwelling-house should be deemed good service of a rule for an attachment, upon an affidavit that the defendants were "shy and difficult to be met with," and that the deponent had tried all the means in his power, for two months, before he could serve the defendant personally with the award, for the non-performance of which the attachment was sought to be enforced. Garland v. Goulden, 2 Y. & J. 89.

Serving an order of the court of Exchequer for an attachment on the servant of the party, was held insufficient. Anon. 2 Price, 4.

The court will not grant a rule, that service of an attachment on the defendant's attorney shall be sufficient, though it be sworn that repeated attempts have been made to serve him personally with a copy of the award, but he was not to be found, and although it is suggested that the defendant keeps out of the way to avoid being served. Read v. Fore, 1 Chit. 170.

The court will not grant a rule to dispense with the personal service of the master's allocatur for costs, with a view to an attachment, on an affidavit that the tenant keeps out of the way to avoid being served. Anon. 1 Chit. 503.

Before an attachment will be granted for non-payment of costs, a copy of the rule, with the officer's allocatur thereon, must be personally served on the party liable; and at the same time the original rule should be shewn to him, and a demand of payment made. Pope v. Smith, and Hubbard v. Horton, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1029.

And before he is in contempt for the non-payment, he must have refused payment to the principal, and not to a mere clerk. Hartley v. Barlow, 1 Chit. 229.

An affidavit of the service of the master's allocatur, on the taxation of costs of a prosecution against a parish, in order to ground a motion for an attachment against those on whom it was served, must state that they are the same persons as were defendants in the prosecution. Rex v. Kendal, 1 Chit. 650, n.

An affidavit of the service of a rule with an allocatur of costs, and a demand thereof on or about such a day, is insufficient to obtain an attachment for non-payment of costs. Wadham v. Brett, 2 Wils. 227.

An affidavit to support a rule for an attachment for not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur must shew that, at the time of serving the copy, the original was shewn to the defendant. Reid v. Deer, 7 D. & R. 612.

A rule nisi for an attachment for non-payment of money pursuant to the master's allocatur cannot be served on a Sunday. M'Ilham v. Smith, 8 T. R. 86.

The Court of C. P. will not open the rule for an attachment on the mere affidavit of the party that he has not been served; at least unless he shew some mistake in the service. Hopley v. Granger, 1 N. R. 256.

4. Bail.

An action on the case on the stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, will not lie against a sheriff for refusing to take bail on an attachment out of Chancery; that statute referring only to process in courts of common law. Studd v. Acton, 1 H. Black. 468.

For although a sheriff may, if he chooses, take a bail bond on an attachment out of Chancery, he is not compellable to take bail thereupon. Morris v. Hayward, 6 Taunt. 569; 2 Marsh. 280.

The sheriff may recover on a bail bond so taken. Id.

But such bail bond is not assignable under the statute 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 20. Miller v. Palfreyman, 4 B. & Adol. 146.

The statute 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, does not authorize a sheriff to take a bail bond from a defendant who is in custody under an attachment for non-payment of costs, because such a process is in the nature of an execution. Phelips v. Barrett, 4 Price, 23.

No arrest to be made on attachments for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, unless for a bailable cause of action, and the writ be duly marked and indorsed for bail. Reg. Gen. T. T. 1 Will. 4, Ex., 1 Price's P. C. 31; 1 Tyr. 519.

A defendant arrested, and in the county jail, in custody of the sheriff, on a writ of attachment for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, discharged by order of court, on a rule to shew cause made absolute, (the cause of action being a debt under 20*l.*), on terms of entering a common appearance to the writ of subpoena, and undertaking not to bring any action. The attachment set aside for irregularity, with costs. Worboys v. Adkins, 1 Price's P. C. 44.

It is the duty of the sheriff to execute a writ of attachment, issued for not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum; and he must return the writ as having been executed (in whatever manner), or that the party is not found in his bailiwick. Masters v. Cooper, 1 Price's P. C. 8.

Where a defendant has been held to bail upon an attachment for contempt, in not appearing to a subpoena ad respondendum, the Court of Exchequer will not grant a messenger to bring up the body, if bail have been given to the sheriff; because the plaintiff has a remedy on the bail bond, (although the penalty (40*l.*) be, in almost all instances, very inadequate to the occasion,) if the condition should be broken. Birdwood v. Hart, 6 Price, 32.

Two days' notice of bail on an attachment is not required, nor any justification of such bail. Rex v. Hall, 2 W. Black. 1110.

A defendant may be admitted to bail, and sworn to answer interrogatories upon an attachment for contempt, although a defective notice of bail have been served on the prosecutor. In re ———, 4 D. & R. 393.

5. Interrogatories.

Where attachments have issued in order to compel any person to answer upon interrogatories, the name of the cause shall be inserted in the list of motions to come on peremptorily in the ensuing terms. Reg. Gen. K. B. H. T. 34 Geo. 3, 5 T. R. 547; Id. 723.

Interrogatories filed and exhibited to persons, against whom attachments have been ordered, must be signed by counsel. Reg. Gen. K. B., M. T. 34 Geo. 3, 5 T. R. 474.

A defendant under attachment must answer interrogatories; he cannot come in and confess the contempt before he does so. Rex v. Edwards, 4 Burr. 2105; 1 W. Black. 637.

On an attachment for rescue, the defendant may submit to a fine without answering interrogatories. Rex v. Elkins, 1 W. Black. 640; 2 Burr. 2129.

But where a defendant is brought up, it is the practice of the court to put interrogatories to him, although he do not deny the charge in the affidavits, unless the prosecutor waives putting them. Rex v. Horsley, 5 T. R. 362.

The report of the prothonotary is not conclusive against parties who have given bail to answer interrogatories before him, but they may except to such report on any material point; where, therefore, after the prothonotary had made his report that the parties were in contempt, the interrogatories not having been sufficiently answered, and he was directed to inspect an account-book belonging to one of them, which had been accidentally omitted to be delivered to him in the first instance, and which tended to support the answers given by the parties: the Court of C. P. refused to allow the clerk, who made the entries in such book, to be examined by the prothonotary, on an application made by the prosecutor for that purpose. In re Isaacson, 8 Moore, 214; 1 Bing. 272.

Nor would they allow affidavits to be received, that two of the parties were too poor to take office copies of the interrogatories filed against them. Id.

The report of the master of the crown office, that a defendant and his attorney were in contempt for not obeying an award and filing a bill, is to be taken as a conviction; and on the defendant's being brought up for judgment, the court will not receive affidavits in denial of the contempt, but only in mitigation of punishment. Coulson v. Graham, 2 Chit. 57.

The master's report upon interrogatories of contempt cannot be moved for on the last day of term, without the previous leave of the court, unless upon extraordinary cases, and personal service of notice. Rex v. Wheeler, 1 W. Black. 311.

III. PROCEEDINGS UNDER.

Taking an unreasonable quantity of goods under process of attachment does not make the officer a trespasser ab initio. Moore v. Taylor, 5 Taunt. 70.

On attachment of goods, the officer cannot legally continue in possession of the defendant's house or keep the goods therein for a long and unreasonable time; but must remove them to a place of safe custody; else he is a trespasser ab initio. Read v. Harrison, 2 W. Black. 1218.

ATTAINDER.

A person attainted can be heard as a suitor in a court of justice only for the direct purpose of reversing the attainder, not in prosecution of a civil right. Ex parte Bullock, 14 Ves. jun. 452; S. C. nom. Rex v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 82; 2 Leach, C. C. 966.

A civil action will lie against one attainted of treason. Ramsay v. M'Donald, 1 W. Black. 30; S. C. nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

And quære, whether a commission of bankruptcy cannot issue against a person attainted, as he may be sued in a civil action. Id.

By attainder all the personal property and rights of action in respect of property accruing to the party attainted, either before or after attainder, are vested in the crown without office found; and, therefore, attainder may be well pleaded in bar to an action on a bill of exchange indorsed to the plaintiff after his attainder. Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & A. 258. And see Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138.

By the statutes 4 Geo. 1, c. 11, and 8 Geo. 3, c. 15, the mere transportation of an offender to a place appointed, does not amount to an actual pardon, but he still remains in the situation of an attainted felon, until he has served the period of transportation; and when he returns by the permission of the governor of New South Wales, under the provisions of the 30 Geo. 3, c. 47, he is only to have the same advantage as if his Majesty had signified his intention of pardoning under the sign manual, and is to have his name inserted in the next general pardon under the great seal; and a return under such circumstances is not sufficient to restore him to all his rights and privileges until such pardon be passed under the great seal. Id.

Personal property not belonging to a felon, convicted of simple larceny, and sentenced to transportation, at the time of conviction, but accruing due to him afterwards, before his term of transportation has expired, is forfeited to the crown. Roberts v. Walker, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 752.

A grant of a liberty in a manor of goods and chattels of tenants in such manor attainted of felony, is confined to the goods, &c. of felons, being locally situate within the manor, and does not pass goods, &c. lying out of it. Rex v. Capper, 5 Price, 217.

A solicitor, who has been employed to advise on a title, cannot, on purchasing it himself of his client, set up an objection to it, which he did not think of any importance when advising his principal. Beevor v. Simpson, 1 Tam. 69.

Where a client executes a deed in favour of a solicitor, reserving a life interest and a power of revocation, it is the duty of the solicitor to leave a counterpart of the deed in the hands of the client. Balch v. Symes, 1 Turn. & Russ. 92.

An attorney having received money for his client, and being owed on mortgage from another person the sum of 3000*l.*, wrote to his client that he had that mortgage in his hands, and having received the like amount for the client, he undertook, when thereunto required, to execute a transfer of the same:—Held, that this was not a mere proposal, and although there was no express acceptance, yet, there being no refusal of the security, the client was entitled to all such interest as the attorney had therein. Palmer v. Scott, 1 Tam. 488.

VII. AUTHORITY OF ATTORNIES.

Where the respective attorneys of the plaintiff and defendant signed an agreement to withdraw a record on certain terms, and that the defendant's costs should be taxed by certain persons as between attorney and client:—Held, that the defendant was not bound by such an arrangement on the part of his attorney. Iveson v. Corington, 2 D. & R. 307; 1 B. & C. 160. And see Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & A. 47.

An attorney being employed for a person by his father to defend an action, if such person knew of his retainer, and did not disapprove of it, he is bound by the acts of such attorney, in the same way as if he had himself employed him. Cameron v. Baker, 1 C. & P. 268—Best.

Payment of a debt to the attorney of a plaintiff amounts to payment to the plaintiff himself, and the latter is bound by the receipt of his attorney. Yates v. Freckleton, 2 Dougl. 623.

The authority of an attorney is determined on final judgment being signed. Macbeath v. Cooke, 1 M. & P. 513; S. C. nom. Macbeath v. Ellis, 4 Bing. 578.

VIII. LIABILITY OF ATTORNIES.

1. On their Undertakings.

To appear and put in Bail.—An attorney giving an undertaking to appear, was compelled to perform it, though obtained by fraud. Anon. 1 Chit. 129, (a).

The court granted a rule to shew cause why the defendant's attorney should not enter a common appearance, in consequence of a verbal undertaking to appear. Anon. 2 Chit. 36.

The court of Exchequer will compel an attorney to cause an appearance to be entered for the defendant pursuant to his undertaking. Hudson v. Handley, 1 C. & J. 373, n.

A general undertaking by an attorney to appear to process, does not oblige him to put in bail to bailable process. Anon. 2 Chit. 415.

An undertaking for a bail-bond given to the sheriff by the defendant's attorney, being a mere nullity, as illegal and contrary to stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, an application by defendant to set it aside, and enter a common appearance, was discharged with costs, though defendant was a feme covert. Lewis v. Knight, 8 Bing. 271; 1 M. & Scott, 353; 1 Dowl. P. C. 261.

Where an attorney had given an undertaking to the sheriff to give a bail-bond in due time, and neglected so to do, in consequence of which the plaintiff recovered from the sheriff in an action for an escape; the court refused to proceed summarily against the attorney, and make him pay the debt and costs. Sedgworth v. Spicer, 4 East, 568; 2 Smith, 305. And see Rex v. Southerton, 6 East, 143; Fuller v. Prest, 7 T. R. 109.

A solicitor was ordered to pay all the costs occasioned by his refusing to appear for the defendant at the hearing, pursuant to his undertaking, and the costs of the application. Cook v. Broomhead, 16 Ves. jun. 133.

An attachment does not lie for neglecting to enter an appearance for a defendant in pursuance of an undertaking. Mould v. Roberts, 4 D. & R. 719; S. P. Anon. Lofft, 192.

For Payment of Debt and Costs.—Semble, that the court will enforce a verbal undertaking by an attorney on behalf of a client to pay damages and costs, where the other party has been thereby induced to consent to take a verdict for a certain sum, instead of going to a jury. Kite v. Milman, 2 M. & Scott, 616.

The court cannot permit an attorney to have the benefit of executions issued against a client for damages and costs, which the former has been compelled by a rule to pay in consequence of a personal undertaking. Id.

The respective attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant in a horse cause, which was ready for trial, but had been withdrawn at the assizes, signed the following undertaking or agreement:—"We, the undersigned, attorneys for the above-named plaintiff and the above-named defendant, do hereby personally consent, undertake, and agree, that the record in this cause shall be withdrawn; that the above-named defendant shall take back again the horse in the pleadings in this cause named, and shall pay the sum of 64*l.* 17*s.* to the above-named plaintiff; that the costs of the suit on the part of the defendant shall be taxed between the parties, on the principle between plaintiff and defendant; and that such taxation shall be made and perfected by, &c.:"—Held, that the plaintiff's attorney in the original action was personally liable upon this undertaking to pay to the defendant's attorney the costs when taxed, pursuant to the agreement. Iveson v. Corington, 2 D. & R. 307; 1 B. & C. 160.

So, where the solicitors of the assignees of a bankrupt tenant, on whose lands a distress had been levied by the landlord, gave a written undertaking in the following terms:—"We, as solicitors to the assignees, undertake to pay to the landlord his rent, provided it do not exceed the value of the effects distrained:"—Held, that they were personally liable. Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & A. 47.

An attorney who stays proceedings upon an undertaking to pay costs, is bound to fulfil his engagement, although his client die before bail be put in. Hellings v. Jones, 3 Bing. 70; 10 Moore, 360.

Where an attorney of one court gives his undertaking as an attorney for a debt and costs in an action in another, the court of which he is an attorney will compel him to fulfil his undertaking, though void by the Statute of Frauds. In re Paterson, 1 Dowl. P. C. 468.

So, it seems that the court of Exchequer will compel an attorney to perform an undertaking entered into by him, notwithstanding it is void by the Statute of Frauds, and no action can be brought upon it. Evans v. Duncombe, 1 C. & J. 372; & C. nom. Evans v. Duncan, 1 Tyr. 283.

Where an action was commenced in C. P. and judgment obtained, and an attorney of K. B., but not of C. P., but who was attorney for the defendant, agreed verbally to give his two notes for the debt and costs, in consideration of the plaintiff staying proceedings, but which he failed to do:—Held, that although the undertaking was void by the Statute of Frauds, the court of K. B. might nevertheless exercise a summary jurisdiction over one of its own officers, an attorney of the court, and compel him to perform it. In re Greaves, 1 C. & J. 374, n.

Other Things.]—An attorney who signs an instrument agreeing to give up certain bills, on certain things being done, is personally liable, unless it is specially stated that he enters into the agreement as attorney or agent only. Kendray v. Hodgson, 5 Esp. 228—Ellenborough.

So, if the respective attornies for the prosecutor and defendants, on an indictment against a parish for not repairing a road, enter into an agreement by which the attorney for the prosecutor agreed that the recognizances should be respited, and the attorney on the part of the parish agreed to pay the costs; this agreement is personally binding on the latter. Watson v. Murrel, 1 C. & P. 307—Garrow.

The Court of Chancery will not exercise its summary jurisdiction to compel a vendor's solicitor to perform an undertaking, given by him at the sale, to do certain acts for clearing the title to the estates. Peart v. Bushell, 2 Simon, 38.

Where an attorney, in order to get possession of papers belonging to A., in the hands of A.'s former attorney, who had a lien upon them for the amount of a bill then in dispute, undertook that A. should enter into an unqualified reference not revocable:—Held, that the attorney was liable, pursuant to his undertaking, to procure A.'s signature to an agreement of reference, and to find security for the performance of an award to the satisfaction of the master. Ex parte Hughes, 5 B. & A. 482.

Where the defendant's attorney, on their being sued by the plaintiff, undertook by letter to procure their signature to a cognovit for the payment of the debt and costs, which he failed to do; but the plaintiff afterwards said that he would proceed with the action:—Held, that this was virtually a waiver of the attorney's undertaking, and that he could not be called on by the court to perform it. Miller v. James, 8 Moore, 208.

Mode of enforcing.]—The undertaking of an attorney can only be enforced by attachment where he has given it for his client. Ex parte Watts, 1 Dowl. P. C. 512.

An attorney giving an undertaking for another, in a cause in which he is not concerned as attorney, will not be forced summarily to fulfil it; but the party to whom it is given will be left to his action. Walker v. Arlett, 1 Dowl. P. C. 61.

An attorney who is a party in a cause, giving an undertaking to the sheriff in that cause, is not liable to have that undertaking summarily enforced by the court. Northfield v. Orton, 1 Dowl. P. C. 415.

The court of Exchequer will grant an attachment against an attorney, not of that court, for the non-payment of a sum of money pursuant to his undertaking. Payne v. Johnson, 1 C. & J. 373, n.

2. To Attachment.

An attachment was ordered absolutely in the first instance against an attorney, for non-payment of money to another attorney of the party, for whom the former had been changed pursuant to an order of the court of Exchequer; although in that order, as well as in the order for changing the attorney, he had been called John, whereas his real name was James; but he had attended several summonses taken out as against John, and had consented to some of them without objecting to the misnomer, which that court thought, under the circumstances, cured the mistake. Stevenson v. Power, 9 Price, 384.

Personal service of an attachment against an attorney for not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur, cannot be dispensed with. In re ———, (Gent.) 1 D. & R. 529.

An attachment will not be granted against an attorney for an error of judgment. Harrington v. Jennings, Lofft, 188.

Nor for compromising an action without the consent of his principal. Anon. Lofft, 433.

Nor in C. P. for having brought a writ of error, notwithstanding the defendants had agreed, under a consolidation rule, not to do so, if it appears that it was not done for delay, and that he was led into a mistake. Camden v. Edie, 1 H. Black. 21.

So, where a person, not having been admitted an attorney of C. P., had acted as such by issuing out process; the court refused to grant an attachment against him, but left the party to sue for the penalty given him by the statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 24. Matthews v. Royle, 6 Moore, 70. And see Ex parte Flint, 2 D. & R. 406; 1 B. & C. 254.

But the court, on the motion of the chirographer, granted an attachment against an attorney for omitting to perfect fines, and gave the costs of the application. Gruggen v. White, 4 Taunt. 881. And see Stone v. Stone, 4 Taunt. 601; and In re Lawrence, 2 Moore, 665.

On a motion for not paying over surplus money when a rule has been obtained for taxing an attorney's bill, the court will not grant an attachment against the attorney for not paying the balance due to his client, until the costs have been taxed, though the balance is admitted, and though it is agreed to dispense with taxation. — v. Barton, 2 Chit. 66.

A rule to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against the former attornies of a defendant in a cause, for not delivering their bill of costs to the defendant's new attornies, pursuant to a baron's order, discharged, the bill having been delivered since the rule was served on the parties; and illness having been assigned in the affidavit as the cause of the parties not obeying the order. The rule was discharged without costs. Gripper v. Cole, 11 Price, 593.

Such an order is not of a peremptory nature, nor absolute in the first instance. Id.

3. To summary Jurisdiction.

(a) Why, and in what Cases.

If an attorney of the superior courts do any wrong as an attorney of an inferior court, the former will oblige him to answer the complaint. Evans v. P—, 2 Wils. 282.

An attorney gains credit by means of his office, and is compellable to rectify misconduct done by him not directly within his office as an attorney, as where he was a mere deputy. Parker v. Marshall, Loft, 271.

The court of C. P. granted a rule nisi, calling upon an attorney to answer for an alleged misconduct, in a matter where no suit was depending, but which appeared to have been intrusted to him in the capacity of an attorney. In re Knight, 1 Bing. 91.

Where more than seven years had elapsed after the settlement of transactions between an attorney and his client, the court refused to interfere to have them re-opened, in the absence of any suggestion of fraud or misconduct. Ex parte Shipden, 6 D. & R. 338.

Semble, that, before the uniformity of process act, the summary jurisdiction of the court of Exchequer reached an attorney, who practised there in the name of a side clerk. Evans v. Duncombe, 1 Tyr. 283; S. C. nom. Evans v. Duncombe, 1 C. & J. 372.

If there be reasonable and probable cause for applying to the court against an attorney, although it eventually turn out that there is no actual foundation for imputing misconduct to him, the court will not give him the costs of the application. Doe d. Thwaites v. Roe, 3 D. & R. 226.

Unless there is a cause in court, an application cannot be made at chambers against an attorney. Ex parte Higgs, 1 Dowl. P. C. 495.

(b) Striking off the Roll.

If an attorney be struck off the roll of the court of K. B. for misconduct, the court of C. P. will make a like order on motion, founded on a copy of the original report of the master of K. B. In re Smith, 4 Moore, 319; 1 B. & B. 522.

But in another case, that court refused the application, unless the contents of the affidavits on which the court of K. B. acted were stated to them, and proof was produced that the attorney had been struck off for a misdemeanour. Ex parte Hague, 3 B. & B. 257.

In a recent case, it was held that an attorney might be struck off the roll of C. P. upon reading the rule for striking him off the roll of K. B. merely. Ex parte Yates, 9 Bing. 455; 2 M. & Scott, 618; 1 Dowl. P. C. 724.

In one case an attorney was struck off the roll after conviction for a conspiracy. Anon. 1 Chit. 557.

It has, however, been recently held that a conviction of conspiracy is not of itself a sufficient ground for striking an attorney off the roll. Re —, 1 Dowl. P. C. 174.

An attorney convicted of felony was struck off the roll, though he had been burnt in the hand, and suffered imprisonment pursuant to his sentence five years before, and no misconduct imputed to him since, he being an unfit person to practise as an attorney. Ex parte Brownsall, Cowp. 829.

By 12 Geo. 1, c. 29, s. 4, (made perpetual by 21 Geo. 2, c. 3, and 6 Geo. 2, c. 14), judges have power to transport attornies in practice after having been convicted of perjury or forgery.

An attorney was struck off the roll for signing a fictitious name to a demurrer, as and for the signature of a barrister. Smith v. Matham, 4 D. & R. 738.

A solicitor, falsely representing that an injunction was granted, was struck off the roll. Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves. & B. 352.

The court of C. P. refused to strike an attorney off the roll on the ground that he had not served a regular clerkship, and had misconducted himself previously to his admission, where there was no charge of misconduct subsequently to such admission. In re Page, 7 Moore, 572; 1 Bing. 160.

A motion to strike an attorney off the roll on the ground of misconduct, and the want of regular service in his clerkship, comes too late when the party has been three years and a half admitted. In re —, 2 B. & Adol. 766.

Quære, whether an attorney, who keeps out of the way to avoid service of the master's allocatur, is eligible to remain any longer on the roll? In re — (Gent.), 1 D. & R. 529.

An attorney cannot be struck off the roll on his own motion, though he has never practised, without an affidavit that no proceedings are pending against him for misconduct. Anon. 1 Chit. 557.

So, the court of Chancery will not strike a solicitor off the roll at his own request, without an affidavit that there is no other reason for the application. Ex parte Owen, 6 Ves. jun. 11: S. P. Ex parte Foley, 8 Ves. jun. 33.

(c) As to Clerks.

The court of K. B. has a summary jurisdiction over matters in difference between attornies and their clerks; and, therefore, where a clerk misconducted himself, and left the service of the attorney, to whom he was articled, at the end of a year and a half, and the latter refused to take him back, in consequence of his previous misconduct, the court referred it to the master, who decided that a portion of the premium should be returned; and the decision was affirmed by the court, though the point in question had been decided otherwise in a suit in the Exchequer. Ex parte Fisher, 1 Chit. 694.

So the court ordered an attorney, who had refused to take back an apprentice who had run away from his service, on the ground of misconduct, and with whom a premium had been given, to return to the parents of such apprentice a part of such premium. Ex parte Pranker, 3 B. & A. 257.

A party was articled as a clerk to one of two attornies in partnership, and paid a premium, and acted as clerk to the two partners for two months, when the attorney to whom he had been articled died: the court ordered the surviving partner to refund a portion of the premium, although at the time of the payment of such premium his partner was indebted to him, and the premium had been set off in account between them. Ex parte Bayley, 9 B. & C. 691; 4 M. & R. 603.

(d) Allowing others to use their Names.

By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, attornies and solicitors permitting others to practise in their names are to be disabled from practice.

By 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11, it is enacted, "that if any sworn attorney or solicitor shall suffer his name to be used by an unqualified person, to enable him to practise as an attorney or solicitor, and complaint shall be made thereof in a summary way, and proof made thereof upon oath to the satisfaction of the court, such attorney or solicitor shall be struck off the roll;" and by the same section it is enacted, "that in that case, and upon such complaint, and proof made as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the court to commit such unqualified person, so acting or practising as aforesaid, to the prison of the said court for any time not exceeding one year."

The court struck two attornies off the roll for knowingly permitting an unqualified person to practise as an attorney in their names, for his own profit, contrary to the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, and sentenced such unqualified person to be imprisoned for three months in the prison of the court: and the latter being previously a prisoner for debt, was ordered to be brought up without a day rule, on a suggestion that he was unable to pay the expenses of such rule. In re Clark, 3 D. & R. 260.

Where an attorney of C. P. was found by the prothonotary to be in contempt, for allowing another person to practise in his name, who had not been admitted an attorney, the court ordered the former to be struck off the roll, and the latter to be committed to the Fleet prison for three months. In re Isaacson, 8 Moore, 322.

An attorney who forms a partnership with an unqualified person is within the provisions of the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11. Tench v. Roberts, 6 Madd. 145.

An attorney engaged a certificated conveyancer to conduct his business, and agreed to allow him a moiety of the profit instead of a salary. The names of both were painted on the office door, and bills for business were made out and delivered in their joint names:—Held, that this was a case within the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11, inasmuch as the attorney had allowed his name to be used, for and on account of an unqualified person: the court ordered the attorney to be struck off the roll, and the conveyancer to be committed to prison for a month. In re Jackson, 1 B. & C. 270; and see Grojan v. Wade, 2 Stark. 443.

The court refused to strike an attorney off the roll on an affidavit which stated, that a person, who had lately been his clerk, and who lived in a town eight miles distant from the residence of the attorney, and carried on business at an office, over the door of which was written the attorney's name, but that he only attended on market days, and then transacted all his business at an inn, on the ground that it should have been shewn that such person either participated in the profits, or carried on business on his own account. In re Garbutt, 9 Moore, 157; 2 Bing. 74.

An attorney having died, and bequeathed all his property to his widow; his eldest son, for the mixed consideration of the good-will of the business, the advancement of money for carrying it on, and family affection, enters into an agreement with his mother to continue the business, and to account to her for a moiety of the profits during the minority of his younger brothers and sisters: this arrangement is not contrary to the policy of the stat. 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11. Candler v. Candler, 6 Madd. 141.

Where a bailiff had written to an attorney for writs, which the latter sent him without knowing any thing of the parties or circumstances; but the bailiff never represented himself, nor had been considered as an attorney, nor looked for any profit upon the law proceedings:—Held, that this was not a case within the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11; but that it was a most improper practice, which the court, by virtue of its general jurisdiction over attornies, would punish severely. Ex parte Watton, 5 B. & A. 824.

A person brought within the latter branch of the section, upon an affidavit of his offence, is not entitled to have the witnesses in support of the charge examined viva voce. After the matter had been referred in such a case by consent of counsel to the master of the Crown Office, who reported the party to be in contempt, the court allowed the latter to bring the whole of the case under their own consideration, when brought up to be committed. In re Jacques, 2 D. & R. 64.

(e) Delivery up of Documents.

[For the Production of Documents for purposes of Evidence, see EVIDENCE.]

Generally.—Where a solicitor has in his possession deeds and papers belonging to his client which he refuses to part with, the court of Chancery has jurisdiction to order the solicitor to deliver up the deeds and papers, and also his bill of costs, the party offering to pay what the master shall find to be due to him; though there is no cause pending, and though no part of the costs has been incurred in respect to any action or suit in law or equity. In re Murray, 1 Russ. 519.

A court of common law will not order an attorney to deliver up deeds which he swears were delivered to him for a special purpose, which he has fulfilled. Smith v. Cotterell, 4 Dougl. 205.

If it appear that a third person be interested in the deeds, the court will take a security from the person to whom they are delivered, to produce them on demand, for the inspection of such third person. Hughes v. Mayre, 3 T. R. 275.

The court will not order the personal representative of a deceased solicitor to deliver the papers in the cause to another solicitor, without payment or security for payment of the solicitor's bill. Redfearn v. Sowerby, 1 Swans. 84.

It seems that the summary jurisdiction of the court extends to the representatives of solicitors. Id.

Attorney holds as Party or Trustee.—The court will not compel an attorney to deliver up a deed where he holds it as a party or trustee. Pearson v. Sutton, 5 Taunt. 364.

Where an attorney has drawn his own marriage settlement, under which he takes no interest, but is mentioned in it, and it is deposited with him for safety, the court will not compel him to give it up at the instance of a trustee under it. Ex parte Moxon, 1 Dowl. P. C. 7.

In Attorney's Hands for Professional Purposes.—An attorney is not entitled to retain drafts and copies of original deeds which his client has paid for; and if he will not deliver them up, the court will compel him to do so. Ex parte Horsfall, 7 B. & C. 528; 1 M. & R. 306.

So they will not compel an attorney to deliver up, on payment of his demand, a lease put into his hands for the purpose of making an assignment of it; there being no cause in court, nor any criminal conduct imputed to him in respect of it. In re Lowe, 8 East, 237.

Where the deeds are delivered to an attorney, by two jointly, for the purpose of carrying on a suit in the Exchequer, the court of C. P., upon motion by one alone, will not order such deeds to be delivered up, on payment of the debt and costs by him, as they could not bring the other before them, nor bind his rights in his absence. Duncan v. Richmond, 1 Moore, 99; 7 Taunt. 391.

The court will not, on a summary application, compel an attorney to deliver up, on payment of what is due to him, deeds which have been intrusted to him for the purpose of raising money upon them. In re Millard, 1 Dowl. P. C. 140.

The court, after refusing the first application, granted a rule nisi against an attorney, why he should not deliver up two bills, delivered to him to get discounted, or pay over the amount, although he was not retained at the time in any legal proceeding. Ex parte Hall, 7 Moore, 437.

Semble, that an attorney, who has drawn an agreement between two parties, will be ordered, upon motion to the court, to give up to either of them a copy thereof, to the best of his power, where the same shall be requisite, upon payment of the costs thereof. Clarke v. Terret, 1 Smith, 399.

Where Attorney a Steward.—The court, under special circumstances, will entertain a summary jurisdiction over an attorney, by obliging him to deliver up deeds, &c. on satisfaction of his lien, though they came into his hands as steward of a court, and receiver of rents. Hughes v. Mayre, 3 T. R. 275; S. P. Marshall's case, 2 W. Black. 912; and — v. Russell, 1 Ld. Ken. 129.

So also in C. P., which court will, it seems, make him pay over rents received. Ex parte C. C. Coll, 6 Taunt. 105.

Particularly at the instance of the lord of the manor. Ex parte Grubb, 5 Taunt. 206.

But the court of K. B. refused to proceed summarily against a steward, who was an attorney, to compel him to account before the Master for receipts and payments in respect of a mortgaged estate, and to pay the balance to his employer, and to deliver up, upon oath, all deeds, writings, &c. relative to the estate; this being the proper subject of a bill in equity, and not a case for a mandamus to compel a steward of a manor to deliver up court-rolls, &c., in lieu of which, this summary mode of proceeding has been adopted, where the steward of the manor is an attorney. Cocks v. Harman, 6 East, 404; 2 Smith, 409.

A steward may be examined as a witness, to give evidence of the existence and contents of a particular document, if due notice have been given to produce it specifically. Falmouth (Earl) v. Moss, 11 Price, 455.

In case of Bankruptcy.—If one of two attorneys, partners, is bankrupt, the court will not, on motion, order the assignees to deliver the papers of the clients to the solvent partner, without the client's consent. Davidson v. Napier, 1 Sim. 297.

The court has jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order the papers deposited by the bankrupt with his attorney, in actions commenced before the bankruptcy, to be delivered up to the assignees, provided they are necessary to the administration of the estate. But where assignees wanted such papers for the purpose of instituting criminal proceedings against the bankrupt, the court refused to make the order, and dismissed the petition with costs. Ex parte Innes, Buck, 327.

An attorney who receives a deed from his client, and is compelled to produce it by commissioners of bankrupt, and afterwards receives it back from them, undertaking to produce it again if required, may nevertheless refuse to produce it in an action brought by the assignee of the bankrupt, under whose commission he was compelled to produce it. Nixon v. Mayo, 1 M. & Rob. 76—Tindal.

(f) Payment of Money.

A summary application may be supported against an attorney, to compel him to pay monies received by him, though he was not employed in any suit: and an agent may make the application, though he has no authority to receive; and the court will compel the payment into court for the benefit of the parties interested. De Wolfe v. —, 2 Chit. 68.

The plaintiff, having sued out a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum against the defendant, sent it to the sheriff to be executed: the under-sheriff sent the writ to the defendant's attorney, who neglected to levy or act upon it:—Held, that the attorney could not be called on by a summary application to pay the plaintiff the amount of the debt, as his remedy in the first instance was against the under-sheriff, for having delivered the writ to the defendant's attorney, instead of his own officer. Harding v. Francis, 5 M. & P. 627.

Where an attorney was employed by J. S. to collect and get in effects due to him as administrator of another person, the court compelled such attorney to render an account to the executors of J. S. of monies received by him, although he had never been employed by J. S. or his executors to conduct any proceedings at law, or in equity, on his or their behalf. In re Aitkin, 4 B. & A. 47.

Where bills have been deposited with an attorney, and he has advanced money on them, and he refuses to account, the court will not compel him summarily to pay over the alleged balance. Ex parte Schwalbanker, 1 Dowl. P. C. 182.

The court will not grant an application requiring an attorney to pay over the interest of a sum of money which has come improperly into his hands. Fenn v. Wild, 1 Dowl. P. C. 498.

The court will not compel an attorney to pay a sum of money he has received in his character of attorney, he having, after the receipt of the money, become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate. Ex parte Culliford, 8 B. & C. 220: S. P. Baron v. Martell, 9 D. & R. 390; Rex v. Edwards, 9 B. & C. 652.

Where an attorney employed by both vendor and purchaser receives the purchase-money and omits to pay it over, and afterwards becomes a bankrupt, and obtains his certificate, the court will not make a rule compelling him to pay the amount, unless fraud be shewn: otherwise, if there be fraud. In re Bonner, 1 Nev. & M. 555.

(g) Payment of Costs.

The court will compel an attorney to pay the costs occasioned by his vexatious conduct in giving repeated notices of justifying bail at chambers in vacation. Therefore, where a defendant had been removed by habeas corpus from Lincoln Castle to the King's Bench prison, and the plaintiff had been put to the expense of inquiring after six sets of bail, as to one of whom a false description had been given; the court ordered the defendant's attorney to pay the costs incurred by the plaintiff, although it was sworn that such attorney had no personal knowledge of the misdescription and insufficiency of the bail. Blundell v. Blundell, 1 D. & R. 142; 5 B. & A. 533.

If an attorney deliver a particular of demand, containing only the debtor side of the account, he may be made to pay the costs subsequently incurred in the action. Adlington v. Appleton, 2 Camp. 410—Ellenborough.

Where an attorney brought an action for his bill of costs, and arrested the defendant for a larger sum than was afterwards found to be due upon taxation, without having any reasonable or probable cause for so doing:—Held, that the court, in the exercise of its jurisdiction over its officers, would compel an attorney to pay costs under such circumstances. Robinson v. Elsam, 5 B. & A. 661. And see Thwaites v. Piper, 4 D. & R. 194.

The attorney for the plaintiff having put in bail for the defendant, and having acted on both sides, deluding the parties, and preventing an interview, the court on motion set aside the proceedings, and made the attorney pay costs. Berry v. Jenkins, 3 Bing. 423; 11 Moore, 307.

Where process appeared to be sued out in the name of A. by B. neither of whom were attornies of the court out of which it was sued, and B. had no authority from any other attorney to act in his name, the court of C. P. set aside the proceedings, and ordered A. and B. to pay the costs. Hawkins v. Edwards, 4 Moore, 603.

The defendant, in putting in bail, misinstructed the filacer as to the Christian name of one of two plaintiffs; the plaintiff's attorney thereupon swore that there were no bail in that action, and moved that the defendant's attorney might pay debt and costs for superseding the defendant; the court of C. P. discharged the rule with costs, to be paid by the attorney so swearing. Clarke v. Gorman, 3 Taunt. 492.

Upon an application under the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, without sufficient grounds, the court of C. P. in discharging the rule will direct the costs of the motion to be paid by the defendant's attorney. Rolfe v. Rogers, and Rogers v. Burgess, 4 Taunt. 191.

The plaintiff's attorney, in a cause tried at Nisi Prius, contradicted the testimony given by one of the defendant's witnesses, who had sworn that he never had any conversation with the former on the subject in question, by stating positively that he had, and what the conversation was; and the defendant's witness was in consequence committed for perjury, but was afterwards discharged, on the attorney's stating the next day that he might have been mistaken in the person of the witness for that of his brother, who greatly resembled him; and an application being made for a new trial under these circumstances, and that the plaintiff or his attorney should be ordered to pay the costs of the former trial, the court of Exchequer granted a rule accordingly, which was afterwards made absolute, and the plaintiff's attorney was ordered to pay the costs of the former trial. Trubody v. Brain, 9 Price, 76.

(h) Answering Matters of Affidavits.

An attorney shall not be called on to answer matters of an affidavit, charging an irregularity, but not a crime, as the matter is of a criminal nature. Anon. Lofft, 618.

But the court of C. P. will not proceed to call upon an attorney summarily to answer the matters of an affidavit, charging him with an indictable offence; but will leave the parties complaining to their prosecution for such offence. Short v. Pratt, 1 Bing. 102.

So, on an affidavit containing a charge of conspiracy. Knight v. Hall, 1 Bing. 142.

A. being committed for forgery, the prosecutor called on him in prison, and said he had no wish to appear against him, but that the attorney concerned would proceed unless his costs were paid, which the prosecutor had no means of paying: he then proposed that A. should advance the money, which he did; and it got into the hands of the prosecutor's attorney; notwithstanding this, A. was put on his trial, and the prosecutor appeared against him. A., however, being acquitted, applied to the court of C. P. to compel the prosecutor's attorney to refund the money, on an affidavit of his innocence of the offence charged against him, and that he had paid the money, because from his knowledge of the parties he believed his life was then in danger; but the court refused to interfere. Ex parte Brookes, 1 Bing. 105.

The court will not, on the last day of term, grant a rule nisi for an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit, or hear cause shewn against such a motion. Baily v. Jones, 1 Chit. 744; S. P. Jacob's case, 4 Burr. 2502.

Unless it appear to the court that, under the circumstances, it could not have been made earlier. Leader v. Harris, 1 Tidd's Prac. 503.

In disposing of a rule nisi obtained on that and other grounds, the court will not give an opinion on the alleged unreasonableness of an attorney's bill, stated as the sole ground for supporting the rule; that being a proper subject of reference to the master; nor will they make such reference a part of the order for discharging the original rule. Peace v. Roberts, M'Clel. & Y. 105.

Quære, whether the affirmation of a Quaker is admissible to call on an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit? In re Gellibrand, 1 D. & R. 121.

If an attorney, required to answer the matters of an affidavit, swear in his exculpation to an incredible story, the court will grant an attachment against him, though he positively deny the malpractices imputed to him. In re Crossley, 6 T. R. 701.

An attorney's clerk attending the court in person, upon a complaint against him for malpractice, which he has fully answered by affidavits, cannot be examined ore tenus upon oath. Tyson v. Ironmonger, 1 Wils. 30.

(i) Other professional Misconduct.

Where an attorney, although without any corrupt or unworthy motive, prepared a special case in order to take the opinion of the court upon the will of a testator, and suggested facts which had no foundation:—Held, that he was guilty of a contempt, and he was fined in 30*l.* for his offence. In re Elsom, 5 D. & R. 389; 3 B. & C. 597.

It is a high misdemeanour in an attorney to compromise a criminal charge; therefore, an attorney was fined 500*l.*, and suspended six months, for taking 200*l.* from one who was charged with forgery, to let him out of the custody of a tipstaff. Rex v. Vaughan, 1 Wils. 221.

A plaintiff's attorney was compelled to refund the costs of a bill of Middlesex, where it appeared that no præcipe or warrant to prosecute had been filed in the office. Wadworth v. Allen, 1 Chit. 186. And see 1 Chit. 651.

Where an attorney had wholly prepared and signed a bond to pay money to his client upon a wrong stamp, he was compelled upon motion to put a proper stamp upon it; but, though the only subscribing witness was his own servant, at the time of the execution, the court refused to compel him to admit the execution of the bond, he swearing that he did not then know where such witness resided. Gwilliam v. Barnet, 2 Smith, 155.

4. For Negligence.

(a) Conduct of Causes.

Error of Judgment.—An attorney is not liable for the consequence of a mistake in a point of law, upon which a reasonable doubt may be entertained. Kemp v. Burt, 1 Nev. & M. 262.

Nor is he to lose the amount of his bill, on account of any error in the execution of his duty which a cautious man might fall into; but if the charges contained in his bill are brought upon his client by his inadvertence, he cannot recover them in an action. Montrion v. Jefferys, 2 C. & P. 113; R. & M. 317—Abbott.

An attorney, with the advice of counsel, produced, in an action against J. B. for negligence in the conduct of the plaintiff's defence to another action, the prothonotary's book to prove an allegation "that in consequence of the negligence of J. B., judgment by default had been signed, and such further proceedings had, that final judgment was afterwards signed, and execution issued;" whereupon plaintiff was nonsuited for not producing the record of that judgment, or a proper copy:—Held, that this was not such negligence as rendered the attorney liable to an action. Godefroy v. Dalton, 6 Bing. 460; 4 M. & P. 149.

General Want of Attention.]—Where the plaintiff employed the defendants to conduct an action of ejectment for the recovery of premises forfeited to him by the tenant's breach of covenant to repair, and it was referred to an arbitrator, who was to decide what repairs were necessary, but the defendants neglected to attend him, whereby the plaintiff was obliged to pay the defendants' costs incurred in the ejectment, instead of the tenant:—Held, that an action was maintainable, and that it was not necessary to produce the lease on which the ejectment was brought. Swannell v. Ellis, 8 Moore, 340; 1 Bing. 347.

Where plaintiff's attorney suffered a cause to be called on for trial, without having ascertained whether a material witness, whom the plaintiff had undertaken to bring into court, had arrived, in consequence of which he was nonsuited:—Held, that in an action against such attorney for negligence, it was rightly left to the jury to determine whether he had used reasonable care in conducting the cause, and they having found that he had not, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Reece v. Rigby, 4 B. & A. 202. And see In re Jones, 1 Chit. 651; and Dax v. Ward, 1 Stark. 109.

An attorney in a cause is not answerable for the absence, neglect, or want of attention in the counsel engaged in it. Lowry v. Guilford, 5 C. & P. 234—Taunton.

Rule for new trial afterwards made absolute. Id.

If a cause, which is meant to be defended, be called on, and tried as an undefended cause, in consequence of the defendant's attorney neglecting to deliver his briefs, the court of C. P. will grant a new trial, compelling the defendant's attorney to pay the costs as between attorney and client out of his own pocket. De Rouffigny v. Peale, 3 Taunt. 484.

A dispute between A. B., a married woman, and C. D., was referred to arbitration. After the reference had proceeded some time, an additional matter was submitted by the attorneys for the said parties. C. D.'s attorney signed the submission in his presence. A. B.'s attorneys signed in the presence of C. D.'s attorney, but without any authority from their client; the award was afterwards set aside, and C. D.'s attorney sued him for the expenses of the arbitration:—Held, that in not requiring to see the authority of A. B.'s attorneys, he had not been guilty of such negligence as would prevent his recovering the amount of his bill. Edwards v. Cooper, 3 C. & P. 277—Park.

In case against an attorney, for filing a bill in Chancery without any authority from, and without the knowledge of, the plaintiff, which was afterwards dismissed with costs, which the plaintiff was obliged to pay; the venue may be laid either in the county where the court of Chancery is held, or the county where he actually paid the money. Lyde v. Rodd (in error), 1 Bro. P.C. 60.

Letting Judgment go by Default.]—The defendant, an attorney, was sued for negligence in allowing judgment to go by default, in an action which the plaintiff had retained him to defend; the negligence being proved:—Held, it was for the attorney to defend himself by shewing, if he could, that the plaintiff had no defence in that action, and not for the plaintiff to begin by shewing he had a good defence, and so had been damaged by the judgment by default. Godefroy v. Jay, 7 Bing. 413; 5 M. & P. 284.

It was the duty of the defendant to have pleaded the general issue, and not to have suffered judgment to go by default. Id.

It seems that an action against an attorney for negligence is maintainable without proof of special damage. Id.

The plaintiff declared against an attorney, for negligence in not causing an application to be made to the court to set aside proceedings in an action brought against him, on the ground that he had never been served with process; in consequence whereof, judgment was signed against him by default, and afterwards final judgment was sued out, and execution issued thereon:—Held, that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to produce an examined copy of the record, to prove both the judgments; and that proof of the entry of the judgment by default, in the prothonotaries' book, and the inquisition with the prothonotaries' allocatur, were not sufficient evidence of such judgment. Godefroy v. Jay, 1 M. & P. 236; 3 C. & P. 192. And see Godefroy v. Dalton, 6 Bing. 460; 4 M. & P. 149.

Semble, that the judgments are the gist of the action, and not merely special damage. Id.

As to Prisoners.]—Neglecting to charge a defendant in execution within time, will subject the attorney to an action. Pitt v. Yalden, 4 Burr. 2060.

Though it appear to be rather want of judgment than negligence. Russell v. Palmer, 2 Wils. 325.

The two terms allowed by the rule of court, T. T. 26 Geo. 3, for charging a prisoner in execution, must be computed from the date of the notice of surrender. Therefore, in case against an attorney for negligence, where plaintiff had recovered a judgment against A., who surrendered in discharge of his bail on the day before the essoin day of E. T., and gave notice thereof two days afterwards, and, not being charged in execution during E. T., was discharged in T. T.:—Held, that the action was not maintainable; first, because A. was improperly discharged; and second, because the meaning of the rule of court is doubtful. Laidler v. Elliott, 5 D. & R. 635; 3 B. & C. 738.

In an action against the defendant for negligence as an attorney, in not prosecuting a debtor of the plaintiff's to judgment, the return of the writ on which the debtor was arrested being laid to be in the 25th year, &c., and the writ itself appearing to have been returnable in the 24th year, &c.; this was held to be a fatal variance, even though the day of the return was alleged in the declaration under a videlicet. Green v. Rennett, 1 T. R. 656.

In an action against an attorney for suffering a debtor, in custody at the suit of the plaintiff, to be superseded, proof that such debtor was a married woman destroys the action, when the declaration states that she was indebted. Lee v. Ayrton, Peake, 119—Kenyon.

(b) Investigation of Titles.

Where an attorney acts for a client, who advances money on the security of a legacy given to the borrower under a will, he is not warranted in relying upon a partial extract from the will, it is his duty to examine the will itself. Wilson v. Tucker, 3 Stark. 154; D. & R. N. P. C., 30—Abbott.

But it seems that his duty is not so strict, but that if he be lulled by the assurance of his client into a persuasion that the security on which such client proposes to advance the money is good, so as to abate his vigilance in the inquiry into its validity, his liability for negligence is discharged. Id.

The executrix of an attorney is liable in an action on the case for negligence of her testator, in not making due inquiry into the validity of a security upon which his client proposed to advance money. Id.

Where the plaintiff, as administrator, declared in assumpsit that the intestate had retained the defendant as his attorney, to investigate and procure a good title of an estate about to be conveyed to the intestate as purchaser; and assigned for breach that he did not do so, but accepted a bad and defective title in the lifetime of the latter, whereby his personal estate was much injured:—Held, on demurrer to the declaration, that the action was well brought, although it was objected, first, that though it was framed in contract, it was in substance a tort, arising from a neglect of duty by the defendant; secondly, that the heir should have sued, and not the administrator, as it was a contract which ran with the land; and lastly, that it was not alleged in the declaration that the defendant undertook to ascertain and procure a good title in his professional character as an attorney; for, by the demurrer, the defendant admitted the promise to the intestate, as well as the allegation that the injury accrued to his personal estate during his lifetime; and it must be implied that he was bound to fulfil his duty as an attorney, it being alleged that the intestate employed him as such. Knights v. Quarles, 4 Moore, 532; 2 B. & B. 102.

Semble, an attorney ought himself to peruse a title on the part of his client, before he sends it for counsel's opinion. Drax v. Scroope, 1 Dowl. P. C. 69; 2 B. & Adol. 581.

Where the attorney of the vendee of an estate was employed to investigate the title thereto, and, in taking the opinion of counsel thereon, omitted to state in the case certain deeds materially affecting the title; and upon the faith of the opinion given (which would have been different, had all the deeds been stated), the vendee concluded the purchase, but was afterwards damnified by finding that the title was imperfect:—Held, that the attorney was liable to him in an action of negligence. Ireson v. Pearman, 5 D. & R. 687; 3 B. & C. 799.

In an action against an attorney for non-feasance, in not looking properly into a title, it is sufficient to state that he was retained as an attorney, without stating the consideration. If diligence would have been ineffectual, the defendant must prove it; and if the declaration state that the defendant was an attorney of a particular court, the plaintiff must prove it, though the defendant put in his plea as such. Bourne v. Diggles, 2 Chit. 311.

If the declaration state that the plaintiff retained the defendant, an attorney, to see if a certain security was good, and that he accepted the retainer, and neglected his duty, and represented the security to be good; and that the plaintiff advanced his money, and that the security was bad, by means of which the plaintiff lost the interest, it is sufficient. Howell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259; 2 C. & P. 238.

(c) Annuities and Fines.

Preparing Annuity Securities.—An attorney employed to purchase and prepare the assignment of an annuity, before the decisions holding that the trusts in the annuity deeds must be particularly set forth in the memorial, is not liable for negligence in not having pointed out to his employer that the annuity purchased was void, because the memorial omitted particularly to specify the trusts of the annuity deeds. Bakie v. Chandless, 3 Camp. 17—Ellenborough: S. P. Compton v. Chandless, cited 3 Camp. 19.

Where an annuity has been made void by reason of a defect in the memorial, and the attorney who prepared the conveyances is sued by the grantee for negligence, and a verdict recovered against him to the amount of the consideration money paid for the same, which he pays, he cannot recover it over against the grantor in an action of assumpsit. Burdon v. Webb, 2 Esp. 527—Ken.

A count in assumpsit stated that plaintiff having retained defendant, at his request, to lay out 700*l.* in the purchase of an annuity, the defendant promised to lay it out securely; that plaintiff delivered the money to him for that purpose; and that defendant laid it out insecurely:—Held, after verdict, that the consideration for the defendant's promise was sufficiently stated. Whitehead v. Greetham, 2 Bing. 464; McClell. & Y. 205; 10 Moore, 183.

A count in assumpsit against an attorney for negligence, stating "that, in consideration that plaintiff would retain defendant in investing money in the purchase of an annuity, defendant undertook to perform his duty in the premises; that plaintiff did retain defendant for the purpose aforesaid; yet defendant did not perform his duty in the premises, but invested the money in security of no value, by reason of which premises plaintiff lost the money:"—Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the count was bad, because it did not state that any reward was to be paid to the defendant, or that he was employed in any particular character, so as to make him responsible for taking bad security, although not guilty of negligence or dishonesty. Dartnall v. Howard, 6 D. & R. 438; 4 B. & C. 345.

In an action against an attorney for negligence in the purchase of an annuity, the party who appears to be the grantor on the face of the deed, is a competent witness to prove it to be a forgery, as he could in no case avail himself of the verdict. Hunter v. King, 4 B. & A. 209.

Levying Fines.—If a sum of money be paid to an attorney for the purpose of levying a fine, and he neglect to do so, whereby the party is put to the expense of levying another, the Court of C. P. will not order such sum to be repaid by the attorney, as his bill might have been taxed when it was discovered that the fine had not been passed; and they left the party to his remedy by action. In re Lawrence, 2 Moore, 665.

But if an attorney mislays the papers of a fine, and does not complete it, the court will, if all the parties be alive, direct a new one at the expense of the attorney. Stone v. Stone, 4 Taunt. 601. And see Gruggen v. White, 4 Taunt. 881: S. P. Lindo v. —, 5 Taunt. 305.

(d) Client's Money.

If an attorney pay into his bankers' hands money of his client's, mixing it with his own, and the bankers fail, the attorney is liable to make good the loss. Robinson v. Ward, 2 C. & P. 59; R. & M. 274—Abbott.

A solicitor in a cause, who improperly assumes the character of receiver, is responsible for rents lost by his neglect. Wood v. Wood, 4 Russ. 558.

(e) How made answerable.

The Court of K. B. will not interfere on motion against an attorney, for negligence in the discharge of his professional duty, if there be no fraud; and, therefore, where an attorney, who was retained to defend an action, allowed judgment to go by default, and afterwards desired his client not to attend to endeavour to mitigate the damages, because the proceedings might be set aside for irregularity, when in fact they could not; and, in the end, execution was sued out, and the client paid the sum claimed and costs:—Held, that the only remedy against the attorney was by action. In re Jones, 1 Chit. 651. And see 1 Chit. 186.

The court will not make an order for an attorney to pay the debt and costs, upon a suggestion of negligence, unless something corrupt be shewn. Anon. Loft, 545.

Nor will they, upon motion, compel an attorney, who has made a fatal mistake, to indemnify his client. Barker v. Butler, 2 W. Black. 780.

Where bail call together upon an attorney, and employ him to surrender their principal, one of them cannot afterwards maintain a separate action against the attorney for neglecting to effect the render pursuant to his undertaking. Hill v. Tucker, 1 Taunt. 7.

(f) When a Defence to Action.

Negligence in the conduct of a cause cannot be set up as a defence to an action on the attorney's bill. Templer v. M'Lachlan, 2 N. R. 136.

Nor that he had neglected to follow the instructions of his client. Johnston v. Alston, 1 Camp. 176—Ellenborough.

So, it is no defence in such an action, that the defendant has derived no benefit from the suit, where the failure does not result wholly from the plaintiff's negligence, but partly from accident. Dax v. Ward, 1 Stark. 409—Ellenborough.

Nor that the items in the bill were for suing out a commission of bankruptcy, under a misrepresentation of the plaintiff, that it would operate in the Isle of Man, and that it had been wholly fruitless. Pasmore v. Birnie, 2 Stark. 59—Ellenborough.

An attorney cannot charge for work which is useless towards accomplishing the object his client has in view, although performed through inadvertence or inexperience, and not with the design of imposing on the client. Hill v. Featherstonhaugh, 7 Bing. 569; 5 M. & P. 541.

In considering an attorney's bill, the jury may discard an item for work entirely useless; though, upon an item partly useless, or in respect of which there has been any negligence, the client's remedy is only by a cross action. Shaw v. Arden, 9 Bing. 287; 2 M. & Scott, 341; 1 Dowl. P. C. 705.

5. To Action of Trespass.

An attorney is not liable with his client in a joint action of trespass, unless it can be proved that he has gone beyond the strict line of his duty. Sedley v. Sutherland, 3 Esp. 202—Kenyon: S. P. Carrett v. Smallpage, 9 East, 330.

But trespass for false imprisonment lies as well against an attorney as against his client, who sues out at the suit of his client an illegal writ of capias ad satisfaciendum against a defendant, and causes such defendant to be imprisoned thereon. Barker v. Braham, 3 Wils. 368; 2 W. Black. 866.

And where a defendant, on being taken in execution under a writ of ca. sa., tendered the debt and costs to the plaintiff's attorney, and required him to sign his discharge, which he refused to do until he had paid an independent collateral demand for costs:—Held, that the plaintiff and his attorney were liable to an action on the case for such refusal. Crozer v. Pilling, 6 D. & R. 129; 4 B. & C. 26.

Where an attorney, at the instance of a creditor, sued out process against a debtor in the county court, and the attorney's agent, after the debt and costs had been paid, but in ignorance of that fact, signed judgment and sued out execution, and levied upon the debtor's goods though he had never appeared:—Held, that both the creditor and his attorney were liable to the debtor in an action of trespass. Bates v. Pilling, 9 D. & R. 44; 6 B. & C. 38.

A. placed money in the hands of his attorney to invest for him, giving the attorney an unlimited authority to do what was best; the attorney advanced the money to B. on mortgage, but discovering that the security was bad, the attorney sued out a bailable writ in A.'s name against the borrower for the amount, without the knowledge of A.:—Held, that B. could not maintain an action against the attorney for arresting him without the authority of A., if the attorney acted bona fide, and A. afterwards approved of what he had done. Anderson v. Watson, 3 C. & P. 214—Vaughan.

A defendant, on whose application a judgment has been set aside for irregularity in practice, without costs, cannot recover such costs as damages in an action for trespass against the plaintiff's attorney, for taking his goods under colour of the judgment. Loton v. Devereux, 3 B. & Adol. 343.

IX. BILL OF COSTS.

1. Signing and Delivery.

(a) Statutes.

By 3 Jac. 1, c. 7, s. 1, attornies and solicitors are to give a true bill to their clients of all charges concerning suits, subscribed with their hands and names.

By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, no attorney or solicitor shall commence or maintain any action or suit for the recovery of any fees, charges, or disbursements, at law or in equity, until the expiration of one month or more after he shall have delivered unto the party charged therewith, or left for him at his dwelling-house, or last place of abode, a bill of such fees, charges, and disbursements, subscribed with the proper hand of such attorney or solicitor.

If an attorney does business of a taxable nature, and other business clearly not so, he is bound to include the whole in one bill, which is taxable; and he cannot bring an action for the non-taxable business alone, but must deliver his whole bill under the statute. Thwaites v. Mackerson, 3 C. & P. 341; M. & M. 199—Tenterden: S. P. Benton v. Garcia, 3 Esp. 149.

Even for costs out of pocket. Miller v. Towers, Peake, 102—Kenyon.

But when there are matters in the bill which have no relation to business as an attorney,—as money advanced to the defendant,—the master upon reference to him should strike those items out, and proceed to tax the rest. Wardle v. Nicholson, 1 Nev. & M. 355.

And the attorney is entitled to recover the money lent, without reference to his business of attorney. Mowbray v. Fleming, 11 East, 285.

In an action on an attorney's bill, it is sufficient to bring the bill within the statute, that some of the items upon the face of it are of such a nature as to shew that a cause must have been depending in some court; and it is not necessary to prove, aliunde, that there was a cause depending. Watt v. Collins, 2 C. & P. 71; R. & M. 284—Best.

The month required by the statute is a lunar month. Hurd v. Leach, 5 Esp. 168—Ellenb.

The clause of 3 Jac. 1, c. 7, s. 1, requiring attornies to deliver a bill to their clients before charging them with any of the "fees or charges" in the act mentioned, is to be confined to business done in the king's courts of record at Westminster. Reynal v. Smith, 2 B. & Adol. 469; 1 M. & Rob. 85; 1 Dowl. P. C. 334.

(b) Items of Charge.

[If there be any items which are taxable, a bill delivered is required; and therefore the expressions may be considered as synonymous.]

If any part of an attorney's bill be for business done in K. B., the bill must be signed and delivered a month before an action can be brought upon it, even though some of the items be for business not taxable. Winter v. Payne, 6 T. R. 645.

So in C. P. Hill v. Humphreys, 2 B. & P. 343; 3 Esp. 254.

In that court, even though such items were not at all connected with the plaintiff's professional capacity. Id.

And if the attorney fail as to those items which are taxable, for want of regularity in the delivery of the bill, he must fail altogether. Id.

So of a solicitor's bill. Margerum v. Sandiford, 3 Bro. C. C. 233.

Obtaining a bankrupt's certificate is business done in a court, and a bill for such business must be signed and delivered. Collins v. Nicholson, 2 Taunt. 321; 1 Rose, 119.

For obtaining a chancellor's signature was considered as business done in court. Id.

But a bill for business done under a commission of bankruptcy need not. Hamilton v. Jones, 4 M. & P. 868; S. C. nom. Hamilton v. Pitt, 7 Bing. 232; 1 Dowl. P. C. 209; S. P. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 433; Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 278.

Nor where the charges are for drawing an affidavit of a petitioning creditor's debt and bond to the chancellor, in order to obtain a commission of bankrupt, where the affidavit was never sworn, nor the commission issued. Burton v. Chatterton, 3 B. & A. 486; 2 Stark. 522.

Quære, whether a bill for business done in suing out and prosecuting a commission of lunacy is taxable, as for charges in law or equity. Jones v. Bywater, 2 Tyr. 402; 2 C. & J. 37; 1 Dowl. P. C. 557.

A solicitor's bill for obtaining an act of parliament is not taxable. Ex parte Wheeler, 3 Ves. & B. 21; S. P. Williams v. Odell, 4 Price, 279.

A solicitor's bill in the house of lords is only taxable through the recognizance. Id.

But there is a distinction between costs of an appeal before the House of Lords, and of soliciting a bill; the former being a proceeding in a court of law, the bill is taxable. Id.

Charges for proceedings before the Lord Chancellor as exercising visitatorial power upon a royal foundation are not taxable. Ex parte Dann, 9 Vea. jun. 547.

A bill for business done in the county court is taxable. Wardle v. Nicholson, 1 Nev. & M. 355.

The preparing of a replevin bond is business done in the county court. Id.

But a bill for business done in the Middlesex court of requests is not. Becke v. Wells, 1 C. & M. 75.

A charge for business done at the quarter sessions is. Sylvester v. Webster, 9 Bing. 388; 2 M. & Scott, 506; 1 Dowl. P. C. 708; S. P. Clark v. Donovan, 5 T. R. 694; 1 Esp. 137. And see Ex parte Williams, 4 T. R. 496.

So, prosecuting an extent. Rex v. Collingridge, 3 Price, 280; S. P. Rex v. Partridge, 1 Tidd's Prac. 330.

So, fees for holding a court-leet as steward of a manor. Lethbridge v. Luzmore, 1 D. & R. 511; S. C. nom. Luzmore v. Lethbridge, 5 B. & A. 398.

So, for procuring the discharge of an insolvent debtor. Smith v. Wattleworth, 6 D. & R. 510; 4 B. & C. 364; 1 C. & P. 615.

But attending upon and concerting measures with the attorney of the opposing creditor to resist the discharge of an insolvent, is not taxable business. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 433.

Preparing a warrant of attorney is a taxable item. Sandom v. Bourne, 4 Camp. 68—Ellenborough. S. P. James v. Child, 2 Tyr. 732; Wilson v. Gutteridge, 4 D. & R. 736; 3 B. & C. 157.

Even although the instrument have not been executed. Weld v. Crawford, 2 Stark. 538—Ab.

So, drawing an affidavit of debt, and getting it sworn. Winter v. Payne, 6 T. R. 645.

A dedimus potestatem, charged in an attorney's bill, is a sufficient item to enable the court of C. P. to refer the bill for taxation, though, with this exception, it be entirely for conveyancing. Ex parte Prickett, 1 N. R. 266.

A charge for searching whether satisfaction of a judgment was entered, or whether an issue was entered, will not constitute an attorney's bill a taxable bill, so as to make it necessary to deliver it regularly signed before the action brought. Fenton v. Correa, 2 C. & P. 45; R. & M. 262—Abbott.

A charge in an attorney's bill for attending at a lock-up house and obtaining defendant's release, and filling up the bail-bond, is a taxable charge. Fearne v. Wilson, 6 B. & C. 86; 9 D. & R. 157.

So, charges by an attorney for attending the defendant and advising him, he having been served with a writ after paying the amount of the debt; and attending him, and advising on an action that had been brought against him, are taxable items. Smith v. Taylor, 5 M. & P. 66; 7 Bing. 259; 1 Dowl. P. C. 212.

So, a sum advanced by the attorney to the defendant to discharge the debt and costs of an action, is a disbursement within the statute. Id.

A., an attorney, at the request of B., who was in custody for debt in an action in which A. had not been concerned, gave an undertaking for the debt and costs, which he accordingly paid to the plaintiff's attorney, without having the costs taxed:—Held, that this was not a disbursement by A., as an attorney, within the meaning of the statute. Prothero v. Thomas, 1 Marsh. 539; 6 Taunt. 196.

"Attending A. and B., the proposed bail of the defendant, and examining them as to their competency to justify; attending the plaintiff in several actions commenced against the defendant, and arranging with him to take cognovits therein," are taxable items. Watt v. Collins, R. & M. 284; 2 C. & P. 71—Best.

(c) In what Cases.

By 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 5, it is provided, that the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, is not to extend to bills due from one attorney or solicitor to another attorney or solicitor, or clerk in court.

One attorney, as agent for another in the country, has no occasion to deliver his bill signed before he brings his action. Bridges v. Francis, Peake, 1—Kenyon: S. P. Nelson v. Garforth, 1 Esp. 221; Jones v. Price, Peake, 2, n. And see Wildbore v. Brian, 8 Price, 677.

If the charges be for agency in causes in which the defendant was the attorney, and in which the plaintiff acted as his agent. Sandys v. Hornby, 4 C. & P. 520; 1 M. & Rob. 33—Tenterden.

But an action on an attorney's bill cannot be maintained for professional business against an attorney without delivering a signed bill previously to the action. Heming v. Wilton, M. & M. 529; 4 C. & P. 318—Tenterden.

But an item for money lent, which is not a disbursement in a cause, may be separated from the professional items, and recovered. Id.

In order to enable one attorney to maintain an action against another for business done by the plaintiff for the defendant, before the defendant became an attorney, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to leave his bill signed. Ford v. Maxwell, 2 H. Black. 589; 1 Esp. 442.

An executor of a deceased attorney, who sues for a bill due to him need not leave a signed bill. Barrett v. Moss, 1 C. & P. 3—Burr. And see Penson v. Johnson, 4 Taunt. 724.

If a bill have been delivered to a deceased client, it is not necessary, in order to maintain an action against his personal representatives, to deliver another to them. Reynolds v. Caswell, 4 Taunt. 193.

Before an attorney can set off his bill for business done, he must deliver such bill signed, but it need not be delivered a month under the statute. Murphy v. Cunningham, 1 Anst. 198; S. P. Bulman v. Birkett, 1 Esp. 449.

A solicitor may sue out a commission upon a debt for costs, without having delivered a bill signed. Ex parte Howell, 1 Rose, 312.

So, an attorney may prove his bill under a commission of bankrupt without delivering a signed bill. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303—Tenterden.

Rule for new trial afterwards obtained. Id.

(d) Sufficient Signing and Delivery.

Signature.—A bill for business by two attorneys in partnership, signed by one in the name of the firm, is a sufficient subscription within the statutes 3 Jac. 1, c. 7, and 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, although the signature do not contain the christian names of the partners. Smith v. Brown, 1 C. & J. 542; 1 Tyr. 486; 1 Price's P. C. 89; 5 C. & P. 94.

Where and to whom delivered.—The bill must be left with the client. Brookes v. Mason, 1 H. Black. 290.

Delivery at the counting-house of the client is not a good delivery. Hill v. Humphreys, 2 B. & P. 343; 3 Esp. 254.

But leaving it at the defendant's last known apparent place of abode is sufficient. Wadson v. Smith, 1 Stark. 324—Ellenborough.

Delivery of an attorney's bill to the attorney of the party to be charged, is sufficient, if the party himself attend the taxation, or the bill be shewn to have come into his hands. Warren v. Cunningham, Gow, 71—Dallas.

A party in a cause, having changed his attorney in the progress of it, a judge's order was afterwards obtained by the second attorney for the delivery of a bill signed by the first attorney under the statute, which delivery was accordingly made to the second attorney in the cause:—Held, that this was a sufficient delivery to the party to be charged therewith. Vincent v. Slaymaker, 12 East, 372.

It is not sufficient evidence of delivery of a signed bill at the defendant's abode, that a signed bill was delivered at a particular place not shewn to be his abode, and that he afterwards gave the bill to his present attorney, who attended the taxation of costs. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303—Tenterden.

The defendant having signed an admission of the debt, to enable the attorney to prove it under a commission of bankrupt then subsisting against him, is no admission of the delivery of a signed bill, and does not dispense with the necessity of such proof in an action subsequently brought against him for the same claim. Id.

A bill with an indorsement upon it, "March 4th, 1815, delivered a copy to C. D.," which indorsement is proved to be the handwriting of a deceased clerk of the plaintiff's, (whose duty it was to have delivered a copy of the bill), and proved to have existed at the time of the date, is evidence to prove the delivery of the bill. Chamneys v. Peck, 1 Stark. 404—Ellenborough.

Joint Retainer.—Where an attorney is retained jointly by several parties to defend a suit against each, the delivery of a bill to one is sufficient to entitle him to maintain a joint action against all for his costs, within the statute. Oxenham v. Lemon, 2 D. & R. 461.

Where the one to whom the bill was delivered was the party from whom he received all his instructions, and to whom the management of the business was left by the other; otherwise if he deliver it to one who did not intermeddle. Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 275—Ellenborough.

It would appear that separate bills need not be given to underwriters who jointly retained the attorney. Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437—Ellenborough.

(e) Omission.

If a defendant be arrested by an attorney for fees, and a bill of costs be delivered to him without being signed, he cannot be discharged out of custody on entering a common appearance, as a want of such signature will be a defence to the action on producing the bill at the trial. Tomlinson v. Clark, 4 Moore, 4.

An attorney cannot maintain an action even for the money paid out of pocket in a cause, until he has delivered a bill signed. Miller v. Towers, Peake, 102—Kenyon.

Nor if part of his demand be for money advanced to his client's use, and the remainder for business done, unless a bill be delivered; neither will he be allowed to divide his demands at the trial, and recover for the money advanced. Benton v. Garcia, 3 Esp. 149—Heath. S. P. Thwaites v. Mackerson, 3 C. & P. 341; M. & M. 199.

Nor for money paid for costs which his client is adjudged to pay. Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437—Ellenborough.

An attorney, not having delivered any bill to his client before action brought, but having delivered a bill of particulars of his demand under a judge's order, after action brought, is entitled to recover items of charge for money paid for his client's use, having no reference to his business of an attorney; although other items in the bill of particulars might be taxable, and within the provisions of the statute. Mowbray v. Fleming, 11 East, 285; S. P. Wardle v. Nicholson, 1 Nev. & M. 355.

Although a plaintiff could not recover a particular item, on account of the provisions of the statute not having been complied with; held, that nevertheless he might recover the residue of the bill. Drew v. Clifford, R. & M. 280; 2 C. & P. 69—Abbott.

2. Contents of Bill.

By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, the bill must be written in a common legible hand, and in the English tongue (except law terms and names of writs), and in words at length (except terms and sums).

By 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 5, such abbreviations as are commonly used may be written in bills.

An attorney may deliver a bill of costs containing such abbreviations of English words as are usual and intelligible. Reynolds v. Caswell, 4 Taunt. 193.

An attorney may recover the amount of his bill in an action, although the copy delivered contains such abbreviations as "declon." "instrons." "confce." "affl." "attg." &c. Frowd v. Stillard, 4 C. & P. 51—Tenterden.

A mistake in the date of items, which does not mislead, will not vitiate, so as to render the delivery nugatory. Williams v. Barber, 4 Taunt. 806.

It is not sufficient to charge the costs of an action, brought for the now defendant by the plaintiffs as his attornies, at one sum in the lump, although the costs in that action had been taxed at that sum as between party and party. Drew v. Cliford, 2 C. & P. 69; R. & M. 280—Abbott.

If, in an action for an attorney's bill, it appear that the plaintiff in his bill charges for specific attendance on certain days; and, besides that, charges a further sum for several attendances, the judge at the trial will direct the jury to deduct this latter sum from the amount of the bill. Rawson v. Earle, 4 C. & P. 44—Tenterden.

3. Taxation of Bill.

(a) When allowed.

Authority to tax.—By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, a bill delivered may, upon application of the party charged, or of any person in that behalf authorized, to the court in which the business or the greatest part thereof in amount or value shall have been transacted, and upon submission to pay the whole sum that upon taxation shall be allowed, be referred for taxation to the proper officer, although no action or suit shall be then depending; and if upon due notice either party shall not attend, the officer may proceed ex parte: payment of the sum allowed to be a discharge, and in default may be enforced by attachment or other proceedings; and if there has been an over payment, the repayment of the overplus may be in like manner enforced.

The courts have an inherent jurisdiction at common law to tax the bills of attornies practising in them, independently of the powers given by the statutes 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, and 30 Geo. 2, c. 19, in cases where no actions have been brought on such bills. Wilson v. Gutteridge, 4 D. & R. 736; 3 B. & C. 157; S. P. Anon. 2 Chit. 155.

Therefore, where an action was pending on an attorney's bill against two defendants, and a baron at chambers, on application by one of them, made an order for taxation without imposing the terms of an undertaking to pay the sum found to be due, the court refused a rule to rescind the order imposing such terms, for the order was made at common law, and not under the statute. Watson v. Postan, 2 Tyr. 406; 2 C. & J. 370; 1 Dowl. P. C. 556.

It is a matter of doubt whether the court has a power, independently of the statute, to refer an attorney's bill for taxation, when it contains no taxable item. Dagley v. Kentish, 1 Dowl. P. C. 331; 2 B. & Adol. 411.

An attorney having sued for the amount of his bill, which did not contain any taxable item, the defendant, (who had before tendered part of the amount, but objected to the rest as unreasonable), moved to have it referred to the master, on the ground of the general authority possessed by the court over its officers:—The court (after conference with the other judges) refused to interfere. Id.

The application to tax an attorney's bill for business done in suing out and prosecuting a commission of lunacy should be made to the Lord Chancellor, though after action brought on the bill in a court of law. Jones v. Bywater, 2 Tyr. 402; 2 C. & J. 37; 1 Dowl. P. C. 557.

The court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to order the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, for business done in a cause in the court of Great Sessions in Wales, where there is no detention of title deeds, nor any other matter besides costs in dispute. Ex parte Partridge, 2 Mer. 500; 3 Swans. 398.

The court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to order a solicitor's bill to be taxed on the application of the solicitor. Sawyers v. Walond, 1 Sim. & Stu. 97.

The jurisdiction of the court of Exchequer, and its authority to make orders for the payment of a crown solicitor's bill of fees, is independent of the statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, and is founded on the necessary and inherent control of the court over the conduct of its officers; and delay to a certain extent in making application to the court for such purpose will not, in a gross case on the part of such solicitor, be considered laches. Rex v. Bach, 9 Price, 349.

An agreement between plaintiff and defendant, that the plaintiff's bill should not be taxed:—Held, not to be binding upon the bail. Woosman v. Wood, 1 Dowl. P. C. 681.

Before Payment.—Attornies' and solicitors' bills may be taxed as of course at any distance of time before they are settled and paid. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 333.

Even after an action brought, at any time before trial, although after plea pleaded, and issue joined. Id.

And even after a verdict has been found for the full amount. Nuttall v. Marr, 3 D. & R. 33.

This is done on a suggestion, that some of the items therein would not have been allowed by the master had it been originally referred to him; but only upon the terms of the defendant's paying the costs of the application and taxation, and also those of the cause as between attorney and client, the plaintiff being at liberty to take out money forthwith, which had been paid into court. Lee v. Wilson, 2 Chit. 63.

So, a solicitor may proceed to tax his costs after a verdict at law, notwithstanding an injunction to stay execution, with a view to commencing an action in his own name for the amount, after a final settlement between the parties by arbitration, without his concurrence. Brooks v. Bourne, 1 Price, 72.

So, an attorney's bill may be referred for taxation, though it is his executor who sues on it. Penson v. Johnson, 4 Taunt. 724.

The court of Exchequer would not stay the postea in the hands of the associate, for the purpose of having an attorney's bill, upon which an action had been brought and a verdict recovered, referred for taxation, and to be indorsed according to the allocatur, where the jury expressly found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of his bills, subject to taxation; and they discharged the rule for the application with costs. Hewitt v. Ferneley, 7 Price, 234.

Where an attorney arrested the defendant, and held him to bail, for his bill of costs, amounting to 15*l.*, and the costs were afterwards reduced by taxation to a sum less than that amount: the court refused to order the bail-bond to be delivered up to be cancelled. Thwaites v. Piper, 4 D. & R. 194. And see Robinson v. Elsam, 5 B. & A. 661.

Semble, that an attorney may maintain an action for business done under a commission of bankrupt, against the assignees, without having his bill taxed by a master in Chancery, if he have regularly delivered the bill. Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 278—Ellenborough.

The bill of costs of an attorney who is agent to the attorney employed by the party in respect of whose business the agency charges have been incurred, will not be ordered to be referred to the master to be taxed, on the application of the client. Wildbore v. Bryan, 8 Price, 677: S. P. Anon. 1 Wils. 266.

Attorney's Bills after Payment.—The court of C. P. will not direct an attorney's bill to be referred to taxation after payment, unless it can be impeached on the grounds of gross overcharge, fraud, or mistake, or some specific charge, which must be distinctly pointed out; and although the application was made by a cestui que trust, who had a direct interest in the subject-matter for which the expenses in the bill were incurred; yet, it having been previously paid by the representative of a surviving trustee, acting under a deed of trust for sale, the court refused to interfere. Wilkinson v. Foster, 7 Moore, 496.

So in K. B. where no fraud or misconduct was suggested, and more than seven years had elapsed since the transactions had been done and adjusted, and the money paid, the court refused to open or refer them for taxation. Ex parte Shipden, 6 D. & R. 338. And see Johnes v. Lloyd, 10 Price, 62.

The court of Exchequer will refer an attorney's bill to be taxed by the master, after it has been paid, on application within a reasonable time, without shewing circumstances of fraud or imposition. Glascott v. Castle, 2 C. & J. 355; 2 Tyr. 302; 1 Dowl. P. C. 317.

But where several bills of costs had been delivered in, settled, and paid, in the course of a long cause, and a receipt in full given, the court would not allow the client to have the bills taxed at the end of the cause. Pistor v. Dunbar, 1 Anst. 186.

A plaintiff's attorney was in one case ordered to deliver a bill of costs to be taxed on the part of defendant, after payment of debt and costs charged, and to pay the costs of the application. Ex parte Ardens, 1 Price's P. C. 149.

A plaintiff having paid to an attorney the amount of his bill, cannot, after the reduction of the bill by taxation, recover the difference. Gower v. Popkin, 2 Stark. 85—Ellenborough.

Solicitor's Bills after Payment.—A solicitor's bill cannot be taxed after payment and long acquiescence, unless very gross charges are distinctly pointed out. Plenderleath v. Fraser, 3 Ves. & B. 175.

Thus, taxation was refused after a security given, payment and acquiescence: some charges, though improper, not being so gross as to amount to fraud. Id.

Though settled by bond and mortgage, a solicitor's bill may be taxed. Newman v. Payne, 4 Bro. C. C. 350.

Though the court will open a solicitor's bill, and order taxation, after several years, and a security given, or even payment, or a judgment given, upon gross error, fraud or undue pressure. Langstaff v. Taylor, 14 Ves. jun. 263.

Yet where nothing appeared but a trifling inaccuracy, and under other favourable circumstances, the court would not restrain proceeding upon a security obtained, while the business was depending. Cooke v. Setree, 1 Ves. & B. 126.

A bill of costs, where the amount of it has been settled between the solicitor and client, and part of it has been paid and security given for the remainder, will not be ordered to be taxed, merely because it contains charges which would be disallowed on taxation. Gratton v. Seyburne, 1 Turn. & Russ. 407.

A settlement of a bill of costs during the continuance of the suit, while the client has no professional adviser, except the solicitor himself, is not a bar to its taxation. Crossley v. Parker, 1 J. & W. 460: S. P. Howell v. Edmunds, 4 Russ. 67.

A party liable under a bond of indemnity for the costs of another, having, on a compromise, paid what the solicitor stated to be the amount of them, is entitled afterwards to have the bill taxed. Balme v. Paver, Jacob, C. C. 305.

(b) Proceedings to Tax.

An order to deliver or tax an attorney's bill may be made at the return of one summons, the same having been served two days before it is returnable. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 196; 8 Bing. 302; 1 M. & Scott, 429; 3 B. & Adol. 388; 2 C. & J. 194; 2 Tyr. 349; 4 Bligh, N. S. 604.

A bill of costs delivered by the solicitor in 1809, and shortly afterwards paid by the client; between that time and March, 1817, four other bills of costs were delivered, and various payments were made on account; in November, 1817, a sixth bill was delivered; when the client paid the general balance due on the bills of costs, at the same time stating that he would insist on having the bills taxed; an application for taxation to a judge at law, in 1818, and an application to K.

B. in 1819, failed, from circumstances not involving the merits of the question; some attempts at a compromise were made from time to time; and the client was obliged on three or four occasions to leave England in order to attend to urgent business in foreign countries; but at length, in 1824, a motion was made to have the bills referred for taxation, supported by evidence that some of the items of charge were improper:—The court ordered that the bill last delivered should be taxed generally, and that the five antecedent bills should be referred to the master, with a direction that the client should deliver to the solicitor a schedule of items complained of, and that the master should exercise as large a discretion as he might think fit with respect to the evidence on which he should proceed in forming his judgment concerning these items. Scougall v. Campbell, 3 Russ. 545.

An order for taxing a bill of costs, intituled in the cause, if obtained by a party to the cause, is regular under the general jurisdiction; but a person, not a party in the cause, must apply ex parte under the statute 2 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 2. Biguel v. Biguel, 11 Ves. jun. 328.

Quere, whether a party having obtained such an order in a cause may pursue it under the statute. Id.

A party who by agreement has paid the bill of costs of another party cannot apply for a taxation. Langford v. Nott, 1 J. & W. 291.

A solicitor cannot obtain the taxation of his agent's bill without bringing the amount into court. Ostle v. Christian, 1 Turn. & Russ. 325.

(c) Costs of Taxation.

Amount of Reduction.—By 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, upon taxation, the courts are authorized to award costs of taxation to be paid by the parties according to the event, i. e. if the bill taxed be less by a sixth part than the bill delivered, then the attorney or solicitor is to pay the costs; but if it shall not be less, the court in their discretion shall charge the attorney or client in regard to the reasonableness or otherwise of the bill.

Where an attorney's bill is reduced on taxation by a sixth part, the client is entitled to the costs of taxation, as they are not in the discretion of the courts. Higgins v. Woolcott, 5 B. & C. 760; S. C. nom. Dickens v. Woolcott, 8 D. & R. 589.

But the attorney cannot be compelled in the Exchequer to pay the costs of the taxation, unless for improper items amounting to one sixth. Yea v. Yea, 2 Anst. 594.

Nor in C. P. where the deduction of one sixth is occasioned, not by the particular items being taxed, but by a whole branch of it being disallowed. White v. Milner, 2 H. Black. 357.

Where a sum less than one sixth was deducted, including disbursements made by the client in the course of the cause, the court of C. P. ordered the client to pay the costs of taxation. Hindle v. Shackleton, 1 Taunt. 536.

Where the attorney delivered in a bill, including an item which, though fairly due, could not be allowed on taxation; and afterwards delivered a second, without that item; and the latter was referred for taxation, and less than a sixth taken off: the court would not give costs on either side. Webb v. Stone, 1 Anst. 260.

Where an attorney's bill had been reduced nearly one sixth on taxation, the court refused to allow him the costs of taxation. Elwood v. Pearce, 1 Dowl. P. C. 251; 1 M. & Scott, 159; 8 Bing. 83.

Items in a solicitor's bill were charged to the plaintiff in respect of the defence of a third person, at the plaintiff's request; the solicitor did not shew that he was employed in such defence by the plaintiff, and the items were struck out; and held, that such items were to be computed among the deductions, for the purpose of determining upon whom the costs of taxation were to fall. Rigby v. Edwards, 5 Madd. 20.

If, on the taxation of a crown solicitor's bill of fees and disbursements, so large a sum be disallowed as to make it a matter of reprobation by the court, they will not only order the costs of the taxation to be paid by the solicitor to the defendant, but, if he has received the whole bill by sums paid him on account, they will order him to pay interest for the balance which the master shall report to be due from him, in consequence of the disallowance of the sums taxed off; although some of the disallowed charges be for sums paid to others for services in aid of the crown solicitor's duty, and it be not shewn that he made any interest on the balance. Rex v. Bach, 9 Price, 349.

Attorney dead or a Bankrupt.—If a bill of costs be taxed after the solicitor's death, his representative will not be ordered to pay the costs of taxation, although more than one sixth be deducted. In re Cole, 2 Sim. & Stu. 463.

Where, on the taxation of a deceased attorney's bill, in an action brought by the executors (who had acted improperly in other respects,) instead of his surviving partner, the master deducted less than one sixth; but by allowing credit for a sum, the two together amounted to more than one sixth of the whole bill; the court left each party to pay their own costs of the taxation. Gale v. Pakington (Bart.), M'Clel. & Y. 354.

If a clerk in court's bill be included in and taxed with an attorney's bill, after the attorney's death, the court will order the amount to be paid by the client to the clerk in court, and the remainder of the attorney's bill to the attorney's executrix. Rex v. Smollett, and Rex v. Hamilton, 3 Burr. 1313.

In an action on an attorney's bill, by the assignees of the bankrupt attorney, an order for taxing the bill was obtained on an undertaking to pay the amount taxed, with the costs of the action. More than one sixth of the bill having been disallowed:—Held, that costs of taxation could not be allowed to the plaintiff as costs in the action. Featherstonhaugh v. Reen, 1 C. & M. 495.

Delay.—The costs of taxing an attorney's bill are not allowed in C. P. to a party who succeeds in striking off a sixth, where the order for taxing is not obtained till after an action on the bill has been commenced. Benton v. Bullard, 4 Bing. 561.

So in K. B. Jay v. Coaks, 3 M. & R. 35; 8 B. & C. 635; S. P. Harbin v. Miles, 3 B. & C. 755.

And where the solicitor was guilty of great delay in bringing in his bills, the court of Exchequer would not give him his costs of the taxation, although less than one sixth part was taken off. Yea v. Yea, 2 Anst. 589.

Proceedings for Costs.—Where an attorney is entitled to the costs occasioned by the taxation of his bill, he ought to apply for them at the time, and cannot recover them by motion after making a subsequent settlement. Whitfield v. James, 8 Moore, 40; 1 Bing. 207.

An order in bankruptcy was made referring a solicitor's bill to a master for taxation, reserving costs of taxation; and the bill was taxed, and more than one sixth taken off: the solicitor brought an action for taxed costs, without deducting the costs of taxation. On petition, the action was staid, and a reference made to the master to tax the costs of the taxation of costs; and after deducting the amount thereof from the taxed costs, the same were ordered to be paid to the solicitor. Ex parte Bellott, 4 Madd. 379. And see Hewitt v. Bellott, 2 B. & A. 745.

Where one sixth of a solicitor's bill has been taxed off upon a reference, and he applies to confirm the report, giving notice to the petitioning creditor, he must pay the costs of the appearance on such application, and of the petition and taxation. Ex parte Nutting, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 267.

(d) Items of Charge.

Where an attorney charged for a declaration as containing more folios than it really did, and the charge was allowed by the master, the court held that there was no ground for reviewing the taxation. Morris v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 544.

The court of Exchequer refused to grant a rule to review the taxation of an attorney's bill, where the master had allowed charges for signing interlocutory judgment, which was afterwards set aside with costs, and for opposing the motions made for that purpose, objecting that the party applying had not shewn that the proceedings complained of had been resorted to mala fide, from motives inconsistent with a fair intention, and a due regard to the interest of the client. Lloyd v. Crutchley, and Lloyd v. Powell, 13 Price, 211.

Charges by a country solicitor for attending the cause in London, are to be allowed in some cases; but the circumstance of their being undertaken by the direction of the client, is not alone a sufficient ground for allowing them, as the solicitor himself is better able to judge of their necessity. Crossley v. Parker, 1 J. & W. 460.

An agreement entered into by a client with his attorney, to pay him at a certain specified rate for business to be done, is not binding; but the charges made according to such agreement may be allowed on taxation, if the master, on inquiring into them, considers them proper. Drax v. Scroope, 2 B. & Adol. 581; 1 Dowl. P. C. 69.

Where such charges had been allowed on taxation, and paid, the court (on application about four months after) refused to order a review of the taxation, it not being shewn that the master had forborne to exercise his judgment on the charges, in consequence of the agreement between attorney and client. Id.

Correspondence, if not allowed separately, may be allowed in gross at the end of the bill. Ex parte Whitehead, 1 Price's P. C. 136.

Where certain claims are not made on the taxation of costs, they will not afterwards be allowed on reviewing taxation on the part of the party claiming them. Id.

4. Recovery of Bill by Action.

Parties.—Where two persons were in partnership as attornies, and one of them was alone appointed replevin clerk to the sheriff:—Held, that an action brought to recover the expenses of preparing a replevin-bond must be brought by the replevin clerk alone, although it was executed in the office where both carried on their joint business. Brandon v. Hubbard, 4 Moore, 367; 2 B. & B. 11.

An attorney carried on business under the firm of A. & Son; the son was not, in fact, a partner, but acted as clerk to his father, and received a salary:—Held, that A. might maintain an action in his own name to recover from a client the amount of a bill for business done. Kell v. Nainby, 10 B. & C. 20; 5 M. & R. 76.

A proctor may recover for business done by his clerk, although the client apprehended that the clerk was the principal, he acting as the principal, and never disclosing the name of his employer, provided no prejudice arises from the concealment. An agreement between a proctor and his clerk to pay the latter a salary amounting to half the annual average profits of the last three years, is not an evading of the statute. Grojan v. Wade, 2 Stark. 443—Abbott. And see Brown v. Brooks, 1 Esp. 388.

If an attorney having given credit to a person for the costs of a suit, put forward such person as a witness, and have him examined on the trial of the cause without a release (no objection being taken), he cannot afterwards maintain an action against him for the recovery of such costs. If an attorney's clerk give a receipt for money on account to a different person from that to whom he gives credit, to enable such person to deceive others, such act of the clerk will not affect the master's right to recover the remainder against such person; though, if the attorney had done it himself, it would be good ground of nonsuit. Williams v. Goodwin, 11 Moore, 342; 2 C. & P. 257. And see Loveridge v. Botham, 1 B. & P. 49.

Pending Taxation.—After a reference and taxation of an attorney's bill, he may maintain an action for the residue, even whilst an application for the costs of such taxation, under statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, is pending, for that statute expressly authorizes the court to award payment of the residue, and only prohibits any action to be brought pending the reference and taxation. Hewitt v. Bellott, 2 B. & A. 745. And see Ex parte Bellott, 4 Madd. 379.

The court of C. P. will not stay proceedings in an action on an attorney's bill, brought subsequent to the order of the judge of another court for its taxation, but previous to that taxation having taken place. Stevenson v. Watson, 1 B. & P. 365.

A solicitor, whose bill had been taxed and more than one sixth taken off, brought an action against his client, before the costs of taxation were ascertained, for the amount so taxed; the court granted an injunction to restrain the action. Barr v. Wiggins, 4 Sim. 125.

Injunction granted to restrain an action for the amount of a solicitor's bill, which had been taxed after the commencement of the action, and more than one sixth had been taken off, but the costs of taxation had not been ascertained. Walton v. Johnson, 2 Sim. 456.

Amount.]—After an attorney's bill has been delivered a month, and no application has been made to have it taxed by the master, the defendant will not be permitted to question the reasonableness of the items before a jury. Williams v. Frith, 1 Dougl. 189; S. P. Hooper v. Till, 1 Dougl. 198; Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237; 3 Esp. 167.

In an action on an attorney's bill, it is only necessary to give evidence of the retainer and the delivery of the bill, the prothonotary being the proper party to decide on the items of it. Hellings v. Gregory, 10 Moore, 337; 1 C. & P. 627.

A solicitor can only recover money actually paid out of pocket for the defence of a Chancery suit against his client, who has been admitted to defend in forma pauperis. Philippe v. Baker, 1 C. & P. 533—Abbott.

Delivery of an attorney's bill is conclusive evidence against an increase of charge in a subsequent bill, on any of the items contained in it; and strong presumptive evidence against any additional items. Loveridge v. Botham, 1 B. & P. 49.

Evidence.]—In an action on an attorney's bill, the nisi prius roll is good prima facie evidence, that the action was not commenced till the expiration of a month after the delivery of the bill. Webb v. Pritchett, 1 B. & P. 263.

It is sufficient to give in evidence a judge's order to tax the bill, the defendant's undertaking to pay what should appear to be due, and the master's allocatur thereon. Lee v. Jones, 2 Camp. 496—Ellenborough.

In an action on a bill for prosecuting an action, where the defence was, that the plaintiff undertook to conduct the cause gratis, a declaration to that effect, made by the plaintiff's clerk, when he attended the master to tax the costs in the former action, is evidence for the defendant, as it was so nearly connected with the subject of the latter action. Ashford v. Price, 3 Stark. 185—Abbott.

Where the charges are for business done for two persons, partners; if one only is sued, and there is no plea in abatement, the other may be called as a witness for the plaintiff. Fawcett v. Weathall, 2 C. & P. 305—Abbott.

In an action for business done in procuring the execution of a bail-bond, the bond itself must be produced. Swinford v. Green, 3 Stark. 135—Abbott.

An examined copy of a bill, the original of which has been delivered to the defendant, may be admitted in evidence, without proof of notice to produce the original; and is conclusive as to the reasonableness of the items. Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237; 3 Esp. 167; S. P. Collins v. Treweek, 9 D. & R. 456; 6 B. & C. 394.

The plaintiff cannot give parol evidence of the contents of the bill delivered. Philips v. Chase, 2 Camp. 110—Ellenborough.

If an action be brought on a note, and for business done as an attorney, the note not tallying in its amount with the business done at the date of it, and no evidence being given as to the consideration for it: it will be left to the jury to say whether the note was given in satisfaction of the bill for business done up to the time of its date, or whether it was an entirely distinct transaction. King v. Masters, 3 C. & P. 347—Tenterden.

By a private act of parliament, the expenses attending its passing were directed to be paid out of the tolls raised or levied, or to be raised under it. The attorney who prepared and solicited the act sued the clerk to the commissioners named in it, for the amount of his bill:—Held, that he was bound to shew that there were sufficient funds in the hands of the commissioners, which had been raised or levied by tolls or otherwise, to satisfy his demand. Andrews v. Dally, 1 M. & P. 490; 4 Bing. 566.

5. Security for Costs.

An attorney or solicitor cannot take a bond of his client for unliquidated costs. Newman v. Payne, 4 Bro. P. C. 350.

Nor can he take a security by mortgage for future bills of costs, for business to be done. Pitcher v. Rigby, 9 Price, 83; S. P. Jones v. Tripp, Jacob, C. C. 322.

A mortgage by a client to an attorney for costs due and to become due, held a valid security for the costs then due only. Williams v. Piggott, Jacob, C. C. 598.

So, a warrant of attorney given by a client to his attorney to secure future costs is illegal. Jones v. Hunter, 1 Dowl. P. C. 462.

A warrant of attorney given to secure the payment of future costs, and also of costs and money already due and advanced, though void as to the client's future liability, is valid as to his actual liability. Holdsworth v. Wakeman, 1 Dowl. P. C. 532.

6. Payment of Bill.

Where a sheriff's officer was written to by the plaintiff's attorney to execute the process and receive the debt and costs, and he did so, and paid the debt to him, but there was a dispute between him and the plaintiff's attorney as to the costs:—Held, the plaintiff's attorney could not proceed upon the bail-bond for the costs, the debt and costs being paid to his agent. Jones v. Burton, 3 Smith, 433.

The attorney employed by the petitioning creditor before the choice of assignees, and continued by the assignees afterwards, having delivered his bill to the assignees, including all the charges incurred by order of the petitioning creditor in the first instance, and having received a certain sum, on account of his bill generally, from the assignees, is bound, as the assignees themselves were, by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 25, to appropriate the sum so received in reduction of the charges incurred by order of the petitioning creditor, and for which he was originally responsible; and therefore the amount of such charges, covered by the sum so received, cannot be set off by the attorney against a debt due from him to the petitioning creditor on his own account. Phillips v. Dicus, 15 East, 248; 1 Rose, 345.

Where an attorney had claims on his client for conveyancing, and also for charges at law, and received payments on account, without specific appropriation to either head of debt:—Held, that the whole formed one entire demand, not to be separated, and that the plaintiff could not apply the payment to the common law items of his demand only, so as to deprive the defendant of the benefit of the taxation quoad the residue of the bill. James v. Child, 2 Tyr. 732.

X. LIEN FOR COSTS.

1. To what Extent.

[For Lien of Agents, see post, AGENT IN TOWN, page 107.]

An attorney has a lien for his general balance on papers of his client which come to his hands in the course of his professional employment. Stevenson v. Blakelock, 1 M. & S. 535.

But the lien which an attorney has on the papers in his hands is only commensurate with the right which the party delivering the papers to him has therein. Hollis v. Claridge, 4 Taunt. 807.

A solicitor has a lien on papers delivered to him in that character for all professional business, but no lien as a solicitor on papers delivered to him as steward. Champernown v. Scott, 6 Madd. 93.

Deeds deposited with a solicitor for a particular purpose, and after that had failed permitted to remain with him, are subject to the general lien. Ex parte Pemberton, 18 Ves. jun. 282.

A. is employed for some time by Messrs. B. as their attorney, and in the course of such employment a considerable debt becomes due to him;

Messrs. B. contract to sell an estate to C. who pays to them a part of the purchase money, and A. is employed in preparing the contract and making out the title. The solicitor of C. prepares the draft of the conveyance which is sent to A., and approved by him on behalf of Messrs. B., and the engrossment is afterwards executed by Messrs. B., and delivered by them to A. for the purpose of being handed over to C., on payment of the remainder of the purchase money. Before this is done, Messrs. B. become bankrupts, and the contract is rescinded:—Held, that A. has no lien on the deeds for the debt due to him from Messrs. B., but that C. is entitled to have the deeds delivered to him. Oxenham v. Esdaile, 2 Y. & J. 493; S. C. nom. Esdaile v. Oxenham, 5 D. & R. 49; 3 B. & C. 225.

Trover against an attorney for deeds; cause referred; award, a nonsuit, and each party to pay his own costs:—Held, that the attorney had no lien on the deeds for the costs:—Held, also, that the attorney had no lien on the deeds for expenses incurred by him in consequence of applications made to him for the deeds. In re Sharpe, 1 Dowl. P. C. 432.

Quære, whether an attorney's lien upon papers extends to the original will of his client. Georges v. Georges, 18 Ves. jun. 294.

In a late case it was held that a solicitor has no lien upon the will of his client. Balch v. Symes, 1 Turn. & Russ. 87.

A mortgagee's attorney having possession of the title deeds has a lien upon such deeds for costs due to him from the mortgagee. Ogle v. Storey, 1 Nev. & M. 474.

Where a party has a pressing necessity for papers in the hands of his solicitor, the court will order them to be delivered up upon a deposit being made sufficient to cover the amount of the solicitor's bill and the costs of taxation. Clutton v. Pardon, 1 Turn. & Russ. 304.

In a suit instituted against a solicitor, who had also acted in the capacity of steward, for an account and for delivery of title deeds, the court, upon motion, ordered the deeds to be delivered up to the plaintiff, upon payment into court of so much of the balance claimed by the answer as was not covered by any security. Balch v. Symes, 1 Turn. & Russ. 87.

A solicitor, who has declined to proceed with a cause, will be ordered, though his bills of costs are not paid, to deliver the papers up to the present solicitor of the party, the latter undertaking to hold them subject to the former solicitor's lien, for what shall be found due to him on the taxation of the bills. Colegrave v. Manley, 1 Turn. & Russ. 400.

Where an attorney has a lien upon the papers of two persons jointly, the court will not try the rights of the parties by directing to whom they shall be given up upon the lien being satisfied. Duncan v. Richmond, 1 Moore, 99; 7 Taunt. 391.

A solicitor is bound to produce papers of his client for him, or in case of his bankruptcy for his assignees, though not employed by them in the cause, for the purpose of which he received them; but not bound without payment to deliver them up, or produce them in any other business. Ross v. Loughton, 1 Ves. & B. 349.

2. For what Costs.

An attorney has a lien upon deeds, papers, and writings belonging to a bankrupt, not merely for his bill for business done before the bankruptcy, but for the costs of an action brought against the bankrupt after the commission issued, to recover the amount of his bill, unless it appears that, as an attorney, he had improperly commenced the action for the purpose of increasing costs. Lambert v. Buckmaster, 4 D. & R. 125; 2 B. & C. 616.

A defendant being sued by bill as an attorney of the court of King's Bench, pleaded by an attorney who had not filed any warrant to defend, and on motion to stay the proceedings in the action (in which the plaintiff was nonsuited), the plaintiff undertook to set off the defendant's costs against a judgment debt due from him to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant's attorney or agent had no lien upon such costs for his own costs in defending the suit. Van Sandau v. Burt, 1 D. & R. 168: S. C. not S. P. 5 B. & A. 42.

A solicitor's lien does not extend to debts that are not due to him in his professional character. Worrall v. Johnson, 2 J. & W. 218.

Quære, whether a solicitor's lien for his costs on a fund in court is general, or is confined to the costs of the particular suit. Id.

A solicitor having in his possession the instrument on which his client's right to a fund in court rests, he has a general lien on that ground. Id.

3. On Debt and Costs recovered.

On Debt recovered.—An attorney has a lien upon a sum awarded in favour of his client, as well as if recovered by judgment; and, if, after notice to the defendant, the latter pay it over to the plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney may compel a re-payment of it to himself. Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464.

An attorney has a lien for his bill of costs, on money levied by the sheriff under an execution on a judgment recovered by his client, and is entitled to have it paid over to him, notwithstanding the sheriff has had notice from the party, against whom the execution issued, to retain the money in his hands, and that the court would be moved to set aside the judgment for irregularity; and notwithstanding a docket has been struck against the client who has become a bankrupt. Griffin v. Eyles, 1 H. Black. 122.

The statute of limitations bars the remedy only, not the debt; and, therefore, where an attorney for a plaintiff had obtained judgment, and the defendant was afterwards discharged under the Lords' Act, but at a subsequent period a fi. fa. issued against his goods, upon which the sheriff levied the damages and costs; it was held, that the attorney, though he had taken no step in the cause, or to recover the amount of his bill of costs, within six years, had still a lien on the judgment for his bill of costs; and the court directed the sheriff to pay him the amount out of the proceeds of the goods. Higgins v. Scott, 2 B. & Adol. 413.

Where there are Cross Actions.—It was formerly held in C. P. that the right between party and party was paramount to the rights between one of the parties and his attorney, where there were cross actions. Lomas v. Mellor, 5 Moore, 95.

Semble, in the Exchequer, that the lien of the attorney on the costs in the cause was not subject to the equity of the claim of the other party, for the costs of another suit. Gabbit v. Chaytor, 1 Anst. 279.

In another case it was held, that the attorney's lien was only on the balance, subject to the equitable rights of the parties inter se. Lane v. Pearce, 12 Price, 742.

In K. B. the lien of the plaintiff's attorney upon the debts and costs recovered in a cause, extended only to the general balance of the costs, where the defendant was entitled to set off costs recovered by him in another cause against the plaintiff. Howell v. Harding, 8 East, 362: S. P. Randle v. Fuller, 6 T. R. 456.

Now, by rule of all the courts, no set off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed, to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in the particular suits against which the set off is sought: provided that interlocutory costs in the same suit awarded to the adverse party may be deducted. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 196; 8 Bing. 303; 1 M. & Scott, 429; 3 B. & Adol. 388; 2 C. & J. 195; 2 Tyr. 349; 4 Bligh, N. S. 604.

Where the defendant applied to set off the costs and damages recovered in an action brought by him against the costs and damages recovered in an action brought against him:—Held, in K. B., that the plaintiff's attorney had a lien upon the judgment obtained by his client against the defendant for the amount of his costs in that cause only. Stephens v. Weston, 5 D. & R. 399; 3 B. & C. 535.

Costs in error are costs in a cause, where an attorney has a lien on debt and costs recovered after affirmance in error, and the defendant is entitled to set off against them a judgment recovered by him in another cause against the plaintiff. Middleton v. Hill, 1 M. & S. 240.

Plaintiff obtained judgments against the defendant in two actions, in the court of C. P., and the defendant obtained judgment against the plaintiff in the court of K. B.:—Held, that the attorney had no lien for his costs upon the judgments in the court of C. P.; and having refused to allow them to be set off against the judgment in K. B., the court ordered him to pay the costs of the application. Bridges v. Smith, 1 Dowl. P. C. 242; 1 M. & Scott, 93; 8 Bing. 29.

On Costs.—An attorney has a lien on interlocutory costs under an order of a judge. Aspinall v. Stamp, 4 D. & R. 716; 3 B. & C. 108.

Where one party owing rent had obtained a verdict on a variance, and had become insolvent, the court of C. P. permitted the avowant to amend, and to pay the costs of the former trial into court, as a fund for payment of his rent, in derogation of the plaintiff's attorney's lien. Brown v. Sayce, 4 Taunt. 320.

4. On Person of Defendant.

The plaintiff having charged the defendant in execution, died; the defendant's wife took out administration to the plaintiff; then the court of K. B. ordered the defendant to be discharged out of custody, saying, that the plaintiff's attorney had no lien on the judgment for his costs. Pyne v. Erle, 8 T. R. 407.

The plaintiff's attorney directed the sheriff's officer who had arrested the defendant, not to let him go at large without an express consent from him, as he had a lien for his costs; the sheriff's officer did, by the authority of the plaintiff, but without that of the attorney, let the defendant go at large:—Held, that the sheriff was not liable to the attorney for his costs. Martin v. Francis, 2 B. & A. 402; 1 Chit. 241.

5. On Property recovered in Equity.

A solicitor prosecuting to a decree has a lien on the estate recovered, in the hands of the person recovering, for his bill, but not in the hands of the heir. Barnesley v. Powell, Amb. 102.

But, as he has no lien on a fund decreed to his client beyond his costs in that suit, he cannot claim the amount of other costs due to him in other suits. Lann v. Church, 4 Madd. 391.

A solicitor having declined to act for his client, has no lien for his costs upon a fund in court. Creswell v. Byron, 14 Ves. jun. 271.

A solicitor who receives rents in a cause without the authority of the court, cannot retain them on the ground of lien. Wickens v. Townshend, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 361.

6. When extinguished.

(a) By Settlement of Parties.

Collusive Compromise.—A defendant settling a matter in dispute with the plaintiff, in the absence of the plaintiff's attorney, after having been served with process, does not bind the plaintiff's attorney. Cole v. Bennett, 6 Price, 15.

A plaintiff may, without consulting his attorney, compromise an action with the defendant, and take on himself the payment of the costs to the attorney, if there be no fraudulent conspiracy to cheat the attorney of his costs. Chapman v. Haw, 1 Taunt. 341.

If a plaintiff compromise an action with the defendant, without consulting his attorney, and the latter proceed in the action to secure his costs, he is bound to make out a clear case of collusion between the plaintiff and defendant to deprive him of such costs. Nelson v. Wilson, 4 M. & P. 385; 6 Bing. 568.

If a plaintiff compromise the debt and costs with the defendant before the plaintiff's attorney has been paid, the court will not oblige the defendant to pay him, unless he gave notice to the defendant not to settle with the plaintiff till his bill should be paid. Welsh v. Hole, 1 Dougl. 238.

If the defendant's attorney pay to the plaintiff the debt and costs recovered, after notice from the plaintiff's attorney not to do so till his bill has been first satisfied, the former is liable to pay over again to the latter the amount of his lien on such debt and costs of the suit. Read v. Duppa, 6 T. R. 361.

Where the amount of damages sought to be recovered in an action is unliquidated, the parties may compromise, without regard to the plaintiff's attorney's claim to costs. Ex parte Hart, 1 Dowl. P. C. 324; 1 B. & Adol. 660.

In an action for excessive distress, the defendant compromised with plaintiff, after notice from plaintiff's attorney not to do so without his consent; the court refused to interpose on behalf of the attorney, the case being one of purely unliquidated damages. Id.

Where a plaintiff and defendant collude in the settlement of an action, in order to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, and a bill for debt and costs is given by the defendant in furtherance of that collusion, the court will compel the delivery up of that bill. Gould v. Davis, 1 Dowl. P. C. 288; 1 C. & J. 415; 1 Tyr. 380.

Release.—A release of all demands from the plaintiff to the defendant will not deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his lien upon the costs of an action awarded in favour of the plaintiff. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 109; S. P. Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464.

Entry as Satisfaction.—Where the plaintiff, after judgment recovered, settled the action with the defendant, and employed a new attorney to enter up satisfaction on the record:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to be discharged out of custody, although the lien of the plaintiff's attorney on the costs had not been satisfied. Marr v. Smith, 4 B. & A. 466.

Where an attorney, without a regular authority from the plaintiff, commenced an action of replevin, and the plaintiff, with a knowledge of the proceedings, suffered the cause to be carried down to trial, but afterwards concerting with the defendant, entered up satisfaction on the record without securing to the attorney his costs, the court refused to vacate the entry of satisfaction. Abbott v. Rice, 3 Bing. 132; 10 Moore, 489.

What Course an Attorney may pursue.—Payment of debt to plaintiff after action brought, without the knowledge of the attorney and without costs, is no stay to the action. Toms v. Powell, 7 East, 536; 3 Smith, 554; 6 Esp. 40; S. P. Atkinson v. Thornton, 1 Camp. 559, n.; Holland v. Jourdine, Holt, 6.

And if a defendant pays the plaintiff, after the writ is sued out, without discharging the costs, the attorney may proceed in the cause notwithstanding. Id.

Yet he will not be allowed to make use of his client's name in proceeding in an action, for the purpose of trying whether, at the time of settlement, he was entitled to the costs of a declaration. Charwood v. Berridge, 1 Esp. 345—Eyre.

An attorney is entitled to his costs for writing a letter demanding a debt from a defendant before writ issued. Morrison v. Summers, 1 Dowl. P. C. 325; 1 B. & Adol. 559.

A plaintiff's attorney in London, on 10th April, applied to defendant living in the country, for the payment of a debt, and of 5s. for a letter. The defendant replied that he would pay in a fortnight. On the 14th, the attorney, in answer, stated, if the debt was paid on the 21st no further expense would be incurred, and demanded 13s. 4d. for his costs. On the same day, and before the receipt of that letter, the defendant remitted the debt to plaintiff, through a banker; and on the following day the plaintiff received it, and gave a receipt. On the 15th, the attorney, with the view of receiving his costs, sued out a writ; and on discovering afterwards that the plaintiff had been paid, informed the defendant, that, unless 1l. 1s. was paid him, he should proceed in the action for his costs:—Held, that as the remitting of the money to the plaintiff, and not to the attorney, was a breach of good faith, the court would only stay the proceedings on the terms of paying the 13s. 4d., and the costs of the application. Id.

If the plaintiff and defendant collusively settle the debt and costs upon an execution, in order to defraud the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, the plaintiff's attorney cannot sue out a second execution on the same judgment to levy his costs, but must apply to the court. Graves v. Eades, 1 Marsh. 113; 5 Taunt. 429.

But if a plaintiff collude with the defendant's bail and his attorney, to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, by settling a debt, and accepting part payment without the intervention of the plaintiff's attorney, the court of C. P. will not restrain the plaintiff's attorney from proceeding against the bail in order to recover such costs. Sagoin v. Senate, 2 N. R. 99.

Upon a party changing his solicitor, the former solicitor has a lien for his costs upon papers in his hands, but cannot otherwise stop the progress of the cause till he is paid. Merryweather v. Mellish, 13 Ves. jun. 161; S. P. Tuart v. Dayrell, 13 Ves. jun. 195.

(b) By other Means.

Where C. gave his attorney a specific sum for the purpose of satisfying a debt, for which an execution had issued against his goods at the suit of B., and the attorney paid the money to B., who thereupon delivered to him a lease which had been deposited by C. with B. as a security for the debt:—Held, that the attorney had a lien on it for his general balance due from C.; and that such lien was not extinguished by his having taken acceptances from C. for the amount of that balance before the lease came to his hands, some of those acceptances, when the lease did come to his hands, having been dishonoured, and one of them taken up by the attorney. Stevenson v. Blakelock, 1 M. & S. 535.

A solicitor's lien is superseded by taking a security. Balch v. Symes, 1 Turn. & Russ. 92; S. P. Cowell v. Simpson, 16 Ves. jun. 275.

A solicitor relinquishes his lien on papers in his hands by obtaining an order to tax his bill, and to prove for the amount. Ex parte Innes, Buck, 357.

Though an order be made on a petition in bankruptcy, directing costs to be paid to the petitioner personally, this does not take away the lien of the solicitor for his costs. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Madd. 49.

The solicitor is not deprived of his lien on the funds in court, for his costs in the cause, by having issued an attachment against his client, and committed him to gaol for non-payment of his bill; but the costs which he may receive in the cause are to be taken in discharge of the attachment pro tanto. Davies v. Bush, 1 Younge, 358.

XI. AGENT IN TOWN.

Authority of.—The acts of an attorney's agent in town, in matters relative to the suit, are binding upon the parties. Griffiths v. Williams, 1 T. R. 710.

The death of a principal attorney, pending a suit, does not revoke his agent's authority to obtain possession of a postea, after a verdict found for the client of the former. Taunton v. Goforth, 6 D. & R. 384.

Recovery of Costs.—An attorney employing an agent to do business for his client, is primarily liable to such agent for his bill, though the latter knows the business to be done for the client; but to whom the credit is given is a question for the jury. Scrace v. Whittington, 3 D. & R. 195; 2 B. & C. 11.

An order was made in Chancery on the application of a solicitor to tax his own agent's bill. Corner v. Hake, 2 Cox, 173.

Lien of.—A town agent has no lien for the general balance due to him from a country attorney, upon money of a client of the latter coming to his hands in a cause in which he acts as such town agent, because he must have known that the money was received for the client's use; but quære, whether he has not a lien for his agency in recovering the money in the particular cause. Moody v. Spencer, 2 D. & R. 6.

Where the plaintiff's attorney was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum exceeding the attorney's costs in the cause:—Held, that the agent (to whom the plaintiff's attorney was indebted on a general account in a sum exceeding the amount of the attorney's costs) could not, as against the plaintiff, retain out of the sum recovered by him more than the charge for agency in that particular cause. White v. Royal Exchange Assurance, 7 Moore, 249; 1 Bing. 20.

An agent has a lien upon the papers in his hands for what was due to him as agent in the cause from the solicitor in the country. Ward v. Hepple, 15 Ves. jun. 297: S. P. Ex parte Steele, 16 Ves. jun. 164.

The town agents of a bankrupt country attorney have a lien against his assignees, on papers of the client placed in their (the agent's) hands for the conduct of the business, for the amount of their bill against the attorney for the business done on the part of the client. Bray v. Hine, 6 Price, 203.

An agent for an attorney plaintiff, dying intestate and insolvent pending a suit, has a lien for his costs upon a postea, of which he has obtained possession after the death of the intestate. Taunton v. Goforth, 6 D. & R. 384.

XII. CHANGE OF ATTORNIES.

A party in a cause cannot change his attorney or solicitor without the leave of the court. Macpherson v. Robinson, 1 Dougl. 217: S. P. Thwart v. Dayrell, 13 Ves. jun. 196.

Where a defendant has appeared and pleaded to an action by one attorney, he cannot make any application to the court by another in the same cause, unless he has obtained an order for changing his attorney. Ginders v. Moore, 1 B. & C. 654.

An inoperative plea having been put in without authority, by a new attorney for the defendant, without any order to change the attorney, the judgment which had been signed as for want of a plea was set aside. Perry v. Fisher, 6 East, 549.

But taking a plea out of the office and keeping it waives the irregularity of its having been pleaded by a new attorney without an order. Margerem v. Makilwaine, 2 N. R. 509.

Notice of justification of bail by a new attorney, changed without a rule of court, is irregular. Hill v. Roe, 2 Marsh. 257; 6 Taunt. 532: S. P. Kaye v. De Mattos, 2 W. Black. 1325.

And the bail will not be permitted to justify. Macpherson v. Robinson, 1 Dougl. 217: S. P. Anon. 2 Chit. 87.

But in the case of a prisoner, notice of bail may be given by one attorney, and notice of justification by another. Crow v. Watson, 2 Chit. 93: S. P. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 259; Keys v. Tavernier, 1 Chit. 29.

The court granted a rule nisi for an attachment against the sheriff, where bail was put in by a new attorney without an order to change the attorney. Anon. 2 Chit. 76.

It was no objection to the justification of bail in the Exchequer, that the bail were put in by one clerk in court, and the notice of justification and of added bail given by another, if there was an affidavit that the latter were added and notice given by the bail to the sheriff. Hancock v. Grew, 1 Y. & J. 456: S. P. Hopkins v. Peacock, 5 Price, 558.

But time was given to change the attorney regularly. Malperson's Bail, 2 Chit. 93.

A notice of bail given by the defendant's attorney, and bail above put in by an attorney employed by the bail to the sheriff, without an order having been made for changing, was held sufficient. Plomer v. Houghton, 2 B. & A. 604: S. C. nom. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 201, 329.

Upon the death of the attorney in the cause, notice must be given to the opposite party of the appointment of the new attorney, before he can proceed in the cause. Ryland v. Noakes, 1 Taunt. 342.

A party called on to shew cause may oppose the rule in person, or by a new attorney, without notice to the other party of the order to change his attorney. Lovegrove v. Dymond, 4 Taunt. 669.

Also, in C. P., a plaintiff may sue out execution by a different attorney without an order to change. Tipping v. Johnson, 2 B. & P. 357.

And in K. B. a defendant may bring a writ of error without such an order. Batchelor v. Ellis, 7 T. R. 337.

The Exchequer did not formerly take notice of the immediate attorney in the cause, the proceedings being carried on there in the names of the clerks of the court. Hopkins v. Peacock, 5 Price, 558.

In C. P., where there is an order for changing upon payment of the first attorney's bill upon taxation, and delivery up of papers, the first attorney is entitled to the possession of it to enforce payment of his bill. Alger v. Hefford, 1 Taunt. 38.

It is unnecessary to file a new warrant when the attorney has been changed. Wood v. Plant, 1 Taunt. 44.

The obtaining an order, by consent, to change the attorney is not a proceeding in the cause so as to make it unnecessary to give a term's notice. Deacon v. Fuller, 1 C. & M. 349; 1 Dowl. P.C. 675.

A party may change his solicitor who has a lien for his costs upon papers in his possession. Thwart v. Dayrell, 13 Ves. jun. 195: S. P. Merryweather v. Mellish, 13 Ves. jun. 161.

XIII. ACTIONS AGAINST ATTORNIES.

Process.]—On suing out an attachment of privilege, a præcipe must have been left with the prothonotary in C. P. Progatt v. Tapscot, 2 W. Black. 919.

But the attorney's name need not be indorsed on the writ: the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 22, only applying to cases where the attorney sues for another person. Fields v. Leuen, 4 T. R. 275.

An attorney plaintiff may sue by common process, and indorse his own name on the copy as attorney, and may afterwards declare by another attorney. Jackson v. Barnard, 7 T. R. 35.

Filing Bill.]—Before the uniformity of process act, attorneys must have been sued by bill, which might have been filed in vacation. Waghorne v.

Fields, 5 T. R. 173; S. P. Lane v. Wheat, 1 Dougl. 313, n.; Dodsworth v. Bowen, 5 T. R. 325. And see Crook v. Eyles, 2 Marsh. 49; 6 Taunt. 347; Stock v. Eyles, 2 Marsh. 54; Parrott v. Spraggon, 2 H. Black. 608; Snell v. Phillips, Peake, 209.

As to the mode of proceeding by bill, see Hartop v. Jukes, 1 M. & S. 709; Constable v. Edwards, 1 Tidd's Prac. 323; Anon. Lofft, 653.

As to the service of bills, see Anon. Lofft, 357; — v. Hough, 1 Tidd's Prac. 323.

AUDITA QUERELA.

The writ of audita querela is of common right. Giles v. Nathan, 5 Taunt. 558; 1 Marsh. 226; S. P. Lister v. Mandell, 1 B. & P. 427.

Where a writ of audita querela clearly affords relief to the defendant, the court will relieve him on motion, without putting him to the audita querela. Id.

But where the relief is questionable, the court will not dispose of the case on motion, but leave the defendant so to proceed that the plaintiff may demur or bring error. Id.

And therefore the court refused to dispose of a writ of audita querela by a motion in arrest of judgment, where the parties seriously argued the question. Id.

If bail, being fixed with the debt, and having paid it, sue the principal and obtain judgment, after a commission of bankrupt has issued against him, but before he has obtained his certificate; and after he obtains it, the bail in the second action apply to be exonerated, on the ground that the plaintiffs, the bail in the original action, might prove their debt under the commission, by virtue of stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8: the court refused to interfere summarily, but left the bail to their writ of audita querela. Hewes v. Mott, and Dalby v. Same, 2 Marsh. 37; 6 Taunt. 329; 2 Rose, 455.

The defendants being bankrupt were sued, and suffered judgment by default in Trinity Term, and final judgment was entered up and execution issued thereon in Michaelmas Term following; on the 13th November, in that term, the defendants obtained their certificate, and on the same day the sheriff's officer levied, and he, notwithstanding a notice that the defendant's certificate had been allowed, being about to sell the goods seized, the defendants paid the amount of the debt and costs into court under a judge's order, to abide the event of a motion. On application by the defendants to have the money paid out to them, the court refused to interfere; but left the parties to their audita querela, although it was insisted that, by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 126, the goods as well as the persons of bankrupts are protected. Hanson v. Blakey, 1 M. & P. 261; 4 Bing. 493.

Where fraud was imputed to the defendant, on affidavits, stating that he had fraudulently caused a commission of bankruptcy to be issued against the plaintiff, and there were counter-affidavits by the defendant, denying the existence of fraud, the court of C. P. refused to go into the question on motion, but left the party to his remedy by action, or audita querela. Baker v. Ridgway, 2 Bing. 41; 9 Moore, 114.

VI. RIGHTS AND LIABILITY OF BAIL TO THE SHERIFF, 219.

not be avoided for any trifling informality or variance of the condition from the writ, in the description of the plea, or of the time or place of appearance, or of the sum. Atkinson v. Saunders, 1 Tidd's Prac. 223; 4 Dougl. 254.

Under a writ in a plea of trespass on the case upon promises, the sheriff took a bond conditioned for appearance in a plea of trespass; it was held good, for it is sufficient to state the names of the parties, and the time and place of appearance. Owen v. Nail, 6 T. R. 702.

Where the writ was to appear before the king, "wheresoever he should then be in England," and the sheriff took a bond for appearance before the king "at Westminster:"—Held, that it was a substantial compliance with the statute. Jones v. Sturdy, 9 East, 55.

Where, in an action on a bail-bond, the special original was returnable before the king wheresoever, &c., and the word "ubicunque" was omitted:—Held, that the omission was not fatal. Shuttleworth v. Pilkington, 1 T. R. 240, n.

But where a capias ad respondendum was returnable "before his Majesty's justices of the bench at Westminster," by virtue of which the sheriff issued his mandate to the bailiff of a liberty, commanding him to take the defendant, so that the sheriff might have his body "before his said Majesty at Westminster," and the bailiff took a bail-bond conditioned for the defendant's appearance "before his said Majesty at Westminster:"—Held, that the variance between the bail-bond and the writ was fatal, and the bond was void. Renalds v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 258; 6 Taunt. 551.

By the writ, the sheriff was commanded to take W. P. and one S. P., and him and the said S. P. safely keep until he and S. P. should have given him bail in an action of assumpsit at the suit of the plaintiff. The sheriff took a bail-bond conditioned for the appearance of W. P. alone:—Held (on general demurrer to a declaration on the bond) to be no variance. Grottick v. Phillips, 3 M. & Scott, 132; 9 Bing. 721.

Quere, if the demurrer had been special. Id.

II. DISCHARGE OF BAIL-BOND.

1. By Surrender of Principal.

If the defendant, who has given a bail-bond, surrender himself to the sheriff, before or on the return of the writ, the bond may be given up, and it will be considered as if no such bond had been given. Jones v. Lander, 6 T. R. 753; S. P. Stamper v. Milbourne, 7 T. R. 122; Galloway v. Seymour, 1 Tidd's Prac. 225. But see Harrison v. Davis, 5 Burr. 2683.

But not unless he give notice of such surrender. Maddecks v. Bullock, 1 B. & P. 325.

It is optional with the sheriff, whether or not he will accept such surrender. Hamilton v. Wilson, 1 East, 383.

Where the principal surrendered to the jailor at the county jail, in discharge of his bail to the sheriff, before twelve o'clock on the first day of term, being the return-day of the writ, and the under-sheriff signed his assent to the surrender by return of post the next day, at the distance of seventeen miles:—Held sufficient to discharge the bail-bond, of which the plaintiff had taken an assignment, with notice of the render, and the court stayed the proceedings. Plimpton v. Howell, 10 East, 100.

And where a defendant applied to the under-sheriff, before the return of the writ, to surrender himself in discharge of his bail, which he refused to accept, without assigning any reason for so doing, and the day after surrendered himself to the keeper of the county jail, which was also before the writ was returnable, and the bail-bond was afterwards assigned to the plaintiff; the court of C. P. ordered the proceedings on it to be stayed, without costs. Lewis v. Davies, 5 Moore, 267.

Where the principal surrendered in time, but the bail omitted to give regular notice of it to the plaintiff, in consequence of which he proceeded upon the bail-bond, the court, on the application of the bail, set aside the proceedings on payment of costs, even after execution levied, and the money in the sheriff's hands. Lepine v. Barrett, 8 T. R. 222.

If A., being arrested by B., on process of C. P., give bail to the sheriff, and before the return of the writ, being again arrested by C., is committed to the Fleet Prison, after which, and before the return of the first writ, B. takes an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceeds thereon, the court will stay such proceedings; but will not make B. pay costs, for they will not try upon affidavit, whether he knew or not that A. was in custody, but will consider him ignorant of that fact, unless notice of surrender has been regularly given. Harding v. Hennem, 3 B. & P. 232.

The court will stay the proceedings on a bail-bond without costs, if the notice of render be given before the assignment; but not otherwise. Anon. 2 Chit. 103.

A surrender after bail above put in, but not perfected, though before an assignment of the bail-bond, does not discharge the bail to the sheriff. Turner v. Wheatley, 1 Price, 262.

Where a plaintiff had proceeded on an assignment taken after the render of the defendant, who had put in bail, whom he had insufficiently described, so that time was necessarily given for furnishing a better description, during which interval such further description was not given, nor was any attempt afterwards made to justify, the court set aside the proceedings on the assignment of the bond. Richardson v. Hodgson, 11 Price, 633.

Semble, that rendering the defendant to the King's Bench prison, before the return of the writ, will not discharge the bail to the sheriff. Foster v. Hyde, 1 Tidd's Prac. 225, 306.

The court of Exchequer will stay proceedings against bail, where the principal has rendered on terms. Stenden v. Blakie, 13 Price, 114; McCl. 44.

2. By other Means.

Delay in Proceeding.]—The bail-bond cannot be assigned, when the original suit is out of court by not declaring in time. Sparrow v. Naylor, 2 W. Black. 876.

But if the assignment be taken before the suit is out of court, it may be proceeded upon afterwards. Piggott v. Truste, 3 B. & P. 221; Collett v. Blend, 4 Taunt. 715.

But the court will stay such proceedings, if it appear that the plaintiff has been guilty of laches. Id.

Where the defendant neglects to put in and perfect bail, and the plaintiff omits to declare within two terms after the return of the writ, he is not out of court, but may take an assignment of the bail-bond. Carmichael v. Chandler, 3 Dougl. 432.

Proceedings against bail below will be stayed on motion (on payment of costs) where the plaintiff has not proceeded against them on the bond as early as he might have done, even where a trial has been lost, if there be reason, on their part, to think that the plaintiff did not mean to proceed in the action. Ditchett v. Tollett, 3 Price, 257.

Giving Time to Principal.]—After a bail-bond has been forfeited, and an assignment thereof taken, time given to the principal is no discharge of the sureties. Wootnam v. Price, 1 C. & J. 352.

Bankruptcy of Principal.]—Where the defendant was arrested on the 27th March, on a writ returnable on the 16th April, and became bankrupt on the 3d of that month, and obtained his certificate on the 26th June following:—Held, that as the bankruptcy took place before the bail-bond was forfeited, the bail were discharged. Littlewood v. Crowther, 3 D. & R. 533.

On a motion to cancel a bail-bond, on the ground that the defendant (a bankrupt) had since obtained his certificate, it being suggested that the certificate had been obtained by fraud, the court (the parties consenting) directed an issue to try that fact. Duncan v. Everett, 1 M. & Scott, 521.

After staying proceedings in an action on the bail-bond, there may be a plea of bankruptcy in the original action, where the bail-bond is not ordered to stand as security. Sainsbury v. Gandon, 3 M. & R. 16.

Other Things.]—It is no ground for cancelling a bail-bond, that the attorney who sued out the writ had neglected to take out his certificate. Welch v. Pribble, 1 D. & R. 215.

If a defendant be sent out of the kingdom as an alien, after he has given a bail-bond, and before the return of the writ, the court will order the bail-bond to be cancelled. Postel v. Williams, 7 T. R. 517.

III. FORFEITURE OF BAIL-BOND.

1. By not giving Bail.

No bail-bond taken in London or Middlesex shall be put in suit until after the expiration of four days; nor if taken elsewhere, till after the expiration of eight days exclusive from the appearance day of the process. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott. 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Before this rule, it was held that a bail-bond could not be put in suit till after four days from the appearance day of the return of the writ. Bellis v. Mitford, 2 W. Black. 1009.

But that it was forfeited on the quarto die post, the other four days being allowed merely as grace and favour. Coulson v. Hammond, 4 D. & R. 160; 2 B. & C. 626.

In C. P., no bail-bond taken in London or Middlesex, by virtue of any process returnable in C. P. on the first return of a term, could be put in suit until after the 5th day in full term, nor bonds taken in other places until after the 9th day: nor, if under process returnable on the 2d or subsequent returns, until after the end of four and eight days respectively, exclusive of the return day of the process. Reg. Gen. C. P., T. T. 30 Geo. 3, 1 H. Black. 526.

If the fourth day for perfecting bail be the last day of term, and the bail be not perfected before the rising of the court on that day, an assignment of the bail-bond to the plaintiff, in the evening of that day, is regular. Dent v. Weston, 8 T. R. 4.

So, if the bail do not justify in four days after exception, although, from the bail having been put in sooner than was necessary, the rule for bringing in the body has not expired. Bond v. Evans, 7 D. & R. 374; 4 B. & C. 864. See Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298—Bayley.

It seems that where bail do not appear to justify on the day mentioned in the notice, but on a subsequent day, according to further notice, and the plaintiff, on the morning of the last day, takes an assignment of the bail-bond, and sues out process, the proceedings are not premature, although the rule for the allowance of bail be served on the same day. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

After default made in not putting in special bail in time, it is not enough that bail are afterwards put in; but the plaintiff may take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon, unless the bail be also justified, though not before excepted to. Turner v. Cary, 7 East, 607; S. P. Nuun v. Rogers, 2 Chit. 108. And see Fuller v. Prest, 7 T. R. 109; Pariente v. Plumbtree, 2 B. & A. 35; and Murray v. Durand, 1 Esp. 87.

Where bail above are put in, but not justified, and the sheriff, being fixed, brings an action on the bail-bond, to which the defendant pleads compertuit ad diem; the court of C. P. will, on motion by the sheriff, order the recognizance of bail in the original action to be struck off the file; though the defendant allege that the sheriff was fixed through his own negligence; for that should be the subject of a motion to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond. Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

If the defendant do not justify his bail in due time, and comperuit ad diem be pleaded to a declaration on the bail-bond, the court will order the appearance of the defendant to be recorded as of the day on which the bail justified. Ladd v. Arnaboldi, 1 C. & J. 97.

So, where bail justified at chambers by consent, and no rule for allowance was served, nor notice that they had justified given. Bignold v. Holding, 2 D. & R. 436; S. C. nom. Bignold v. Lee, 1 B. & C. 285.

If the rule for allowance of bail be not served on the plaintiff, he may take an assignment of the bail-bond though he knows of the justification. Holland v. White, 2 B. P. 341.

The court will not stay proceedings upon a bail-bond, upon the ground that the affidavit upon which the bail above were rejected as founded on perjury, except upon the usual terms of paying the costs incurred by the assignment and subsequent proceedings. Hobbs v. Miller, 1 Y. & J. 403.

A rule nisi for setting aside bailable process, &c. "with a stay of proceedings," does not enlarge the time for the defendant to put in and perfect bail, until the rule is disposed of, so as to place him in the same situation as he was in at the time the rule nisi was granted. St. Hanliare v. Byam, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970. And see Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 534.

Process being returnable on the 7th of November, the time to put in bail expired on the 11th. On the 10th, defendant obtained a rule nisi to set aside process and stay proceedings, on the ground of misnomer. This rule was discharged with costs on the 21st. On the 22d, an assignment of the bail-bond was taken, and proceedings had under it, and on the same day the defendant put in bail:—Held, that the defendant had not the whole of the 22d to put in bail, and that the assignment of the bail-bond, and the proceedings had under it, were regular. Id.

Since the uniformity of process act, suing out the writ of summons is the commencement of the action for all purposes. Where the defendant was arrested on the 1st of April, and, owing to Easter Monday and Tuesday falling on the 8th and 9th, had the 10th to put in bail, and the plaintiff on the 10th took an assignment of the bail-bond, and issued a writ of summons against the bail, the court set aside the proceeding on the bail-bond. Alston v. Underhill, 1 C. & M. 492.

2. By putting in disqualified Persons.

If a disqualified person be put in as bail and not excepted to, the plaintiff could not in K. B. proceed on the bail-bond as if no bail had been put in. Thompson v. Roubell, 2 Dougl. 467, n.

If bail be put in without any description, one of whom proves to be clerk to an attorney, and the other a person in low situation, plaintiff may in C. P. take an assignment of the bail-bond. Fenton v. Ruggles, 1 B. & P. 356.

So, if both bail be attorney's clerks. Wallace v. Arrowsmith, 2 B. & P. 49.

3. Irregular Proceedings.

Where the notice of bail is merely informal, and not an absolute nullity, the plaintiff cannot take an assignment of the bail-bond. Bell v. Foster, 1 M. & Scott, 518; 8 Bing. 334; 1 Dowl. P. C. 271.

Where a rule for staying proceedings on a bail-bond had been obtained by one of the bail on an affidavit, which stated an engagement between himself and the plaintiff, to absolve him from his obligation on payment of a sum of money at a future day, upon the ground of a breach of faith in proceeding before the time; and the plaintiff met the application by a distinct denial of the engagement on affidavit:—The court discharged the rule with costs. Sweeting v. Weaver, 11 Price, 735.

IV. ASSIGNMENT OF BAIL-BOND.

1. Statute, and Form.

By 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 20, the sheriff or other officer, at the request and costs of the plaintiff, is to assign to the plaintiff the bail-bond or other security, by indorsing the same, and attesting it under his hand and seal, in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, which might be done without any stamp, provided the assignment were duly stamped before any action brought thereon; and if the bail-bond be forfeited, the plaintiff, after such assignment, may bring an action thereon in his own name, and the court where the action is brought may, by rule, give such relief to the plaintiff and defendant in the original action, and to the bail, as is agreeable to justice and reason.

The stamp required on the assignment is now no longer necessary, by 5 Geo. 4, c. 41.

Under this statute it has been held, that the seal to the assignment of a bail-bond, being a seal of office, is sufficient to give it validity, who ever signed it; and, therefore, it is no objection that it was signed by one of the under-sheriff's clerks. Hams v. Ashby, 1 Selw. N. P. 586, n.—Mansfield.

To a plea in an action on a bail-bond at the suit of the assignee of a sheriff, that the assignment of the bond was not stamped before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill in the cause, the plaintiff need merely reply that the assignment was stamped at or before the exhibiting of the bill, and conclude his replication to the country; and he need not take issue as to the time when the bill was exhibited, nor aver that the assignment was stamped "before the commencement of the suit," and if the action thereon be in the K. B., and if the plaintiff avers that it was stamped at Westminster, he may nevertheless conclude to the country. Carter v. Yates, 2 Chit. 533.

2. Effect of Assignment.

If a plaintiff accept an assignment of a bail-bond, he cannot call upon the sheriff to return the writ, nor shall he have a rule for that purpose before it be determined whether or no the bond be good. Brooke (Lord) v. Stone, 1 Wils. 223.

Nor can he proceed in the original action after taking an assignment of the bail-bond, and whilst he retains his right to sue upon it. Anon. 1 Chit. 394.

Although the rule to return a writ cannot be had after the plaintiff has taken a valid assignment of the bail-bond, it is otherwise if the bond from any cause be void. Williams v. Jacques, 1 Tidd's Prac. 307.

If a plaintiff sue the bail by action, and take them in execution, he cannot afterwards take the principal, though one of the bail become bankrupt and be discharged, and the other also be discharged on payment of 5s. in the pound, and upon an understanding that the plaintiff was at liberty to proceed against the principal. Allen v. Snow, 2 M. & S. 341.

In an action by the assignees of a bail-bond, it is no objection to their recovering that the sheriff, after taking and before assigning the bond, returned non est inventus. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Adol. 223.

3. Waiver of Assignment.

(a) By excepting to Bail.

Where the defendant is guilty of a neglect in not putting in bail in time, whereby the bail-bond becomes forfeited, the plaintiff may except to bail put in to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond, and it will not be a waiver of the assignment. Bolders v. Gray, Cowp. 769.

Unless the bail below become bail above. Babb v. Barber, 1 Anst. 274.

It is not a waiver of the assignment, that the plaintiff attends to oppose the justification of bail. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

(b) By proceeding against Sheriff.

A plaintiff shall not be at liberty to proceed on the bail-bond, pending a rule to bring in the body of the defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh. N. S. 595; Reg. Gen. M. T., Exch. 1 W. 4; 1 C. & J. 281; 1 Tyr. 163.

The plaintiff may abandon an attachment, and take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon. Pople v. Wyatt, 15 East, 215. And see Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

So, where the attachment has been set aside. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 406.

Before the rule, a plaintiff might have taken an assignment of the bail-bond even after service of the rule to bring in the body, or suing for an attachment, but not after it was sued out. Poideverie v. Harvey, and Robinson v. Owen, 1 Tidd's

Prac. 297; S. P. Cunningham v. Chambers, 1 Chit. 394, n.

But where the plaintiff had ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, he could not take an assignment pending such rule. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

But must have waited till the rule expired. Whittle v. Oldaker, 1 M. & R. 298; 7 B. & C. 478.

If bail above justify before a rule to bring in the body expires, the bail below, to an action on the bond, may plead comperuit ad diem. Id.

On an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, in an action on a bail-bond, the plea is proved by the recognizance roll containing an entry of defendant's appearance generally. Id.

After an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, to an action on a bail-bond, the recognizance roll may be made up at any time before the day given for producing it. Id.

V. ACTIONS ON BAIL-BONDS.

1. In what Court.

An action may be brought upon a bail-bond by the sheriff himself in any court. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Exch. H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Before the rule, it was so held in the Exchequer. Yorke v. Ogden, 8 Price, 174.

And in C. P. Newman v. Faucitt, 1 H. Black. 631.

But the Court of K. B. held, it was immaterial whether the action was brought by the assignee of the bail-bond, or by the officer to whom it was given, for that, in either case, the action must be brought in the court where the original action was brought. Donatty v. Barclay, 8 T. R. 152.

The action by the assignee of a bail-bond must be brought in the court where the original action was laid. Morris v. Rees, 2 W. Black. 838; 3 Wils. 348; S. P. Walton v. Bent, 3 Burr. 1923.

So, an action on a bail-bond given in a county-palatine, on an action brought there, must be brought in the court below, and not in K. B., unless special circumstances warrant it. Chesterton v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 642; 2 Ld. Ken. 369.

Although it is irregular to bring an action on a bail-bond in a different court from that in which the original action was commenced, yet the defendant cannot take advantage of this under the plea of non est factum. Wright v. Walmsley, 2 Camp. 396—Ellenborough.

2. Pleadings.

Declaration.—In an action on a bail-bond by the assignees of a sheriff, it is not necessary that in the original action to be struck off the file; though the defendant allege that the sheriff was fixed through his own negligence; for that should be the subject of a motion to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond. Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

If the defendant do not justify his bail in due time, and comperuit ad diem be pleaded to a declaration on the bail-bond, the court will order the appearance of the defendant to be recorded as of the day on which the bail justified. Ladd v. Arnaboldi, 1 C. & J. 97.

So, where bail justified at chambers by consent, and no rule for allowance was served, nor notice that they had justified given. Bignold v. Holding, 2 D. & R. 436; S. C. nom. Bignold v. Lee, 1 B. & C. 285.

If the rule for allowance of bail be not served on the plaintiff, he may take an assignment of the bail-bond though he knows of the justification. Holland v. White, 2 B. P. 341.

The court will not stay proceedings upon a bail-bond, upon the ground that the affidavit upon which the bail above were rejected as founded on perjury, except upon the usual terms of paying the costs incurred by the assignment and subsequent proceedings. Hobbs v. Miller, 1 Y. & J. 403.

A rule nisi for setting aside bailable process, &c. "with a stay of proceedings," does not enlarge the time for the defendant to put in and perfect bail, until the rule is disposed of, so as to place him in the same situation as he was in at the time the rule nisi was granted. St. Hanliare v. Byam, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970. And see Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 534.

Process being returnable on the 7th of November, the time to put in bail expired on the 11th. On the 10th, defendant obtained a rule nisi to set aside process and stay proceedings, on the ground of misnomer. This rule was discharged with costs on the 21st. On the 22d, an assignment of the bail-bond was taken, and proceedings had under it, and on the same day the defendant put in bail:—Held, that the defendant had not the whole of the 22d to put in bail, and that the assignment of the bail-bond, and the proceedings had under it, were regular. Id.

Since the uniformity of process act, suing out the writ of summons is the commencement of the action for all purposes. Where the defendant was arrested on the 1st of April, and, owing to Easter Monday and Tuesday falling on the 8th and 9th, had the 10th to put in bail, and the plaintiff on the 10th took an assignment of the bail-bond, and issued a writ of summons against the bail, the court set aside the proceeding on the bail-bond. Alston v. Underhill, 1 C. & M. 492.

2. By putting in disqualified Persons.

If a disqualified person be put in as bail and not excepted to, the plaintiff could not in K. B. proceed on the bail-bond as if no bail had been put in. Thompson v. Roubell, 2 Dougl. 467, n.

If bail be put in without any description, one of whom proves to be clerk to an attorney, and the other a person in low situation, plaintiff may in C. P. take an assignment of the bail-bond. Fenton v. Ruggles, 1 B. & P. 356.

So, if both bail be attorney's clerks. Wallace v. Arrowsmith, 2 B. & P. 49.

3. Irregular Proceedings.

Where the notice of bail is merely informal, and not an absolute nullity, the plaintiff cannot take an assignment of the bail-bond. Bell v. Foster, 1 M. & Scott, 518; 8 Bing. 334; 1 Dowl. P. C. 271.

Where a rule for staying proceedings on a bail-bond had been obtained by one of the bail on an affidavit, which stated an engagement between himself and the plaintiff, to absolve him from his obligation on payment of a sum of money at a future day, upon the ground of a breach of faith in proceeding before the time; and the plaintiff met the application by a distinct denial of the engagement on affidavit:—The court discharged the rule with costs. Sweeting v. Weaver, 11 Price, 735.

IV. ASSIGNMENT OF BAIL-BOND.

1. Statute, and Form.

By 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 20, the sheriff or other officer, at the request and costs of the plaintiff, is to assign to the plaintiff the bail-bond or other security, by indorsing the same, and attesting it under his hand and seal, in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, which might be done without any stamp, provided the assignment were duly stamped before any action brought thereon; and if the bail-bond be forfeited, the plaintiff, after such assignment, may bring an action thereon in his own name, and the court where the action is brought may, by rule, give such relief to the plaintiff and defendant in the original action, and to the bail, as is agreeable to justice and reason.

The stamp required on the assignment is now no longer necessary, by 5 Geo. 4, c. 41.

Under this statute it has been held, that the seal to the assignment of a bail-bond, being a seal of office, is sufficient to give it validity, who ever signed it; and, therefore, it is no objection that it was signed by one of the under-sheriff's clerks. Hams v. Ashby, 1 Selw. N. P. 586, n.—Mansfield.

To a plea in an action on a bail-bond at the suit of the assignee of a sheriff, that the assignment of the bond was not stamped before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill in the cause, the plaintiff need merely reply that the assignment was stamped at or before the exhibiting of the bill, and conclude his replication to the country; and he need not take issue as to the time when the bill was exhibited, nor aver that the assignment was stamped "before the commencement of the suit," and if the action thereon be in the K. B., and if the plaintiff avers that it was stamped at Westminster, he may nevertheless conclude to the country. Carter v. Yates, 2 Chit. 533.

2. Effect of Assignment.

If a plaintiff accept an assignment of a bail-bond, he cannot call upon the sheriff to return the writ, nor shall he have a rule for that purpose before it be determined whether or no the bond be good. Brooke (Lord) v. Stone, 1 Wils. 223.

Nor can he proceed in the original action after taking an assignment of the bail-bond, and whilst he retains his right to sue upon it. Anon. 1 Chit. 394.

Although the rule to return a writ cannot be had after the plaintiff has taken a valid assignment of the bail-bond, it is otherwise if the bond from any cause be void. Williams v. Jacques, 1 Tidd's Prac. 307.

If a plaintiff sue the bail by action, and take them in execution, he cannot afterwards take the principal, though one of the bail become bankrupt and be discharged, and the other also be discharged on payment of 5s. in the pound, and upon an understanding that the plaintiff was at liberty to proceed against the principal. Allen v. Shaw, 2 M. & S. 341.

In an action by the assignees of a bail-bond, it is no objection to their recovering that the sheriff, after taking and before assigning the bond, returned non est inventus. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Adol. 223.

3. Waiver of Assignment.

(a) By excepting to Bail.

Where the defendant is guilty of a neglect in not putting in bail in time, whereby the bail-bond becomes forfeited, the plaintiff may except to bail put in to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond, and it will not be a waiver of the assignment. Baldere v. Gray, Cowp. 769.

Unless the bail below become bail above. Babb v. Barber, 1 Anst. 274.

It is not a waiver of the assignment, that the plaintiff attends to oppose the justification of bail. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

(b) By proceeding against Sheriff.

A plaintiff shall not be at liberty to proceed on the bail-bond, pending a rule to bring in the body of the defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh. N. S. 595; Reg. Gen. M. T., Exch. 1 W. 4; 1 C. & J. 281; 1 Tyr. 163.

The plaintiff may abandon an attachment, and take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon. Pople v. Wyatt, 15 East, 215. And see Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

So, where the attachment has been set aside. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 406.

Before the rule, a plaintiff might have taken an assignment of the bail-bond even after service of the rule to bring in the body, or suing for an attachment, but not after it was sued out. Poide-serie v. Harvey, and Robinson v. Owen, 1 Tidd's

Prac. 297; S. P. Cunningham v. Chambers, 1 Chit. 394, n.

But where the plaintiff had ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, he could not take an assignment pending such rule. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

But must have waited till the rule expired. Whittle v. Oldaker, 1 M. & R. 298; 7 B. & C. 478.

If bail above justify before a rule to bring in the body expires, the bail below, to an action on the bond, may plead comperuit ad diem. Id.

On an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, in an action on a bail-bond, the plea is proved by the recognizance roll containing an entry of defendant's appearance generally. Id.

After an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, to an action on a bail-bond, the recognizance roll may be made up at any time before the day given for producing it. Id.

V. ACTIONS ON BAIL-BONDS.

1. In what Court.

An action may be brought upon a bail-bond by the sheriff himself in any court. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Exch. H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Before the rule, it was so held in the Exchequer. Yorke v. Ogden, 8 Price, 174.

And in C. P. Newman v. Faucitt, 1 H. Black. 631.

But the Court of K. B. held, it was immaterial whether the action was brought by the assignee of the bail-bond, or by the officer to whom it was given, for that, in either case, the action must be brought in the court where the original action was brought. Donatty v. Barclay, 8 T. R. 152.

The action by the assignee of a bail-bond must be brought in the court where the original action was laid. Morris v. Rees, 2 W. Black. 838; 3 Wils. 348; S. P. Walton v. Bent, 3 Burr. 1923.

So, an action on a bail-bond given in a county-palatine, on an action brought there, must be brought in the court below, and not in K. B., unless special circumstances warrant it. Chesterton v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 642; 2 Ld. Ken. 369.

Although it is irregular to bring an action on a bail-bond in a different court from that in which the original action was commenced, yet the defendant cannot take advantage of this under the plea of non est factum. Wright v. Walmsley, 2 Camp. 396—Ellenborough.

2. Pleadings.

Declaration.—In an action on a bail-bond by the assignees of a sheriff, it is not necessary that the declaration should aver that the writ on which the defendant was arrested was issued on an affidavit of debt, and indorsed with the sum sworn to. Sharpe v. Abbey, 5 Bing. 193; 2 M. & P. 312; S. P. Dorrington v. Bucknell, 11 Moore, 445. And see Wilcoxon v. Nightingale, 4 Bing. 501; and Arundell v. White, 14 East, 224; confirming Whiskard v. Wilden, 1 Burr. 330, on the same point, though disapproved of in Hill v. Hele, 2 N. R. 202.

A plea that there was no proper affidavit, is bad on special demurrer. Hume v. Liversedge, 1 C. & M. 332; 1 Dowl. P. C. 660.

The return of the writ, on which the defendant in the original action was arrested, must be stated with certainty. Everett v. Tunnard, 2 Chit. 624.

The declaration, in setting out the condition, stated, that if the defendant should appear to answer the plaintiff, "according to the custom of his Majesty's court of Common Bench here," the obligation should be void. On the production of the bond the former words were omitted:—Held, that this was no variance, as it was only necessary to set out the condition according to its legal effect. Bonfellow v. Steward, 3 Moore, 214.

So, where the condition of a bail-bond was alleged in the declaration to be, "to appear before his Majesty's justices at Lancaster, on, &c." but on reference to the bond, it appeared to be "to appear before us, on, &c.":—Held, that this was no variance, as the allegation was according to the legal effect of the condition. Shaw v. Lee, 3 Stark. 76—Holroyd.

Where a declaration on a bail-bond against four defendants, in reciting the writ, stated that the sheriff to whom it was directed was commanded to take "the said defendant T. A. to answer the plaintiffs of a plea of trespass, and also to a bill of the plaintiffs against the said defendant":—Held, on special demurrer, that the declaration was bad, in not clearly shewing against whom the writ was issued, or who was the defendant in the plaintiff's suit on the writ. Large v. Attwood, 1 D. & R. 551.

Where, in an action on a bail-bond, the condition set out on the record was, "to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass, and also to a plea of the plaintiff, to be exhibited against the defendant for 60*l.* upon promises," and, on the production of the bond, it did not contain the words "upon promises":—Held, that this was a fatal variance. Baker v. Newbegin, R. & M. 93—Abbott.

The declaration in an action on a bail-bond stated the issuing from the Common Pleas of a writ for the arrest of the principal, by which the sheriff was commanded to have his body "before the justices of our said Lord the King, at Westminster," &c., to answer, &c.; and also that he might answer, &c., "according to the custom of his said Majesty's court," &c., and alleged the condition of the said bond to be for the appearance of the principal, "according to the exigency of the said writ in the said court," &c.; and also to answer, &c., "according to the custom of his said Majesty's court of Common Bench." The condition, as proved at the trial, was for the appearance of the principal "before our said Lord the King, at Westminster," &c., to answer, &c., and also to answer "according to the custom of the King's court of Common Bench":—Held, that there was not any material variance. Crofts v. Stockley 5 Bing. 32; 2 M. & P. 81; 3 C. & P. 281.

In a declaration of debt on a bail-bond, at the suit of the assignee of the sheriff, it was stated, "that the plaintiff heretofore, to wit, on the 21st of July, sued out of the court of the Bench here (the said court being then and now at Westminster), a writ of capias ad respondendum, by which T. B. was to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass; and also in a certain plea of trespass on the case upon promises." On special demurrer, assigning for causes, that the 21st of July was a day in vacation, and on which no such court then was at Westminster; and that the declaration only stated the writ to be to answer the plaintiff in a "plea of trespass," instead of a plea "wherefore with force and arms, &c.":—Held, first, as the averment that the court was sitting on a day in vacation was laid under a videlicet, it might be treated as surplusage; and, secondly, that it was unnecessary to set out or refer to the clausum fregit part of the writ. Luckett v. Plummer, 5 Moore, 538; 2 B. & B. 659. And see Atkinson v. Saunderson, 4 Dougl. 254; 1 Tidd's Prac. 223.

If a declaration on a bail-bond conclude, "whereby an action hath accrued to the plaintiff, to demand and have of the principal" (instead of the bail), and state non-payment by the principal, it is bad on a special demurrer. Morgan v. Sergeant, 1 B. & P. 58. And see Renalds v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 258; 6 Taunt. 551.

It is not necessary to make profert of an assignment of a bail-bond, nor need the witnesses' names thereto be set forth in a declaration. Lease v. Box, 1 Wils. 121.

Pleas, &c.—Nil debet is not a good plea on demurrer to debt on bond. Rawlins v. Danvers, 5 Esp. 38—Ellenborough.

Bail sued on the bail-bond cannot traverse the arrest. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Adol. 223.

If the plea to an action on a sheriff's bond on the stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, conclude with a verification, it will be bad upon special demurrer. Boyce v. Whitaker, 1 Dougl. 94.

After judgment against the principal, where the bail-bond stands as a security, the bail are entitled to a rule to plead and demand of a plea before judgment against them. Phillips v. Whitehead, 1 Chit. 270.

3. Practice.

(a) As to Appearance.

In an action on a bail-bond, if the issue depend on the date of the appearance, the court of C. P., upon an application by the plaintiff, will order the day of the appearance to be entered in the filacer's book, although, before the application to the court, issue had been already joined on the plea of comperuit ad diem. Austen v. Fenton, 1 Taunt. 23.

But in a similar case, where the defendant's appearance had been entered generally, the court of K. B. refused to order the appearance to be entered according to the fact on the day when it took place. Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298.

Where an assignment of a bail-bond had been taken on the 30th January, for want of notice of bail being put in, but such notice was given on the 29th (the last day for putting in bail in the cause), and the plaintiff had proceeded against the defendant's bail on the bail-bond, and served process on the defendant and his bail, to which they appeared, and pleaded comperuerunt ad diem: the court of Exchequer made a rule absolute which had been obtained by the plaintiff, calling on the defendant in the original action to shew cause why his appearance thereto should not be recorded as of the day when notice of the bail being put in was served on the plaintiff's clerk in court, notwithstanding bail had been regularly put in, and notice had been given on the 30th, before the assignment of the bail-bond could have been in fact executed. Allday v. George, 9 Price, 406.

(b) Staying Proceedings on Terms.

At what Time.—The assignment of the bail-bond by the statute, gives a discretionary power to the court to stay the proceedings. Anon. Loft, 395.

A rule to stay proceedings on a bail-bond may be obtained the same day that the bail justified. Stowe v. Johnston, 2 Chit. 108.

An order to set aside and stay proceedings on the bail-bond assigned, will be made, on a motion made on the last day of term, if it could not have been made before. MPhedron v. Fitherington, 2 Price, 143.

Must put in and justify Bail.—If the proceedings be irregular, or against good faith, it is unnecessary to put in bail before application is made to set them aside. But otherwise if they be regular, and the defendant applies to set them aside on terms. Heath v. Gurley, 4 Moore, 149: S. P. Boughton v. Chaffey, 2 Wils. 6.

Writ returnable 31st of October (essoign day), the time for putting in bail expires on the 5th of November, and bail put in on the 7th is not ground for setting aside proceedings on bond assigned same day. Lewis v. Watson, 1 Price's P. C. 176.

Proceedings may be stayed on a bail-bond, on payment of costs, though the bail surrender the principal without having justified. Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 534. And see St. Hanlaire v. Byson, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970.

(c) Necessary Affidavit.

What Affidavit necessary.—No rule shall be drawn up for staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of any bail-bond, unless the application for such rule shall (if made on the part of the original defendant) be grounded on an affidavit of merits, or (if made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or any officer of the sheriff) be grounded upon an affidavit, shewing that such application is really and truly made, on the part of the sheriff or bail, or officer of the sheriff (as the case may be), at his or their only expense, or for his or their only indemnity, and without collusion with the original defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., M. T. 59 Geo. 3, 2 B. & A. 240; 1 Chit. 128, (a).

There is no rule of court in the Exchequer, as in the King's Bench, that an application by bail for a rule to stay proceedings on the assignment of a bail-bond, should be grounded on an affidavit, that the application is bona fide made on the part of the bail, at their expense, for their indemnity only, and without collusion with the original defendant; and a rule nisi for that purpose, not grounded on such an affidavit, was made absolute; but an affidavit of that nature, as well as of merits, is usual, according to the practice, of that court. Standen v. Blakie, M'Clel. 44; 13 Price, 114: S. P. Richardson v. Hodgson, 11 Price, 633.

It is not sufficient for a defendant, on moving to set aside proceedings on a bail-bond, to swear that the defendant in the original action has a good defence, even though he be an infant; he must swear to merits. Hallett v. Aubrey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 688.

Regular proceedings on the bail-bond cannot be set aside, where the motion is made on behalf of the defendant, without an affidavit of merits, although the plaintiff had opposed the justification of bail, and received the costs of the opposition. Hilton v. Jackson, 1 Chit. 677.

The affidavit must state that the defendant had a good defence upon the merits: a good defence to the action is not sufficient. Grottick v. Bailey, 5 B. & A. 703.

On a motion to stay the proceedings on a bail-bond, where an affidavit of merits is produced, it is not necessary to state on whose behalf the motion is made. Bell v. Taylor, 1 Chit. 572, 721.

If the bail apply to stay proceedings upon the bail-bond, they need not in C. P. swear to merits, though a trial has been lost. Hardisty v. Storer, 1 N. R. 123.

But in K. B. they must shew that the application is bona fide on their behalf, and without collusion or indemnity from the defendant. Re v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 3 M. & S. 199.

An affidavit to set aside the proceedings after notice of render had been given, must state that the application is made bona fide on behalf of the bail; but time was given for producing a further affidavit. Merryman v. Quibble, 1 Chit. 127.

How Affidavit intituled.—An affidavit in support of an application to set aside or stay proceedings on a bail-bond, may be intituled either in the original action, or in the action against the bail. Lisle v. Chetwoode, 2 Tyr. 177: S. C. nom. Leyles v. Chetwood, 2 C. & J. 332; 1 Dowl. P. C. 321: S. P. Kelly v. Wrother, 2 Chit. 109.

In C. P., if the bail-bond have been irregularly assigned, the affidavit must be intituled in the original action; but if it had been assigned regularly, then in the action in the bail-bond. Ham v. Philcox, 7 Moore, 521; 1 Bing. 142: S. P. Roberts v. Giddins, 1 B. & P. 337.

And where the plaintiff has ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, the affidavits to set aside the proceedings on the bail-bond must be intituled in the action against the bail. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

(d) Bail-bond standing as Security.

Rule and Cases.—Upon staying proceedings upon a bail-bond, on perfecting bail above, the bail-bond shall stand as a security if the plaintiff shall have declared do bene esse, and shall have been prevented, for want of special bail being perfected in due time, from entering his cause for trial in a town cause in the term next after that in which the suit is returnable, and in a country cause at the ensuing assizes. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 199; 8 Bing. 305; 1 M. & Scott, 432; 3 B. & Adol. 392; 2 C. & J. 200; 2 Tyr. 351; 4 Bligh, N. S. 607.

Where regular proceedings have been commenced upon a bail-bond, and the defendant has rendered after the time for perfecting bail above, the court will order the bail-bond to stand as a security under the rule. Hodge v. Hopkins, 1 Dowl. P. C. 431.

So held before the rule. Whitehead v. Phillips, 2 B. & A. 585; 1 Chit. 270.

In all cases where the bail-bond shall be directed to stand as a security, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment upon it. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 176; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Quære, whether, the plaintiff having been delayed a term in obtaining upon a demurrer a judgment which, but for the delay in perfecting bail, he might have had, is insufficient ground for ordering the bail-bond to stand as a security on the ordinary motion for staying proceedings thereon. Nash v. Barker, 1 Price's P. C. 91.

There must be an affidavit of the state of the proceedings to support an application for making that a term of the order. Id.

The bail-bond will be ordered to stand as a security, if the bail have not applied to stay the proceedings on the earliest opportunity. Ditchett v. Tollett, 3 Price, 257.

A bail-bond, executed by one only of the bail, may be ordered to stand as a security. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

Loss of Trial.—Before the rule, the court would not stay the proceedings on a bail-bond on payment of costs, where a trial had been lost, except on the terms of the bond's standing as a security. Phillips v. Whitehead, 2 B. & A. 585; 1 Chit. 270: S. P. Nias v. Gray, 1 Chit. 270, (a).

Explanation of the terms relative to bail, "losing a trial," and "bail-bond standing as a security." Id.

The loss of a trial in term is the loss of a term. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

Where one defendant was arrested on a latitat returnable in Hilary Term, and the other on an alias writ returnable in Easter Term, and if bail above had been duly perfected, the plaintiff might have tried the cause at the last sittings in Hilary Term:—Held, that the bail-bond must stand as a security. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 359.

Where the term has not been lost by neglect to put in bail, the court will set aside the proceedings on the bail-bond upon justification, although the plaintiff might have proceeded to trial at the first sitting in the term:—on payment of costs, pleading issuably, and taking short notice of trial for the sitting in term; and that without requiring the bail-bond to stand as security, or the debt to be paid into court. Bevan v. Knight, 1 Price's P. C. 13; 1 Tyr. 420.

A trial is not lost, unless judgment of the term is lost by the defendant's delay to put in and perfect bail in due time. Id.

Proceedings on a bail-bond were set aside, on justification and affidavit of merits, although the action was on a bill of exchange, merits denied, and object asserted to be delay. Id.

In a country cause, where the plaintiff has lost a trial, the court will not stay proceedings upon a bail-bond, unless upon the terms of its standing as a security. Fillis v. Stabb, 1 Y. & J. 373.

The court of Exchequer will, on motion, even where a trial has not been lost, stay proceedings on an assignment of a bail-bond, where the defendant has since perfected bail, without tender of costs, or any affidavit of merits, or that the application is made in ease of the sheriff, or bail; and they will not, in such a case, order the bail-bond to stand as a security, requiring only that the plaintiff shall be put in the same situation as if bail had been put in in time, and duly perfected. Searle v. Hale, 3 Price, 52.

Where an opportunity of going to trial has not been lost, or if judgment could not have been obtained before the term in which the motion could be made, the court of Exchequer will not require it to be made part of the order for staying proceedings, that the bail-bond shall stand as a security; but it seems to be otherwise, if a trial has been lost. Standen v. Blakie, 13 Price, 114.

Plaintiff's Diligence.—Where upon setting aside the proceedings on a bail-bond, the plaintiff seeks to have the bail-bond stand as a security, he must shew that he used due means to expedite the cause, and that he declared as soon as it was in his power. Anon. 1 Chit. 271, (a).

Where a plaintiff who has taken an assignment of a bail-bond after bail have been put in but not perfected, consents by his clerk in court to an order for staying the proceedings on payment of costs, he is not entitled to have the security of the bond, although he may have lost the opportunity of going to trial, because it is in such a case the result of his own conduct. Blare v. Mottram, 7 Price, 535.

The court refused to order a bail-bond, (on which proceedings had been stayed by order on perfecting bail,) to stand as a security for debt and costs, although the plaintiff had lost a trial, where the defendant had previously made an offer to the plaintiff, after the bail-bond had been assigned, and proceedings had in consequence of bail not being perfected in time, to justify at chambers, to pay the costs of the proceedings on the bond, to plead to the declaration, and take short notice of trial for the next assizes, to which the plaintiff refused to consent; so that he lost the opportunity of going to trial by his own conduct; and a rule to shew cause why an order made at chambers, for staying proceedings, should not be amended, by adding such terms, was discharged with costs. Walker v. Mapowder, 8 Price, 610.

(e) Payment of Costs, and other Terms.

Number of Actions.—Proceedings on the bail-bond may be stayed on payment of costs in one action, unless sufficient reason be shewn for proceeding in more. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 378; 2 C. & J. 176; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Before the rule, where three separate actions had been commenced without any sufficient reason, the court of K. B. stayed the proceedings upon payment of the costs of one action only. Key v. Hill, 2 B. & A. 598; 1 Chit. 337.

But in C. P. they would not do so, but upon payment of the costs in all the actions. Anon. 1 Chit. 338, n.

Where an attorney had become bail to the sheriff, and the bail-bond had been assigned, the court of Exchequer would, upon the usual affidavit, stay proceedings upon the bail-bond upon payment of costs. Mann v. Nottage, 1 Y. & J. 367.

Other Terms.—Proceedings on a bail-bond stayed where bail had justified, and where no trial had been lost, and the court would not impose the terms of accepting a declaration, pleading issuably, and taking short notice of trial. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 357. And see Eyton v. Beattie, 2 Smith, 489.

When two only of three joint contractors are sued, the court of C. P. will not stay proceedings upon the bail-bond, unless the defendants will undertake not to plead in abatement. Govett v. Johnson, 2 B. & P. 465.

(f) As to Judgment.

Final judgment may be entered up on a bail-bond, without executing a writ of inquiry. Moody v. Phasant, 2 B. & P. 446.

If it appear in a declaration by the assignee of the sheriff on such bond, that the bond is void, the court on motion will arrest the judgment after verdict against the defendant, upon a plea of non est factum. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

VI. RIGHTS AND LIABILITY OF BAIL TO THE SHERIFF.

Bail to the sheriff have no right to take their principal into custody; nor have bail in the Palace Court. With respect, however, to bail above, it is otherwise. Rex v. Hughes, 3 C. & P. 373—Tenterden.

Bail to the sheriff are liable for the plaintiff's whole debt (without regard to the sum sworn to) and costs, provided they do not exceed the penalty of the bail-bond. Stevenson v. Cameron, 8 T. R. 28; S. P. Mitchell v. Gibbons, 1 H. Black. 76; Orton v. Vincent, Cowp. 71.

Semble, where the bail are let in upon terms, to try the cause of the principal, the money levied to abide the event, and the bail-bond to stand as a security; the bail are not liable beyond the penalty on the bond, although the debt and costs exceed the same after the trial, and the plaintiff's debt would have been fully covered by the security, when the bail were first let in to try upon terms. Goss v. Harrison, 2 Smith, 354.

Prima facie the bail to the sheriff are liable to the charges of putting in bail above; therefore, if a party, who is bail to the sheriff, apply to an attorney to put in bail above, he is liable for these expenses, but not for the subsequent expenses of the suit. Hector v. Carpenter, 1 Stark. 190—Ellenborough.

VII. DEPOSIT OF MONEY IN LIEU OF BAIL.

1. Statutes.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, all persons arrested on mesne process may, in lieu of giving bail to the sheriff, deposit in his hands the sum indorsed on the writ, together with 10l. in addition, to answer costs, and shall be discharged from such arrest; and the sheriff, at or before the return of the writ, is to pay the same into court; upon bail being duly put in and perfected, the money deposited is, by order of the court, upon motion, to be repaid to the defendant; but if no bail be duly put in and perfected, it is, by like order on motion, to be paid over to the plaintiff, who may thereupon appear for the defendant: the payment is to be subject to such deductions from the 10l. as, upon taxation of the plaintiff's costs, shall be thought reasonable.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, the defendant may, instead of putting in and perfecting bail, allow the sum deposited with the sheriff, and by him paid into court, to remain in court to abide the event of the suit; and in all cases where a defendant is arrested and remains in custody, or gives bail to the sheriff, he may, instead of putting in and perfecting bail, pay the debt into court, with 20l. to answer costs, to abide the event of the suit, and thereupon enter a common appearance, or, in default, the plaintiff may do it for him, and proceed as if bail had been perfected: if plaintiff has judgment, he may, by order of court on motion, receive out of the money deposited sufficient to satisfy his judgment; and if defendant has judgment, or the plaintiff discontinues his suit, or be otherwise barred, the money, or if more than sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff, the surplus, is to be returned to the defendant.

Provided, by s. 3, that defendant may, at any time before issue joined or judgment signed, take the money out of court, by order on motion, upon putting in and perfecting bail, and payment of such costs as the court shall direct.

So, by s. 4, a defendant who has put in and perfected bail may make the deposit, and the bail shall be exonerated.

Before the statute, it was held in C. P. that a defendant might pay into court, to abide the event of the cause, a sufficient sum to cover the debt and costs, instead of giving bail. Fowell v. Leo, 1 Taunt. 425.

On payment of money to the sheriff upon an arrest, it will be presumed that it was paid as a deposit in lieu of bail, under the statute, unless a discharge or some acknowledgment in writing be given to the defendant for the debt and costs. The payment of the debt, with the particular sum of 10*l.*, raises a strong presumption that it is not an absolute payment in discharge of the debt and costs. Wain v. Bradbury, 1 Smith, 128.

A defendant was permitted to pay into court (before four o'clock) the debt, and 20*l.* costs, in lieu of bail, after two ineffectual attempts to justify original and added bail, on the payment of the costs of the two oppositions, on affidavits of the facts and of merits. Thomas v. Gray, 1 Price's P. C. 86.

The statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2. does not control the discretion of the court as to the time for putting in bail. Where, therefore, money was paid into court, in lieu of bail, which was not put in and perfected in due time, the court, on an affidavit of merits, granted further time to the defendant. Parker v. Turner, 2 Chit. 71.

Where money is paid into the hands of the sheriff in lieu of bail, the defendant has, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, till the day for perfecting special bail, for giving notice of his intention that the money shall remain in court to abide the event of the suit. Rowe v. Softly, 6 Bing. 634; 4 M. & P. 464.

2. When Defendant may take out of Court.

A defendant in K. B., who has put in bail, and rendered in their discharge, is entitled to have the money deposited repaid to him. Chadwick v. Battye, 3 M. & S. 283; 1 Chit. 145.

So in C. P. Harford v. Harris, 4 Taunt. 669.

Where a defendant, having applied to take out of court money deposited in lieu of bail, on the ground of his having put in and perfected bail; and a rule having been afterwards obtained by the plaintiff for setting aside the allowance of bail, the defendant was then rendered: the court directed the money to be paid out to the defendant, after deducting the costs of the two rules. Gould v. Berry, 1 Chit. 145.

Even although such money was deposited with the sheriff by a friend, and the defendant had become bankrupt after it was paid in. Edelsten v. Adams, 2 Moore, 610; 8 Taunt. 557.

The court refused to inquire whose money it actually was, and whether it belonged to the assignees of the defendant, on the ground that under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, they were empowered to refund it to the defendant alone. Id.

Upon bail being put in and perfected, the court will order it to be repaid to the bail, or any other person by whom it was actually deposited, instead of the defendant. Nunn v. Powell, 1 Smith, 13.

Where the defendant, on being arrested, deposited certain goods in the hands of the officer who arrested him, in lieu of bail, and afterwards surrendered himself; two days after which, the officer deposited with the prothonotary the amount of the original debt, and 10*l.* for costs:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have those sums paid over to him, as, if they had been paid in under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, he would be entitled to them on his render; and if not, they must be taken to have been paid into court by mistake. Hill v. Ching, 7 Moore, 332; 1 Bing. 103.

Quære, whether the depositing goods with the officer on an arrest, instead of money, is a compliance with the terms of that statute? Id.

If money has been paid into court to abide the event of the suit, under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and the defendant wishes to take it out on perfecting special bail, under s. 3, he must do so before issue joined. Ferrall v. Alexander, 1 Dowl. P. C. 132.

3. When Plaintiff entitled.

If a defendant, who pays the debt, and 10*l.* for costs to the sheriff, in lieu of bail, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, puts in bail above, who, being excepted to, render him instead of justifying, the plaintiff is not entitled to receive out of court, under s. 2, the money so deposited. Harford v. Harris, 4 Taunt. 669.

Though the defendant may in such case receive back his deposit. Id.

If a defendant, being arrested by a wrong name, pay the amount of the sum sworn to, and 10*l.* for the costs, to the sheriff, the court will not permit the plaintiff to take it out of court on the defendant's omitting to perfect bail. Cadby v. Parsons, 5 Taunt. 623.

Nor will the court permit the defendant to take it out except on terms. Id.

Quære, whether the plaintiff is entitled to move to have the sum deposited in the hands of the sheriff and paid into court, paid out to him until he has obtained judgment? Rowe v. Softly, 4 M. & P. 464; 6 Bing. 634.

A plaintiff is entitled to have money paid into court in lieu of bail, paid out to him, if special bail be not perfected in due time, although the defendant has rendered since the time for perfecting bail, unless an affidavit of merits is produced. Newman v. Hodgson, 1 Dowl. P. C. 329; 1 B. & Adol. 422.

A defendant having been arrested, paid into court the sum indorsed on the writ, together with 20*l.* as a security for costs, pursuant to the stat.

7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2. The court, on the application of the defendant, allowed the plaintiff to take out of court a given portion of the sum paid into court, and, unless he consented to accept thereof, with costs, in full discharge of the action, ordered it to be struck out of the declaration, and that the plaintiff should not give any evidence at the trial as to that sum. Hubbard v. Wilkinson, 8 B. & C. 496.

4. Practice.

Costs.]—Where a defendant, on being arrested, deposited the amount of the debt, together with 10*l.* for costs, with the officer, who, four days afterwards informed the plaintiff's attorney of the circumstance, and the under-sheriff afterwards wrote to him that the deposit had been made; notwithstanding which, the sheriff was ruled to return the writ; and a declaration was filed, and notice thereof served on the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of those proceedings, as it was the duty of the sheriff to have paid the sum deposited into court at or before the return of the writ, and which he had omitted to do. Offley v. Weaver, 7 Moore, 557.

But where a defendant, on being arrested, paid the sheriff's officer the amount of the debt, and 10*l.* for costs, under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, which latter sum was more than sufficient to cover the costs incurred up to the return of the writ; and the under-sheriff having omitted to pay over the amount to the plaintiff, after being requested so to do, in consequence of which he proceeded further in the action, and incurred further costs:—Held, that the defendant was not liable to pay such costs. Clark v. Yates, 7 Moore, 83; 3 B. & B. 273.

Fees.]—The clerk of the docquets is not entitled, in C. P., to any poundage on money deposited with the sheriff, and by him paid into court. Husa v. Brine, 6 Moore, 124.

Nor in K. B. is the chief clerk. Stewart v. Bracebridge, 2 B. & A. 770; 1 Chit. 529.

Other Matters.]—Where a defendant cannot be found in order to serve him personally with a rule for taking out money deposited in the hands of the sheriff, in lieu of bail, the court will allow the service to be good, by leaving a copy of the rule at the defendant's last place of abode, and sticking it up in the office. Peate v. Triscott, 1 Chit. 675. And see Id. 170, 466.

If a defendant pay money into court under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, to abide the event of the cause, the court will not grant a rule absolute in the first instance for repayment to the defendant, judgment being for him, but there must be a rule to shew cause. Symes v. Rose, 5 Bing. 269; 2 M. & P. 426.

In order to make it absolute, it is necessary to produce the record and certificates from the clerk of the judgments and prothonotary, that judgment had been duly signed, and the money paid into court. Id.

A motion for taking out of court money paid to the sheriff by defendant on his arrest, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, and paid into court by the sheriff, was granted on no cause being shewn. Tout v. Lovcroft, 1 Price's P. C. 37.

The defendant having been arrested, paid into court the sum indorsed on the writ, and the further sum of 20*l.* as a security for costs, to abide the event of the suit, in pursuance of the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, instead of putting in and perfecting special bail:—Held, that he was entitled to have the bail-bond delivered up to him to be cancelled. Smith v. Jordan, 2 M. & P. 428.

Leave given, by rule, to pay into court 10*l.* in addition to the deposit in the hands of the sheriff, in lieu of special bail. Graves v. Bennett, 1 Price's P. C. 14.

If money is deposited in court, in lieu of bail above, pursuant to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, and the plaintiff obtains a verdict, he must limit his execution to the surplus of his demand, beyond the sum deposited, which he is bound to take out of court. Hews v. Pyke, 1 Dowl. P. C. 322; 2 C. & J. 359; 2 Tyr. 313.

VIII. WHO MAY BE BAIL ABOVE.

1. Attornies and their Clerks.

If any person put in as bail to the action, except for the purpose of rendering only, be a practising attorney, or clerk to a practising attorney, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and sue upon the bail-bond as soon as the time for putting in bail has expired, unless good bail be duly put in in the mean time. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 171; 2 Tyr. 342; 5 Bligh, N. S. 594.

Both before the rule and since, an attorney or attorney's clerk, or indeed any person, may be bail, for the purpose of rendering the principal. Bell v. Gate, 1 Taunt. 162.

Before this rule, no attorney, or person practising as such, could be bail in C. P. Reg. Gen. C. P., M. T. 6 Geo. 2, 1 H. Black. 76, n.; Anon. Loft, 263, 280.

Or in K. B. Boulogne v. Vautrin, 2 Dougl. 467, n.; Cowp. 828.

But there was no general rule of the court of Exchequer which prohibited attornies or their clerks from becoming bail; the practice in that respect was, however, similar to that of the courts of K. B. and C. P. Mann v. Nottage, 1 Y. & J. 367, n.

The rule applies to bail to the action only, and not to bail to the sheriff.

It was held, that an attorney's articulated clerk could not be bail. Laing v. Cundale, 1 H. Black. 76.

Nor any other clerk, though not articulated. Cornish v. Ross, 2 H. Black. 350; S. P. Boulogne v. Vautrin, Cowp. 828; 2 Dougl. 467, n.

Even though he were not clerk to the defendant's attorney. Redit v. Broomhead, 2 B. & P.

I. FORM AND NATURE OF BAIL BOND.

1. General Requisites.

Construction of Statute.—By stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, sheriffs or other officers are required to let out of prison all manner of persons by them arrested, being in their custody by force of any writ, bill, or warrant, in any action personal, upon reasonable sureties of sufficient persons, having sufficient within the counties where such persons be so let to bail, or mainprize, to keep their days in such place as the said writs, bills, or warrants shall require.

This statute is a public act; therefore the court will take notice of it, though it be not pleaded. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

The sheriffs of London, to whom, as such, a writ of special capias was directed, under which they arrested the plaintiff, cannot be sued for damages for not having taken bail for his appearance, according to the stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, the sufficiency of the bail tendered being only alleged to be within Middlesex and London taken together; though it was also averred, that, from time immemorial, the same persons had always been duly appointed to, and had exercised the office of sheriff of the two counties at the same time, and that the defendants were sheriffs of both at the time of the grievance complained of. Lovell v. London, (Sheriffs), 15 East, 320.

Although the sheriff takes a bail-bond on the stat. Hen. 6, yet that is at his peril, and the plaintiff shall not be concluded thereby. Wolfe v. Collingwood, 1 Wils. 262.

If a plaintiff sue out writs into two counties, and arrest the defendant in both, who gives bail in both, the defendant does not thereby obtain the right of electing in which county the bail shall stand, but the bail first given continues liable. Bullock v. Morris, 2 Taunt. 67.

An undertaking by an attorney to give a bail-bond to the sheriff, is contrary to the 23 Hen. 6, c. 10, and therefore void. Lewis v. Knight, 1 Dowl. P. C. 261; 1 M. & Scott, 353; 8 Bing. 271; S. P. Sedgeworth v. Spicer, 4 East, 568; 2 Smith, 305.

If a sheriff's officer, upon an arrest, take an undertaking for the appearance of the party, instead of a bail-bond, without the plaintiff's assent, and bail above is not duly put in, the sheriff is liable to an action for an escape; and the court will not relieve him by permitting him to put in and justify bail afterwards. Fuller v. Prest, 7 T. R. 109.

Where the sheriff suffers a person, who has been arrested, to go at large without taking a bail-bond, the court of C. P. will not suffer him to render the defendant after an action commenced against him for an escape; though he should not have been ruled to return the writ, or bring in the body, before action commenced, and although the defendant was in custody in several other actions. Birn v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 Marsh. 261; S. C. nom. Birn v. Bond, 6 Taunt. 554. And see Hamilton v. Wilson, 1 East, 383.

To whom given.—A bail-bond must be given to the sheriff, as such, for the appearance of the party, and for no other purpose. Rogers v. Reeves, 1 T. R. 418, 422.

Therefore an obligation given to the sheriff's bailiff is bad, for it should be to such officer as has the return of process. Id.

A bail bond given to the sheriff of Durham, under a writ issued immediately from the court of K. B. to him, is not void. Jackson v. Hunter, 6 T. R. 71.

On demurrer to a declaration on a bail-bond, the court will not presume that the plaintiff had no authority to take bail, unless some case be made in pleading to it. Say v. Ellis, 2 W. Black. 955.

Penalty and Sureties.—A bail-bond taken in more than double the sum sworn to is good. Norden v. Horsely, 2 Wils. 69.

A sheriff is bound to let his prisoner arrested on mesne process go at large, on having reasonable sureties. Matson v. Booth, 5 M. & S. 223.

A bond with five sureties, three of whom are respectively worth more than the penalty of the bond, is sufficient, though the other two are worth less than the penalty. Id.

The addition of another obligor in a bond given to the sheriff after the bond has been executed, but before the sheriff has accepted it, with the assent of the sheriff and the prior obligors, does not vacate the bond nor make a new stamp necessary. Id.

Where a sheriff took a bail-bond executed by one surety only, the court refused to set aside an attachment issued against him for not bringing in the body, although he consented to pay the costs. Rex v. London (Sheriff), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

When to be given.—If a bail-bond be dated and made after the return of the writ, the defendant may avoid it on non est factum. Thompson v. Rock, 4 M. & S. 338.

A bond, stated to have been taken on a certain day, conditioned for appearance on the day previous to the date of the bond, is void by the statute. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

If a party executes a bail-bond before the condition is filled up, it is void. Powell v. Duff, 3 Camp. 181—Ellenborough. But see Ferira v. Evans, 1 Anst. 228, n.

Sufficient, if substantially good, though informal.—If the bail-bond be substantially good, it cannot be avoided for any trifling informality or variance of the condition from the writ, in the description of the plea, or of the time or place of appearance, or of the sum. Atkinson v. Saunders, 1 Tidd's Prac. 223; 4 Dougl. 254.

Under a writ in a plea of trespass on the case upon promises, the sheriff took a bond conditioned for appearance in a plea of trespass; it was held good, for it is sufficient to state the names of the parties, and the time and place of appearance. Owen v. Nail, 6 T. R. 702.

Where the writ was to appear before the king, "wheresoever he should then be in England," and the sheriff took a bond for appearance before the king "at Westminster:"—Held, that it was a substantial compliance with the statute. Jones v. Sturdy, 9 East, 55.

Where, in an action on a bail-bond, the special original was returnable before the king wheresoever, &c., and the word "ubique" was omitted:—Held, that the omission was not fatal. Shuttleworth v. Pilkington, 1 T. R. 240, n.

But where a capias ad respondendum was returnable "before his Majesty's justices of the bench at Westminster," by virtue of which the sheriff issued his mandate to the bailiff of a liberty, commanding him to take the defendant, so that the sheriff might have his body "before his said Majesty at Westminster," and the bailiff took a bail-bond conditioned for the defendant's appearance "before his said Majesty at Westminster:"—Held, that the variance between the bail-bond and the writ was fatal, and the bond was void. Renalds v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 258; 6 Taunt. 551.

By the writ, the sheriff was commanded to take W. P. and one S. P., and him and the said S. P. safely keep until he and S. P. should have given him bail in an action of assumpsit at the suit of the plaintiff. The sheriff took a bail-bond conditioned for the appearance of W. P. alone:—Held (on general demurrer to a declaration on the bond) to be no variance. Grottick v. Phillips, 3 M. & Scott, 132; 9 Bing. 721.

Quære, if the demurrer had been special. Id.

II. DISCHARGE OF BAIL-BOND.

1. By Surrender of Principal.

If the defendant, who has given a bail-bond, surrender himself to the sheriff, before or on the return of the writ, the bond may be given up, and it will be considered as if no such bond had been given. Jones v. Lander, 6 T. R. 753; S. P. Stamper v. Milbourne, 7 T. R. 122; Galloway v. Seymour, 1 Tidd's Prac. 225. But see Harrison v. Davis, 5 Burr. 2683.

But not unless he give notice of such surrender. Maddecks v. Bullock, 1 B. & P. 325.

It is optional with the sheriff, whether or not he will accept such surrender. Hamilton v. Wilson, 1 East, 383.

Where the principal surrendered to the jailor at the county jail, in discharge of his bail to the sheriff, before twelve o'clock on the first day of term, being the return-day of the writ, and the under-sheriff signed his assent to the surrender by return of post the next day, at the distance of seventeen miles:—Held sufficient to discharge the bail-bond, of which the plaintiff had taken an assignment, with notice of the render, and the court stayed the proceedings. Plimpton v. Howell, 10 East, 100.

And where a defendant applied to the under-sheriff, before the return of the writ, to surrender himself in discharge of his bail, which he refused to accept, without assigning any reason for so doing, and the day after surrendered himself to the keeper of the county jail, which was also before the writ was returnable, and the bail-bond was afterwards assigned to the plaintiff; the court of C. P. ordered the proceedings on it to be stayed, without costs. Lewis v. Davies, 5 Moore, 267.

Where the principal surrendered in time, but the bail omitted to give regular notice of it to the plaintiff, in consequence of which he proceeded upon the bail-bond, the court, on the application of the bail, set aside the proceedings on payment of costs, even after execution levied, and the money in the sheriff's hands. Lepine v. Barrett, 8 T. R. 222.

If A., being arrested by B., on process of C. P., give bail to the sheriff, and before the return of the writ, being again arrested by C., is committed to the Fleet Prison, after which, and before the return of the first writ, B. takes an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceeds thereon, the court will stay such proceedings; but will not make B. pay costs, for they will not try upon affidavit, whether he knew or not that A. was in custody, but will consider him ignorant of that fact, unless notice of surrender has been regularly given. Harding v. Hennem, 3 B. & P. 232.

The court will stay the proceedings on a bail-bond without costs, if the notice of render be given before the assignment; but not otherwise. Anon. 2 Chit. 103.

A surrender after bail above put in, but not perfected, though before an assignment of the bail-bond, does not discharge the bail to the sheriff. Turner v. Wheatley, 1 Price, 262.

Where a plaintiff had proceeded on an assignment taken after the render of the defendant, who had put in bail, whom he had insufficiently described, so that time was necessarily given for furnishing a better description, during which interval such further description was not given, nor was any attempt afterwards made to justify, the court set aside the proceedings on the assignment of the bond. Richardson v. Hodgson, 11 Price, 633.

Semble, that rendering the defendant to the King's Bench prison, before the return of the writ, will not discharge the bail to the sheriff. Foster v. Hyde, 1 Tidd's Prac. 225, 306.

The court of Exchequer will stay proceedings against bail, where the principal has rendered on terms. Standen v. Blakie, 13 Price, 114; McCl. 44.

2. By other Means.

Delay in Proceeding.]—The bail-bond cannot be assigned, when the original suit is out of court by not declaring in time. Sparrow v. Naylor, 2 W. Black. 876.

But if the assignment be taken before the suit is out of court, it may be proceeded upon afterwards. Piggott v. Truste, 3 B. & P. 221; Collett v. Bland, 4 Taunt. 715.

But the court will stay such proceedings, if it appear that the plaintiff has been guilty of laches. Id.

Where the defendant neglects to put in and perfect bail, and the plaintiff omits to declare within two terms after the return of the writ, he is not out of court, but may take an assignment of the bail-bond. Carmichael v. Chandler, 3 Dougl. 432.

Proceedings against bail below will be stayed on motion (on payment of costs) where the plaintiff has not proceeded against them on the bond as early as he might have done, even where a trial has been lost, if there be reason, on their part, to think that the plaintiff did not mean to proceed in the action. Ditchett v. Tollett, 3 Price, 257.

Giving Time to Principal.]—After a bail-bond has been forfeited, and an assignment thereof taken, time given to the principal is no discharge of the sureties. Wooenam v. Price, 1 C. & J. 352.

Bankruptcy of Principal.]—Where the defendant was arrested on the 27th March, on a writ returnable on the 16th April, and became bankrupt on the 3d of that month, and obtained his certificate on the 26th June following:—Held, that as the bankruptcy took place before the bail-bond was forfeited, the bail were discharged. Littlewood v. Crowther, 3 D. & R. 533.

On a motion to cancel a bail-bond, on the ground that the defendant (a bankrupt) had since obtained his certificate, it being suggested that the certificate had been obtained by fraud, the court (the parties consenting) directed an issue to try that fact. Duncan v. Everett, 1 M. & Scott, 521.

After staying proceedings in an action on the bail-bond, there may be a plea of bankruptcy in the original action, where the bail-bond is not ordered to stand as security. Sainsbury v. Gandon, 3 M. & R. 16.

Other Things.]—It is no ground for cancelling a bail-bond, that the attorney who sued out the writ had neglected to take out his certificate. Welch v. Pribble, 1 D. & R. 215.

If a defendant be sent out of the kingdom as an alien, after he has given a bail-bond, and before the return of the writ, the court will order the bail-bond to be cancelled. Postel v. Williams, 7 T. R. 517.

III. FORFEITURE OF BAIL-BOND.

1. By not giving Bail.

No bail-bond taken in London or Middlesex shall be put in suit until after the expiration of four days; nor if taken elsewhere, till after the expiration of eight days exclusive from the appearance day of the process. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott. 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Before this rule, it was held that a bail-bond could not be put in suit till after four days from the appearance day of the return of the writ. Bellis v. Mitford, 2 W. Black. 1009.

But that it was forfeited on the quarto die post, the other four days being allowed merely as grace and favour. Coulson v. Hammond, 4 D. & R. 160; 2 B. & C. 626.

In C. P., no bail-bond taken in London or Middlesex, by virtue of any process returnable in C. P. on the first return of a term, could be put in suit until after the 5th day in full term, nor bonds taken in other places until after the 9th day: nor, if under process returnable on the 2d or subsequent returns, until after the end of four and eight days respectively, exclusive of the return day of the process. Reg. Gen. C. P., T. T. 30 Geo. 3, 1 H. Black. 526.

If the fourth day for perfecting bail be the last day of term, and the bail be not perfected before the rising of the court on that day, an assignment of the bail-bond to the plaintiff, in the evening of that day, is regular. Dent v. Weston, 8 T. R. 4.

So, if the bail do not justify in four days after exception, although, from the bail having been put in sooner than was necessary, the rule for bringing in the body has not expired. Bond v. Evans, 7 D. & R. 374; 4 B. & C. 864. See Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298—Bayley.

It seems that where bail do not appear to justify on the day mentioned in the notice, but on a subsequent day, according to further notice, and the plaintiff, on the morning of the last day, takes an assignment of the bail-bond, and sues out process, the proceedings are not premature, although the rule for the allowance of bail be served on the same day. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

After default made in not putting in special bail in time, it is not enough that bail are afterwards put in; but the plaintiff may take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon, unless the bail be also justified, though not before excepted to. Turner v. Cary, 7 East, 607: S. P. Nuun v. Rogers, 2 Chit. 108. And see Fuller v. Prest, 7 T. R. 109; Pariente v. Plumbtree, 2 B. & A. 35; and Murray v. Durand, 1 Esp. 87.

Where bail above are put in, but not justified, and the sheriff, being fixed, brings an action on the bail-bond, to which the defendant pleads compertuit ad diem; the court of C. P. will, on motion by the sheriff, order the recognizance of bail in the original action to be struck off the file; though the defendant allege that the sheriff was fixed through his own negligence; for that should be the subject of a motion to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond. Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

If the defendant do not justify his bail in due time, and comperuit ad diem be pleaded to a declaration on the bail-bond, the court will order the appearance of the defendant to be recorded as of the day on which the bail justified. Ladd v. Arnaboldi, 1 C. & J. 97.

So, where bail justified at chambers by consent, and no rule for allowance was served, nor notice that they had justified given. Bignold v. Holding, 2 D. & R. 436; S. C. nom. Bignold v. Lee, 1 B. & C. 285.

If the rule for allowance of bail be not served on the plaintiff, he may take an assignment of the bail-bond though he knows of the justification. Holland v. White, 2 B. P. 341.

The court will not stay proceedings upon a bail-bond, upon the ground that the affidavit upon which the bail above were rejected as founded on perjury, except upon the usual terms of paying the costs incurred by the assignment and subsequent proceedings. Hobbs v. Miller, 1 Y. & J. 403.

A rule nisi for setting aside bailable process, &c. "with a stay of proceedings," does not enlarge the time for the defendant to put in and perfect bail, until the rule is disposed of, so as to place him in the same situation as he was in at the time the rule nisi was granted. St. Hanliare v. Byam, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970. And see Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 534.

Process being returnable on the 7th of November, the time to put in bail expired on the 11th. On the 10th, defendant obtained a rule nisi to set aside process and stay proceedings, on the ground of misnomer. This rule was discharged with costs on the 21st. On the 22d, an assignment of the bail-bond was taken, and proceedings had under it, and on the same day the defendant put in bail:—Held, that the defendant had not the whole of the 22d to put in bail, and that the assignment of the bail-bond, and the proceedings had under it, were regular. Id.

Since the uniformity of process act, suing out the writ of summons is the commencement of the action for all purposes. Where the defendant was arrested on the 1st of April, and, owing to Easter Monday and Tuesday falling on the 8th and 9th, had the 10th to put in bail, and the plaintiff on the 10th took an assignment of the bail-bond, and issued a writ of summons against the bail, the court set aside the proceeding on the bail-bond. Alston v. Underhill, 1 C. & M. 492.

2. By putting in disqualified Persons.

If a disqualified person be put in as bail and not excepted to, the plaintiff could not in K. B. proceed on the bail-bond as if no bail had been put in. Thompson v. Roubell, 2 Dougl. 467, n.

If bail be put in without any description, one of whom proves to be clerk to an attorney, and the other a person in low situation, plaintiff may in C. P. take an assignment of the bail-bond. Fenton v. Ruggles, 1 B. & P. 356.

So, if both bail be attorney's clerks. Wallace v. Arrowsmith, 2 B. & P. 49.

3. Irregular Proceedings.

Where the notice of bail is merely informal, and not an absolute nullity, the plaintiff cannot take an assignment of the bail-bond. Bell v. Foster, 1 M. & Scott, 518; 8 Bing. 334; 1 Dowl. P. C. 271.

Where a rule for staying proceedings on a bail-bond had been obtained by one of the bail on an affidavit, which stated an engagement between himself and the plaintiff, to absolve him from his obligation on payment of a sum of money at a future day, upon the ground of a breach of faith in proceeding before the time; and the plaintiff met the application by a distinct denial of the engagement on affidavit:—The court discharged the rule with costs. Sweeting v. Weaver, 11 Price, 735.

IV. ASSIGNMENT OF BAIL-BOND.

1. Statute, and Form.

By 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 20, the sheriff or other officer, at the request and costs of the plaintiff, is to assign to the plaintiff the bail-bond or other security, by indorsing the same, and attesting it under his hand and seal, in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, which might be done without any stamp, provided the assignment were duly stamped before any action brought thereon; and if the bail-bond be forfeited, the plaintiff, after such assignment, may bring an action thereon in his own name, and the court where the action is brought may, by rule, give such relief to the plaintiff and defendant in the original action, and to the bail, as is agreeable to justice and reason.

The stamp required on the assignment is now no longer necessary, by 5 Geo. 4, c. 41.

Under this statute it has been held, that the seal to the assignment of a bail-bond, being a seal of office, is sufficient to give it validity, who ever signed it; and, therefore, it is no objection that it was signed by one of the under-sheriff's clerks. Hams v. Ashby, 1 Selw. N. P. 586, n.—Mansfield.

To a plea in an action on a bail-bond at the suit of the assignee of a sheriff, that the assignment of the bond was not stamped before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill in the cause, the plaintiff need merely reply that the assignment was stamped at or before the exhibiting of the bill, and conclude his replication to the country; and he need not take issue as to the time when the bill was exhibited, nor aver that the assignment was stamped "before the commencement of the suit," and if the action thereon be in the K. B., and if the plaintiff avers that it was stamped at Westminster, he may nevertheless conclude to the country. Carter v. Yates, 2 Chit. 533.

2. Effect of Assignment.

If a plaintiff accept an assignment of a bail-bond, he cannot call upon the sheriff to return the writ, nor shall he have a rule for that purpose before it be determined whether or no the bond be good. Brooke (Lord) v. Stone, 1 Wils. 223.

Nor can he proceed in the original action after taking an assignment of the bail-bond, and whilst he retains his right to sue upon it. Anon. 1 Chit. 394.

Although the rule to return a writ cannot be had after the plaintiff has taken a valid assignment of the bail-bond, it is otherwise if the bond from any cause be void. Williams v. Jacques, 1 Tidd's Prac. 307.

If a plaintiff sue the bail by action, and take them in execution, he cannot afterwards take the principal, though one of the bail become bankrupt and be discharged, and the other also be discharged on payment of 5s. in the pound, and upon an understanding that the plaintiff was at liberty to proceed against the principal. Allen v. Snow, 2 M. & S. 341.

In an action by the assignees of a bail-bond, it is no objection to their recovering that the sheriff, after taking and before assigning the bond, returned non est inventus. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Adol. 223.

3. Waiver of Assignment.(a) By excepting to Bail.

Where the defendant is guilty of a neglect in not putting in bail in time, whereby the bail-bond becomes forfeited, the plaintiff may except to bail put in to stay the proceedings on the bail-bond, and it will not be a waiver of the assignment. Boldere v. Gray, Cowp. 769.

Unless the bail below become bail above. Babb v. Barber, 1 Anst. 274.

It is not a waiver of the assignment, that the plaintiff attends to oppose the justification of bail. Edmond v. Ross, 9 Price, 5.

(b) By proceeding against Sheriff.

A plaintiff shall not be at liberty to proceed on the bail-bond, pending a rule to bring in the body of the defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh. N. S. 595; Reg. Gen. M. T., Exch. 1 W. 4; 1 C. & J. 281; 1 Tyr. 163.

The plaintiff may abandon an attachment, and take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed thereon. Pople v. Wyatt, 15 East, 215. And see Leigh v. Bertles, 1 Marsh. 520; 6 Taunt. 167.

So, where the attachment has been set aside. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 406.

Before the rule, a plaintiff might have taken an assignment of the bail-bond even after service of the rule to bring in the body, or suing for an attachment, but not after it was sued out. Poideverie v. Harvey, and Robinson v. Owen, 1 Tidd's

Prac. 297; S. P. Cunningham v. Chambers, 1 Chit. 394, n.

But where the plaintiff had ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, he could not take an assignment pending such rule. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

But must have waited till the rule expired. Whittle v. Oldaker, 1 M. & R. 298; 7 B. & C. 478.

If bail above justify before a rule to bring in the body expires, the bail below, to an action on the bond, may plead comperuit ad diem. Id.

On an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, in an action on a bail-bond, the plea is proved by the recognizance roll containing an entry of defendant's appearance generally. Id.

After an issue of nul tiel record, joined on a plea of comperuit ad diem, to an action on a bail-bond, the recognizance roll may be made up at any time before the day given for producing it. Id.

V. ACTIONS ON BAIL-BONDS.

1. In what Court.

An action may be brought upon a bail-bond by the sheriff himself in any court. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Exch. H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh. N. S. 596.

Before the rule, it was so held in the Exchequer. Yorke v. Ogden, 8 Price, 174.

And in C. P. Newman v. Faucitt, 1 H. Black. 631.

But the Court of K. B. held, it was immaterial whether the action was brought by the assignee of the bail-bond, or by the officer to whom it was given, for that, in either case, the action must be brought in the court where the original action was brought. Donatty v. Barclay, 8 T. R. 152.

The action by the assignee of a bail-bond must be brought in the court where the original action was laid. Morris v. Rees, 2 W. Black. 838; 3 Wils. 348; S. P. Walton v. Bent, 3 Burr. 1923.

So, an action on a bail-bond given in a county-palatine, on an action brought there, must be brought in the court below, and not in K. B., unless special circumstances warrant it. Chesterton v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 642; 2 Ld. Ken. 369.

Although it is irregular to bring an action on a bail-bond in a different court from that in which the original action was commenced, yet the defendant cannot take advantage of this under the plea of non est factum. Wright v. Walmsley, 2 Camp. 396—Ellenborough.

2. Pleadings.

Declaration.—In an action on a bail-bond by the assignees of a sheriff, it is not necessary that the declaration should aver that the writ on which the defendant was arrested was issued on an affidavit of debt, and indorsed with the sum sworn to. Sharpe v. Abbey, 5 Bing. 193; 2 M. & P. 312; S. P. Dorrington v. Bucknell, 11 Moore, 445. And see Wilcoxon v. Nightingale, 4 Bing. 501; and Arundell v. White, 14 East, 224; confirming Whiskard v. Wilden, 1 Burr. 330, on the same point, though disapproved of in Hill v. Hele, 2 N. R. 202.

A plea that there was no proper affidavit, is bad on special demurrer. Hume v. Liversedge, 1 C. & M. 332; 1 Dowl. P. C. 660.

The return of the writ, on which the defendant in the original action was arrested, must be stated with certainty. Everett v. Tunnard, 2 Chit. 624.

The declaration, in setting out the condition, stated, that if the defendant should appear to answer the plaintiff, "according to the custom of his Majesty's court of Common Bench here," the obligation should be void. On the production of the bond the former words were omitted:—Held, that this was no variance, as it was only necessary to set out the condition according to its legal effect. Bonfellow v. Steward, 3 Moore, 214.

So, where the condition of a bail-bond was alleged in the declaration to be, "to appear before his Majesty's justices at Lancaster, on, &c." but on reference to the bond, it appeared to be "to appear before us, on, &c.":—Held, that this was no variance, as the allegation was according to the legal effect of the condition. Shaw v. Lee, 3 Stark. 76—Holroyd.

Where a declaration on a bail-bond against four defendants, in reciting the writ, stated that the sheriff to whom it was directed was commanded to take "the said defendant T. A. to answer the plaintiffs of a plea of trespass, and also to a bill of the plaintiffs against the said defendant:"—Held, on special demurrer, that the declaration was bad, in not clearly shewing against whom the writ was issued, or who was the defendant in the plaintiff's suit on the writ. Large v. Attwood, 1 D. & R. 551.

Where, in an action on a bail-bond, the condition set out on the record was, "to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass, and also to a plea of the plaintiff, to be exhibited against the defendant for 60l. upon promises," and, on the production of the bond, it did not contain the words "upon promises:"—Held, that this was a fatal variance. Baker v. Newbegin, R. & M. 93—Abbott.

The declaration in an action on a bail-bond stated the issuing from the Common Pleas of a writ for the arrest of the principal, by which the sheriff was commanded to have his body "before the justices of our said Lord the King, at Westminster," &c., to answer, &c.; and also that he might answer, &c., "according to the custom of his said Majesty's court," &c., and alleged the condition of the said bond to be for the appearance of the principal, "according to the exigency of the said writ in the said court," &c.; and also to answer, &c., "according to the custom of his said Majesty's court of Common Bench." The condition, as proved at the trial, was for the appearance of the principal "before our said Lord the King, at Westminster," &c., to answer, &c., and also to answer "according to the custom of the King's court of Common Bench:"—Held, that there was not any material variance. Crofts v. Stockley 5 Bing. 32; 2 M. & P. 81; 3 C. & P. 281.

In a declaration of debt on a bail-bond, at the suit of the assignee of the sheriff, it was stated, "that the plaintiff heretofore, to wit, on the 21st of July, sued out of the court of the Bench here (the said court being then and now at Westminster), a writ of capias ad respondendum, by which T. B. was to answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass; and also in a certain plea of trespass on the case upon promises." On special demurrer, assigning for causes, that the 21st of July was a day in vacation, and on which no such court then was at Westminster; and that the declaration only stated the writ to be to answer the plaintiff in a "plea of trespass," instead of a plea "wherefore with force and arms, &c.":—Held, first, as the averment that the court was sitting on a day in vacation was laid under a videlicet, it might be treated as surplusage; and, secondly, that it was unnecessary to set out or refer to the clausum fregit part of the writ. Luckett v. Plummer, 5 Moore, 538; 2 B. & B. 659. And see Atkinson v. Saunderson, 4 Dougl. 254; 1 Tidd's Prac. 223.

If a declaration on a bail-bond conclude, "whereby an action hath accrued to the plaintiff, to demand and have of the principal" (instead of the bail), and state non-payment by the principal, it is bad on a special demurrer. Morgan v. Sergeant, 1 B. & P. 58. And see Renalds v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 258; 6 Taunt. 551.

It is not necessary to make profert of an assignment of a bail-bond, nor need the witnesses' names thereto be set forth in a declaration. Lease v. Box, 1 Wils. 121.

Pleas, &c.—Nil debet is not a good plea on demurrer to debt on bond. Rawlins v. Dowers, 5 Esp. 38—Ellenborough.

Bail sued on the bail-bond cannot traverse the arrest. Taylor v. Clow, 1 B. & Adol. 223.

If the plea to an action on a sheriff's bond on the stat. 23 Hen. 6, c. 9, conclude with a verification, it will be bad upon special demurrer. Boyce v. Whitaker, 1 Dougl. 94.

After judgment against the principal, where the bail-bond stands as a security, the bail are entitled to a rule to plead and demand of a plea before judgment against them. Phillips v. Whitehead, 1 Chit. 270.

3. Practice.

(a) As to Appearance.

In an action on a bail-bond, if the issue depend on the date of the appearance, the court of C. P., upon an application by the plaintiff, will order the day of the appearance to be entered in the filacer's book, although, before the application to the court, issue had been already joined on the plea of comperuit ad diem. Austen v. Fenton, 1 Taunt. 23.

But in a similar case, where the defendant's appearance had been entered generally, the court of K. B. refused to order the appearance to be entered according to the fact on the day when it took place. Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298.

Where an assignment of a bail-bond had been taken on the 30th January, for want of notice of bail being put in, but such notice was given on the 29th (the last day for putting in bail in the cause), and the plaintiff had proceeded against the defendant's bail on the bail-bond, and served process on the defendant and his bail, to which they appeared, and pleaded comperuerunt ad diem: the court of Exchequer made a rule absolute which had been obtained by the plaintiff, calling on the defendant in the original action to shew cause why his appearance thereto should not be recorded as of the day when notice of the bail being put in was served on the plaintiff's clerk in court, notwithstanding bail had been regularly put in, and notice had been given on the 30th, before the assignment of the bail-bond could have been in fact executed. Allday v. George, 9 Price, 406.

(b) Staying Proceedings on Terms.

At what Time.—The assignment of the bail-bond by the statute, gives a discretionary power to the court to stay the proceedings. Anon. Loft, 395.

A rule to stay proceedings on a bail-bond may be obtained the same day that the bail justified. Shaw v. Johnston, 2 Chit. 108.

An order to set aside and stay proceedings on the bail-bond assigned, will be made, on a motion made on the last day of term, if it could not have been made before. M'Phedron v. Fitherington, 2 Price, 143.

Must put in and justify Bail.—If the proceedings be irregular, or against good faith, it is unnecessary to put in bail before application is made to set them aside. But otherwise if they be regular, and the defendant applies to set them aside on terms. Heath v. Gurley, 4 Moore, 149: S. P. Boughton v. Chaffey, 2 Wils. 6.

Writ returnable 31st of October (essoign day), the time for putting in bail expires on the 5th of November, and bail put in on the 7th is not ground for setting aside proceedings on bond assigned same day. Lewis v. Watson, 1 Price's P. C. 176.

Proceedings may be stayed on a bail-bond, on payment of costs, though the bail surrender the principal without having justified. Meysey v. Carnell, 5 T. R. 534. And see St. Hanlaire v. Byam, 7 D. & R. 458; 4 B. & C. 970.

(c) Necessary Affidavit.

What Affidavit necessary.—No rule shall be drawn up for staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of any bail-bond, unless the application for such rule shall (if made on the part of the original defendant) be grounded on an affidavit of merits, or (if made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or any officer of the sheriff) be grounded upon an affidavit, shewing that such application is really and truly made, on the part of the sheriff or bail, or officer of the sheriff (as the case may be), at his or their only expense, or for his or their only indemnity, and without collusion with the original defendant. Reg. Gen. K. B., M. T. 59 Geo. 3, 2 B. & A. 240; 1 Chit. 128, (a).

There is no rule of court in the Exchequer, as in the King's Bench, that an application by bail for a rule to stay proceedings on the assignment of a bail-bond, should be grounded on an affidavit, that the application is bona fide made on the part of the bail, at their expense, for their indemnity only, and without collusion with the original defendant; and a rule nisi for that purpose, not grounded on such an affidavit, was made absolute; but an affidavit of that nature, as well as of merits, is usual, according to the practice, of that court. Standen v. Blakie, M'Clel. 44; 13 Price, 114: S. P. Richardson v. Hodgson, 11 Price, 633.

It is not sufficient for a defendant, on moving to set aside proceedings on a bail-bond, to swear that the defendant in the original action has a good defence, even though he be an infant; he must swear to merits. Hallett v. Aubrey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 688.

Regular proceedings on the bail-bond cannot be set aside, where the motion is made on behalf of the defendant, without an affidavit of merits, although the plaintiff had opposed the justification of bail, and received the costs of the opposition. Hilton v. Jackson, 1 Chit. 677.

The affidavit must state that the defendant had a good defence upon the merits: a good defence to the action is not sufficient. Grottick v. Bailey, 5 B. & A. 703.

On a motion to stay the proceedings on a bail-bond, where an affidavit of merits is produced, it is not necessary to state on whose behalf the motion is made. Bell v. Taylor, 1 Chit. 572, 721.

If the bail apply to stay proceedings upon the bail-bond, they need not in C. P. swear to merits, though a trial has been lost. Hardisty v. Storer, 1 N. R. 123.

But in K. B. they must shew that the application is bona fide on their behalf, and without collusion or indemnity from the defendant. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 3 M. & S. 199.

An affidavit to set aside the proceedings after notice of render had been given, must state that the application is made bona fide on behalf of the bail; but time was given for producing a further affidavit. Merryman v. Quibble, 1 Chit. 127.

How Affidavit intituled.—An affidavit in support of an application to set aside or stay proceedings on a bail-bond, may be intituled either in the original action, or in the action against the bail. Lisle v. Chetwoode, 2 Tyr. 177: S. C. nom. Leyles v. Chetwood, 2 C. & J. 332; 1 Dowl. P. C. 321: S. P. Kelly v. Wrother, 2 Chit. 109.

In C. P., if the bail-bond have been irregularly assigned, the affidavit must be intituled in the original action; but if it had been assigned regularly, then in the action in the bail-bond. Ham v. Philcox, 7 Moore, 521; 1 Bing. 142; S. P. Roberts v. Giddins, 1 B. & P. 337.

And where the plaintiff has ruled the sheriff to bring in the body, the affidavits to set aside the proceedings on the bail-bond must be intitled in the action against the bail. Blackford v. Hawkins, 7 Moore, 600; 1 Bing. 181.

(d) Bail-bond standing as Security.

Rule and Cases.—Upon staying proceedings upon a bail-bond, on perfecting bail above, the bail-bond shall stand as a security if the plaintiff shall have declared de bene esse, and shall have been prevented, for want of special bail being perfected in due time, from entering his cause for trial in a town cause in the term next after that in which the suit is returnable, and in a country cause at the ensuing assizes. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 199; 8 Bing. 305; 1 M. & Scott, 432; 3 B. & Adol. 392; 2 C. & J. 200; 2 Tyr. 351; 4 Bligh, N. S. 607.

Where regular proceedings have been commenced upon a bail-bond, and the defendant has rendered after the time for perfecting bail above, the court will order the bail-bond to stand as a security under the rule. Hodge v. Hopkins, 1 Dowl. P. C. 431.

So held before the rule. Whitehead v. Phillips, 2 B. & A. 585; 1 Chit. 270.

In all cases where the bail-bond shall be directed to stand as a security, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment upon it. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 176; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Quære, whether, the plaintiff having been delayed a term in obtaining upon a demurrer a judgment which, but for the delay in perfecting bail, he might have had, is insufficient ground for ordering the bail-bond to stand as a security on the ordinary motion for staying proceedings thereon. Nash v. Barker, 1 Price's P. C. 91.

There must be an affidavit of the state of the proceedings to support an application for making that a term of the order. Id.

The bail-bond will be ordered to stand as a security, if the bail have not applied to stay the proceedings on the earliest opportunity. Ditchett v. Tollett, 3 Price, 257.

A bail-bond, executed by one only of the bail, may be ordered to stand as a security. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

Loss of Trial.—Before the rule, the court would not stay the proceedings on a bail-bond on payment of costs, where a trial had been lost, except on the terms of the bond's standing as a security. Phillips v. Whitehead, 2 B. & A. 585; 1 Chit. 270; S. P. Nias v. Gray, 1 Chit. 270, (a).

Explanation of the terms relative to bail, "losing a trial," and "bail-bond standing as a security." Id.

The loss of a trial in term is the loss of a term. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 9 Moore, 422; 2 Bing. 227.

Where one defendant was arrested on a latitat returnable in Hilary Term, and the other on an alias writ returnable in Easter Term, and if bail above had been duly perfected, the plaintiff might have tried the cause at the last sittings in Hilary Term:—Held, that the bail-bond must stand as a security. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 359.

Where the term has not been lost by neglect to put in bail, the court will set aside the proceedings on the bail-bond upon justification, although the plaintiff might have proceeded to trial at the first sitting in the term:—on payment of costs, pleading issuably, and taking short notice of trial for the sitting in term; and that without requiring the bail-bond to stand as security, or the debt to be paid into court. Bevan v. Knight, 1 Price's P. C. 13; 1 Tyr. 420.

A trial is not lost, unless judgment of the term is lost by the defendant's delay to put in and perfect bail in due time. Id.

Proceedings on a bail-bond were set aside, on justification and affidavit of merits, although the action was on a bill of exchange, merits denied, and object asserted to be delay. Id.

In a country cause, where the plaintiff has lost a trial, the court will not stay proceedings upon a bail-bond, unless upon the terms of its standing as a security. Fillis v. Stabb, 1 Y. & J. 373.

The court of Exchequer will, on motion, even where a trial has not been lost, stay proceedings on an assignment of a bail-bond, where the defendant has since perfected bail, without tender of costs, or any affidavit of merits, or that the application is made in ease of the sheriff, or bail; and they will not, in such a case, order the bail-bond to stand as a security, requiring only that the plaintiff shall be put in the same situation as if bail had been put in in time, and duly perfected. Searle v. Hale, 3 Price, 52.

Where an opportunity of going to trial has not been lost, or if judgment could not have been obtained before the term in which the motion could be made, the court of Exchequer will not require it to be made part of the order for staying proceedings, that the bail-bond shall stand as a security; but it seems to be otherwise, if a trial has been lost. Standen v. Blakie, 13 Price, 114.

Plaintiff's Diligence.—Where upon setting aside the proceedings on a bail-bond, the plaintiff seeks to have the bail-bond stand as a security, he must shew that he used due means to expedite the cause, and that he declared as soon as it was in his power. Anon. 1 Chit. 271, (a).

Where a plaintiff who has taken an assignment of a bail-bond after bail have been put in but not perfected, consents by his clerk in court to an order for staying the proceedings on payment of costs, he is not entitled to have the security of the bond, although he may have lost the opportunity of going to trial, because it is in such a case the result of his own conduct. Blare v. Mottram, 7 Price, 535.

The court refused to order a bail-bond, (on which proceedings had been stayed by order on perfecting bail,) to stand as a security for debt and costs, although the plaintiff had lost a trial, where the defendant had previously made an offer to the plaintiff, after the bail-bond had been assigned, and proceedings had in consequence of bail not being perfected in time, to justify at chambers, to pay the costs of the proceedings on the bond, to plead to the declaration, and take short notice of trial for the next assizes, to which the plaintiff refused to consent; so that he lost the opportunity of going to trial by his own conduct; and a rule to shew cause why an order made at chambers, for staying proceedings, should not be amended, by adding such terms, was discharged with costs. Walker v. Mapowder, 8 Price, 610.

(e) Payment of Costs, and other Terms.

Number of Actions.—Proceedings on the bail-bond may be stayed on payment of costs in one action, unless sufficient reason be shewn for proceeding in more. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 292; 1 M. & Scott, 419; 3 B. & Adol. 378; 2 C. & J. 176; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Before the rule, where three separate actions had been commenced without any sufficient reason, the court of K. B. stayed the proceedings upon payment of the costs of one action only. Key v. Hill, 2 B. & A. 598; 1 Chit. 337.

But in C. P. they would not do so, but upon payment of the costs in all the actions. Anon. 1 Chit. 338, n.

Where an attorney had become bail to the sheriff, and the bail-bond had been assigned, the court of Exchequer would, upon the usual affidavit, stay proceedings upon the bail-bond upon payment of costs. Mann v. Nottage, 1 Y. & J. 367.

Other Terms.—Proceedings on a bail-bond stayed where bail had justified, and where no trial had been lost, and the court would not impose the terms of accepting a declaration, pleading issuably, and taking short notice of trial. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 357. And see Eyton v. Beattie, 2 Smith, 489.

When two only of three joint contractors are sued, the court of C. P. will not stay proceedings upon the bail-bond, unless the defendants will undertake not to plead in abatement. Govett v. Johnson, 2 B. & P. 465.

(f) As to Judgment.

Final judgment may be entered up on a bail-bond, without executing a writ of inquiry. Moody v. Pleasant, 2 B. & P. 446.

If it appear in a declaration by the assignee of the sheriff on such bond, that the bond is void, the court on motion will arrest the judgment after verdict against the defendant, upon a plea of non est factum. Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569.

VI. RIGHTS AND LIABILITY OF BAIL TO THE SHERIFF.

Bail to the sheriff have no right to take their principal into custody; nor have bail in the Palace Court. With respect, however, to bail above, it is otherwise. Rex v. Hughes, 3 C. & P. 373—Tenterden.

Bail to the sheriff are liable for the plaintiff's whole debt (without regard to the sum sworn to) and costs, provided they do not exceed the penalty of the bail-bond. Stevenson v. Cameron, 8 T. R. 28; S. P. Mitchell v. Gibbons, 1 H. Black. 76; Orton v. Vincent, Cowp. 71.

Semble, where the bail are let in upon terms, to try the cause of the principal, the money levied to abide the event, and the bail-bond to stand as a security; the bail are not liable beyond the penalty on the bond, although the debt and costs exceed the same after the trial, and the plaintiff's debt would have been fully covered by the security, when the bail were first let in to try upon terms. Goss v. Harrison, 2 Smith, 354.

Prima facie the bail to the sheriff are liable to the charges of putting in bail above; therefore, if a party, who is bail to the sheriff, apply to an attorney to put in bail above, he is liable for these expenses, but not for the subsequent expenses of the suit. Hector v. Carpenter, 1 Stark. 190—Ellenborough.

VII. DEPOSIT OF MONEY IN LIEU OF BAIL.

1. Statutes.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, all persons arrested on mesne process may, in lieu of giving bail to the sheriff, deposit in his hands the sum indorsed on the writ, together with 10l. in addition, to answer costs, and shall be discharged from such arrest; and the sheriff, at or before the return of the writ, is to pay the same into court; upon bail being duly put in and perfected, the money deposited is, by order of the court, upon motion, to be repaid to the defendant; but if no bail be duly put in and perfected, it is, by like order on motion, to be paid over to the plaintiff, who may thereupon appear for the defendant: the payment is to be subject to such deductions from the 10l. as, upon taxation of the plaintiff's costs, shall be thought reasonable.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, the defendant may, instead of putting in and perfecting bail, allow the sum deposited with the sheriff, and by him paid into court, to remain in court to abide the event of the suit; and in all cases where a defendant is arrested and remains in custody, or gives bail to the sheriff, he may, instead of putting in and perfecting bail, pay the debt into court, with 20l. to answer costs, to abide the event of the suit, and thereupon enter a common appearance, or, in default, the plaintiff may do it for him, and proceed as if bail had been perfected: if plaintiff has judgment, he may, by order of court on motion, receive out of the money deposited sufficient to satisfy his judgment; and if defendant has judgment, or the plaintiff discontinues his suit, or be otherwise barred, the money, or if more than sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff, the surplus, is to be returned to the defendant.

Provided, by s. 3, that defendant may, at any time before issue joined or judgment signed, take the money out of court, by order on motion, upon putting in and perfecting bail, and payment of such costs as the court shall direct.

So, by s. 4, a defendant who has put in and perfected bail may make the deposit, and the bail shall be exonerated.

Before the statute, it was held in C. P. that a defendant might pay into court, to abide the event of the cause, a sufficient sum to cover the debt and costs, instead of giving bail. Fowell v. Leo, 1 Taunt. 425.

On payment of money to the sheriff upon an arrest, it will be presumed that it was paid as a deposit in lieu of bail, under the statute, unless a discharge or some acknowledgment in writing be given to the defendant for the debt and costs. The payment of the debt, with the particular sum of 10*l.*, raises a strong presumption that it is not an absolute payment in discharge of the debt and costs. Wain v. Bradbury, 1 Smith, 128.

A defendant was permitted to pay into court (before four o'clock) the debt, and 20*l.* costs, in lieu of bail, after two ineffectual attempts to justify original and added bail, on the payment of the costs of the two oppositions, on affidavits of the facts and of merits. Thomas v. Gray, 1 Price's P. C. 86.

The statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2. does not control the discretion of the court as to the time for putting in bail. Where, therefore, money was paid into court, in lieu of bail, which was not put in and perfected in due time, the court, on an affidavit of merits, granted further time to the defendant. Parker v. Turner, 2 Chit. 71.

Where money is paid into the hands of the sheriff in lieu of bail, the defendant has, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, till the day for perfecting special bail, for giving notice of his intention that the money shall remain in court to abide the event of the suit. Rowe v. Softly, 6 Bing. 634; 4 M. & P. 464.

2. When Defendant may take out of Court.

A defendant in K. B., who has put in bail, and rendered in their discharge, is entitled to have the money deposited repaid to him. Chadwick v. Battye, 3 M. & S. 283; 1 Chit. 145.

So in C. P. Harford v. Harris, 4 Taunt. 669.

Where a defendant, having applied to take out of court money deposited in lieu of bail, on the ground of his having put in and perfected bail; and a rule having been afterwards obtained by the plaintiff for setting aside the allowance of bail, the defendant was then rendered: the court directed the money to be paid out to the defendant, after deducting the costs of the two rules. Gould v. Berry, 1 Chit. 145.

Even although such money was deposited with the sheriff by a friend, and the defendant had become bankrupt after it was paid in. Edelsten v. Adams, 2 Moore, 610; 8 Taunt. 557.

The court refused to inquire whose money it actually was, and whether it belonged to the assignees of the defendant, on the ground that under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, they were empowered to refund it to the defendant alone. Id.

Upon bail being put in and perfected, the court will order it to be repaid to the bail, or any other person by whom it was actually deposited, instead of the defendant. Nunn v. Powell, 1 Smith, 13.

Where the defendant, on being arrested, deposited certain goods in the hands of the officer who arrested him, in lieu of bail, and afterwards surrendered himself; two days after which, the officer deposited with the prothonotary the amount of the original debt, and 10*l.* for costs:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have those sums paid over to him, as, if they had been paid in under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, he would be entitled to them on his render; and if not, they must be taken to have been paid into court by mistake. Hill v. Ching, 7 Moore, 332; 1 Bing. 103.

Quære, whether the depositing goods with the officer on an arrest, instead of money, is a compliance with the terms of that statute? Id.

If money has been paid into court to abide the event of the suit, under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and the defendant wishes to take it out on perfecting special bail, under s. 3, he must do so before issue joined. Ferrall v. Alexander, 1 Dowl. P. C. 132.

3. When Plaintiff entitled.

If a defendant, who pays the debt, and 10*l.* for costs to the sheriff, in lieu of bail, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, puts in bail above, who, being excepted to, render him instead of justifying, the plaintiff is not entitled to receive out of court, under s. 2, the money so deposited. Harford v. Harris, 4 Taunt. 669.

Though the defendant may in such case receive back his deposit. Id.

If a defendant, being arrested by a wrong name, pay the amount of the sum sworn to, and 10*l.* for the costs, to the sheriff, the court will not permit the plaintiff to take it out of court on the defendant's omitting to perfect bail. Cadby v. Parsons, 5 Taunt. 623.

Nor will the court permit the defendant to take it out except on terms. Id.

Quære, whether the plaintiff is entitled to move to have the sum deposited in the hands of the sheriff and paid into court, paid out to him until he has obtained judgment? Rowe v. Softly, 4 M. & P. 464; 6 Bing. 634.

A plaintiff is entitled to have money paid into court in lieu of bail, paid out to him, if special bail be not perfected in due time, although the defendant has rendered since the time for perfecting bail, unless an affidavit of merits is produced. Newman v. Hodgson, 1 Dowl. P. C. 329; 1 B. & Adol. 422.

A defendant having been arrested, paid into court the sum indorsed on the writ, together with 20*l.* as a security for costs, pursuant to the stat.

7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2. The court, on the application of the defendant, allowed the plaintiff to take out of court a given portion of the sum paid into court, and, unless he consented to accept thereof, with costs, in full discharge of the action, ordered it to be struck out of the declaration, and that the plaintiff should not give any evidence at the trial as to that sum. Hubbard v. Wilkinson, 8 B. & C. 496.

4. Practice.

Costs.—Where a defendant, on being arrested, deposited the amount of the debt, together with 10*l.* for costs, with the officer, who, four days afterwards informed the plaintiff's attorney of the circumstance, and the under-sheriff afterwards wrote to him that the deposit had been made; notwithstanding which, the sheriff was ruled to return the writ; and a declaration was filed, and notice thereof served on the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of those proceedings, as it was the duty of the sheriff to have paid the sum deposited into court at or before the return of the writ, and which he had omitted to do. Offley v. Weaver, 7 Moore, 557.

But where a defendant, on being arrested, paid the sheriff's officer the amount of the debt, and 10*l.* for costs, under the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 2, which latter sum was more than sufficient to cover the costs incurred up to the return of the writ; and the under-sheriff having omitted to pay over the amount to the plaintiff, after being requested so to do, in consequence of which he proceeded further in the action, and incurred further costs:—Held, that the defendant was not liable to pay such costs. Clark v. Yates, 7 Moore, 83; 3 B. & B. 273.

Fees.—The clerk of the docquets is not entitled, in C. P., to any poundage on money deposited with the sheriff, and by him paid into court. Henn v. Brine, 6 Moore, 124.

Nor in K. B. is the chief clerk. Stewart v. Bracebridge, 2 B. & A. 770; 1 Chit. 529.

Other Matters.—Where a defendant cannot be found in order to serve him personally with a rule for taking out money deposited in the hands of the sheriff, in lieu of bail, the court will allow the service to be good, by leaving a copy of the rule at the defendant's last place of abode, and sticking it up in the office. Peate v. Triscott, 1 Chit. 675. And see Id. 170, 466.

If a defendant pay money into court under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, to abide the event of the cause, the court will not grant a rule absolute in the first instance for repayment to the defendant, judgment being for him, but there must be a rule to shew cause. Symes v. Rose, 5 Bing. 269; 2 M. & P. 426.

In order to make it absolute, it is necessary to produce the record and certificates from the clerk of the judgments and prothonotary, that judgment had been duly signed, and the money paid into court. Id.

A motion for taking out of court money paid to the sheriff by defendant on his arrest, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, and paid into court by the sheriff, was granted on no cause being shewn. Tbut v. Lovcroft, 1 Price's P. C. 37.

The defendant having been arrested, paid into court the sum indorsed on the writ, and the further sum of 20*l.* as a security for costs, to abide the event of the suit, in pursuance of the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, instead of putting in and perfecting special bail:—Held, that he was entitled to have the bail-bond delivered up to him to be cancelled. Smith v. Jordan, 2 M. & P. 428.

Leave given, by rule, to pay into court 10*l.* in addition to the deposit in the hands of the sheriff, in lieu of special bail. Graves v. Bennett, 1 Price's P. C. 14.

If money is deposited in court, in lieu of bail above, pursuant to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, and the plaintiff obtains a verdict, he must limit his execution to the surplus of his demand, beyond the sum deposited, which he is bound to take out of court. Hews v. Pyke, 1 Dowl. P. C. 322; 2 C. & J. 359; 2 Tyr. 313.

VIII. WHO MAY BE BAIL ABOVE.

1. Attornies and their Clerks.

If any person put in as bail to the action, except for the purpose of rendering only, be a practising attorney, or clerk to a practising attorney, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and sue upon the bail-bond as soon as the time for putting in bail has expired, unless good bail be duly put in in the mean time. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 171; 2 Tyr. 342; 5 Bligh, N. S. 594.

Both before the rule and since, an attorney or attorney's clerk, or indeed any person, may be bail, for the purpose of rendering the principal. Bell v. Gate, 1 Taunt. 162.

Before this rule, no attorney, or person practising as such, could be bail in C. P. Reg. Gen. C. P., M. T. 6 Geo. 2, 1 H. Black. 76, n.; Anon. Loft, 263, 280.

Or in K. B. Boulogne v. Vautrin, 2 Dougl. 467, n.; Cowp. 828.

But there was no general rule of the court of Exchequer which prohibited attornies or their clerks from becoming bail; the practice in that respect was, however, similar to that of the courts of K. B. and C. P. Mann v. Nottage, 1 Y. & J. 367, n.

The rule applies to bail to the action only, and not to bail to the sheriff.

It was held, that an attorney's articulated clerk could not be bail. Laing v. Cundale, 1 H. Black. 76.

Nor any other clerk, though not articulated. Cornish v. Ross, 2 H. Black. 350; S. P. Boulogne v. Vautrin, Cowp. 828; 2 Dougl. 467, n.

Even though he were not clerk to the defendant's attorney. Redit v. Broomhead, 2 B. & P.

564: S. P. Stoneham v. Pink, 3 Price, 263. See also Richie v. Gilbert, and Cakish v. Ross, 1 Taunt. 164, n.

But where an attorney was a defendant in a suit, his clerk might become bail above for him in the Exchequer, notwithstanding this practice. Dixon v. Edwards, 2 Anst. 356.

And an attorney who has not practised for six years may justify as bail. Anon. 1 Chit. 714, n.

So where he is uncertificated. Anon. 2 Chit. 98.

And, generally, an attorney might be put in as bail, but could not justify. Anon. 1 Chit. 714: S. P. Jackson v. Trinder, 2 W. Black. 1180.

So might an attorney's clerk. Hill v. Thompson, 7 Moore, 403.

And was good bail until excepted to. Rex v. Surrey (Sheriff), 2 East, 181.

An attorney was liable to an action on his recognizance of bail, though contrary to the rule of court that he should be a bail at all; but he was nevertheless entitled to his privilege to be sued as an attorney. Harper v. Tahourdin, 1 Chit. 714, n.; 6 M. & S. 383.

A conveyancer engaged in partnership with an attorney of the court of K. B., and sharing in the general profits of the business of the office, though he did not himself practise as an attorney, was not allowed to justify as bail. — v. Yates, 1 D. & R. 9.

2. Officers of Courts.

The sixty sworn clerks of the Six Clerks' Office do not come within the operation of the rule of court which prohibits the officers of the court from becoming bail. Dutton v. Welstead, 2 Chit. 77.

No sheriff's officer of any kind, or other person concerned in the execution of process, shall be bail. Anon. Loft, 153: S. P. Bolland v. Pritchard, 2 W. Black. 799.

But a sheriff's officer is good bail until excepted to, and the plaintiff cannot treat the proceeding as a nullity. Bankes v. Levi, 1 Chit. 713.

The Marshalsea court officers cannot be bail in K. B. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 247.

Nor can the keeper of a prison. Hawkins v. Magnall, 2 Dougl. 466.

But it is not a sufficient ground for rejecting a person as bail, that he is described to be "of A. in the county of B., jail keeper," unless it appear that he is a county jail keeper. Faulkner v. Wise, 2 B. & P. 359.

Nor a turnkey. Daly v. Brooshoft, 5 Moore, 72; 2 B. & B. 359.

3. Bankrupts and Insolvents.

Bankrupts.—Bankruptcy is not a ground of rejection, if the bail have obtained his certificate. Smith v. Roberts, 1 Chit. 9.

But bankruptcy without a certificate is. Anon. 1 Chit. 9, (a).

And persons who have been twice bankrupt, and have not paid 15s. in the pound under the second commission, cannot be bail. Mountain v. Wilkins, 1 Tidd's Prac. 247; 1 Chit. 9, (a).

Bail who had recently become a bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, but did not know whether his estate had paid any dividend, was not permitted to justify. Probatt's bail, 1 Chit. 288.

One of the bail having been recently bankrupt, was not permitted to justify, although worth 500*l.* at the time he offered to become bail. Butler's bail, 2 Chit. 78.

So, bail admitting he had been a bankrupt, and had been arrested several times, but did not know how often, was rejected, and no time allowed. Rawlin's bail, 1 Chit. 3.

Bail rejected, who could not say whether, during the interval of his bankruptcy and certificate, he had, or had not justified. Bennett's bail, 1 Chit. 289.

So bail was rejected who had compounded with his creditors and afterwards become bankrupt, and had not paid 15s. in the pound. Wade's bail, 1 Chit. 293.

Insolvents.—A discharge under an insolvent act disqualifies bail. Smith v. Roberts, 1 Chit. 9; 1 Tidd's Prac. 247; S. P. Curtis v. Smith, 1 Chit. 116.

4. Peers and Members of Parliament.

Bail rejected on the ground that one of them was a peer of the realm. Burton v. Atherton, 2 Marsh. 232.

Nor can a member of the House of Commons be allowed to justify, because he is not liable to the ordinary process of the courts. Duncan v. Hill, 1 D. & R. 126: S. P. Graham v. Sturt, 4 Taunt. 249.

5. Persons indemnified.

In C. P. it was held to be no objection to bail that they were indemnified. Neat v. Allen, 1 B. & P. 21.

But now in C. P. by special rule, H. T. 37 Geo. 3, no person who has been indemnified by the attorney can justify as bail. Preston v. Bindley, 1 Tidd's Prac. 269.

And this has been the settled practice in K. B. Id.

And that court rejected bail, who had received a verbal promise of indemnity from the defendant's attorney, although they gave time to put in fresh bail. Greensill v. Hopley, 1 B. & P. 103: S. P. Capon v. Dillamore, 8 Moore, 516; 1 Bing. 423.

But it is no objection to bail that they are indemnified by the sheriff's officer. Chick's bail, 1 Chit. 714, n.

It is no objection to bail that they became so at the request of the defendant's attorney, unless they are also indemnified by him. Hunt v. Blaquiére, 4 Bing. 588.

A bail who expects the attorney for the defendant to indemnify him, though he has received no undertaking to that effect, cannot justify. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 1.

A person once rejected cannot be bail again, though his circumstances have changed. Snell's bail, 1 Chit. 82, 676.

But where bail had been rejected on the ground of having been indemnified by the defendant's attorney:—Held, that this rule did not apply. — v. Hallett, 1 D. & R. 488.

6. Persons under other Circumstances.

A person whose name is on the books of the K. B. prison as a prisoner, cannot be bail where the action, although supersedeable, has not been actually superseded. Anon., 1 Tidd's Prac. 271.

It is no objection that bail had been transported thirty years ago. Hatfield's bail, 2 Chit. 98.

A servant in the king's household, who is liable to be called on to attend the person of his majesty, cannot be bail, for his person cannot be taken in execution. Anon. 1 D. & R. 127, n.

But quære, whether it is a sufficient objection to bail, that he lives within the verge of the court. Glead v. Mackay, 2 W. Black. 956.

The domestic servant of a foreign ambassador cannot become bail. Lock's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 124.

Bail rejected on the ground that his children were in the workhouse, and he would not assign a reason. Anon. 2 Chit. 77.

So, also for suffering his father to receive parish relief. Helm v. Booth, 2 Chit. 78.

Bail rejected where he was to receive a commission on the amount for which he proposed to justify. Forall's bail, 7 D. & R. 783.

Where he had been bail in other actions, but did not know how often. Anon. 1 Chit. 3, (b): S. P. Anon. Lofft. 72, 194.

So, where he had been bail to the sheriff in a former action, and had not been excepted to, his property not being sufficient for both actions; but time was allowed. Varden v. Wilson, 1 Chit. 287.

So, where he had been rejected in the Palace Court, although the objection there was merely technical. Monk's bail, 1 Chit. 76.

The husband of the defendant, who had married after the arrest and before the return of the writ, was allowed to justify as one of the bail. Salter v. Whitefield, 2 Chit. 94.

It is no objection to the justification of bail, that he was not acquainted with the defendant. Jameson's bail, 2 Chit. 97.

A member of a corporation may justify as bail in error in an action brought against the corporation, if he be not a capital burgess or a party on the record. Henley v. Lyme Regis (Mayor, &c.), 3 M. & P. 450; 6 Bing. 195.

Bail rejected where he was liable upon outstanding dishonoured bills not renewed, and the right of proceeding against him is not suspended. Barnesdall v. Stretton, 2 Chit. 79.

A bail by affidavit was rejected, on an affidavit that he had dishonoured a note over due; no reason being stated on his behalf for so doing. Cress v. Williams, 1 Tyr. 531.

It is no objection to bail, that he is one of the indorsers of the bill of exchange upon which the action is brought. Mitchell's bail, 1 Chit. 287: S. P. Stevens's bail, 1 Chit. 305; and Harris v. Manley, 2 B. & P. 526.

The acceptor of a dishonoured bill of exchange is not competent to become bail in an action against the drawer. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 183.

IX. QUALIFICATION OF SPECIAL BAIL.

1. Housekeepers.

Rule.—No bail will be allowed to justify unless he be a housekeeper or a freeholder. Reg. Gen. M. T. 10 Geo. 4, 3 M. & P. 761.

But the plaintiff may waive the qualification that the bail shall be housekeeper or freeholder. Saggers v. Gordon, 5 Taunt. 174.

Bail must swear themselves "housekeepers:" swearing themselves "householders" is not sufficient. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 127.

Within Jurisdiction.—Bail must be housekeepers within the jurisdiction of the courts, so as to be amenable to their process. Hughes v. Sterling, 11 Price, 158.

A lodger in England, possessed of a house in Scotland, cannot justify as bail. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 61.

What an occupation.—Where it appeared that the bail lived in lodgings, but that he paid part of the rent and taxes of a house occupied by his partner, as a trader:—Held, that he might be considered as a housekeeper, and was qualified to justify. Savage v. Hall, 8 Moore, 525; 1 Bing. 430.

But rejected, where it appeared that he had rented a house, and underlet the same to another, who paid the taxes, and let the first floor to the bail, but whom the landlord would not accept as tenant, and therefore he paid the full rent to the bail, who paid it to the landlord. Anon. 1 Chit. 502.

Where a person had taken a house occupied by lodgers, from one of whom he had received rent, he was held to be qualified, though he had never in fact occupied the house himself. Coeck v. Waterhouse, 8 Moore, 365.

But not where he occupied every room in the house except one, which was reserved for his landlord, who paid all the taxes. Slade's bail, 1 Chit. 502.

Nor in respect of a house which he had hired, but which he was prevented from occupying by illness in the family of the former tenant. Bold's bail, 1 Chit. 288.

Nor in respect of the occupation of a tap connected with a tavern, if the licence be taken out in the name of the tavern keeper. Walker's bail, 1 Chit. 316.

But the occupier of a house for a limited period, though he pays neither rent nor taxes, is sufficient. Williams v. Dethick, 2 Price, 8.

And the court of C. P. permitted a justification, although the bail did not reside in the house in which he was described in the notice. Hemming v. Plenty, 1 Moore, 529.

A person renting a house, and underletting the basement part of it, is not, as a housekeeper, sufficient bail. Topham v. Calpert, 1 Price's P. C. 140.

Four days' time, excluding Sunday, given on such a rejection, for new notice. Id.

If it appear from the affidavit to oppose the justification of bail, that the person offering himself for that purpose has ceased to be actually a housekeeper, although he occupied a house when he signed the bail-piece, and is about to occupy another, he is not admissible. Weale v. Wild, 12 Price, 770.

It is no objection that a man has not been assessed to the poor's rate; such assessment being only evidence of his being a housekeeper. Anon. Lofft, 328.

Description of House.—The value of the house is immaterial. Anon. Lofft, 148.

Keeping a gambling-house is no ground of opposition. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 160.

Non-payment of Taxes.—Bail were rejected for not having paid the arrears of king's taxes, though in a condition to pay them. Lewis v. Thompson, 1 Chit. 309.

But where he had been in the habit of having the time for payment of taxes postponed, and his property was sufficient, time was given in order that he might pay the taxes, and produce the receipts on coming up again. Spurdens v. Mahony, 1 Chit. 309, (n).

2. Estate.

Semble, that a bail may justify as a tenant by the curtesy of lands in the Isle of Man, without affidavit, or other evidence, that the law of tenancy by curtesy prevails there. Tomsey v. Napier, 8 Taunt. 148.

A leaseholder, not a housekeeper or freeholder, cannot justify as bail. Smith's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 1.

In one case previously it was doubted, if a beneficial lease is sufficient to qualify as bail, where he is neither freeholder nor householder. Anon. 2 Chit. 96.

A freeholder for ninety-nine years was admitted as bail by consent. Id.

A copyhold estate in right of the wife is not sufficient property to constitute a qualification. Anon. 2 Chit. 97.

Bail cannot be rejected because he swears to an estate in a distant place, although, if untrue, he may be indicted for perjury. Anon. Lofft, 145.

3. Property.

It seems that where the court orders bail to submit their property to inspection, in order to ascertain its sufficiency to enable them to justify, the plaintiff may cause it to be appraised by a broker. Tudor v. Simpkin, 2 Chit. 80.

Good debts, although merely choses in action, may be considered as part of the effects of bail. Anon. Lofft, 144.

So mortgage money secured on an estate in Ireland. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 246.

The possession of effects abroad to any amount, held not to be sufficient on justification. Anon. Lofft, 34, 147; S. P. Levy's bail, 1 Chit. 258. Wightwick v. Pickering, Forrest, 138.

So landed property in Jamaica. Boddy v. Leyland, 4 Burr. 2526.

But, in one case, held, that having no effects in England was not an objection to bail, without other suspicious circumstances. Smith v. Scandrett, 1 W. Black. 444.

And semble, that a British subject resident in this country may justify though his property be abroad. Anon. 1 Chit. 286, n.

So also where the property is partly in England and partly abroad. Graham v. Anderson, 4 M. & S. 371.

So, where part of the property is daily expected in a ship from abroad, the bill of lading having arrived. Welsford's bail, 1 Chit. 286, n.

So, bail was allowed to justify in respect of property, consisting partly of cash and partly of a freehold house at Gibraltar. Beardmore v. Phillips, 4 M. & S. 173.

So, a Portuguese who owned a ship trading between London and Portugal, and which was then at Cadiz, and expected to return, being insured in London, was allowed by K. B. to justify, although he did not swear to effects in England. Colson v. Cashedy, 1 Tidd's Prac. 272.

So a foreigner of credit, though he has few effects in England, may justify as bail, especially where the defendant is a foreigner also. Christie v. Filluol, 2 W. Black. 1323.

X. PUTTING IN BAIL.

1. When to be put in.

A sheriff might put in bail before the return of a writ. Evans v. Sweet, 2 Bing. 271; 9 Moore, 556.

So held in K. B. and consequently the plaintiff could not afterwards proceed on the bail-bond. Hyde v. Whiskard, 8 T. R. 436. But see Newton v. Lewis, and Huggins v. Bambridge, 8 T. R. 457, 458, n.

The bail to the sheriff cannot put in bail to the action before the return of the process, without consent of the defendant. Birt v. Roberts, M. & M. 177—Tenterden.

In the Exchequer, where bail has been put in by a defendant, and not perfected, the sheriff's officer may put in and justify bail for his own indemnity. Hopkins v. Peacock, 5 Price, 558.

Where special bail have been put in, but have omitted to justify, the sheriff may put in fresh bail to render the defendant, even after an attachment has issued against him for not obeying the rule to bring in the body. Hamilton v. Jones, 4 M. & P. 454; 6 Bing. 628.

Where the action was by original, the defendant had till four days after the quarto die post to put in bail. Frampton v. Barber, 4 T. R. 377.

Which were exclusive of the return day, and if the last day was Sunday, the defendant had the whole of Monday. Anon. Lofft, 190.

So, where a writ was returnable on the first return of a term, in a country cause, the defendant, in C. P. had eight days after the quarto die post to put in bail. Rolfe v. Steele, 2 H. Black. 276.

Bail above may be put in on a dies non jurisdiction. Baddeley v. Adams, 5 T. R. 170.

Bail may be taken after final judgment. Stanton's bail, 2 Chit. 73.

2. How put in.

(a) Number.

Notice of more bail than two shall be deemed irregular, unless by order of the court, or a judge. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., Hil. Term, 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 173; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Where a poor defendant was arrested for 700*l.* the court granted a rule to justify three bail instead of two. Easter v. Edwards, 1 Dowl. P. C. 39.

Before the rule, where the sum sworn to was large, the Court of Exchequer would permit more than two bail to be put in. De Tastet v. Kroger, Wightw. 110; Wightwick v. Pickering, Forrest, 138; Anon. 13 Price, 448.

So, also in K. B. Fell v. Douglas, 1 Chit. 601; Anon. Lofft, 26.

But not in C. P. Allen v. Keyt, 2 W. Black. 1122.

(b) Court.

The bail-piece must be intituled of the court, and in the cause. Hall's bail, 1 Chit. 79.

Where bail had been put in by mistake in the wrong court, the defendant was ordered to rectify the mistake by putting in and perfecting bail in the right court of the proper term. Boyce v. Rust, 1 Tidd's Prac. 251.

If a defendant be arrested by process of K. B., and removed by habeas corpus into C. P., he may put in and justify bail in either court. Knowllys v. Reading, 1 B. & P. 311.

(c) County.

A recognizance of bail shall not express where it was taken. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., Ex., Hil. Term, 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 193; 8 Bing. 300; 1 M. & Scott, 426; 3 B. & Adol. 385; 2 C. & J. 190; 2 Tyr. 348; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

All proceedings are to be in Middlesex only. Id.

Declaration for an escape stated that the debtor was arrested, and gave bail; that bail above was put in before a judge at chambers, prout patet per recordum, and that the debtor surrendered in discharge of his bail, and afterwards escaped. The examined copy of the entry of the recognizance of bail stated it to have been taken before the court at Westminster:—Held, first, that plaintiff was bound to prove the bail to have been taken as alleged, and therefore that the variance was fatal; and, secondly, that an entry in the filacer's book, stating the recognizance to have been taken before a single judge, was not admissible in evidence, and would not cure the objection, even if admitted. Bevan v. Jones, 6 D. & R. 483; 4 B. & C. 403.

Bail are not regularly put in, unless the name of the proper county be inserted in the bail-piece. Smith v. Miller, 7 T. R. 96.

Where special bail is put in by mistake in a wrong county, it is as no bail; and the plaintiff, if he enter a common appearance for the defendant, and file a declaration in the office de bene esse, may serve notice of it on the defendant in person. Fisher v. Levi, 2 W. Black. 1061.

And if bail be put in with the filacer of the county where the defendant is arrested on a testatum capias, the bill may be treated as a nullity, unless it appear that the plaintiff was aware that bail had been put in. Clempson v. Knox, 2 B. & P. 516.

But if the county from which the testatum issued appear in the margin of the bail-piece, it is not a nullity. Anon. 1 Chit. 79, (a): S. P. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 3 M. & S. 532.

If bail be put in in the county palatine of Lancaster for a defendant who is arrested upon a testatum capias from London, and it appear on the face of the bail-piece that they had been put in at Lancaster:—Held, that the bail-piece was wrong, as it should have stated that the testatum issued from London into the county palatine; but the court of C. P. gave time for a proper bail-piece to be transmitted, and directed that the same bail might then justify. Longworth v. Healey, and Lee v. Same, 3 Moore, 76. And see Hartley v. Hodson, 1 Moore, 514, 430; 2 Moore, 66; 8 Taunt. 171.

It is not irregular, where the defendant has been arrested under an original capias, and original bail has been put in in Middlesex, for added bail afterwards taken before a commissioner in Denbighshire to be put in before the filacer for Middlesex. Moore v. Kenrick, 3 Bing. 603; 11 Moore, 488.

(d) Action.

The Court of Exchequer will permit justification, where the title of the cause is not correctly set out in the bail-piece. Calvert v. Bowater, 1 Price, 385.

If in an action, at the suit of two plaintiffs, bail be put in as in an action at the suit of one only, such bail may be treated as a nullity. Anon. 2 Chit. 77: S. P. Anon. Lofft, 237.

So, in a joint action against two, if the bail be put in as in an action against one only. Holt v. Frank, 1 M. & S. 199.

If in the bail recognizance the cause be rightly named, it is sufficient, though in the affidavits of the sufficiency of the bail, and of the acknowledgment of the bail, the cause be misnamed. Lowe v. Galloway, 5 Taunt. 663. And see Austen v. Fenton, 1 Taunt. 23.

3. Recognizance.

In all actions requiring bail, the defendant shall not be permitted to enter into the recognizance, but the bail shall each of them enter into a recognizance of double the sum sworn to. Reg. Gen. C. P., E. T., 36 Geo. 3, 1 B. & P. 530.

All recognizances of bail in actions in the Exchequer of Pleas, when taken or allowed by a baron, shall be left by the attorney for the defendant or defendants with the sworn or side clerks, or their deputy, in the office of pleas, until duly allowed; who shall enter the same in a book to be kept by them for that purpose, having an alphabetical index of reference; which book shall be open to the inspection of the attorneys of the court, or their clerks; and notice of such bail being allowed and filed in the said office of pleas, with the names, descriptions, and address of the bail, shall be given by the attorney for the defendants to the attorney for the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within the times prescribed for giving notice of bail by the former rules of the court, and proceedings may be thereupon had for excepting to and perfecting such bail within the times, and in like manner as is and are prescribed by the existing rules and practice of the court, except so far as the same may be altered by the present or any subsequent rule of the court. Reg. Gen. M. T. 1 W. 4, Ex., 1 Price's P. C. 6; 1 C. & J. 275; 1 Tyr. 158.

One of the bail may be taken by affidavit before a commissioner in the country, and the other in the regular way in town. Mandorf's bail, 2 Chit. 90.

Or before different commissioners in the country. Anon. 2 Chit. 91.

In an action against a sheriff, for not assigning a bail-bond, the Court of Exchequer will not grant a motion to enter the recognizance of bail on the record, as taken on the true day, (it being always entered generally as of the term,) to enable the plaintiff to proceed with his action. Anon. 3 Price, 36.

4. Bail-piece.

The clerk of the bails in the court of K. B. shall mark the bail-pieces numerically, as they are received. Reg. Gen. K. B., E. T. 30 Geo. 3, 3 T. R. 660.

In the case of country bail, the bail-piece shall be transmitted and filed within eight days, unless the defendant reside more than forty miles from London, and, in that case, within fifteen days after the taking thereof. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Ex., Hil. Term, 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 172; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 594.

Where bail have been rejected for insufficiency, the bail-piece is a nullity, and a new one is necessary. Lewis v. Gadderer, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

If one of the bail be a material witness, his name may be struck out of the bail-piece, and another added. Anon. 2 Chit. 103.

5. Officer's Fees.

A commissioner appointed by the 4 & 5 W. & M. is not bound by the letter of that act to take no more than 2s. for taking bail, if he have been put to expense by travelling, or has taken extraordinary trouble, at the instance of the parties, to effect the taking of the recognizance; or where there are other circumstances in the case which afford reasonable ground for a further charge. Watson v. Edmonds, 5 Price, 2.

And where more had been received by a commissioner by the voluntary payment of the bail, a rule obtained to shew cause why he should not refund the extra money was discharged with costs. Id.

Such applications where proper must be made by the party who has paid the money. Id.

XI. NOTICE OF BAIL.

1. When necessary.

In actions where special bail is required, notice in writing of bail put in must be given. Reg. Gen. C. P., E. T. 49 Geo. 3, 1 Taunt. 616.

Where bail are put in in due time, the defendant is not bound to give notice, but the plaintiff must search in the filacer's book: otherwise, if they be not put in in due time. Dankins v. Reid, 1 H. Black. 529.

2. Description of Bail.

Notice of bail must correctly describe them; and where one of the bail was described as a housekeeper, and it turned out that his father was the occupier, the court would not permit him to justify; but time was granted to add and justify another bail, an affidavit being afterwards produced, repelling all intention to mislead. Colman v. Roberts, 1 Chit. 88.

It must contain their addition, as well as place of abode. — v. Costar, 5 Taunt. 554.

And a false addition is a fatal objection. Wood v. Chadwick, 2 Taunt. 173.

A schoolmaster is well described as "gentleman." — v. Pasman, 5 Taunt. 759.

Bail was rejected because described as a hatter when in fact the servant of a hatter. Anon. Loft, 187.

To describe bail as "jewellers," when they are merely clerks in a jeweller's shop, is a misdescription. Hamlet's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 501.

Gentleman not an objectionable description of one who deals by commission. Anon. Loft, 281.

Nor of a clerk in the custom-house. Anon. 1 Chit. 492, n.

But it would be bad to describe a servant as a gentleman. Anon. 1 Chit. 492, n.

An agent for the sale of Scotch ale, who described himself as a gentleman, was held to be misdescribed. Fleming's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 641; 1 C. & M. 111.

"Manufacturer" is a bad description. Fearnley's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 40.

The misnomer of a Christian name of one of the bail in a notice, is fatal. Anon. 1 Moore, 126.

Notice of J. M. as bail, was held not good notice for J. M. the younger, and the plaintiff need not swear there are two of the name. Smith v. Mellon, 5 Taunt. 854: S. C. nom. — v. Meller, 1 Marsh. 386; Anon. 1 Chit. 88, (a).

The want of a description of bail is cured by the plaintiff's excepting to them. Bigg v. Dick, 1 Taunt. 17.

3. Residence.

Rule.]—Every notice of bail shall, in addition to the description of the bail, mention the street or place, and number (if any), where each of the bail resides, and all the streets or places, and numbers (if any), in which each of them has been resident at any time within the last six months, and whether he is a housekeeper or freeholder. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, T. T. 1 W. 4, 2 B. & Adol. 788; 7 Bing. 782; 4 C. & P. 602; 1 C. & J. 470; 1 Dowl. P. C. 103; 1 Tyr. 520; 5 M. & P. 813; 1 Price's P. C. 109; 4 Bligh, N. S. 581.

The rule applies to both town and country bail. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 259; 1 M. & Scott, 296.

An omission to describe the bail, as housekeepers or freeholders, can only be objected to when the bail come up to justify. Bell v. Foster, 1 M. & Scott, 518; 8 Bing. 334; 1 Dowl. P. C. 271.

In one case, where the bail omitted to state in the affidavit that they were housekeepers, the court permitted them to justify, as the plaintiff did not interpose. Martin v. Gell, 2 Tyr. 166.

Sufficiency of Description.]—The court cannot take judicial notice of the size of the place where bail are described to reside; if it is too large, that fact must be made to appear by affidavit. — v. Coester, 5 Taunt. 554.

Notice of bail residing at Liverpool is too general, but time was allowed. Jackson's bail, 1 Chit. 492.

So, it is insufficient to describe bail as of Leeds, Lancaster, Leicester, &c., but time allowed to amend and make further inquiry. Anon. 1 Chit. 492, n.

Although the bail had been found to be resident there. Baxter's bail, 6 Moore, 44.

So, bail were allowed to justify where they were described of Lancaster generally, because the plaintiff had had time for inquiry. Well's bail, 1 Chit. 493, n.

Bail about to justify by affidavit were described in the notice as "of the town and county of the town of Nottingham:"—Held, too general, and that the street in which they resided should have been inserted in the notice; and that new bail could not be substituted, as the former were brought up under a rule, and not a notice. Anon. 3 Moore, 318; 1 Tidd's Prac. 266.

The residence of a bail is sufficiently described by stating it to be at a place well known as a village, without mentioning any street in it. Smith's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 499.

A description of bail, as of one of the large villages near London, is too general, if the bail live in a lieu conus within the village. Rickman v. Hawes, 5 Taunt. 173.

Walworth, generally, is not a sufficient description; nor Surrey Cottage, Kent Road. Anon. 1 Chit. 493.

So, Battle Bridge is insufficient. King's bail, 2 Chit. 81.

But Clapham is sufficient, if the bail live in Clapham Road. Picess v. Gibson, 6 Moore, 322.

A misdescription of the number of the house in which the bail resided was held to be a ground of rejection, but time was allowed. Anon. 1 Chit. 493.

Notice of bail residing in Cannon-street Road, which is nearly a mile in length, without giving any number of the house:—Held, sufficient, when it was sworn that the plaintiff had found the bail so as to serve him with process. Taylor's bail, 1 Chit. 503.

The name of the parish only, without the street, is not a sufficient designation of residence. Anon. Lofft, 72, 194.

Hatton Street, Middlesex, without any parish, was held sufficient, although the name had recently been changed from Hatton Garden. Anon. Lofft, 418.

Where the notice of bail omitted to mention the numbers of the houses where the bail resided, in a place where the houses are numbered, the plaintiff had the option of having further time to make further inquiries, or the costs of his affidavit and appearance in court. Muir v. Smith, 2 Tyr. 742.

What Residence.]—Under rule T. T. 1 Will. 4, the actual and not the constructive residence of the bail must be stated. Thomson v. Smith, 1 Dowl. P. C. 340.

It is not necessary that a bail should sleep in the house described in the notice of bail as his residence. Thomson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 497.

If a bail has two places of residence, it is only necessary under the rule to give one of them in the notice. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 159.

If a man carry on his business at a lodging in one place, and keep a house at another, notice of bail describing him as of the former place is sufficient. Weddall v. Berger, 1 B. & P. 325.

So, a notice of bail as of his place of business is sufficient. Tanner v. Nash, 1 Price, 400.

Bail described as of three different places, in three different notices, were rejected. Proteus's bail, 1 Chit. 493.

Six Months.]—By the rule it is only necessary in the notice of bail to state the residence of the bail for the last six months, without going on to state that the bail has resided there for that period; but it must state the bail to be a house-keeper or freeholder, although accompanied by the affidavit under rule T. T. 1 Will. 4. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 160; S. P. Fenton v. Warre, 1 Dowl. P. C. 295; 2 C. & J. 54; 2 Tyr. 158; 1 Price's P. C. 140.

Notice of bail, describing the bail to have resided within the last six months (instead of for the last six months) at a particular place is bad; but if the affidavit of justification be correct, it may be connected with the notice, so as to make the notice sufficient. Ward's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 596; 1 C. & M. 28; S. P. Johnson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 438.

4. Service of Notice.

Affidavit of service of notice of bail, by leaving it at the chambers of the plaintiff's attorney, is insufficient where there is no acknowledgment of the receipt. Jones's bail, 1 Chit. 294.

So, service on the master of a house in which the attorney had an office, is not sufficient unless some privity can be shewn to exist between them. Freeman's bail, 2 Chit. 88.

Service, by sticking up a copy in the King's Bench office, and putting another under the door of the attorney's office, was held sufficient where the attorney could not be personally served. Atkinson v. Thompson, 2 Chit. 81; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 294, (a).

So, it is sufficient to leave the notice at a stationer's, where the plaintiff's attorney's papers were usually left for him. Anon. 2 Chit. 82.

A continuance of notice of bail, where time is not given by the court, need not be served before three o'clock, as specified in the rule of C. P. Williams v. Taylor, 5 Moore, 472.

5. Irregular Notice.

Notice of bail as put in before one judge, when in fact they were put in before another, is irregular, and the court will not stay the proceedings on the bail-bond. Kelly v. Wrother, 2 Chit. 109.

Where the notice of bail, being put in, named the defendant by his right name "sued by" the wrong name, and the bail-piece described him by the wrong name only:—Held sufficient. Anon. 2 Chit. 81.

Where the sheriff, to avoid an attachment for not bringing in the body, gave the plaintiff notice of putting in bail, but omitted to state the names of the proposed bail in such notice:—Held, that the notice could not be treated as a nullity, so as to entitle the plaintiff to move for an attachment. Pugh v. Emery, 4 D. & R. 30.

An informality in the notice of bail does not render the proceeding null, so as to justify the plaintiff in issuing an attachment against the sheriff. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 C. & M. 482.

A defendant being arrested, employed on the sudden one attorney to put in bail for him, and another to carry on the subsequent proceedings at the return of the writ; each attorney gave notice of bail above, describing himself as the defendant's attorney: the plaintiff excepted to one set of bail; and that set not justifying, he attached the sheriff, without regarding the notice given by the second attorney:—Held, that he was bound to attend to both notices, and the attachment was set aside for irregularity. Gilmour v. Brindley, 7 D. & R. 259.

XII. EXCEPTION.

When allowed.]—When bail to the sheriff become bail to the action, the plaintiff may except to them, though he has taken an assignment of the bail-bond. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 172; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595. Boughton v. Chaffey, 2 Wils. 6.

If the bail to the sheriff be put in above, and exception taken before an assignment of the bail bond, they are bound to justify notwithstanding such assignment. Hill v. Jones, 11 East, 321.

Where bail are put in in due time, an exception must first be entered before the sheriff can be ruled to bring in the body; and the adding bail afterwards does not supersede the necessity of such exception, before an attachment can issue against the sheriff on account of the added bail not having justified in time. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 T. R. 258; S. P. Rex v. Same, 7 D. & R. 264; Anon. Lofft, 159.

If a sheriff's officer, or any attorney or his clerk, or other disqualified person, be put in as bail, the plaintiff must except to the bail, and cannot proceed as if the matter were a mere nullity. Banks v. Levi, 1 Chit. 714; Rex v. Surrey (Sheriff), 2 East, 181; S. P. Foxall v. Bowerman, 2 East, 182.

The defendant gave a notice of bail, accompanied by an affidavit of justification, pursuant to the form subjoined to the third rule of T. T. 1 Will. 4, but without the four days' notice of justification required by the first rule:—Held, that the plaintiff had twenty days to except to the bail, as under the old practice. Goddard v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Scott, 169; 9 Bing. 88; 1 Dowl. P. C. 278.

If the plaintiff shall not give one day's notice of exception to the bail, by whom such affidavit shall have been made, the recognizance of such bail may be taken out of court without other justification than such affidavit. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., T. T. 1 Will. 4, 2 B. & Adol. 788; 7 Bing. 783; 4 C. & P. 602; 1 C. & J. 470; 1 Dowl. P. C. 103; 1 Tyr. 521; 5 M.

& P. 814; 1 Price's P. C. 109; 4 Bligh, N. S. 581.

This rule does not apply to the case of a prisoner. Webb's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 446.

Must be entered.]—The exception must also be entered in the bail-book before the body rule can be served on the sheriff. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 D. & R. 264; S. P. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

And the irregularity is not waived by the defendant's acting upon the notice. Thwaites v. Gallington, 4 D. & R. 365.

Where the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail-bond, and afterwards gave notice of exception to the bail without entering it:—Held, that the plaintiff's irregularity in not entering an exception was not waived by the defendant's having given two notices of justification, under one of which the bail justified; and therefore held that the proceedings should be stayed, but the bail-bond was not to be delivered up to be cancelled. Hodson v. Garrett, 1 Chit. 174.

Notice must be given.]—It is no exception until the defendant have had notice. Oldham v. Burrell, 7 T. R. 26.

Parol notice of exception to bail is not sufficient, it must be written. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

Although an exception to bail has been regularly entered, and the defendant's attorney, having had verbal notice of it, proceeds by giving notice of justification, and attempting to justify; yet notice in writing of such exception must have been given to make the sheriff liable to an attachment for not bringing in the body. Cohn v. Davis, 1 H. Black. 80.

In C. P. notice of justification of bail is a waiver as between the parties of a neglect to give notice of exception, though it is not a waiver so as to support a rule to bring in the body. Anon. 1 Chit. 174; S. P. Rogers v. Mapleback, 1 H. Black. 106.

So it is a waiver of an irregularity in giving an imperfect notice of exception. Aldridge v. Schroder, 2 Smith, 75.

Form of Notice.]—Notice of exception to bail intitled in a wrong court is a nullity. Anon. 1 Chit. 375.

Attachment against the sheriff set aside, on the ground that the notice of exception to bail was not intitled in the cause, though the notice was served upon the defendant's attorney at the same time with the declaration. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Chit. 741.

XIII. NOTICE OF JUSTIFICATION.

1. Description of Bail.

In every case wherein the same bail as have been already put in, or wherein other bail are intended to be added to the original bail put in, the names and descriptions, or name and description, of such same original bail intended to justify, or added bail to be put in and justify, shall be inserted in every notice of such same or added bail to be justified, or to be put in and justified pursuant to such notice; and in default thereof, in either of the cases aforesaid, no rule for the allowance of such same or added bail shall be drawn up. Reg. Gen. C. P., M. T. 7 Geo. 4, 4 Bing. 51.

This rule does not apply to bail by affidavit, but only to bail in town causes. Martin v. Bird, 12 Moore, 299.

Notice of justification must contain the names, and in general the addition of the bail. Jeffrey's bail, 1 Chit. 351. And see Atkinson's bail, 2 Chit. 86; 1 Taunt. 18, n.

So the christian names. Taylor v. Halliburton, 1 Chit. 494, n.

It is a good ground of rejection, that one of the bail is described in the notice of justification as the bail put in before, and is described by a different christian name from that which was before given. Anon. 1 Chit. 494, n.

Bail by affidavit rejected, on the ground that one of them was described in the notice of justification as A. B. generally, but in the affidavit of justification as A. B. the younger. Smith v. Mellon, 5 Taunt. 854; S. C. nom. — v. Meller, 1 Marsh. 386; Anon. 1 Chit. 88, (a).

Where one of the bail had been misnamed in the notice of justification, and was sworn accordingly, the court of C. P. permitted him to justify, on his swearing that he had sufficient property; and it appeared that he had been found by the party inquiring after him with reference to his becoming bail. Levi's bail, 7 Moore, 282.

"Gentleman" is a sufficient description for a clerk in the custom-house, or for a schoolmaster; but a servant must not be described as a gentleman. Anon. 1 Chit. 494, n.; 5 Taunt. 759.

But a clerk in a mercantile house, described in the notice of justification by the addition of "gentleman," was rejected. Moss v. Heavyside, 7 D. & R. 772.

So "shopkeeper" is an insufficient addition, where the bail had been before described as a grocer, and there were other circumstances of suspicion. Anon. 1 Chit. 494, n.

"Manufacturer" is a bad description of bail. Fearnley's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 40.

Where bail are regularly put in and excepted to, the defendant need not describe them in his notice of justification. England v. Kerwan, 1 B. & P. 335.

It is no objection to the notice of justification, that it states that two were added bail, when, in point of fact, one only was added. Anon. 2 Chit. 86.

In an action against several, it is no objection to the notice of justification, that it states, that the bail will justify for three, bail for two only having been put in. Denton's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 2.

The notice of justification stated that the two persons seeking to justify were bail of the defendant to the sheriff; in fact, there were three defendants, and they had been bail for two of them: they were allowed to justify. Anon. 1 Tyr. 378.

It is sufficient under the rules of Trinity Term 1 Will. 4, to state the residence of the bail for the last six months in the notice of bail, without repeating it in the notice of justification. Higgs's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 124. But see Johnson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 438.

2. For what Day.

In K. B., if the time allowed for justifying expire on a day in term which happens on any holiday when the court does not sit, the notice should be for the day they ought to justify, to prevent an assignment of the bail-bond, and the bail may justify the next day as a matter of course. Anon. 1 Tidd's Prac. 269.

Notice of justifying bail in C. P. on a dies non juridicus is bad, as it ought to have been given for them to justify on the following day, but the court gave time on a proper affidavit being filed. Heath v. Harris, 8 Moore, 528; 1 Bing. 430.

But, in another case, where a notice was given for a dies non without any continuance of notice for the following day, the bail were allowed to justify. Pratt v. Oddy, 2 Bing. 440; 10 Moore, 95.

A notice to justify bail in the Exchequer on an equity day was bad. Partridge v. Rose, 2 Chit. 84.

3. What Notice.

It shall be sufficient, in all cases, if notice of justification of bail be given two days before the time of justification. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 172; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

In C. P. two days' notice of justification must have been given, whether the bail originally put in or added bail were brought up. Nation v. Barrett, 2 B. & P. 30.

Notice of bail given on the 10th of November; on the 12th, notice that other bail would be added, who would justify on the 15th; on the 14th the latter notice countermanded, and notice again given of the original bail; they appearing to justify on the 15th:—Held, that the last notice would be sufficient, if notice of justification had been given. — v. Marshall, 1 Marsh. 322.

Bail above having been put in, and exception entered in the vacation, notice of justification for the first day of the next term must be given within four days after such exception. Millson v. King, 9 East, 434.

Bail being excepted to in vacation, the defendant gave four days' notice of justification for the first day of Hilary term; but, two days before that time, gave notice for justifying added bail:—Held, that the latter bail were entitled to justify.

Woodroffe v. Oldfield, 1 D. & R. 7: S. C. nom. Hone v. Barker, 1 Chit. 4.

Notice of justification of bail on mesne process, added in vacation, need not be given within four days. Anon. 2 Chit. 84.

Two days' notice of justification must be given in the case of added bail; and therefore where notice was given on Monday for Tuesday (by mistake for Wednesday), and on Wednesday notice was given for Thursday, the bail were rejected. Morgan's bail, 1 Chit. 308.

In K. B. one day's notice is sufficient where the bail already put in intend to justify. Secus in C. P. Id.

4. Form.

In the Exchequer, all notices, before the court was thrown open, must have been subscribed by and addressed to the clerks in court. Fisher v. Fielding, 1 Price, 384.

Therefore that court refused to allow bail to justify, where the notice of justification was signed by a person describing himself as the "defendant's agent," he not being an attorney of such court, nor a clerk in court. Walker v. Rushbury, 9 Price, 148; S. C. not S. P. 9 Price, 16.

It seems that the defendant's attorney may give notice of justification of bail put in by the sheriff, provided the exception has been properly entered. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 149; 5 B. & C. 389.

Where one bail only had been rejected on account of insufficiency, and notice was given of adding and justifying another in lieu of the one rejected:—Held, that the original notice was a nullity, and that there should have been a fresh notice of putting in and justifying de novo, and not of adding bail. Lewis v. Gadderer, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

The plaintiff's and defendant's names in the notice of justification being transposed is not a ground of rejection. Anon. 2 Chit. 86.

Notice of added bail need not be a separate notice from that of their justifying. Stone v. Stevens, 3 Anst. 636. But see Anon. 2 Anst. 564.

5. Service of Notice.

At what Time.—Notice for justifying bail in person, shall be served before eleven o'clock in the forenoon of the day on which the notice ought to be served, except in case of an order of the court for further time, in which case it shall be sufficient to serve the notice before three in the afternoon of the day on which such order shall be granted. Reg. Gen. K. B., T. T. 59 Geo. 3, 2 B. & A. 818; 1 Chit. 756; C. P., 4 Moore, 2; 1 B. & B. 469; and Excheq., 8 Price, 509.

Service must be made in all cases before nine at night. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4.

Before this rule, service must have been made in K. B. before ten at night; and in C. P. before nine. Saunders's bail, 1 Chit. 77.

Service after ten o'clock is bad, though the person read and know the purport of the notice. Anon. 2 Chit. 88.

Where.]—Notice of justification must be personally served on the plaintiff's attorney, clerk, or servant at his office; and an affidavit that the door was shut, and the notice left before ten o'clock at night, held not sufficient. Fowler's bail, 1 Chit. 78.

So, though an endeavour to obtain an acknowledgment was made. Hall's bail, 1 Chit. 79.

Affidavit of service of the notice of justification by leaving it at the attorney's office, and stating an acknowledgment of the receipt, but not shewing by whom, held not sufficient; but bail were allowed to justify conditionally. Jamesson's bail, 1 Chit. 100.

So, where the deponent described himself as the agent of the plaintiff instead of the defendant. Anon. 1 Chit. 496, n.

Some privity or connection must be shewn between the attorney and the person with whom the notice is left, if it be not served at the attorney's office. Freeman's bail, 2 Chit. 88.

So, where the notice was left at a law-stationer's where the plaintiff's attorney's papers were usually left. Anon. 2 Chit. 82.

If an attorney be not at chambers at office hours, service of the notice of justification of bail on a person with whom the attorney's papers were directed to be left is sufficient. Thompson's bail, 2 Chit. 87. And see Atkinson v. Thompson, 2 Chit. 81.

Notice of justification of bail stuck up in the King's Bench office for the plaintiff, an attorney, who had no known place of residence or business, is sufficient. Anon. 2 Chit. 89.

Service at the chambers of the attorney, no person being there, is bad; but a subsequent acknowledgment will make the service sufficient. Saunders's bail, 1 Chit. 77. And see Jones's bail, 1 Chit. 294.

Notice was served by leaving it at the office of the plaintiff's attorney, who returned it the next day, saying he should not accept the notice, because he had taken an assignment of the bail-bond; this acknowledgment was held sufficient. Bailey v. Davy, 1 Chit. 77, (b).

Service with any person belonging to the place entered in the master's book as the residence of the attorney is sufficient. Reg. Gen. K. B., H. T. 8 Geo. 3, 1 Chit. 77, (a).

Two notices of justification, one being of added bail, the affidavit of service did not designate which of the notices had been served on the plaintiff's attorney:—Held, that the affidavit was defective, and must be amended and re-sworn before the bail could justify. Yates' bail, 1 Chit. 43.

XIV. ADDING BAIL AND GIVING TIME.

1. Changing Bail.

Bail of whom notice shall be given shall not be changed without leave of the court or a judge.

Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Excheq., T. T. 1 W. 4; 2 B. & Adol. 788; 7 Bing. 783; 4 C. & P. 602; 1 C. & J. 470; 1 Dowl. P. C. 103; 1 Tyr. 521; 5 M. & P. 815; 1 Price's P. C. 109; 4 Bligh, N. S. 582.

Costs of bail changed by judge's order for that purpose, must be paid before the bail can justify. Jourdain v. Gunn, 2 Tyr. 491.

The court refused to allow the defendant to change the bail, of whom notice had been given (as empowered by the rule), upon an affidavit alleging as the reason for putting in insufficient bail in the first instance, that the defendant had expected to settle the action, although the defendant swore to merits. Orchard v. Glover, 2 M. & Scott, 396; 9 Bing. 318; 1 Dowl. P. C. 707.

It is not necessary to give four days' notice of bail, who are added by a judge's order. Perry's bail, 2 C. & J. 475; 1 Dowl. P. C. 564.

2. When Bail become disqualified.

Generally.]—The defendant is bound to know the circumstances of his bail, and where notice had been given of one bail who was notoriously not a housekeeper, the court refused time to add and justify another. Hunt v. Haynes, 1 Chit. 7. And see Vandermoolen's bail, 1 Chit. 288.

Where one of the bail failed to appear to justify, and an affidavit was produced, stating that he was prevented from attending by an agreement which he had entered into with his partner never to become bail: the court of C. P. held that nothing but an unforeseen accident of a serious nature could be a sufficient excuse for non-attendance, and they refused to allow time to substitute another person in his stead. Wells's bail, 8 Moore, 378; 1 Bing. 359.

Where the notice of bail to add and justify at the same time was regularly served, and the new bail were substituted by a judge's order on the morning of justification, the court refused the costs of the plaintiff's opposition on that ground, but offered time to inquire after them. Bowman v. Russell, 2 Tyr. 744.

In what Cases allowed.]—Time is generally allowed, where the justification is prevented by subsequent insolvency or bankruptcy. Anon. 1 Chit. 2, (b).

Even where the bail were taken in the country. Anon. 1 Chit. 11.

But not where bail is rejected from personal insufficiency. Id.

If bail, after consenting to be put in, become insolvent, time will be allowed to add another. Dixon v. Clarke, 1 Chit. 3.

So, after a promise to justify. Ayton's bail, 1 Chit. 4.

Where bail cease to be housekeepers, time will be allowed. Anon. 1 Chit. 6.

So, where the bail was not a housekeeper in point of law. Hughes v. Stirling, 11 Price, 158.

So, where the bail had taken a house, but from an unforeseen accident was unable to take possession. Bold's bail, 1 Chit. 288. And see Slade's bail, 1 Chit. 502. And see Coleman v. Roberts, 1 Chit. 88.

Where a person who came up to justify as bail had recently taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act, which was unknown to the defendant or his attorney until the morning of justification, the court would not allow time to add and justify another; as, if bail are opposed, time can only be granted where their justification is prevented by an act of God. Walton's bail, 8 Moore, 208.

The court refused time to add and justify, where one was an attorney. George v. Barnsley, 1 Chit. 8.

If added bail be excepted on the ground that the original bail were attorney's clerks, the court of C. P. will give time to put in and justify fresh bail. Hodges v. Meek, 3 Moore, 240.

Time was given to enable bail to pay his king's taxes, where his property was sufficient, and it appeared that he had acted without bad faith in not paying them. Spurdens v. Mahoney, 1 Chit. 309, (a).

So, the court granted time to add and justify bail by habeas corpus, where one of the bail was so ill as to be unable to attend. Gwillim v. Howes, 2 Chit. 107.

So, where one of the bail of whom notice had been given was taken suddenly ill. Gillbank's bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

3. To amend Proceedings.

In general, time is allowed to correct errors in the notice of justification, or notice of bail, or jurat of bail-piece. Anon. 1 Chit. 2, (b); 1 Chit. 495, 351, (a).

Four days' time was given to correct a mistake in the bail-piece, which omitted to state that the bail were taken before a commissioner. Simmons's bail, 1 Chit. 9.

So, to correct the jurat of the bail-piece, in the place where sworn. Simmons v. Morgan, 1 Chit. 10; S. P. Webster's bail, 1 Chit. 10.

Where one of the bail was ordered to be struck out of the bail-piece, on the ground of his having been a material witness in the cause, time was allowed for another to justify in his stead. Anon. 2 Chit. 103.

In bail by affidavit, the court refused time to amend a mistake in the jurat, occasioned by the error of the commissioners in the country, unless the defendant produced an affidavit of merits. Burford v. Holloway, 2 D. & R. 362. And see Parker v. Turner, 2 Chit. 71.

But time was allowed, where the two deponents' names were not mentioned in the jurat. Drabble v. Denhan, 2 Chit. 92.

Time was given to correct mistakes in an affidavit of service of the notice of justification where the bail were not opposed. Hayward's bail, 1 Chit. 24.

Generally, time will not be allowed to amend errors in the notice of bail. Rennell v. Atkins, 2 Chit. 83.

But in C. P. time was allowed where there was too general a description of his residence. Baxter's bail, 6 Moore, 44.

The residence of one of the bail having been too generally given in the notice, the other was allowed to justify, and time afforded to give another notice. Topham v. Calvert, 1 Price's P. C. 140.

But an affidavit, that the omission proceeded from the mistake of the attorney's clerk, was required. Id.

In the case of bail by habeas corpus, or on writ of error, time to justify is not in general allowed for amending a defect in the notice of bail, or on account of the delay. Darcy's and Atkins's bail, 1 Chit. 76, (a).

Time was not allowed to correct a misnomer in the notice of justification in bail by habeas corpus. Rufford's bail, 1 Chit. 76.

Notice of bail named Lloyd, with a double L, and in the affidavit of justification with a single L, time allowed to amend. Williams's bail, 1 Chit. 494, n.

Time was allowed, where the affidavit of justification did not state the degree of the bail. Anon. 1 Chit. 292.

In the Exchequer, in bail by affidavit, the court will grant time to put in other bail, but will not allow the defendant merely to amend the affidavit, or justify the same bail. Jones v. Ripley, 3 Price, 261.

In the case of bail by affidavit, where time had been allowed to answer affidavits impeaching their sufficiency, the court refused to allow the defendant in the meantime to justify fresh bail. Ling's bail, 4 M. & P. 576; S. C. nom. Cockburn v. Ling, 6 Bing. 732; S. P. Green v. Hartley, 1 Chit. 354.

Where the time for putting in and justifying bail expired on Friday 18th, and one of the bail justified, and the other was rejected, time was given till Friday 25th, to add and justify another bail, on payment of costs. Weemys v. Pearce, 1 Price's P. C. 151.

Where, in bail by affidavit, the names of the bail were omitted in the notice of justification, through the neglect of the agent in the country, two days' time was given, the omission not appearing to have been made for the purpose of delay. Jeffry's bail, 1 Chit. 351.

So, where the surname was omitted. Anon. Lofft, 187.

The court allowed time to justify bail, where the notice of justification did not state the addition of the bail, but described him (contrary to the fact) as bail of whom notice had before been given, on condition that the defendant should produce an affidavit that the error was accidental. Atkinson's bail, 2 Chit. 86; 1 Taunt. 18, n.

Where time was applied for to send an affidavit of justification into the country, to amend a mistake in the jurat, the court made the attorney pay the costs of the application. Skiliter's bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

Where the agent for the defendant had not time to communicate with his principal in the country, so as to obtain the names of good bail, the court allowed the bail to be changed upon payment of costs, and upon putting the plaintiff in the same situation as if good bail had been put in in the first instance. Whitehead v. Minn, 2 C. & J. 54; 2 Tyr. 160; 1 Price's P. C. 138.

4. Other Cases.

Time was allowed where the property was found to be insufficient, on a mistaken idea of the bail. Vorden v. Wilson, 1 Chit. 287.

Or to inquire, where the bail told the plaintiff that he would not justify. Anon. 1 Chit. 289.

Bail, of whom notice had been given, having been rejected in another cause on the day on which they were to justify, were not offered for justification according to the notice, and on the next day the defendant applied for time to add and justify, and to stay proceedings against the bail below; but the court refused the motion, because the plaintiff could not be aware of such proceeding. Watson v. Hinton, 1 Chit. 290.

Where bail had been put in by one attorney, and attempted to justify by another, time was given to change the attorney regularly. Malpersen's bail, 2 Chit. 93.

The court of Exchequer gave the defendant necessary time for putting in and justifying bail, where a question of doubt had been raised whether the party was properly held to bail, without prejudice to the plaintiff's proceedings. Cope v. Joseph, 9 Price, 155.

Where bail were rejected immediately upon hearing the affidavits in opposition, that court refused time to answer the affidavits, or for any other purpose. Anon. 10 Price, 8.

The court of Exchequer will now give time to justify bail at chambers. Bell v. Horton, 11 Price, 741.

5. Practice.

Affidavit.—A motion for time to justify must be supported by an affidavit of the facts, in excuse of the bail not attending. Anon. 1 Chit. 2, (b).

An affidavit for further time to justify, on the ground that one of the bail cannot attend, must state the consent of the party to become bail, and a belief of his sufficiency. Hamilton v. Dainford, 3 Chit. 82; S. P. West's bail, 1 Chit. 292; 1 Chit. 2, (b).

Other matters.—One judge will not interfere with another judge's order for time to justify bail. Tomlinson v. Harvey, 2 Chit. 83.

A defendant may put in fresh bail, where time has been granted to the plaintiff to inquire into the sufficiency of the former bail. Freeman v. Oldham, 2 Chit. 84; S. P. Anon. 1 Chit. 345, n.

A subsequent justification after leave for time given, operates in every respect as if the bail had justified on the proper day. Sparrow v. Lewes (Knt.), 8 Taunt. 126.

And if the bail do not justify on the further day given, the plaintiff is to be in the same situation as if they had not justified on the first day. Thompson's bail, 1 Chit. 356. And see Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 D. & R. 163.

A rule for further time to justify bail, drawn up as of a wrong day, was held an immaterial error, and they were permitted to justify. Donaldson's bail, 2 Chit. 83.

Where the court give time till a particular day to add and justify bail, and the bail does not attend on that day, he cannot justify on a subsequent day without a fresh rule. Carter's bail, 1 Chit. 42.

XV. JUSTIFICATION OF BAIL.

1. When necessary.

Bail who surrender their principal need not justify. Anon. 2 W. Black. 758.

Bail who have rendered in their discharge cannot afterwards justify, so as to relieve the defendant from imprisonment, without entering into a fresh bail-piece. Payne's bail, 2 Chit. 76.

When ruled to bring in the body, the sheriff must put in and perfect special bail, though not excepted to. Poole v. Peate, 2 W. Black. 1206.

Bail not put in in time are bound to justify, though not excepted to until twenty days afterwards. Nunn v. Rogers, 2 Chit. 108.

Where the defendant refused to move that his bail might justify till they had paid certain costs, the court permitted them to justify on their own motion. Haggett v. Argent, 2 Marsh. 365; 7 Taunt. 47.

Though two notices are given by different attornies of two different sets of bail, and the bail put in by the sheriff have already justified, the defendant is entitled to have his bail justify, and be allowed. Wheeler v. Rankin, 1 Chit. 81.

Bail cannot justify for a defendant brought into court to be charged in execution in the cause. Bircham v. Chambers, 11 Moore, 343.

2. When to be done.

In ordinary Cases.—In C. P. the defendant has four days exclusive from the day of the exception to justify bail; and if an attachment be obtained on the fourth day, the court will set it aside, without first calling on the defendant to justify bail. Maycock v. Solyman, 1 N. R. 139.

Where the rule to bring in the body expires on the last day of a term, the bail have the whole of the first day of the next term to justify: and if the defendant surrender in discharge of his bail on any part of that day, the sheriff cannot be attached for not bringing in the body. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 T. R. 464.

Bail may justify at any time before execution issues; though final judgment have been signed. Todd v. Etherington, 2 Marsh. 374.

In C. P., of the four days allowed to perfect bail, after exception, the first is reckoned exclusively, and the last inclusively; so that where the exception was on Wednesday, an attachment could not regularly issue against the sheriff till the Tuesday following (Sunday being no day); but though the attachment did issue on the Monday, the court would not set it aside, because the bail were not perfected. North v. Evans, 2 H. Black. 35.

If bail above be put in and justified, within four days from the ruling the sheriff to bring in the body, the court of C. P. will set aside all proceedings upon the bail-bond, commenced previous to the time of justification. Wright v. Walker, 3 B. & P. 564. And see Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298.

Where no bail are put in at the expiration of the rule to bring in the body, bail afterwards put in are bound to justify within four days in a town cause, or six days in a country cause, without being excepted to. Story's case, 2 Chit. 82.

And the court of C. P. allowed the defendant to justify bail, after an attachment issued against the sheriff, but gave leave to the plaintiff to oppose them without prejudice. Williams v. Waterfield, 1 B. & P. 334.

The same court allowed bail to justify after the rule on the sheriff had expired, on payment of the costs of the opposition. Weddall v. Berger, 1 B. & P. 325.

But refused to permit a defendant to justify bail, after an action for an escape commenced against the sheriff, no bail-bond having been taken. Webb v. Matthew, 1 B. & P. 225.

In Vacation.—If bail are excepted to in vacation, and the notice of exception require them to justify before a judge, the bail shall justify within four days from the time of such notice, otherwise on the first day of the ensuing term. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 172; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

The statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, authorizing the justifying bail in vacation, in an arrest upon meane process, does not extend to a person in custody upon a habeas corpus removing the cause from the mayor's court into K. B. Steer v. Smith, 1 Chit. 44, 80.

Effect of ruling the Sheriff.—By giving the sheriff a rule to bring in the body, the time for justifying bail is extended till the rule expires. Whittle v. Oldaker, 7 B. & C. 478; 1 M. & R. 298.

Wherever a plaintiff shall rule the sheriff, on a return of cepi corpus, to bring in the body, the defendant shall be at liberty to put in and perfect bail at any time before the expiration of such rule. Reg. Gen. M. T. 1 Will. 4, Exchequer, 1 Price's P. C. 8; 1 C. & J. 281; 1 Tyr. 163.

Before the rule it was held, that, by ruling the sheriff to bring in the body before the time for justifying bail has expired, the plaintiff does not enlarge the time for justifying bail until the expiration of the body rule, if at that period, when, independently of the body rule, the time for justification expires, he take an assignment of the bail-bond; for by so doing he waives the body rule. Bolland B. dissentiente. Ladd v. Arnaboldi, 1 C. & J. 97.

Time being given till 27th January to justify bail, on the 25th plaintiff ruled the sheriff to bring in the body in six days. On the 27th the plaintiff took an assignment of the bail-bond; on the 30th the bail justified. Proceedings on the bail-bond were staid without ordering it to stand as a security, for the time of perfecting bail was enlarged by the body rule, and plaintiff might have gone on to trial in the original action. Ladd v. Wilson, 1 Tyr. 18.

3. When waived.

In general, a demand of plea is a waiver of justification. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 D. & R. 163.

But after time given to justify upon the terms of the plaintiff being in the same situation, a demand of plea is no waiver of the justification. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 4 D. & R. 834.

After the time for putting in and justifying bail had expired (one of the bail having been rejected), and time given to add and justify another without prejudice to the plaintiff in his proceedings, and in the interval he demanded a plea:—Held, that an attachment against the sheriff for not bringing in the body was regular, the added bail not having justified within the time for which indulgence was given. Id.

A rule to plead is not, like a demand of plea, a waiver of bail. Crosby v. Davis, 1 Price's P. C. 61.

4. Mode of Proceeding.

At what Time.—Bail who were not present at the first sitting of the court, must wait till the rising. Anon. Lofft, 88.

Bail in Common Pleas shall justify at the sitting of the court only, and at no other time, except on the last day of term, when bail, who may have been prevented from attending at the sitting of the court, shall be permitted to justify at the rising of the court. Reg. Gen. C. P., M. T. 51 Geo. 3, 3 Taunt. 569.

But bail were permitted to justify at the rising of the court, before the last day of the term, notwithstanding this rule. Hopper v. Jacobs, 8 Taunt. 56.

Special bail shall be permitted to justify in open court, although they did not actually become bail before the time that notice for justification was delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent. Reg. Gen. C. P., M. T. 37 Geo. 3, 1 B. & P. 660.

Bail must actually have become so, before notice of justification is given. Collier v. Godfrey, 1 H. Black. 291.

In the Exchequer, justification of bail in open court must be taken at the sitting of the court, before the other ordinary business. Reg. Gen. Exch., E. T. 56 Geo. 3, 2 Price, 327; and see 8 Price, 632.

Bail by affidavit is not within the rule. Anon. 3 Price, 35.

And the court desired that it might be understood that the rule of E. T. 56 Geo. 3, would be peremptorily enforced, and they announced that they would not admit bail to justify, unless the justification were moved, in conformity with that order, at the sitting of the court. Mem. 4 Price, 155.

The junior baron in the Court of Exchequer sits every day during term, a few minutes before 10 o'clock, for the purpose of taking the justification of bail and motions of course; and all such matters must be then brought on. Reg. Gen. Exch. M. T. 1 Geo. 4, 8 Price, 612. And see Tomkinson's bail, 2 Chit. 94.

And bail will not be permitted to justify, unless they are in attendance, and counsel instructed, by half-past 10 o'clock. Reg. Gen. Exch. H. T. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, 9 Price, 57.

On the first and last days of term bail may justify during the sitting of the court. Mem. 1 C. & J. 467.

Bail appearing to justify will be called in future from the bail-pieces by the officer of the court. Reg. Gen. Exch. M. T. 1 Will. 4, 1 Price's P. C. 118.

Personal Attendance.—Bail, who live within ten miles of the city of London or Westminster, must justify in person, and not by affidavit. Anon. 1 C. & J. 516; 1 Dowl. P. C. 293.

The rule extends to bail living within the bills of mortality. Wilnot v. Eaton, 1 Price's P. C. 91.

Where such an objection, and that of the description of Somers Town as the residence of the bail, were taken and allowed, the court gave time, notice to be given forthwith. Id.

A defendant, usually residing in the country, arrested in London, in a town cause, may justify bail by affidavit. White v. Thomas, 5 Price, 13.

At Chambers.—By 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 12, bail may be justified before a judge at chambers, or in some other convenient place, to be by him appointed, as well in term as in vacation, and whether the defendant be actually in custody or not.

All special bail shall be justified in the Exchequer within four days after exception, before a baron at chambers, as well in term as in vacation. Reg. Gen. Exch., M. T. 1 Will. 4, Price's P. C. 9; 1 C. & J. 281; 1 Tyr. 163.

By a rule of the Court of Exchequer, made in Michaelmas term, 1830, last past, it was ordered that hereafter all special bail should be justified before a baron at chambers, as well in term as in vacation; and it being expedient to repeal as much of the said rule as relates to the justification of bail in term time, it is, therefore, ordered that, from and after the present term, the justification of bail in term time shall (unless by consent) take place as heretofore in open court, and that the justification of bail before a baron at chambers shall be confined to cases of consent, and to justification in vacation. Reg. Gen. Exch., H. T. 1 Will. 4, 1 C. & J. 385; 1 Tyr. 291.

A justification of bail at chambers in vacation without consent was held not good in the Exchequer; the plaintiff not objecting to an application to the court to permit such justification, considered tantamount to consent. Sayers v. Tolfree, 1 Price, 2.

And in such case they are no bail, though examined by the plaintiff's attorney, unless they justify next term in court. Hawkins v. Plomer, 2 W. Black. 1064.

Conditional Justification.—Bail may justify conditionally, if, on inquiring at the places where he swears he has money, the affirmation of that fact should be ascertained. Anon. 2 Tyr. 158.

One of bail admitted to justify conditionally, but not to be finally allowed till the arrears of taxes and poor rates due should be paid, and receipt produced. Terry v. Pearse, 1 Price's P. C. 141.

5. By Affidavit.

The affidavit must also give a true description of their place of residence. Collins v. Goodyer, 4 D. & R. 44; 2 B. & C. 563.

Bail by affidavit rejected, because the name of each deponent was not inserted in the jurat. Wellings v. Marsh, 11 Price, 509; S. P. Drabble v. Denham, 2 Chit. 92.

The jurat of an affidavit by a marksman must state that it was understood by him, as well as read over and explained to him. Allworthy's bail, 2 Chit. 92.

And the place at which it was sworn. Boyd v. Straker, 7 Price, 662.

And an affidavit by a marksman must state that the mark was made in the presence of the commissioner taking it. Anon. 2 Chit. 92.

The affidavit of justification of country bail ought to be taken before the bail commissioner; and the affidavit of caption before a commissioner for taking affidavits, or the baron to whom the bail shall be transmitted. Salmon's bail, M'Clel. & Y. 149.

But held in K. B. that the affidavit of justification need not be so taken. Brealey v. Holt, 2 Chit. 91.

It may be taken as to one bail in the country, and as to the other in town. Mandorf's bail, 2 Chit. 90.

Or before different commissioners. Anon. 2 Chit. 91.

An affidavit of justification of country bail, in the jurat of which it was stated to have been "sworn at Beverley," omitting the county, rejected for uncertainty. Boyd v. Straker, 7 Price, 662.

6. In what Sum.

Rule and Cases under it.—Affidavits of justification shall be deemed insufficient, unless they state that each person justifying is worth the amount required by the practice of the courts, over and above what will pay his just debts, and over and above every other sum for which he is then bail. Reg. Gen. K. B.; C. P., and Exch., Hil. Term, 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 173; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

An affidavit of justification may be sufficient if the rule of court is substantially complied with, though it may not be exactly conformable with the form given by the rule. Perry's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 606.

If the affidavit of justification state that the bail are "possessed" of a certain sum, instead of "worth," the affidavit is insufficient, and must be amended. Rogers v. Jones, 1 Dowl. P. C. 704; 1 C. & M. 323; S. P. Hutchinson's bail, 2 C. & J. 487; 1 Dowl. P. C. 571; Simpson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 605.

Affidavit of justification of bail sworn in the country, stated the bail to be possessed of property of a certain amount, without further stating that each of the bail were worth double the sum for which defendant was held to bail above his own just debts, or every other sum for which he might be then bail:—Held, bad, but time given to amend, on payment of plaintiff's costs of the day occasioned by the affidavit. Darling v. Hutchinson, 2 Tyr. 491.

Time given to supply averments prescribed by new rules omitted, in affidavit of justification, on payment of costs. Pitt v. Perry, 1 Price's P. C. 171.

In the form of affidavit of justification, the word "just" is made to precede the word "debts." The old objection, consequently, can no longer be taken. Topham v. Calvert, 1 Price's P. C. 140.

Costs of opposition allowed. Id.

It is sufficient if bail swear that they are worth the amount required after payment of all their just debts. Anon. 2 Y. & J. 101.

The affidavit by bail in the country of competency to justify, should state them to be worth double the sum sworn to over and above all their debts, generally. If it have the words "just debts," it will be considered insufficient. But time will be given in such a case to frame another affidavit. Senior v. Speight, 12 Price, 393.

Where persons who are shewn to be bail in other actions, justify as bail by affidavit, they must swear that they are worth the sum required beyond what will satisfy their debts and their other engagements. Henshaw v. Woolwich, 1 C. & J. 150.

Practice previously.—In bail by affidavit in K. B. it need not be stated in the affidavit of justification, that they are worth double the debt sworn to in addition to their liability in other causes. Stevens's bail, 1 Chit. 395; S. P. Attwood v. Emery, 1 Chit. 306, (a). And see Hobson's bail, 2 Chit. 95.

Seem, that this is also unnecessary in C. P. Reid v. Cornfoot, 1 Chit. 306, (a); 1 Moore, 29; 7 Taunt. 324.

Secus in the Exchequer, where the affidavit must state that the bail are sufficient for all the actions. Anon. 1 Chit. 306, (a).

So, where the same persons are bail in more actions than one, each affidavit ought to state that the bail are worth double the amount of the debts in all the actions wherein they offer to become bail. Field v. Wainwright, 3 B. & P. 39.

But where the same persons are bail in two actions on one bill of exchange, they are only bound to justify in double the amount of the sum sworn to in each action, and not in double the amount of the sum sworn to in both actions. Reid v. Ellis, and Same v. Cornfoot, 1 Moore, 29; 7 Taunt. 324; 1 Chit. 306, (a).

And it is not necessary for them to specify in either affidavit the relative order in which they are sworn, or that among their debts they include their liability as bail in the other action. Id.

An indorsee of the same bill of exchange on which the principal had been arrested, and another person who had justified as bail in other actions, neither of whom had sworn in the affidavit of justification, (which was in the common form, that he was worth double the sum sworn to over and above the aggregate of all the other sums,) were rejected as bail for the defendant. Jones v. Ripley, 3 Price, 261.

It is not sufficient for bail to swear they are worth a certain sum exclusive of their debts. Hall v. Carr, 4 Taunt. 704.

But held in K. B. that it was sufficient if they swore that they were worth double the sum sworn to in the affidavit of debt. Hobson's bail, 2 Chit. 95.

Other matters.—In bailable actions, for any cause exceeding 1000*l.*, it shall be sufficient for the bail to justify in 1000*l.* beyond the sum sworn to. Reg. Gen. K. B. M. T. 51 Geo. 3, 13 East, 62; C. P., 3 Taunt. 341; Excheq., 8 Price, 508; Wightw. 115.

Where a verdict is found for the plaintiff in an action of crim. con. in a larger sum than in the judge's order to hold to bail, to procure the enlargement of the defendant, the bail must justify in such larger sum; but if a rule for a new trial be afterwards made absolute, the bail may justify in the smaller sum. Dyott v. Duna, 2 Chit. 72.

7. Opposition.

(a) How conducted.

Where bail are opposed, an affidavit of their insufficiency cannot be produced after questions have been put to them. Anon. 1 Chit. 374, (a).

And affidavits containing general slanderous statements injurious to the character of the bail cannot be received. Sanderson's bail, 1 Chit. 676.

But bail by affidavit were not allowed to justify, on the plaintiff's producing an affidavit of declarations which they had made of their insufficiency. Anon. 1 Chit. 676.

If the justification of bail by affidavit be opposed by another affidavit, stating the insolvency of one of the bail, the court of C. P. will not allow the matters of the latter affidavit to be answered. Aplin v. Fox, 5 Moore, 482.

Where it appears from the affidavits filed in opposition to bail, that they are persons of low condition and desperate circumstances, and such as ought not to have been brought before the court to justify as bail, and they are rejected instant on that ground, time will not be given to answer the affidavits, or for any other purpose. — v. —, 10 Price, 8.

Bail, though opposed in two actions, must be opposed in each separately. Anon. 2 Chit. 94.

Where the same bail came up to justify in several causes, and after having been opposed, justified in one, but were afterwards rejected in a second for clear insufficiency:—Held, that the same objection applied to all the causes, and that, as the matter was not concluded until the rule for allowance was drawn up, they might be rejected as to that cause in which they had justified. Waterhouse's bail, 1 Chit. 307.

Where bail were opposed on the ground that the defendant had been arrested, but no bail-bond had been taken, the writ appearing to have been returnable of a prior term, the court allowed the bail to justify. Crow v. Watson, 2 Chit. 93.

A foreigner being bail, may be sworn and examined by an interpreter. Glead v. Mackay, 2 W. Black. 957.

If bail justify without the observation of the counsel instructed to oppose them, the court of C. P. will not require them to come up again and justify de novo. Hawkins v. Wilson, 4 Taunt. 666.

So in K. B. Butler's bail, 1 Chit. 83.

A rejection of one bail is a rejection of both. Lewis v. Gadderer, 1 D. & R. 350; 5 B. & A. 704.

(b) Costs.

Rule and Cases under it.—If the notice of bail shall be accompanied by an affidavit of each of the bail according to a form subjoined, and if the plaintiff afterwards except to such bail, he shall, if such bail are allowed, pay the costs of justification; and if such bail are rejected, the defendants shall pay the costs of opposition, unless the court or a judge thereof shall otherwise order. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., T. T. 1 W. 4, 2 B. & Adol. 788; 7 Bing. 783; 4 C. & P. 602; 1 O. & J. 470; 1 Dowl. P. C. 103; 1 Tyr. 521; 5 M. & P. 814; 1 Price's P. C. 109; 4 Bligh, N. S. 581.

If bail justify by affidavit in pursuance of the rule, the notice must be accompanied either by the original affidavit, or by a copy purporting upon the face of it to be a copy. West v. Williams, 3 B. & Adol. 345; 1 Dowl. P. C. 162.

Costs of justification will sometimes be refused although the bail have passed. Thomson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 497.

Where bail having made the affidavit required by the rule, justify after exception, although the plaintiff does not appear to oppose, the defendant is still entitled to the costs of the justification. Johnson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 514.

Form of Affidavit.—Though the form of the affidavit to be made by bail, according to the rule, is several, it may be made jointly. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 115.

An affidavit of sufficiency by country bail, purporting to be according to the rule, and not containing all its requisites, is good, if it be sufficient according to the old rules. Id.

Where bail were rejected on the ground of a defect in the affidavit of justification, in omitting to describe the bail as housekeepers or freeholders, the court refused to allow the plaintiff the costs of his opposition, or of the opposition to a former justification, on the ground of a defective notice. Kibble v. Thorburn, 2 M. & Scott, 359.

It is not enough, in the affidavit of sufficiency, that the bail should describe himself as possessed of "money in the funds," without stating in what fund it is. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 159.

Where the property of which the bail describes himself possessed in his affidavit is insufficient, the court will not allow him to justify, without payment by the defendant of the costs of opposition, although possessed of sufficient other property. Jackson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 172.

Where bail cannot justify in respect of the property described in the affidavit of justification, but are allowed to pass on justifying for other property, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of the opposition. Hemming v. Blake, 1 Dowl. P. C. 179.

Where a bail swears, "that he is not bail for any," without adding other persons, it is sufficient. Smith's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 514.

Costs of Justification.—Keeping a gambling-house is not a ground for rejecting bail; and, if allowed, is not a ground for refusing the defendant the costs of justification under rule 3, T. T. 1 Will. 4. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 160.

Where there is a defect in the notice of bail, and further time is given to inquire as to them, and they ultimately justify, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of justification. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 126.

Costs of bringing bail up to justify allowed, when they have given notice of putting in and justifying at the same time, accompanied by an affidavit of justification, and after exception attend to justify, and are not opposed. Bowman v. Russell, 2 Tyr. 744.

If a plaintiff alarm bail who have been put in, and thus prevent them from justifying, the court will compel him to pay the costs of putting them in. Gwynne v. Fuller, 1 Dowl. P. C. 444.

Costs of Opposition.—The costs of opposing bail who have complied with rule 3, T. T. 1 Will. 4, but are rejected, are allowed as a matter of course to the plaintiff, unless some very strong ground is shewn on the part of the defendant for putting in bail, who could not justify. Evans's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 384.

One default in the justification of bail pursuant to notice subjects the party to the costs of opposition in the court of Exchequer. Thomas v. Gray, 1 Price's P. C. 86.

Where proceedings have been taken on the bail-bond, before the bail come up to justify, the payment of those costs cannot be insisted on as a preliminary objection. Wilson's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 614.

Costs of Opposition where several Notices.]—

Whenever two or more notices of justification of bail shall have been given before the notice on which bail shall appear to justify, no bail shall be permitted to justify without first paying (or securing to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, his attorney, or agent,) the reasonable costs incurred by such prior notices, although the names of the persons intended to justify, or one of them, may not have been changed; and whether the bail mentioned in any such prior notice shall not have appeared, or shall have been rejected. Reg. Gen. K. B., H. T. 2 & 3 Geo. 4; 1 D. & R. 196; 5 B. & A. 559; 2 Chit. 376.

The court has no power to order the payment of costs of vexatious notices of justifying bail at chambers, before the defendant is permitted to give a fresh notice, where there has been a change of the defendant's attorney. — v. Clarke, 2 Chit. 89.

It seems to be otherwise, where the same attorney has acted vexatiously in giving repeated notices. Id.

And in such case they may be recovered on motion. Steer v. Smith, 1 Chit. 44, 80.

Though three notices were given of the same bail to justify in vacation before different judges, and the plaintiff had incurred the expense of three oppositions, yet, upon their appearing to justify on a fourth notice, the court would not compel the payment of the costs of the opposition, as the bail justified, though the court afterwards referred the matter to the master on an application against the attorney for vexatious proceedings. Id.

Where six different notices of the same bail were given, the court compelled the defendant to pay all the costs incurred by the plaintiff in consequence thereof. Aldiss v. Burgess, 3 B. & A. 759.

By the practice of the court of Exchequer, the plaintiff is entitled to costs upon the second notice of justification, if a brief be delivered to counsel to oppose the bail upon the first notice. Barrow v. Whitehead, 2 Y. & J. 2.

Costs of former Opposition.]—In the Exchequer, if bail be once successfully opposed, they cannot justify, until 5*l.* has been deposited with the master to cover the costs. Smith v. Cooper, 1 Dowl. P. C. 287; 1 C. & J. 460; 1 Tyr. 378.

There must be three notices of justification and two changes of bail, to entitle the plaintiff to insist on a deposit of costs of opposition before the bail justify. Mercer v. Sanby, 1 Chit. 658.

The costs of a former opposition were allowed where there had been three notices and two changes of bail. Thompson v. Davis, 1 Chit. 658, n.

Costs of prior oppositions not allowed, though there had been three notices of justification, if one of the notices was of bail put in merely for the purpose of a render. Wilson v. Kinerly, 1 Chit. 658.

Where bail were opposed and rejected, and the defendant was surrendered on the next day, he was allowed to justify new bail without paying the costs of the former opposition. Holward v. Andre, 1 B. & P. 32.

But now bail are not permitted to justify till the costs of the former opposition are paid to the plaintiff, though the defendant is in custody. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Taunt. 57; S. P. Mitchell v. Claridge, 1 Taunt. 58, n.

What Costs allowed.]—A too general description of bail, although a sufficient ground for opposing the justification, is not in itself enough to call upon the court to fix the defendant with the costs of the opposition at the time; but the consideration of costs will be reserved till the bail justify. Richardson v. Hodgson, 11 Price, 379.

The plaintiff's costs of inquiries after sufficiency of bail, are costs in the cause. Paine v. Munton, 2 Tyr. 162; 1 Price's P. C. 168.

If time to justify bail be granted, the defendant must pay the plaintiff's costs of attending to oppose. De Bodie's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 368.

If the copy of the affidavit of sufficiency served on the plaintiff do not purport to be a copy, or do not state the names of the parties and the sums in the actions in which they are already bail, or the names of the occupants, and numbers of the houses stated by the bail to be in their possession; these defects are not grounds for rejecting the bail, but for disallowing the defendant his costs of justification. Id.

Costs of unsuccessful exception to bail disallowed, on the ground that a first notice of bail was informal, in not containing the requisite description of the bail, in compliance with the exigency of the new rules, although the notice was accompanied by the affidavit of justification prescribed by the general rules (no affidavit being made in verification of the statement so made at the bar), and the omissions in the original notice had been supplied in the second amended notice, which was given in due time. Terry v. Pearce, 1 Price's P. C. 141.

Attorney's Liability.]—Where time is applied for, to send an affidavit of justification into the country to amend a mistake in the jurat, the court will make the attorney pay the costs of the application. Shilletoe's bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

Where an attorney, knowing that bail were insufficient, caused them to be put in, and gave notice of justification, the court compelled him to pay the costs of the opposition. Blundell v. Blundell, 1 D. & R. 142; 5 B. & A. 533.

And where a defendant had been removed by habeas corpus from Lincoln Castle to the King's Bench prison, and the plaintiff had been put to the expense of inquiring after six sets of bail, as to one of whom a false description had been given, the court ordered the defendant's attorney to pay the costs incurred by the plaintiff, although it was sworn that such attorney had no personal knowledge of the misdescription and insufficiency of the bail. Blundell v. Blundell, 1 D. & R. 142; 5 B. & A. 533.

(e) Commitment.

Bail, on coming up to justify, being guilty of gross prevarication, may be committed to the custody of the marshal. Curtis v. Smith, 1 Chit. 116.

Bail was committed to Newgate for prevarication as to the state of his circumstances and property on coming up to justify. Wilson v. Bodkin, 8 D. & R. 41.

XVI. PUTTING IN AND JUSTIFYING AT SAME TIME.

A defendant may justify bail at the same time at which they are put in, upon giving four days' notice for that purpose, before eleven o'clock in the morning, and exclusive of Sunday; and if the plaintiff is desirous of time to inquire after the bail, and shall give one day's notice thereof as aforesaid to the defendant, his attorney or agent, as the case may be, before the time appointed for justification, stating therein what further time is required, such time not to exceed three days in the case of town bail, and six days in the case of country bail, then (unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order) the time for putting in and justifying bail shall be postponed accordingly, and all proceedings shall be stayed in the mean time. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., T. T. 1 Will. 4, 2 B. & Adol. 788; 7 Bing. 782; 4 C. & P. 601; 1 C. & J. 469; 1 Dowl. P. C. 102; 1 Tyr. 520; 5 M. & P. 813; 1 Price's P. C. 109; 4 Bligh, N. S. 581.

The notice must be a four days' notice exclusive of Sunday, and must be served before eleven o'clock, A. M. Jenkins v. Maltby, 2 C. & J. 124; 1 Price's P. C. 150.

A notice given the 12th (Saturday) for the 16th, insufficient. Id.

But the court will allow time to give another notice. Id.

The rule is an enabling and not a disabling rule, and therefore a prisoner, who, before the rule, might put in and justify bail upon a two days' notice, may still do so. Davies v. Grey, 2 C. & J. 309; 2 Tyr. 277; S. P. King's bail, 1 Dowl. P. C. 509.

Where the defendant is a prisoner, a notice of putting in and justifying bail at the same time must state that the defendant is a prisoner. Crighton's bail, 1 C. & M. 335; 1 Dowl. P. C. 609.

A defendant in prison on a capias may put in and justify bail on the last day of term, although arrested in the beginning of the term, on a writ returnable 28th May. Ball v. Owen, 1 Price's P. C. 118.

The court will not require him, as the condition of justifying, to accept a declaration of the term. Id.

XVII. ALLOWANCE OF BAIL.

1. Necessity.

Bail is not regularly put in till the rule for the allowance of it has been served, even though the plaintiff oppose the justification. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 4 T. R. 493; 2 Chit. 99; S. P. Booth v. Preston, 4 T. R. 494, n.

And if such rule be not served on the plaintiff, he may take an assignment of the bail-bond, though he knows of the justification. Holland v. White, 2 B. & P. 341.

Although bail justify by consent at chambers, still a rule for the allowance of bail must be served on the plaintiff or his attorney: if not, the plaintiff may take an assignment of the bail-bond. Bignold v. Holding, 2 D. & R. 436; S. C. nom. Bignold v. Lee, 1 B. & C. 285.

The sheriff is liable to an attachment for not bringing in the body, if the rule for the allowance of bail be not served in time, although the bail justified after opposition of counsel, in the presence of the plaintiff's attorney. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 Chit. 99; 4 T. R. 493.

Where a bail described himself as having property to a great extent, and the court directed an inquiry, which the bail eluded by running away, the court would not permit the rule for the allowance of bail to be intitled of the term the bail came up to justify; and the application was discharged with costs. Market v. Gordon, 1 Chit. 131.

2. Setting aside.

Allowance of bail may be set aside under circumstances of gross imposition and fraud on the part of bail. Gould v. Berry, 1 Chit. 143.

So, where bail are afterwards rejected in other causes, the allowance will be set aside. Anon. 1 Chit. 144.

The court of C. P. will not set aside the allowance of bail, on the ground that they have sworn to a false account of their property, without the privity of the defendant or his attorney. Anon. 1 Chit. 116, (a), 143, (a).

Allowance of bail discharged on affidavit of perjury by bail uncontradicted. Barling v. Waters, 6 Bing. 423; 4 M. & P. 125.

The rule for allowance of bail was discharged with costs to be paid by the defendant, on an affidavit that the bail had perjured himself on his justification, in swearing that an action in which he had been bail had been compromised. Brown v. Gillies, 1 Chit. 373.

In such case, held that the plaintiff might proceed on the bail-bond. Brown v. Gillies, 1 Chit. 496, n.

The court of C. P. will not discharge the rule for allowance of bail, on account of perjury in one of them, who had sworn on his justification that he was a housekeeper, and a few days before that he was not; the plaintiff's only remedy is by indictment. Shes v. Abbott, 5 Moore, 321; 2 B. & B. 619.

Where, on the justification of bail, one of them swore that his christian name was James, and that he had never been arrested, imprisoned, or insolvent; and the other, that he had never been in custody: upon an affidavit wholly denying these facts, the court of C. P. refused to set aside the allowance of bail, although the application for that purpose was made on the next dies juridicus; on the ground that such offence ought to be tried by indictment for perjury. Stockham v. French, 1 Bing. 365; 8 Moore, 381: S. P. A'Beckett v. —, 5 Taunt. 776.

Otherwise, if the defendant appeared to be privy to and implicated in the transaction. Id.

If bail be added, where the one already mentioned is an attorney, and justify without opposition, the court of C. P. will not set aside the allowance of bail. Bell v. Gate, 1 Taunt. 162.

In the Exchequer, the court will not set aside an order for allowance of bail, on the ground of an action having been previously commenced against the sheriff for an escape: though no bail-bond had been taken, nor bail above put in in due time after the return of the writ, if the defendant has been rendered. Morley v. Cole, 1 Price, 103.

Where bail had justified by mistake, and without any default of counsel, the allowance was staid, and the bail ordered to come up and justify on the following day. Addison v. Foster, 2 Chit. 98.

Where it appeared, after bail had justified, that money had been given to one of them for his trouble and loss of time in coming up to justify, the court would not set aside the allowance, but imposed on the defendant the terms of producing an affidavit of merits, bringing the sum sworn to into court, and taking short notice of trial. Wyllie v. Jones, 2 D. & R. 253.

But where, after bail had been opposed and allowed, it was discovered that one of them had previously been rejected for insufficiency, though he had since become possessed of property, the court set aside the rule for the allowance. Pickard v. Dobson, 3 D. & R. 5.

XVIII. LIABILITY OF BAIL.

1. When liable.

If bail enter into a recognizance, although they are excepted to and never justify, they are liable. Bramwell v. Farmer, 1 Taunt. 427.

They are only liable as a security for the original action; therefore, when judgment cannot be had, they are not liable. Anon. Lofft, 545.

It is no objection to the liability of the bail, that the process against several defendants is bailable as to some, and serviceable as to others. Christie v. Walker, 7 Moore, 362; 1 Bing. 48.

2. To what Amount.

Rule and previous Decisions.—Bail shall only be liable to the sum sworn to by the affidavit of debt and the costs of suit, not exceeding in the whole the amount of their recognizance. Reg.

Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 173; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

In C. P., where bail is taken under a judge's order, each of the bail is liable to double the sum ordered. Dahl v. Johnson, 1 B. & P. 205: S. P. Howell v. Wyke, 4 Moore, 167; 1 B. & B. 490.

So, to double the sum sworn to in case of affidavit. Id.

In debt on a recognizance of bail taken in C. P., where the plaintiff had recovered in the original action a sum exceeding that sworn to, the court of K. B. stayed the proceedings against the bail on payment of the debt sworn to, with interests and costs. Wheelwright v. Simons, 5 M. & S. 511.

In K. B., they are not liable beyond the sum sworn to and costs. Jackson v. Hassel, 1 Dougl. 330: S. P. Stevenson v. Cameron, 8 T. R. 29.

In sci. fa. on a recognizance, the court will stay the proceedings against both the bail, on payment of the sum sworn to, and costs, though less than the damages recovered, or than the sum named in the process. Clarke v. Bradshaw, 1 East, 86: S. P. Tranel v. Rivar, 1 East, 91, n.

The court will enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece on payment of the sum sworn to, and costs, though less than the sum acknowledged to be due, as well where the action is by original as by bill. Jacob v. Bowes, 6 East, 312; 2 Smith, 402.

Where a defendant is held to bail in an action of tort, the bail are only liable, as for damages, to the sum in which he is held to bail, though more be given by the jury; but they are liable, beyond that sum, to the full taxed costs. Peterkin v. Sampson, 4 Dougl. 17.

Bail in the Exchequer are only liable for the sum sworn to, and costs in the original action, and the costs of proceedings against themselves, where any shall have been taken. Reg. Gen. Exch. H. T. 38 Geo. 3, 8 Price, 502.

What Costs.—Where the principal is surrendered in time, the plaintiff cannot afterwards proceed against the bail in an action on the recognizance for the recovery of costs. Dawson v. Shuter, and Bartrum v. Howell, 1 Tidd's Prac. 587.

If costs have been incurred in the course of the proceedings, bail cannot get their recognizance discharged, without payment of them. Rex v. Lyon, 3 Burr. 1461.

So they must pay the costs of all actions, as well as the debt, before proceedings shall be stayed. Walker v. Carter, 2 W. Black. 816.

If, upon the return of non est inventus to the ca. sa., the plaintiff proceed against the bail, and deliver a declaration conditionally, the bail cannot apply to the court to stay proceedings, on payment of the debt and costs of the original action only, but must also pay the costs of the second action, although the bail tendered the original damages and costs, before the end of eight days from the return of the ca. sa., within which time, by the practice of the court, they might have discharged themselves, by surrendering their principal. Perigal v. Mellish, 5 T. R. 363.

If proceedings be commenced upon a recognizance of bail immediately upon the return of the ca. sa., the court of C. P. will not stay them but upon payment of the costs, though the principal be surrendered within the four days allowed by the practice of the court. Abbott v. Rawley, 3 B. & P. 13. And see Byrne v. Aquilas, 3 East, 306.

Where the proceeding upon the recognizance of bail is by action, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs of such action, commenced after a return of non est inventus to the capias ad satisfaciendum against the principal, though the bail rendered their principal before the eight days allowed by the practice of the court after the return of the process against the bail. Hughes v. Poidevin, 15 East, 254.

Bail having rendered their principal within the eight days allowed by the rules of Trin. 1 Anne, are not liable to the costs in an action on the recognizance up to the time of the notice of render, when the proceedings were stayed. Creswell v. Hern, 1 M. & S. 742.

The bail to the action are not liable to pay the costs of a writ of error. Yates v. Doughan, 6 T. R. 288: S. P. Anon. Lofft, 520.

Bail of an alien who was sent out of the kingdom under 33 Geo. 3, c. 4, applied to be discharged, on payment of 1000*l.* deposited with them, which sum the plaintiff had recovered by verdict; but the court held them liable for the costs also. Coles v. De Hayne, 6 T. R. 246.

Although a bail, having rendered the defendant, instigates him to vexatious attempts to obtain his discharge under an insolvent act, the court will not compel him to pay the costs of the plaintiff's resisting those attempts. Winstanley v. Head, 4 Taunt. 192.

If a plaintiff recover a judgment for money lent, and interest, he cannot therefore require the bail to pay him interest on the amount of the judgment as part of his costs. Waters v. Rees, 3 Taunt. 503.

Other things.]—Where the defendant in the action gave a cognovit for the debt and costs, payable by seven instalments; and after the bail were fixed, an act passed for discharging insolvent debtors in custody for debts due at a certain day, prior to the bail being fixed, at which day three only of the instalments were payable; and afterwards the principal was discharged under the act, when only two more of the instalments had become payable: yet held, that the bail were liable for the whole condemnation money, the entire debt, qua debt, being due instantly, with a stay of execution only for certain portions at certain times. Shakespeare v. Phillips, 8 East, 433.

Bail are not to be considered as sureties for, or as liable for the debt of a bankrupt, within the meaning of 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. Hewes v. Mott, and Dalby v. Mott, 2 Marsh. 192; 6 Taunt. 329; 2 Rose, 455: S. P. Newington v. Keays, 4 B. & A. 493.

XIX. DISCHARGE OF BAIL.

1. By Render of Principal.

(a) What Bail may render.

Rejected Bail.]—Bail, though rejected, shall be allowed to render the principal without entering into a fresh recognizance. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 173; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Before the rule, in K. B. bail excepted to and rejected might render the defendant so long as they remained on the bail-piece. Sayer v. Verdenhalm, 6 M. & S. 218: S. P. Rex v. Essex (Sheriff), 5 T. R. 633: Anon. 1 N. R. 138, n.; 1 Tidd's Prac. 277, 284.

As bail need not justify in order to render. Mitchell v. Morris, 2 W. Black. 1179: S. P. Anon. 2 W. Black. 758.

Although added bail have been rejected, they were competent in K. B. to render, and an attachment afterwards moved for was irregular. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Chit. 446.

Not so in C. P. Cooper v. Jagger, 1 Chit. 448.

Where bail had been rejected, the defendant could not be rendered without putting in fresh bail in C. P. Mills v. Head, 1 N. R. 137.

But they might enter into a new recognizance for the purpose of rendering. Bell v. Gate, 1 Taunt. 162.

Where after added bail had justified, the rule for allowance was set aside, on the ground of a subsequent discovery of perjury in one of the bail, who was rejected: the bail below are competent to render their principal at any time before the rule for setting aside the allowance is made absolute, if their names remain on the recognizance as such bail. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 3 M. & P. 594; 6 Bing. 251.

Bail who have not justified.]—In the Exchequer, bail who are excepted to, but do not justify, are still competent to render the principal. Gore v. Williams, 3 Anst. 653: S. P. Jacques v. Holland, 3 Anst. 655, n. But see Perrott v. Hill, 3 Wils. 59.

Bail who are excepted to, and do not justify on the day appointed, cannot afterwards render the principal, being thereby out of court; but the defendant being, in point of fact, in custody before the assignment of the bail-bond, the court set aside proceedings thereon upon payment of costs. Hardwick v. Black, 7 T. R. 297: S. P. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 7 T. R. 527.

But in C. P. bail may render the principal, after having failed to justify on the day for which notice of justification was given; and if they do render, and the plaintiff take an assignment of the bail-bond, and proceed, after notice of such render, his proceedings will be set aside. Seaver v. Spraggon, 2 N. R. 85.

Though a rule to bring in the body has been served, they may render the defendant without justifying. Hall v. Walker, 1 H. Black. 638.

So, after an assignment of the bail-bond, they may render the defendant without justifying. Edwin v. Allen, 5 T. R. 401.

Bail may render without justifying, and where the rule expires in vacation, a render on the first day of the ensuing term, sedente curia, is good, though notice were not given till afterwards on the same day. Wiggins v. Stephens, 5 East, 533.

Other Bail.]—Bail above, put in by the sheriff (who discharged the defendant without a bail-bond), may surrender the defendant. Rex v. Butcher, Peake, 169—Kenyon.

Bail surreptitiously put in cannot render the defendant. Jackson v. Morris, and Richardson v. Same, 2 W. Black. 1179.

A person who has enlisted may be rendered by his bail, in their own discharge. Bond v. Isaac, 1 Burr. 339.

(b) When Render may be made.

Time of the Day.]—Bail shall be at liberty to render the principal at any time during the last day for rendering, so as they make such render before the prison doors are closed for the night. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 174; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

In K. B. before the rule, a render must have been made during the sitting of the court on the last day. Simmonds v. Middleton, 1 Wils. 269; S. P. Johnson v. Linsey, 2 D. & R. 385; 1 B. & C. 247.

So in C. P., the render must have been before the rising of the court. Lardner v. Bassage, 2 H. Black. 593.

But in Exch. they might render a defendant during the whole of the last day. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Price, 338.

In K. B., where the rule expired in vacation, a render on the first day of the ensuing term, sedente curia, was good, though notice were not given till afterwards, on the same day, and after a writ of procedendo had issued to an inferior court, where the cause had originated. Wiggins v. Stephens, 5 East, 533.

Proceedings against them.]—Where the plaintiff proceeds by action of debt on the recognizance of bail in any of the courts at Westminster, the bail shall be at liberty to render their principal at any time within the space of fourteen days next after the service of the process upon them, but not at any later period; and upon such render being duly made, and notice thereof given, the proceedings shall be stayed, upon payment of the costs of the writ, and service thereof only. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., T. T. 3 Will. 4; 10 Bing. 154.

Formerly, bail had time to render the principal till the quarto die post, where the action was by original. Bailey v. Smeathman, 4 Burr. 2134.

They had eight days in which to render the principal, from the return of that writ, on which there was an effectual proceeding against them. Wilkinson v. Vass, 8 T. R. 422.

Therefore, where the plaintiff sued the bail on their recognizance, who did not render the principal within eight days, and then the plaintiff died, and his executors brought another action against the bail; it was ruled, that the bail had eight days from the return of the process in the second action, in which to render the principal. Id.

Bail may render their principal at any time before they are actually fixed. Moorby v. Gudge, 2 Chit. 104.

And they are allowed eight days for that purpose; and where the render was made in due time, the court set aside the proceedings against them, and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the writs issued against the bail before the notice of render was given. Smith v. Lewis, 2 Chit. 100.

An intervening Sunday is to be reckoned as one of the eight days in full term given to bail to render their principal after the return of the writ. Creswell v. Green, 14 East, 537.

If bail be served with process on his recognizance, and die before the quarto die post, and fresh process issue against his executors, they have until the quarto die post of the second writ to render the principal. Meddowcroft v. Sutton, 1 B. & P. 61.

Bail sued on their recognizance by attachment of privilege, may render the principal on the appearance day of the return. Fletcher v. Aingell, 2 H. Black. 117.

Bail must render the principal in discharge of themselves on the quarto die of the return of the second sci. fa. Simmonds v. Middleton, 1 Wils. 269.

If an action be brought in K. B. against bail, on a recognizance of bail taken in C. P., they have the same indulgence (of eight days in full term after the return of the writ against them), to render the principal, as if the recognizance had been taken in K. B. Fisher v. Branscombe, 7 T. R. 355; S. P. Fisher v. Sutton, 7 T. R. 355.

If an action be brought in the court of Exchequer against bail upon their recognizance of bail entered into in the King's Bench, they must render their principal as if the recognizance had been taken in the former court. Dibbins v. Taylor, 1 Y. & J. 15.

The bail have only four days to render their principal, by the practice of the court of Exchequer, after the return of the writ, although there be not so many days remaining in the term. Id.

In proceedings against bail on the return of the ca. sa. in the court of Exchequer, by subpoena, the bail have only four days after the return of the writ in which to render their principal. Where the writ was returnable on the last day of term, and the bail had been unable to render the defendant, from the dangerous state of his health, within the four days; the court refused on their application, after the expiration of the four days, to allow them to render the principal on that ground, in consideration of the shortness of the time allowed by that particular mode of proceeding, as abridging the usual time allowed in the other courts, and even in that court, by its ordinary process of quo minus. Waring v. Jarvis, 5 Price, 170.

Quære, if the application had been made before the expiration of the four days' notice? Id.

In the Exchequer they are not allowed four days for that purpose, after the determination of a writ of error, where the plaintiff has proceeded by subpoena, and error is brought before the ca. sa. Rolfe v. Cheetham, Wightw. 79.

A render after the return of the ca. sa. cannot be pleaded, although, if made in time, the bail may be relieved by motion. Healey v. Medley, 1 Tidd's Prac. 287.

On the quarto die post of the return of the ca. sa. against the principal, the bail are fixed; and if after that time they apply to stay proceedings against themselves, the court of C. P. will only grant the application on terms. Copous v. Blyton, 1 N. R. 67.

(c) Enlargement of Time.

Principal a Bankrupt.—Time enlarged for bail to surrender their principal, who had become a bankrupt, for the purpose of his examination. Maunder v. Jowett, 3 East, 145; S. P. Offley v. Dickins, 6 M. & S. 348.

When their surrendering the bankrupt would be attended with expense to his estate, and inconvenience to him in making out his accounts, and passing his examination. Id.

So in C. P. where the principal had become bankrupt, and was required to appear to a commission in a distant county, the court enlarged the time of render until a reasonable time after the end of his last examination. Glendinning v. Robinson, 1 Taunt. 320.

Where the defendant became bankrupt after action brought, the court enlarged the time for him to surrender in discharge of his bail, until a fortnight after he had finished his last examination. Stead v. Yates, 3 M. & P. 272.

The court of Exchequer will, on application, enlarge the time for render, notwithstanding the provisions of the stat. 49 Geo. 3, permitting bankrupts in custody in execution to be brought before the commissioners. Crump v. Taylor, 1 Price, 74; 2 Rose, 149.

But not unless it be sworn that the application is made on behalf of the bail. Harris v. Glossop, 2 Chit. 101.

Where a defendant is in custody under a warrant of commissioners of bankrupt, the court will enlarge the time for rendering the defendant, though the bail have not justified. Gibson v. White, 1 Dowl. P. C. 297; 2 C. & J. 85; 2 Tyr. 162.

The time for rendering a bankrupt will be enlarged by the court, notwithstanding the provisions of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 21, authorizing the render of defendants in discharge of bail, to the county prison. Harris v. Alcock, 1 Dowl. P. C. 568; 2 C. & J. 486; 2 Tyr. 418.

A defendant having been arrested in the country, and bailed, was declared bankrupt, and allowed until after the time for rendering him, to pass his final examination; the court enlarged the time to render until four days after the final examination of the bankrupt, but required an affidavit that it would be inconvenient for the commissioners to attend at the county jail, or in London to take the bankrupt's final examination. Id.

Where a bankrupt was about to be taken in execution, the court would not, upon an affidavit which omitted to state where the commission was sued out, or where the commissioners resided, enlarge, till a month after his final examination, the time for the bail's surrendering him. Shaw v. Cash, 4 Bing. 80; 12 Moore, 257.

Other Reasons.—Bail shall have time to render, after a writ of error brought by the principal. Capron v. Archer, 1 Burr. 334.

If pending proceedings against bail, a writ of error be allowed, on application to the court of Exchequer, the same time will be given to the bail to render the principal, after judgment affirmed or writ of error nonprossed, as they would have had at the time the writ of error was allowed; and in the mean time the proceedings against the bail will be stayed. And that application will be granted, where the writ of error was allowed two days after the return of the subp. ad. resp. against the bail, and the motion not made till five days after (the fourth day being Sunday.) Bennett v. Forester, 2 Price, 296.

Where judgment was entered up against a defendant in C. P., on which he brought a writ of error in K. B., and judgment was there affirmed against the defendant, who thereupon brought a writ of error to the House of Lords; and the defendant, before the affirmance of the judgment by K. B., surrendered himself to the prison of that court, in discharge of his bail:—Held, that they were entitled to have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece, although the appeal was still pending in the House of Lords; as the recognizance of bail still remained in the court of C. P., where the action was originally commenced. Sherratt v. Floyer, 2 Bing. 18; 9 Moore, 65.

In K. B. the time was refused to be enlarged for bail to render their principal, on an affidavit that he was a lunatic: it not appearing that he was in such a state as to occasion any immediate peril of life, either to himself or those about him. Cock v. Bell, 13 East, 355.

So, on an affidavit that he could not be removed without endangering his life. Wynn v. Petty, 4 East, 102; S. P. Nightingale v. Lowry, 4 East, 102, n.

The court will not enlarge the time for bail to render their principal, on an affidavit that he was ill and could not be removed without endangering his life. Warrington v. Sammel, 10 Moore, 170.

The court will allow time to the bail to render their principal, where the principal being in custody, under process of another court, it appears, on the return made to a habeas corpus, issued by the bail, in order to render him, that he cannot be removed out of such custody, without danger to his life, and that such impossibility still continues. Winstanley v. Gaitskell, 16 East, 389.

(d) Defendant in Criminal Custody.

Where a defendant is in the criminal custody of K. B., the court of C. P. will not interfere summarily to procure him to be rendered in discharge of his bail. Currie v. Kinneer, 1 B. & P. 23; S. P. Bennett v. Same, 3 Moore, 259.

But the court of Exchequer allowed the time to be enlarged for bail to render their principal, for a week after the expiration of the term of his imprisonment in a county jail, under a conviction and sentence for a misdemeanour. Ashmore v. Fletcher, M'Clel. 252; 13 Price, 523; S. P. Rouch v. Boucher, 10 Price, 104.

Where defendant, subsequently to arrest, and before perfecting special bail, was committed to criminal custody, in which he remained awaiting the decision of the twelve judges on a point of law arising out of his defence on the criminal charge, the court refused to enlarge, till the opinion of the judges should have been delivered, the time for perfecting special bail, or to permit the sheriff's bail to render him. Joyce v. Pratt, 6 Bing. 377; 4 M. & P. 55.

But granted an enlargement for four days. Id.

The court, on the application of bail, granted a habeas corpus to the sheriff in whose custody the defendant was under a charge of felony, to bring him up, in order that he might be surrendered. Sharp v. Sheriff, 7 T. R. 226.

The court, on application by the bail of the defendant, who was in custody on a charge of obtaining money upon false pretences, will grant a writ of habeas corpus to the gaoler, to bring him up, in order that he may be rendered in discharge of his bail. Daniel v. Thompson, 15 East, 78.

The court will enlarge the time for bail to render a defendant who is under imprisonment in a country jail upon a conviction for libel, until a week after the imprisonment under the sentence has expired; not until a week after the term for which he was sentenced to be imprisoned. Campbell v. Ackland, 1 C. & M. 73; 1 Dowl. P. C. 635.

In a case where a man was convicted of setting fire to his house and sentenced to be imprisoned, the court gave the bail time to render during the period of his imprisonment. Rez v. Fearne, 1 Marsh. 170, n.

One who was committed to Newgate, by commissioners of bankrupt, for not answering satisfactorily to certain questions, must, for the purpose of being surrendered by his bail in a civil suit, be brought up by habeas corpus, issued on the crown side of the court, on which side also must be taken the subsequent rule for his surrender in the action, his commitment pro forma to the marshal, and his recommitment to Newgate, charged with the several matters. Taylor's case, 3 East, 232.

(e) Defendant in other Custody.

Where a man was held to bail in a civil action, and was afterwards committed to the custody of the sheriff upon an extent, the court, on an application by the bail for relief, held, that although they could not allow an exoneretur to be entered without the consent of the crown, they would give the bail time for surrendering the defendant. Hodgson v. Temple, 1 Marsh. 166; 5 Taunt. 503.

The defendant, having given bail to the action, and being in custody of the sheriffs of London, under an extent from the crown, the court of C. P. held, that they could not grant his bail a habeas corpus to bring him up, and render him in their discharge to the Fleet, without the consent of the crown. Id.

And the crown consenting that the defendant might be brought up in the sheriff's custody, and committed to the Fleet in discharge of his bail, on condition that he should be immediately remanded to the custody of the sheriffs: the Court of C. P. held, that it was not sufficiently clear that they had authority to remand him to the custody of the sheriffs, to authorize them to make the order. Id.

It is no objection to a motion on the part of bail to enlarge the time for rendering the principal, on good grounds, (as that the defendant is in custody quasi criminal), that the bail have not justified. Tinson v. White, 1 Price's P. C. 156.

The defendant being in custody of a messenger, under an order of the secretary of state, for the purpose of being sent out of the kingdom, by virtue of the alien act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 155, the court refused to issue a habeas corpus on the application of his bail, to bring him up that they might render him in their own discharge, on account of the public inconvenience, and of the probable risk of his passage, which had been taken in a ship immediately about to sail to his destined port. Folkein v. Critico, 13 East, 457.

So, because of the unwarrantable arrest and detention of the principal as a prisoner of war by a foreign enemy. Grant v. Fagan, 4 East, 189; 1 Smith, 12.

(f) Mode of Render.

By 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 21, a defendant may be rendered in discharge of his bail, either to the prison of the court or to the jail of the county where he was arrested; for which purpose the defendant, or his bail, or one of them, is to obtain an order of a judge, and lodge it with the jailer, and a notice of such lodgment and of the defendant's being actually in custody by virtue of the order, signed by the defendant, or the bail, or either of them, or by the attorney or agent, or any or either of them, shall be delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent, and the sheriff, or other person re-responsible for the custody of debtors in such county jail, shall, on such render so perfected, be duly charged with the custody of such defendant, and the bail shall be exonerated.

By s. 22, a defendant in custody of the sheriff may be rendered in the same manner.

On application by a defendant, or his bail, or either of them, for an order of one of the barons of the court to render a defendant to a county jail, it shall be specified on whose behalf such application shall be made, the state of the proceedings on the cause, for what amount the defendant was held to bail, and by the sheriff of what county he was arrested, which facts shall be stated in the order; and that, on such order being lodged with the jailor of the county jail in which such defendant was so arrested, the defendant may be rendered to his custody in discharge of the bail; and that, on such lodgment and render, a notice thereof, and of the defendant's being actually in custody thereon, in writing, signed by the defendant or his bail, or either of them, or by the attorney or agent of any or either of them, shall be delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent, and thereupon the bail for the said defendant shall be wholly exonerated, without entering any exoneretur. Reg. Gen. Exch. M. T. 1 Will. 4, 1 Price's P. C. viii; 1 C. & J. 279; 1 Tyr. 162.

If a defendant shall be in custody of the jailor of the county jail of any county in England or Wales, by virtue of any process issued out of any of his majesty's superior courts of record, he may be rendered in discharge of his bail in any action depending in the Exchequer, in like manner as before provided for a render in discharge of bail, and thereupon the bail shall be wholly exonerated from liability as such bail. Reg. Gen. Exch. M. T. 1 Will. 4, 1 Price's P. C. viii; 1 C. J. 280; 1 Tyr. 162.

On a render in discharge of bail, the committitur is made out by the judge, and sent with the defendant to the K. B. prison. The entry in the marshal's book is made by the clerk of the papers. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Chit. 364.

And where a defendant is already in custody, and is sought to be charged in a new action, the committitur is entered with the clerk of the judgments. Id.

The entry of a committitur in the marshal's book is not necessary to make a perfect render. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 B. & A. 607; S. C. nom. Anon. 1 Chit. 360.

Even where the notice of render was not served until after an attachment against the sheriff had issued. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. & R. 225.

A render may be made by the party himself, and without an attorney. Nethersole's bail, 2 Chit. 99.

It is not necessary that the defendant should be taken to a judge's chambers, for the purpose of rendering himself in discharge of his bail, unless he desires it. Davis v. Fowler, 2 Chit. 74. See also Stanton's bail, 2 Chit. 73.

(g) Notice of Render.

The render is not complete or effectual till notice served. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Price, 338.

On notice of render being given to the plaintiff or his attorney, all further proceedings against the bail are to cease. Anon. 1 Chit. 128, (a).

Where, after due notice of render of the principal, the plaintiff still proceeds against the bail in an action of debt upon the recognizance, because no offer was made by them to pay the costs in the suit against them, nor any rule obtained by them to stay proceedings in the action against them on payment of costs:—Held, that the subsequent proceedings were irregular, being contrary to the rule of court, T. T. 1 Anne, which says, that, on such notice of render, all further proceedings against the bail shall cease. Bryne v. Aguilar, 3 East, 306.

The court of K. B., upon payment of costs, entered an exoneretur on the bail-piece after execution against the bail, where the defendant in the original action was rendered in due time, but no notice of the render had been given until the goods of the bail had been taken in execution. Thorn v. Hutchinson, 4 D. & R. 712; 3 B. & C. 112.

Bail having rendered their principal in time, according to the practice of the court, are entitled to stay the proceedings in an action on their recognizance, without costs, though the plaintiff commenced his action before he was served with notice of the render. Smith v. Lewis, 16 East, 212.

The court of Exchequer will set aside an attachment against the sheriff, on payment of costs, if the defendant has rendered on the evening of the last day of the rule, and notice be given early next morning. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Price, 338.

Where time was given to the plaintiff to see whether bail were really possessed of the property in respect of which they professed their ability to justify, and on the day appointed for coming up again, the bail, being rejected, immediately rendered the defendant:—Held, that the sheriff was liable to an attachment; the notice of render not having been served until after the attachment had issued. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. & R. 225.

Where a defendant was rendered after the time for putting in bail had expired, but within the further time allowed him for that purpose by the court:—Held, that an attachment, issued after the notice of such render, was regular, and could not be set aside without an affidavit of merits, especially as no bail-bond had been taken. Rex v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 567.

A sheriff arrested A. B. on the 13th November, upon a writ returnable the 15th, and suffered him to go at large without giving a bail-bond, and afterwards returned cepi corpus; bail above were put in on the 17th December, and on the same day A. B. was rendered, but notice of render was not given until the 13th January. An action against the sheriff for the escape was commenced on the 19th December. The court stayed proceedings upon payment of costs up to the time when notice of render was given, and the costs of the motion. Brookhouse v. Derbyshire (Sheriff), 5 B. & C. 244.

Where the time for justifying bail expired on the 7th, and time was given till the 9th February to add and justify other bail, and on that day the defendant was rendered in discharge of his bail, and notice thereof was given on the same day to the plaintiff:—Held, that the sheriff was liable to be attached on the 10th, if the plaintiff had lost a trial for the sittings after term. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 8 D. & R. 137.

If the plaintiff has incurred the costs of instructing counsel to move for an attachment, before the defendant gives notice of his surrender, though he surrenders before the attachment is actually obtained, the court of C. P. will order the costs of those instructions to be paid by the defendant upon setting aside the attachment. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Taunt. 56.

Where the defendant was rendered in discharge of his bail, and his attorney called to give notice of render that night, but finding no one in the way, saw the plaintiff's attorney the next morning, and then gave notice:—Held, that an attachment against the sheriff moved for on that day, although the instructions to the counsel were given before the notice, was irregular, and the attachment was accordingly set aside. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 Smith, 243.

It is not necessary that an affidavit should be made of the service of the notice of render, in order to complete such render, so as to prevent an attachment against the sheriff, and, therefore, an attachment issued after notice of render, but before affidavit thereof, is irregular. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 1 Chit. 359.

(h) Right of Bail to take Principal.

Special bail in the superior courts have a right to take their principal into custody at any time, and render him in discharge of themselves. Rex v. Hughes, 3 C. & P. 373—Tenterden.

But bail in inferior courts have no such right. Id.

A person may assist bail in taking, and may lawfully detain the principal, although the bail do not continue present. Pyewell v. Stow, 3 Taunt. 425.

Bail cannot take their principal on a Sunday in order to render him. Brookes v. Warren, 2 W. Black. 1273.

A bankrupt may be taken by his bail for the purpose of rendering him, notwithstanding his privilege from arrest, and if they neglect to take him they may be fixed. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 237.

Bail above may justify the breaking and entering the house of A., (the outer door being open,) in which the principal resides, in order to seek for him, for the purpose of rendering him: such a justification is good without averring that the principal was in the house at the time. Sheers v. Brooks, 2 H. Black. 120.

And in such a plea an averment that the defendants "duly became bail, and entered into a recognizance," is sufficient, without stating that the principal was delivered to their custody. Id.

2. By Bankruptcy of Principal.

Generally.—Bail are discharged by the principal having obtained his certificate under a commission of bankruptcy. Anon. Lofft, 651.

Therefore, where a defendant obtained his certificate under a commission before the trial, but did not plead it puis darrein continuance, the court ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece. Todd v. Maxfield, 5 D. & R. 258; 3 B. & C. 222.

Where the defendant obtained his certificate as a bankrupt after issue joined, and before trial, but did not plead it puis darrein continuance, and the plaintiff proceeded to trial, and obtained judgment; the court refused to order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, although the plaintiff's attorney knew before the trial that the defendant had got his certificate, because the bail were still in a condition to render the defendant. Humphries v. Knight, 4 M. & P. 370; 6 Bing. 569.

Where the defendant becomes bankrupt and obtains his certificate, but omits to plead it, and his bail become fixed, the court of C. P. will not set aside the proceedings on motion. Clarke v. Hoppe, 1 Rose, 353; 3 Taunt. 36.

After the bankruptcy of defendant, plaintiff may sue out a ca. sa., and proceed under it to fix the bail; therefore where ca. sa. issued 1st of May, 1816, returned non est inventus on the 19th; on the 22d, sci. fa. against the bail, and nihil returned; on the 14th June alias sci. fa., returnable 30th, and nihil returned; on the 3d July rule given for bail to appear; and on 9th judgment for default of appearance; on 23d of February, 1816, commission of bankrupt issued against defendant, declared bankrupt on the 11th of March, who surrendered to commission 28th and 29th March, and on the 27th April had further time allowed to finish his examination till 28th May:—Held, that the proceedings against the bail were regular, notwithstanding the bankruptcy of defendant, and proceedings under it; for the issuing of the ca. sa. was good notice to the bail, who are not restrained by the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5, which frees the bankrupt from arrest by any of his creditors during the time of his examination. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 231.

To sci. fa. against bail upon their recognizance, it is competent to the defendant to plead in bar against the issuing of execution, that, before the issuing of the alias writ of sci. fa. the plaintiff became bankrupt, and a commission issued against him, on which he was declared a bankrupt before the return of the writ, and his effects, debts, &c., assigned to the provisional assignee, who before plea pleaded assigned to the assignee under the commission, who was entitled to sue the defendants, &c. Kinnear v. Tarrant, 15 East, 622; 1 Rose, 350.

Bail being fixed with the debt, and having paid it, sue the principal and obtain judgment, after a commission of bankruptcy has issued against him, but before he has obtained his certificate: after he obtains it, the bail in the second action apply to be exonerated, on the ground that the plaintiffs, the bail in the original action, might prove their debt under the commission, by virtue of stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. The court refused to interfere summarily, but left the bail to their writ of audita querela. Hewes v. Mott, and Dalby v. Mott, 2 Marsh. 37; 6 Taunt. 329; 2 Rose, 455.

If a plaintiff, after judgment obtained, prove his debt, under a commission of bankrupt, sued out against the defendant, and also proceed against the bail, the bail are thereby entitled to their discharge, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14; and the court will discharge them on motion. Linging v. Comyn, 2 Taunt. 246; 1 Rose, 116.

At what time Certificate obtained.—Bail for a bankrupt, who obtains his certificate pending the action, shall be discharged, if the certificate be prior to their being fixed; otherwise they remain liable. Welley v. Cobbe, 1 Burr. 244; 1 Ld. Ken. 504.

The bail are entitled to be discharged, upon their bankrupt principal's obtaining his certificate, before the time allowed to them by the indulgence of the court for rendering their principal, is out; i. e. before the appearance day of the last scire facias. Mannin v. Partridge, 14 East, 599; S. P. Thackrey v. Turner, 1 Moore, 457; 8 Taunt. 28.

Bail may apply to enter an exoneretur, if the principal has become bankrupt at any time before they are actually fixed; and where the first scire facias did not issue until six days after the bankruptcy of the bail, the court set aside the proceedings which had issued against them, but with costs to be paid by them. Moorby v. Gadge, 2 Chit. 104.

Where the principal became bankrupt, and on the same day that he obtained his certificate, but before the rising of the court, the bail were fixed on scire facias:—Held, that the bail had till the rising of the court on that day, before they could be actually fixed; and on payment of costs the court ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece. Johanson v. Linsey, 2 D. & R. 385; 1 B. & C. 247.

Proceedings stayed in an action against bail, who had neglected to render their principal, a certificated bankrupt; and an exoneretur ordered to be entered on the bail-piece, on payment of the costs of the action and of the application; although the recognizance had been entered into for his discharge out of custody after final judgment, and the certificate had not been allowed by the Lord Chancellor till after the time conditioned for making the render. Bottomley v. Medhurst, M'Clel. 399; 13 Price, 709. And see M'Clel. 310; 13 Price, 589.

If an action be commenced against a bankrupt after the commission, for work done before the bankruptcy, and the bankrupt afterwards obtain his certificate, the court will enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece. Willett v. Pringle, 2 N. R. 190.

The court of C. P. will not relieve the bail of a bankrupt, who are fixed between the signature of the bankrupt's certificate by his creditors and the commissioners, and the time of the allowance of the certificate by the Lord Chancellor. Stapleton v. Macbar, 7 Taunt. 589; S. P. Walker v. Gibley, 2 W. Black. 811.

Issue to try validity.—The court of C. P. will not exonerate the bail, upon the defendant having become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, without giving the plaintiff an opportunity of trying, by an issue, whether the certificate were fairly obtained. Woolcot v. Leicester, 6 Taunt. 75.

The court of C. P. will not order an exoneretur to be obtained on the bail-piece, on the ground of the defendant's having obtained his certificate in Ireland; but will direct an issue, in order to ascertain the circumstances under which the original debt was contracted. Bamfield v. Anderson, 5 Moore, 331.

The court will not order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, on the ground that the debt was contracted while the defendant was resident in a foreign country, and before he became a bankrupt by the laws of that country, though he may have obtained his certificate there. Pedder v. Macmaster, 8 T. R. 609.

Where the defendant in an action has become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, after which proceedings are taken against the bail; the court will, on motion, relieve them, and will not direct an issue to try the fact of the bankrupt's being a trader; the certificate by the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, ss. 7 & 13, being made sufficient evidence of the trading, &c. But no exoneretur having been entered on the bail-piece, such relief was granted only on payment of costs. Harmer v. Hagger, 1 B. & A. 332.

An execution levied against bail, after a certificate granted to principal, set aside with costs. Anon. Lofft, 651.

Where bail apply to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, if fraud is imputed to the bankrupt in obtaining the commission and certificate, and the trading be disputed, the court will direct an issue to try whether the commission duly issued. Willison v. Smith, 3 Dougl. 96.

Application.—An exoneretur was allowed by K. B. to be entered on motion of the bail of a bankrupt, where the certificate was not obtained till after the return-day of the ca. sa. Cleveland v. Dickenson, 1 Tidd's Prac. 290.

So, where a bankrupt is clearly entitled to his discharge, he need not be surrendered by his bail, as the court will, in the first instance, order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece. Martin v. O'Hara, Cowp. 823.

It is not necessary in the court of Exchequer, for the purpose of a motion to stay proceedings in an action against bail on the recognizance, on the ground of discharge by bankruptcy of the principal, that the party should be actually rendered into custody, before it can be entertained by the court. Bottomley v. Medhurst, 13 Price, 709; McClell, 399.

3. By Insolvency and Lunacy of Principal.

If a defendant be discharged under an insolvent debtor's act, the court will order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece. — v. Bruce, 2 Chit. 105.

But bail are not discharged by a commission of lunacy having issued against the principal. Anon. Loft, 617.

So, in another case, the court refused to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on the ground that the principal was a lunatic, and that the marshal had refused to receive him into his custody. Anderson's bail, 2 Chit. 104.

Even where the defendant became a lunatic after the commencement of the action. Ibbotson v. Galway (Lord), 6 T. R. 133.

4. By Principal becoming privileged.

Bail are discharged by the defendant becoming a member of the House of Commons. Langridge v. Flood, 1 Tidd's Prac. 293.

So, by his succeeding to a peerage. Trinder v. Shirley, 1 Dougl. 45.

An unprivileged person in custody in execution, elected a member of parliament, is entitled to his discharge on motion; and, therefore, bail may have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece, if the privileged person be elected between perfecting bail and final judgment. Phillips v. Wellesley, 1 Dowl. P. C. 9.

And this was allowed, although a cognovit had been given with the express consent of the bail; and the plaintiff, had he not taken the cognovit, might have compelled a render before the defendant acquired privilege. Id.

5. By Death of Principal.

If the principal die after the return of the ca. sa. and before the return is filed, the bail are fixed, and the court will not stay the filing of the return in favour of the bail. Rawlinson v. Gunston, 6 T. R. 284; S. P. Field v. Lodge, 3 Dougl. 410.

If a principal die after the return of the ca. sa., although his death happen before suing forth the first sci. fa., the bail are fixed in point of law, the sci. fa. being only an indulgence of the court. Filewood v. Popplewell, 2 Wils. 61, 65.

6. By Course of Proceeding.

(a) Delay.

Bail are discharged if the plaintiff do not declare in time, or obtain a rule for time to declare. Anon. 1 Chit. 281, n.

One of two defendants having been holden to bail in Trinity Term, the plaintiff proceeded to outlawry against the other, and delivered a declaration against the former on the first day of Easter Term, not having obtained a rule for time to declare; the court of C. P. held, that the cause was out of court, and the bail entitled to an exoneretur. Sykes v. Bauwens, 2 N. R. 404.

A plaintiff may proceed against the bail, although the original action is out of court, when it does not appear whether the bail-bond had been assigned. Collett v. Bland, 4 Taunt. 715.

(b) Taking Cognovit.

A cognovit by the principal, without notice to the bail, does not of itself discharge the bail. Hodgson v. Nugent, 5 T. R. 277.

Bail are not discharged by the plaintiff's taking a cognovit from the principal, unless time be thereby given. Stevenson v. Roche, 9 B. & C. 707; S. C. nom. Stevenson v. Crease, 4 M. & R. 561.

Where no part of the debt and costs is made payable at a time subsequent to the earliest day on which the execution might have been obtained. Id.

But if a plaintiff accept from the principal defendant a cognovit, whereby he gives him time for payment by instalments, he thereby discharges the bail, unless they are parties to the arrangement. Bowfield v. Tower, 4 Taunt. 456.

And if a plaintiff take a cognovit, payable by instalments, and postponing the payment of any instalment to a later date than the time when the plaintiff could, with diligence, have obtained judgment and execution, the bail are discharged. Croft v. Johnson, 5 Taunt. 319; 1 Marsh. 59.

Where a plaintiff, with the consent of the bail to the sheriff, took a cognovit with a stay of execution for a month:—Held, that although the bail continued liable, the debt not having been paid, yet the plaintiff could not take proceedings against them without giving them notice that the cognovit was unsatisfied. Clift v. Gye, 9 B. & C. 422.

The bail consented to the defendant's giving a cognovit on such terms as he could obtain from the plaintiff. A cognovit was then given in February to pay in May; default having been made in May, the defendant negotiated, but in vain, till June 13th. The bail having been proceeded against without any notice of this negotiation, the proceedings were set aside. Charleton v. Morris, 6 Bing. 427; 4 M. & P. 114.

Where the plaintiff had taken a cognovit from the defendant, with an agreement to receive the debt by long instalments, of which no notice was given to the bail; the court set aside an execution against the bail, sued out above a year after the judgment, without a scire facias to revive it; even though the agreement by the plaintiff, to take the debt by instalments, without the consent of the bail, would not have discharged them, as they could not, after that, have rendered their principal. Thomas v. Young, 15 East, 617.

The bail are discharged by the defendant's giving a cognovit for the payment of debt and costs. Farmer v. Thorley, 4 B. & A. 91. And see Rex v. Surrey (Sheriff), 1 Taunt. 159.

A warrant of attorney to pay by instalments discharges the sheriff. Brown v. Neave, Wightw. 121.

So, a cognovit conditioned for payment by instalments discharges the sheriff. Rex v. Surrey (Sheriff), 1 Taunt. 159.

(c) Part Levy in Execution.

A plaintiff may sue out a fi. fa. against the principal, and levy part of the debt, and afterwards sue out a ca. sa. as to the residue, and charge the bail. Stevenson v. Roche, 9 B. & C. 707: S. C. nom. Stevenson v. Crease, 4 M. & R. 561.

It is no ground for setting aside an execution which has been issued against bail, that the plaintiff has accepted a composition from the defendant, and suspended the execution of a ca. sa. which had been issued against him, though it were without the knowledge or consent of the bail. Brickwood v. Annis, 1 Marsh. 250; 5 Taunt. 614.

The plaintiffs sued out a ca. sa. against a principal, who having put in bail, became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; they afterwards agreed to accept a composition, provided all his creditors would accept the same, of which the bail had no notice;—Held, that the ca. sa. against the principal must be set aside, and that as the bail had not applied to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, until after execution had been levied on them, they could only be relieved on payment of costs. Thackrey v. Turner, 1 Moore, 457; 8 Taunt. 28; S. P. Mannin v. Partridge, 14 East, 599.

(d) Arrangement with Principal.

Where a plaintiff receives bills of exchange from a defendant with an agreement that he shall not be precluded from proceeding while the bills are running, the bail are not thereby discharged. Melville v. Glendinning, 7 Taunt. 126.

Where the plaintiff, after final judgment, took bills, payable at a future day, in satisfaction of the debt, the court of C. P. discharged the bail, on payment of costs, though the application was not made till the fourth term after judgment signed. Willison v. Whitaker, 2 Marsh. 383; 7 Taunt. 53.

Where the principal offered to render in discharge of his bail, and an agreement was afterwards entered into between his attorneys and the plaintiff's agent, that the render should be dispensed with for six weeks, on the terms of the bail continuing liable, which agreement they were ignorant of at the time, as well as that their principal had offered to render; but they afterwards consented to their liability continuing, on the terms mentioned in the agreement; and the principal in the mean time became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; and the plaintiff afterwards proceeded against the bail without notice:

—Held, that they were discharged, on the ground that their liability under their recognizance, ceased by time having been given to their principal to render without their consent or authority in the first instance, and that it could not be revived by their subsequent ratification of such agreement to continue liable, as they had not been informed that their principal had previously offered to render himself in their discharge. West v. Ashdown, 7 Moore 566; 1 Bing. 164. And see Brickwood v. Annis, 1 Marsh. 250; 5 Taunt. 614.

A mere honorary obligation on the part of a plaintiff not to press a defendant for payment of debt and costs, is not such an indulgence to him as will relieve his bail. Ladbroke v. Hewett, 1 Dowl. P. C. 488.

If a plaintiff by an agreement with a defendant expedites his remedy against him, the bail are not thereby released. Id.

Where, in the course of a cause, an order was made for taxing the bill on which the action was brought, and which by mistake was drawn up as a stay of proceedings:—Held, that the bail could not avail themselves of that order, as a giving of time, so as to discharge them. Woosman v. Wood, 1 Dowl. P. C. 681.

7. By other Means.

A plaintiff having obtained bail to his action, sued in equity for the same cause, and being put to his election by the court of equity, elected to proceed there, and a perpetual injunction went not to proceed at law:—Held, that this was no ground for discharging the bail. Horsley v. Walstab, 7 Taunt. 235; 2 Marsh. 548.

The court permitted an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece, the defendant being under sentence of transportation for a felony. Wood v. Mitchell, 6 T. R. 247.

The defendant, a seaman, being out upon bail, on process for a debt under 20*l.* was impressed into the king's service, and as he would have been entitled to his discharge, if in custody, by virtue of the stat. 32 Geo. 3, c. 33, s. 22, the court, on application of the bail, ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail-piece in the first instance. Robertson v. Patterson, 7 East, 405; 3 Smith, 556.

The defendant being in custody of a messenger, under an order of the secretary of state, for the purpose of being sent out of the kingdom by virtue of the Alien Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 155, the court refused, while he was still in the kingdom, and might possibly be set at large again, to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece. Folkein v. Critico, 13 East, 457.

If a defendant, an alien, be sent out of the kingdom under the Alien Act, 33 Geo. 3, c. 4, the court will permit the bail to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, unless they are indemnified, or have money in their hands belonging to the defendant, sufficient to answer the plaintiff's demand. Merrick v. Vaucher, 6 T. R. 50: S. P. Coles v. De Hayne, 6 T. R. 246.

Where one of the king's yeomen of the guard had been arrested in the Palace Court, and was there refused to be discharged on filing common bail, and he afterwards removed the cause into the court of K. B. by a writ of habeas corpus cum causa, and put in and perfected bail upon the habeas:—Held, that the bail could not be exonerated, although the defendant might be privileged from arrest. Sard v. Forrest, 2 D. & R. 250; 1 B. & C. 139.

Where the court, on motion, allowed the plaintiff to amend the roll, by inserting a continuance to take the case out of the statute of limitations, it was held that such proceeding did not entitle the bail to be exonerated, although they had become bail, and had omitted to render the plaintiffs, in reliance on the defence under the statute. Taylor v. Gregory, 2 B. & Adol. 257.

8. Application for Discharge.

Bail excepted to, but not struck off the bail-piece, may apply for an exoneretur. Humphry v. Leite, 4 Burr. 2107.

In order to exonerate bail excepted to, his name must be struck out of the bail-piece. Fulke v. Bourke, 1 W. Black. 462.

After bail put in and justified, and demand of plea with time allowed for pleading, it is too late to move to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on the ground that the plaintiff has not declared on the cause of action which he swore to in his affidavit. Knight v. Dorsey, 1 B. & B. 48. And see Sard v. Forrest, 2 D. & R. 250; 1 B. and C. 139.

XX. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST BAIL.

I. Ca. Sa. against Principal.

Ca. Sa. lodged.—A ca. sa. to fix bail must, in London and Middlesex, be entered four clear days in the public book at the sheriff's office. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Dowl. P. C. 193; 8 Bing. 299; 1 M. & Scott, 426; 3 B. & Adol. 385; 2 C. & J. 189; 2 Tyr. 347; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

Before the rule, it was necessary in K. B. that the ca. sa. must be entered in the public book at the sheriff's office, kept there for that purpose. Hutton v. Reuben, 5 M. and S. 323; S. C. 2 Chit. 102.

But the entry was not necessary in the Exchequer: where a ca. sa. was properly indorsed and lodged, and remained the full time on the file of the sheriff of Middlesex's office, but there was no entry in the public book, except of the day of its return, the court of Exchequer refused to set aside the proceedings against the bail, no inquiry having been made at the office on their part during the four days preceding the return, and it being sworn (although not by any person in the office) that, if inquiry had been made, verbal information would have been given that the writ was lodged. Smith v. Parker, M'Clel. & Y. 483.

In order to charge the bail, a ca. sa. against the original defendant must be in the sheriff's office four days before the return-day, exclusive of the day when it is lodged, and of the return day; and an intervening Sunday is not to be reckoned one of the four days. Furnell v. Smith, 7 B. & C. 693; S. P. Howard v. Smith, 1 B. & A. 528.

Scire facias on recognizance of bail. Plea, no ca. sa. duly issued, lodged, and returned. Replication, ca. sa. issued and returned non est inventus. Rejoinder, that the ca. sa. did not lie in the sheriff's office four days exclusive of the day it was lodged, the return-day, and an intervening Sunday:—Held, on demurrer, that the rejoinder was bad. Sandon v. Proctor, 7 B. and C. 800; S. P. Elliot v. Lane, 1 Wils. 334.

Where bail, sued in debt upon a recognizance, pleaded that no ca. sa. was duly sued, returned, and filed against the principal, according to the custom and practice of the court, which required that the writ should lie in the sheriff's office four days before its return:—Held, on demurrer, that this was a bad plea. Cherry v. Powell, 1 D. & R. 50.

The want of a ca. sa. is not an irregularity, but matter of substance, of which the bail can only take advantage by plea. Philpot v. Manuel, 5 D. & R. 615.

The defendant having put in and perfected bail, a ca. sa. was lodged and returned non est inventus, and proceedings being had against the bail, they rendered the principal in time: the defendant was then bailed again and discharged:—Held, that proceedings could not be had against the last bail without taking out a fresh ca. sa. Thackray v. Harris, 1 B. and A. 212.

A plaintiff will not be permitted, on motion in the court of Exchequer, to quash a writ of ca. sa. sued out by him and lodged with the sheriff for the purpose of fixing the defendant's bail in the usual course, on the return of non est inventus, where the defendant has voluntarily surrendered in discharge of his bail, before the return of the ca. sa., and afterwards become bankrupt; although the plaintiff undertook to enter an exoneretur on the bail-piece, and make an affidavit that it was never intended to take the defendant in execution upon the ca. sa. Stott v. Smith, 8 Price, 512.

Quære, how far the practice of making such formal return of non est inventus is sustainable; or whether it is not an abuse of process? Id.

Teste and return of Ca. Sa.—Before the Uniformity of Process Act, in actions commenced by bill, a ca. sa. to fix bail must have had eight days between the teste and return; and in actions commenced by original, fifteen. Reg. Gen. K. B. C. P. and Excheq., H. T. 2 Will. 4.

The court of C. P. would set aside proceedings against bail, if the ca. sa. were tested of a term prior to that in which judgment was signed against the principal. Gawler v. Jolley, 1 H. Black. 74.

A capias ad respondum against the bail was tested of a day prior to the return of the ca. sa. against the principal, but was not sued out till afterwards:—Held, regular. Pisero v. Wright, 2 B. & P. 235.

If a defendant consents that a plaintiff shall have judgment as of a term previous to the trial, in proceeding against bail, the ca. sa. may be tested as of that previous term. Hovenden v. Crawther, 1 Dowl. P. C. 170.

If the principal be actually in the custody of the sheriff, at the time when the latter, at the instance of the plaintiff, returns non est inventus to a ca. sa., the court of C. P. will set aside such return, together with all subsequent proceedings, against the bail, and order the money levied under an execution to be returned to them. Forstyth v. Marriott, 1 N. R. 251.

A return of non est inventus, procured by the plaintiff against the principal, in order to found proceedings against the bail, is irregular, if the principal were at the same time in custody of the same sheriff who made the return, though at the suit of another person; and the subsequent proceedings against the bail will be set aside. Burks v. Maine, 16 East, 2.

So where the principal was in the custody of the sheriff upon a criminal charge, and the plaintiff knew that he was in such custody at the time of the return. Ward v. Brumfit, 2 M. & S. 238.

Where judgment was signed against the principal without a rule for judgment, and the plaintiff proceeded to execution against the bail, after procuring a return of non est inventus to a ca. sa. against the principal, and a return of two nibils to two writs of sci. fa. against the bail; the court, upon application of the bail, together with the principal, held, that they were entitled to be relieved from such judgment against the principal, and its consequences against them, upon an affidavit by them, that they had no notice of such judgment till the writ of ca. sa. issued against the bail, when they applied to vacate the proceedings. But the court held, that they could not set aside the writ of ca. sa. against the bail, on account of such irregularity of the judgment against the principal, while such judgment remained in force. Hayward v. Ribbans, 4 East, 310.

A return of non est inventus to a ca. sa. for the purpose of proceeding against the bail will be good, although the plaintiff knew where to find the defendant, unless he be already in the custody of the sheriff, on either civil process or a criminal charge. Sillitoe v. Wallace, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1147.

2. By Action.

Where a recognizance of bail in C. P. is put in suit in the Exchequer, the plaintiff cannot have any advantage which he would not have had by the rules of C. P. Viacent v. Brady, 1 Anst. 47.

A declaration in debt on a recognizance against bail, must set out for whom the defendant was bail, and in what sum. Park v. Yestary, 1 Wils. 264.

In an action on a recognizance of bail taken at Durham, the venue was laid in Middlesex, and it was averred in the record, that the defendant, of Durham, came before G. L., then and there being a commissioner, duly appointed to take recognizances for the county of Durham, and then and there became bail before the said commissioner:—Held, that this was a sufficient averment, that the commissioner was duly appointed to take the recognizance in the county of Durham, and that the venue was properly laid in Middlesex, because the recognizance was filed and must ultimately be returned there. Hartley v. Hodson, 2 Moore, 66; 8 Taunt. 171. And see 1 Moore, 514, 430.

A plea to an action on a recognizance of bail, that after, &c. the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the principal in the bail-bond, without the privity of the bail, to take from the principal goods to secure the payment of part of the money recovered, and that such goods were consigned to them accordingly:—Held, bad on special demurrer, because such agreement, by parol, with a person not a party to the cause, cannot be pleaded in bar of such an action, arising on matter of record. Bulteel v. Jarrold, 8 Price, 467.

Bail cannot be taken in execution in the court of C. P. on a judgment on their recognizance: therefore, where the sheriff, having taken them on a ca. sa. and discharged them, was sued for an escape, the court set aside the ca. sa. Wooden v. Mozon, 2 Marsh. 186; 6 Taunt. 490.

Bail cannot be taken on a ca. sa. in C. P.; see in K. B. Anon. 1 Chit. 191.

In C. P. no ca. sa. lies on a judgment on a sci. fa. against bail; but it is otherwise in the court of K. B. Troughton v. Clarke, 2 Taunt. 113. And see Bayly v. Titmass, 2 Taunt. 114, n.

3. By Scire Facias.

(a) Sci. Fa. lodged.

A sci. fa. should lie four clear juridical days in the sheriff's office. Fraser v. Miller, 1 Dowl. P. C. 141.

As well where scire feci is returned as nihil. Williams v. Mason, 1 East. 89, n.

In all proceedings by sci. fa. Sunday is not to be reckoned. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 142.

A second writ of sci. fa. against bail not having lain in the sheriff's office four whole days, exclusive of the day on which it was lodged, the return-day, and an intervening Sunday, it was held to be irregular. Dicas v. Perry, 2 D. & R. 869.

Holy Thursday is not a juridical day, although the office be open upon paying an extra fee. Scott v. Larkins, 7 Bing. 109; 4 M. & P. 748; 1 Dowl. P. C. 201.

The days must be exclusive of the day on which it was lodged and the return-day of the ca. sa. Dicas v. Perry, 2 D. & R. 869; S. P. Howard v. Smith, 1 B. & A. 528.

So must an alias sci. fa. Wilson v. Farr 4 B. & A. 537. And see Combe v. Cuttill, 3 Bing. 162; 10 Moore, 534.

A sci. fa. must lie in the sheriff's office the last four days before the return. Forty v. Hermer, 4 T. R. 583.

For the purpose of fixing the bail on sci. fa., the ca. sa. against the principal must lie the four last days in the office before the return; and the bail having once been prepared to render their principal in time, which they then omitted to do, in consequence of a rule nisi taken out by them on the suggestion of the court, with a view to an arrangement out of court between the parties (the principal being a lunatic), which rule was afterwards discharged without providing for the bail to be placed in the same situation that they were in before; the court, in a subsequent term, permitted the bail to take the same objection to the regularity of the proceedings, though they had before in the same term, before they were aware of this objection, brought forward another objection, which was over-ruled. Cock v. Brockhurst, 13 East, 588.

If the second writ of sci. fa. be in proper time on the file in the sheriff's office, that is sufficient to warrant proceedings against the bail, though it were not entered in the sci. fa. book in the sheriff's office, which is merely a private book for his own convenience. Heyward v. Rennard, 3 East, 570.

(b) Form of Sci. Fa.

There must be fifteen days between the return of the first sci. fa. and the return of the second. Peale v. Watson, 2 W. Black. 932.

In C. P. provided there be fifteen days between the teste of the first and the return of the second, a second writ of sci. fa. may be tested and issued before the quarto die post of the return of the first. Combe v. Cuttill, 3 Bing. 162; 10 Moore, 534.

Sunday may be reckoned as a day in one of the four days which must elapse between the return of the second writ and signing judgment. Id.

Unless it be the last. Id.

Where there is only one sci. fa. against bail, and the proceedings are by bill, there need be only four days exclusive, between the teste and return of it. Bell v. Jackson, 4 T. R. 663.

A sci. fa. against bail may be sued out after a ca. sa. is returned, though not regularly filed; and the shortness of notice to the bail is immaterial. Hunt v. Cox, 1 W. Black. 393; 3 Burr. 1360.

The plaintiff may sue out a sci. fa. against the bail, on the return-day of the ca. sa. against the principal. Shivers v. Brooks, 8 T. R. 628.

A sci. fa. against bail upon a writ of error on a judgment in the C. P. for damages, must be to shew cause why the plaintiff should not have execution of "the debt aforesaid," and not of the "damages aforesaid." Barlow v. Evans, 1 Wils. 99.

(c) Necessity for Summons.

No judgment shall be signed for non-appearance, unless the defendant has been summoned; but such judgment may be signed by leave after eight days from the return of one sci. fa. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch. H. T., 2 Wil. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 193; 8 Bing. 300; 1 M. & Scott, 426; 3 B. & Adol. 385; 2 C. & J. 190; 2 Tyr. 348; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

The rule applies to the case of both principal and bail. Jackson v. Elam, 1 Dowl. P. C. 515.

Though two writs of sci. fa. on a judgment had been issued previously to the rule of Hil. 2 Will. 4, which requires notice to be given to the bail, still judgment cannot be signed on such writs of sci. fa. without complying with that rule, and giving a rule for appearance is not sufficient, Kennedy v. Oxford (Lord), 1 Dowl. P. C. 613.

The court will not allow judgment to be signed for non-appearance to a sci. fa. against bail, unless it be shewn that the bail have been summoned, or that efforts, and what efforts, have been made to summon them. Higgins v. Wilkes, 1 Dowl. P. C. 447.

The plaintiff's attorney left two writs of sci. fa. at the sheriff's office, and directed that they should be returned nihil, at the same time expressing apprehension lest the proceedings should come to the knowledge of the bail; the court, at the instance of the bail, ordered the proceedings to be set aside. Wilson v. Biden, 4 M. & P. 537.

Some notice must previously have been given of suing out a sci. fa. against bail. Wright v. Page, 2 W. Black. 837; 2 Tidd's Prac. 1178.

It was not necessary to give direct notice of a sci. fa. to the bail, it being their duty to watch the sheriff's office where it is lodged. Id.

The court set aside proceedings in scire facias against bail, because they were summoned only an hour after the court rose on the return-day; the sheriff's return of scire faci does not estop the bail from shewing that they were summoned so late on the return-day that they could not bring in their principal before the rising of the court. Webb v. Harvey, 2 T. R. 757; S. P. Peel v. Wills, 2 T. R. 758, n.

But it was sufficient to fix the bail if they were summoned before the rising of the court on the return-day. Clarke v. Bradshaw, 1 East, 86.

Where an action was commenced in June, 1822, and after the defendant became bankrupt, the plaintiff proceeded and signed interlocutory judgment, and issued a ca. sa. in Michaelmas term, 1823, to which non est inventus was returned, on which the plaintiff proceeded by sci. fa. against the bail, and signed judgment thereon on the 26th February, 1824: the court refused to set aside the proceedings against the bail, even upon payment of costs, although it was sworn that they knew nothing of the proceedings after the declaration against the principal, or against themselves, until they received notice on the 27th February that they were fixed. Stearns v. Bland, 4 D. & R. 373.

Where two writs of sci. fa. had been sued out against the defendant on a recognizance of bail, and to which two nihil were returned, on which judgment was signed and execution issued, the court refused to set aside such judgment and execution, on the ground that the bail had no notice of the sci. fa. having issued, although they lived in the county of Middlesex; as by their entering into a recognizance they made themselves personally liable; and it was their duty to watch the proceedings in the sheriff's office. Smith v. Crane, 8 Moore, 8.

(d) Appearance.

A notice in writing to the plaintiff, his attorney, or agent, is a sufficient appearance by bail on a sci. fa. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T., 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 193; 8 Bing. 300; 1 M. & Scott, 426; 3 B. & Adol. 385; 2 C. & J. 190; 2 Tyr. 348; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

On a four-day rule, for bail in sci. fa. to appear and plead in term, Sunday, though an intermediate day, is not to be reckoned. Wathen v. Beaumont, 11 East, 271.

Where a rule to plead to an alias sci. fa. was given for the 3d instead of the 8th February, but judgment was not signed against the bail until the 9th, the court of Exchequer, considering it as a clerical error, refused to set aside the proceedings. Diss. Hullock. Smith v. Parker, McCl. & Y. 483.

(e) Pleadings.

Venue.—A scire facias, upon a recognizance taken in Serjeant's Inn, or before a commissioner in the country, and recorded at Westminster, shall be brought in Middlesex only; and the form of the recognizance shall not express where it was taken Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T., 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 193; 8 Bing. 300; 1 M. & Scott, 426; 3 B. & Adol. 385; 2 C. & J. 190; 2 Tyr. 348; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

A scire facias upon a recognizance of bail taken in open court in K. B., is properly suable in Middlesex, where the record is, though all the previous proceedings, which commenced by original, were in London. And semble, that it could not be sued elsewhere than in Middlesex. Coxeter v. Burke, 5 East, 461.

A sci. fa. on a recognizance of bail in London may be there sued, though the bail be inrolled in Middlesex. Kenny v. Thornton, 2 W. Black. 768.

Where the defendant was sued by original in London, the sci. fa. against the bail must be sued there also; and it does not help the plaintiff who sued out the sci. fa. in Middlesex, that the bail had by mistake been put in there. Harris v. Calvert, 1 East, 603. And see Smith v. Miller, 7 T. R. 96.

Declaration.—Where a plaintiff issued a joint sci. fa. against A. and B., bail of C. and D., upon which A. only was summoned, B. not being found, and A. entered an appearance for himself only:—Held, that a declaration against him alone was irregular. Sainsbury v. Pringle, 10 B. & C. 751.

In declaring in sci. fa. on a recognizance of bail, taken in an action by original, there is no incongruity in stating that the recognizance was taken in an action "then lately commenced and depending in the court of K. B.;" for the action may be said to commence in that court when its jurisdiction attaches upon the original writ sued out of Chancery. Mayo v. Rogers, 14 East, 539.

Sci. fa. to have execution for damages and costs recovered against J. B. upon a recognizance of bail, conditioned in case the said J. B. and G. K. should be condemned that J. B. and G. K. should pay, &c. or render themselves, the plaintiffs allege that J. B. and G. K. have not paid, &c. or rendered themselves, according to the form and effect of the recognizance:—Held, on special demurrer, that the breach was ill assigned for non constat, but that J. B. who was condemned, has paid or rendered. William v. Thorley, 4 M. & S. 33.

Pleas, &c.—The bail cannot take advantage of a mere irregularity in the scire facias by pleading. Powell v. Taylor, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1182.

The practice of the court is pleadable where the very merits of the case depend upon it: therefore, where bail sued in scire facias upon their recognizance, pleaded that no ca. sa. was duly sued, returned, and filed against the principal, according to the custom and practice of the court; to which the plaintiff in reply shewed a writ of ca. sa. issued into Middlesex: it is no departure for the defendants to rejoin, that the venue in the action against the principal was in London, for that sustains the plea. Dudlow v. Watchorn, 16 East, 39.

It is a departure where in sci. fa. against bail who pleaded that there was no ca. sa. against the principal, they rejoined to a replication that there was, that it did not lie four days in the sheriff's office. Elliott v. Lane, 1 Wils. 334.

And such a rejoinder is bad, for attempting to put in issue mere practice. Sandon v. Proctor, 7 B. & C. 800. And see Cherry v. Powell, 1 D. & R. 50.

A writ of error allowed, though not returned, is in itself a supersedeas; and may be pleaded by the bail to have been issued and allowed after the issuing and before the return of the ca. sa. against the principal, so as to avoid proceedings against them in scire facias upon the recognizance of bail, prosecuted after a return by the sheriff of non est inventus made pending such writ of error. Sampson v. Brown, 2 East, 439.

A plea of the bankruptcy and certificate of the principal is bad, to a sci. fa. on a recognizance. Beddome v. Holbrooke, 1 B. & P. 450, n.: S. P. Donnelly v. Dunn, 2 B. & P. 45.

If they can plead it at all, the plea must state the special circumstances, or it will be bad on special demurrer. Donnelly v. Dunn, 1 B. & P. 448.

To scire facias against bail upon their recognizance, the defendant may plead in bar against the execution, that, before the issuing of the alias writ of scire facias, the plaintiff became a bankrupt, and a commission issued against him, on which he was declared a bankrupt before the return of the writ, and his effects, debts, &c., assigned to the provisional assignee, who before plea pleaded, assigned to the assignee under the commission, who was entitled to sue the defendants. Kiamear v. Tarrant, 15 East, 622; 1 Rose, 350.

To a plea of scire facias against bail, that the principal died before the return of any ca. sa., a replication stating a particular ca. sa., and that the principal was alive at the return of that ca. sa., must conclude with an averment. Henderson v. Withy, 2 T. R. 576.

In a former case, held, that it ought to conclude to the court. Chandler v. Roberts, 1 Dougl. 58.

A replication to a plea of the death of the principal before the issuing of the first sci. fa., and before the return of any ca. sa., in a recognizance of bail which sets out a ca. sa. and return, must aver that the principal was then living, and conclude with a prayer of judgment, and not traverse the death and conclude to the country. Filwood v. Popplewell, 2 Wils. 65.

In an action on a recognizance of bail, where the defendant pleads no ca. sa. issued, a replication setting out the ca. sa., and concluding with a verification by the record, and a prayer that the record may be inspected by the court, is good, though no formal issue be joined. Jackson v. Wickes, 2 Marsh. 354; 7 Taunt. 30.

Though the original action was for damages, it is not demurrable in a replication in sci. fa. against bail, to pray judgment of debt and damages. Roe v. Roe, 2 Chit. 322.

4. Staying Proceedings.

(a) On ground of Writ of Error.

To entitle bail to a stay of proceedings pending a writ of error; the application must be made before the time to surrender is out. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 194; 8 Bing. 300; 1 M. & Scott, 427; 3 B. & Adol. 386; 2 C. & J. 196; 2 Tyr. 348; 4 Bligh, N. S. 602.

A writ of error allowed is a supersedeas in law to all further proceedings in the court below; and, therefore, proceedings were set aside, with costs, for irregularity, where the ca. sa. (being returnable on a day after the allowance of the writ of error) was returned, after notice of such allowance, on the same day; and sci. fa. afterwards taken out against the bail. Miller v. Newbald, 1 East, 662; S. P. Sampson v. Brown, 2 Esp. 439.

Where a ca. sa. is returnable against the principal on a particular day, before which a writ of error is allowed and served; that operates as a supersedeas to any proceedings against the bail, though the ca. sa. has lain four days in the office before the allowance of the writ of error. Perry v. Campbell, 3 T. R. 390.

A writ of error is allowed two days after the return of the ca. sa., the bail may be sued pending the writ of error, which is no supersedeas. French v. Casenove, 1 Anst. 176.

Where a writ of error is allowed before the expiration of the time permitted to the bail to render their principal, the bail are entitled to stay the proceedings against them pending the writ of error, on the terms of undertaking to pay the damages recovered, or to surrender the defendant within four days of the determination of the writ, if determined in favour of the original plaintiff. Sprang v. Monprivatt, 11 East, 316.

The court will stay proceedings against bail, until a writ of error brought in the original action be determined, though the application be not made within the four days allowed to the bail to surrender the principal. Edwards v. Jameson, and Edwards v. McCabe, Forrest, 25.

Upon a writ of error, sued out by the principal after the bail are fixed, and proceedings against them in scire facias, the court will only stay proceedings against the bail pending the writ of error, on the terms of the bail undertaking to pay the condemnation money, and the costs of the scire facias, and (if it be a case in which there is no bail in error) to pay the costs also of the writ of error, if judgment should be affirmed. Buchanan v. Alders, 3 East, 546; S. P. Capous v. Blyton, 1 N. R. 67.

If proceedings against bail are stayed, upon undertaking to pay debt and costs within four days after affirmance of judgment, it means the final affirmance of it. Kershaw v. Cartwright, 5 Burr. 2819.

The court will not stay proceedings against the bail, pending a writ of error on the judgment against the principal, if the principal has confessed that the writ of error is brought purely for delay. Pool v. Charnock, 3 T. R. 79.

(b) Other Cases.

The judgment in an original action, and the judgments in the actions against the bail, may be set aside upon one motion, and one affidavit intituled in the original action. Winder v. Wood, 3 B. & P. 118.

When a rule to set aside proceedings for irregularity, and to stay proceedings in the mean time is obtained, the proceedings are suspended for all purposes till the rule is discharged. Seayne v. Crammond, 4 T. R. 176.

Where bail is put in above, an injunction to stay proceedings against the principal extends to proceedings against the bail. Carte v. Carte, Amb. 32.

XXI. BAIL UPON REMOVAL FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

Upon removal of a cause by certiorari, out of the court of the honour of Gloucester, the pledges below are discharged by putting in and perfecting bail above. Taylor v. Shapland, 3 M. & S. 323.

Where one of several defendants removes a cause by certiorari from the Mayor's Court into K. B., he must put in bail for the other defendants as well as for himself. Keat v. Goldstein, 7 B. & C. 525; 1 M. & R. 305.

Or, a procedendo will be awarded. Id.

The cause cannot be removed into the King's Bench, without bail being put in by both of the defendants. Jameton v. Schenswar, 1 Dowl. P. C. 175.

By the statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 6, a defendant taken or charged in custody at the suit of any person or means process, issuing out of the courts at Westminster, and detained after the return of process, may be bailed in vacation before one of the judges; but the act does not extend to a person in custody upon a habeas corpus removing the cause from the Mayor's Court into the K. B. Steer v. Smith, 1 Chit. 44.

Where a pone has issued for the purpose of removing a plaint out of the county court, and the sheriff has notwithstanding proceeded with the plaint, the defendant in order to obtain an attachment against the sheriff, must shew that the recognizance required by the 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 6, has been entered into. Grimshaw v. Emerson, 1 Dowl. P. C. 337.

Where the plaintiff in an inferior court of record, brought an action for goods sold and delivered to the amount of 8*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*, but laid his damages in the declaration at 20*l.*; and the defendant, after interlocutory judgment signed against him, removed the cause into the court of K. B. by habeas corpus cum causa, without entering into recognizance to pay the debt and costs, as required by the statute 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 6, the court refused a procedendo. Attenborough v. Hardy, 4 D. & R. 362; 2 B. & C. 802.

Where a defendant, in an action brought in an inferior court for defamation, after entering a common appearance, and suffering judgment by default, removed the proceedings, by certiorari, into the court of K. B., without entering into any recognizance:—Held, to be within stat. 51 Geo. 3, c. 124, s. 3; and the latter court awarded a procedendo for the defendant's default in not entering into the recognizance, as required by that statute, the damages in the declaration being laid only at 13*l.* Lee v. Goodlad, 4 D. & R. 350.

Procedendo awarded where an action of trover had been removed by certiorari from an inferior court and the return filed, the defendant not having entered into a recognizance to pay debt and costs as required by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 6. Furnish v. Swann, 10 B. & C. 458.

Plaintiff in an inferior court, from which a cause is removed by habeas corpus, and a rule for better bail given, is not entitled to a procedendo after render of the defendant, and notice of such render, although such render be made after the day on which the rule for better bail expires. Farquharson v. Fouchecour, 16 East, 387.

The plaintiff in an inferior court, from which a cause was removed by habeas corpus, and a rule for better bail given, was held not entitled to a procedendo after the render of the defendant, and notice thereof, although it was not made until after the day on which the rule for better bail had expired. Johnson v. Walker, 4 B. & A. 535.

Where the rule for better bail was served on the 14th of January, and the bail did not justify till the 19th of the same month:—Held, that the plaintiff's procedendo was regular. Davis v. Tuddenham, 1 Chit. 130.

If, after a procedendo to carry back a cause to an inferior court, the plaintiff recover, and then sue out a scire facias against the bail below, and they remove the proceeding against them into the court of K. B. by habeas corpus, this court will award a procedendo in the suit against the bail. Dixon v. Heslop, 6 T. R. 365.

Where the plaintiff intends to object to bail put in on a habeas corpus, he should obtain a rule or order for better bail, which will entitle him to a procedendo, unless bail are perfected in four days after the service of the rule, and thereupon the same or different bail must justify as in other cases within four days if in term, or if in vacation on the first day of the ensuing term. Anon. 1 Chit. 130, (a).

In a cause removed by habeas corpus from the Mayor's court, bail having been put in, the plaintiff served a rule for better bail, wrongly entitled A. v. B. instead of A. v. B. and C.; the defendant thereupon gave notice of justification of the same bail, and afterwards that he should add one and justify:—Held, this was a waiver of the irregularity, for it is not usual to give notice of justification without an exception, though it may be done, and therefore the notice of justification refers to and adopts the rule for better bail. Aldridge v. Schroder, 2 Smith, 75.

The time allowed for excepting to bail put in upon a habeas corpus shall be twenty days. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P. and Excheq., H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

A procedendo cannot issue after service of the rule for the allowance of bail, on the ground, that the plaintiff was called by a wrong name in the notice of bail; but the rule for such allowance should be first set aside. Rice v. Chambers, 1 Chit. 575.

A plaintiff declared in the City Court in debt, or a concessit solvere, and the cause being removed by habeas corpus into K. B. declared de novo in case:—Held, that he did not lose his bail, as it was the same cause of action. Gunn v. McHenry, 1 Wils. 277.

XXII. BAIL IN ERROR.

1. Statutes.

By 3 Jac. 1, c. 8, no execution shall be stayed or delayed upon or by any writ of error or super-sedeas thereupon to be issued, for the reversing of any judgment in any action of debt upon any single bond for debt, or upon any obligation with condition for the payment of money only, or upon any action of debt for rent, or upon any contract, unless the person in whose name the writ of error shall be brought, with two sufficient securities such as the court shall allow of, shall become bound to the party for whom the judgment shall be given, by recognizance in double the sum adjudged to be recovered, to prosecute the writ of error with effect; and also to satisfy and pay (if judgment shall be affirmed) all and singular the debts, damages, and costs adjudged upon the judgment, and all costs to be awarded for the delaying of execution.

The 13 Car. 2, stat. 2, c. 2, extends this to actions on the statute of Ed. 6, for not setting out tithes, of assumpsit for payment of money, of trover, covenant, detinue, and trespass.

The 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8, extends it to any action personal whatsoever, after verdict and judgment; and directs that, in ejectment and writs of dower, no execution shall be delayed by writ of error, unless the plaintiff shall be bound in such reasonable sum as the court to which the writ of error shall be directed shall think fit, with condition that if the judgment shall be affirmed, or the writ of error discontinued, or the plaintiff be nonsuit, he shall pay such costs and damages as shall be awarded.

The 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 3, requires two bail in error.

The 6 Geo. 4, c. 96, enacts that upon any judgment in any personal action, execution shall not be stayed or delayed by writ of error, or supersedeas thereon, without the special order of the court or some judge thereof, unless a recognizance with condition, according to 16 & 17 Car. 2, be first acknowledged in the same court—which extends also to judgments by default as well as on verdict.

2. When necessary.

Since 6 Geo. 4, c. 96.]—Bail in error, under the latter statute, are not dispensed with where the error, though real, is only of form. Wadsworth v. Gibson, 4 Bing. 572; 1 M. & P. 501.

A person, who is plaintiff both below and above, need not give bail in error. Duvergier v. Fellowes, 1 Dowl. P. C. 224; 5 M. & P. 403; 7 Bing. 463.

S. P. on 3 Jac. 1. Freeman v. Garden, 1 D. & R. 184.

Where, therefore, upon demurrer to a plea, judgment was given in C. P. for the defendant below, and the plaintiff brought a writ of error in the court of King's Bench, and the judgment of the court of C. P. was affirmed; after which he brought a writ of error to the House of Lords, upon which a recognizance of bail in error was entered into. The court ordered it to be cancelled, on an application by the bail, although it was sworn that the plaintiff was a foreigner and insolvent. Id.

In ejectment, where the defendant has given an undertaking to give the plaintiff judgment of the term preceding the trial, in case he shall obtain a verdict, and has also entered into the recognizance, with two sureties, to pay costs and damages, both of which are required by the 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 1, he cannot afterwards sue out a writ of error upon the judgment, so as to operate as a stay of proceedings, without entering into a further recognizance with two sureties, with condition pursuant to the provisions of the 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8, s. 3. Roe d. Durant v. Moore, 4 M. & P. 761; 7 Bing. 124.

Previously to 6 Geo. 4, c. 96.]—Under 3 Jac. 1, c. 1, no bail was necessary in error on a judgment in debt upon a prior judgment. Biddleston v. White, 3 Burr. 1545; 1 W. Black. 507.

Nor on a judgment in debt for goods sold and delivered, and on an account stated. Alexander v. Biss, 7 T. R. 449.

Nor on a judgment by default in debt, on a count for a promissory note. Trier v. Bridgman, 2 East, 359.

Nor generally, unless it appeared that the action was brought on a specific contract. Ablett v. Ellis, 1 B. & P. 249.

Nor in debt, upon a judgment recovered (by verdict) in Ireland, upon a judgment by default. Parkins v. Stewart (in error), 9 Price, 1.

A writ of error upon a judgment in debt on a recognizance of bail, was a stay of execution, without bail. Dell v. Wild, 8 East, 240.

But not in debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of money, and also for performing all covenants in a mortgage deed. Butler v. Brushfield, 10 East, 407.

Nor in debt on a bond conditioned for re-investing stock, and paying the dividends in the mean time. Gillingham v. Myers, M'Clel. & Y. 147.

But it was a debt on a bond given by a third person for payment of a sum certain by instalments. Chauvet v. Alfrey, 2 Burr. 746; S. C. nom. Chauvet v. Alfred, 2 Ld. Ken. 437.

And an indemnity bond was not a money bond for payment of money only, within the statute requiring bail. Flanagan v. Watkins, 2 D. & R. 549; 1 B. & C. 316. But see Thrale v. Vaughan, 1 Wils. 19; 2 Stra. 1190.

A mortgage deed containing a covenant for the re-payment of the money was within the statute, a contract upon which bail in error was necessary. Buckney v. Metham, 3 Taunt. 383.

Where a writ of error was brought upon a judgment on demurrer, in the case of a sci. fa. sued out pursuant to the statute 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 12, s. 8, bail in error was not required. Sparks v. O'Kelly, 1 Taunt. 168.

But in error on a judgment, after verdict upon a sci. fa. against bail, bail in error was required, the sci. fa. being a personal action. Pulney v. Townson, 2 W. Black. 1227.

It was doubtful whether special bail was requisite, upon error returnable in parliament, upon judgment in K. B. in debt upon recognizance in error. Trinder v. Watson, 3 Burr. 1566. And see Martin v. Justice, 8 T. R. 639.

Where there was one count on which judgment was entered up, for which bail in error was not required, it seemed sufficient to excuse the plaintiff in error from further bail. Trier v. Bridgman, 2 East, 359; S. P. Webb v. Geddes, 1 Taunt. 540.

Special bail was required upon reversing an outlawry. Sercole v. Hanson, 1 Wils. 3; 2 Stra. 1178. S. P. Cracraft v. Gledowe, 3 Burr. 1482.

But only where special bail was originally required. Campbell v. Daley, 3 Burr. 1920. And see Summervil v. Watkins, 14 East, 536.

The bail put in by defendant upon reversing an outlawry were bail in the original suit. Hesse v. Wood, 4 Taunt. 691.

Though a writ of error has been allowed, yet, if bail in error be not afterwards put in, it will be of no avail, though the defendant in error has treated the writ as a nullity. — v. Nicholls (Gent.), 2 Chit. 106.

Where writ of error is amended in K. B., new bail must be given to the amended writ in C. P., and the plaintiff below shall not take out execution for want of bail. Rafael v. Verelst, 2 W. Black. 1067.

3. Putting in.

(a) When.

A defendant has four clear days after final judgment to put in bail in error. Bennet v. Nichols, 4 T. R. 121.

The bail are to be put in within the four days, without reference to the time of the allowance, or serving the copy of it. Jacques v. Nixon, 1 T. R. 279.

The four days are to be reckoned from the time when the taxation of costs is completed by the insertion of the sum. Blackburn v. Kymer, 1 Marsh. 278; 5 Taunt. 672.

If the writ of error be allowed before judgment, the time for putting in bail (which is four days) runs from the judgment; if after judgment, from the time of the allowance. Gravall v. Stimpson, 1 B. & P. 478.

(b) What Amount.

Generally.—A recognizance of bail in error shall be taken in double the sum recovered, except in case of a penalty; and, in case of a penalty, in double the sum really due, and double the costs. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., & Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Bail in error must justify in double the sum for which judgment was entered up. Phillipson v. Browne, 2 Chit. 105.

But bail in error on a judgment in debt on a bond, need only justify in the sum recovered. Moore v. Lynch (in error), 1 Wils. 213.

If, on a bond debt, double the sum secured by the bond be the sum for which the bail bind themselves in the recognizance in error, it is sufficient; though a further sum be due for interest and costs, and nominal damages have been recovered. Dixon v. Dixon, 2 B. & P. 433.

A recognizance of bail in error for a less sum than double the sum recovered by the judgment, does not stay the execution. Reed v. Cooper, 5 Taunt. 320.

In Ejectment.—In ejectment, the recognizance of bail in error shall be taken in double the yearly value, and double the costs. Reg. Gen. K. B.

C. P., & Exchequer, H. T. 2 W. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 186; 8 Bing. 291; 1 M. & Scott, 418; 3 B. & Adol. 377; 2 C. & J. 175; 2 Tyr. 343; 4 Bligh, N. S. 596.

Though the stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2, provides that no execution in ejectment shall be stayed unless the plaintiff in the writ of error shall be bound for the costs in case judgment be affirmed, &c., yet by reasonable construction it is sufficient if he procure proper sureties to enter into the recognizance of bail; but these may be examined as to their sufficiency, which the plaintiff in error himself cannot be. The practice was to take the recognizance in double the improved rent, and the single costs of the ejectment. Keene d. Byron (Lord) v. Deardon, and Stott v. Lomax, 8 East, 298.

Bail in error on a judgment in ejectment justify in double the sum. Thomas v. Goodtitle, 4 Burr. 2501.

When the plaintiff sued out execution in ejectment, after error brought by the defendant, on the ground that although the latter had entered into a recognizance in compliance with the stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8, he had not given notice of the terms of such recognizance:—Held, that as those terms were such as had been invariably used, no notice was necessary, and the execution was set aside with costs. Doe d. Webb v. Goun-dry, 1 Moore, 118; 7 Taunt. 427. And see High-gate Archway Comp. v. Nash, 1 B. & A. 597; 2 Chit. 325.

The plaintiff in error in ejectment is not required to find bail to join in his recognizance to pay costs on affirmance. Id.

In ejectment it is sufficient if the plaintiff in error enter into a recognizance by himself without any bail. Anon. 2 Tidd's Prac. 1211.

(c) Character of Bail.

The same persons who were bail in the court of K. B. may justify again as bail upon a writ of error returnable in parliament. Martin v. Justice, 8 T. R. 639.

Where the plaintiff in error, within four days after being ruled to put in better bail, viz. on the day after Hilary Term, gave notice that he should justify the same bail on the first day of the ensuing term, and two days before the first day of that term gave notice of fresh bail:—Held, that the latter bail were not entitled to justify, there being no reason assigned for the non-attendance of the former bail. Lunn v. Leonard, 1 M. & S. 366.

If hired bail be put in on a writ of error, the plaintiff may issue execution. Browne v. Brown, 12 Moore, 172; 4 Bing. 38.

Sham bail in error may be treated as a nullity, and execution may issue. Bradley v. Gompertz, 1 M. & R. 567.

Where sham or hired bail, who are insolvent, and of whom notice has been given, and to whom no exception is entered, become bail in error, the plaintiff may treat the writ of error and the bail as nullities, and take out execution. Ward v. Levi, 2 D. & R. 421; 1 B. & C. 268.

As execution after bail is regular, and the court will discharge a rule for setting it aside with costs. Crum v. Kitchen, 1 B. & C. 269, n.

(d) Recognizance and Proceedings.

As to the form of the recognizance in error, see Heese v. Wood, 4 Taunt. 691; Hevelock v. Geddes, 12 East, 622; Matthews v. Gibson, 8 East, 527; and Graham v. Grill, 1 M. & S. 409.

A recognizance entered into by the bail in error without the principal is good. Dixon v. Dixon, 2 B. & P. 443.

The names of the plaintiff and defendant in the original action must be retained in the case of bail in error, until the transcript of the record is carried over to the court of error. Smith's bail, 3 M. & P. 242.

Money cannot be paid into court in lieu of bail in error, unless by consent. Collins v. Gwynne, 2 M. & Scott, 775.

4. Justification and Notice.

Where bail in error were regularly put in, and properly described in the notice, and were described as the bail "already put in" in the notice of justification:—Held sufficient, although it was objected that their names and additions should have been inserted in the notice of justification, as well as in the notice of their being put in. Richardson v. Mellish, 9 Moore, 579.

Bail in error were put in in the vacation, and excepted to, and the plaintiffs in error gave notice that they would justify on the first day of the next term; they did not so justify:—Held, that the bail were not entitled to have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece. Adnam v. Wilks, 6 B. & C. 237; 9 D. & R. 397.

If bail in error are excepted to in vacation, and the notice of exception require them to justify before a judge, the bail shall justify within four days from the time of such notice, otherwise on the first day of the ensuing term. Reg. Gen. K. B., C. P., and Exch., H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Dowl. P. C. 185; 8 Bing. 290; 1 M. & Scott, 417; 3 B. & Adol. 376; 2 C. & J. 172; 2 Tyr. 342; 4 Bligh, N. S. 595.

Where bail in error was put in in vacation, and excepted to, and the plaintiff in error gave notice that they would justify on the first day of next term, and before that day nonprossed his own writ of error, and the bail did not justify:—Held, that the bail were not entitled to stay proceedings in an action against them upon the recognizance, nor to have an exoneretur entered on the bail-piece. Dickenson v. Heseltine, 2 M. & S. 210.

Bail in error, who refuses to justify, may have his name struck out of the bail-piece at any time. Jones v. Tubb (in error), 1 Wils. 337.

Where, on opposing bail in error, one of them acknowledged that he did not know the plaintiff in error, and that he had become bail at the request of his attorney, who had told his son that if his father became bail, he should come to no harm; the court of C. P. ordered him to be rejected, and refused to allow further time for ap-other to justify in his stead. Capon v. Dillamore, 8 Moore, 516; 1 Bing. 423.

5. Changing, adding, and giving Time.

Bail in error cannot be changed. Anon. 2 Chit. 84.

Although it is a general rule not to grant time for adding and justifying bail in error, in lieu of those of whom notice of justification has already been given, yet, if the bail are prevented from coming up by any misconduct of the opposite party, time will be given to put in other bail. Dyott v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 9.

Time was refused to perfect bail in error, where no real error could be suggested, as the court thought it brought merely for delay. Handasyde v. Morgan, 2 Wils. 144.

Where the plaintiff in error was ruled in vacation to put in better bail, and took no notice of it until four days before the next term, when he gave notice of added bail for the first day of the term, the court would not permit the bail to justify. Ostreich v. Wilson, 1 M. & S. 367, n.

Where, in error, the original bail had been alarmed by the defendant in error, and therefore would not become bail; further time was refused to put in bail in error, unless some error on the record was shewn, and the amount of the judgment deposited with the master. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 32.

6. Liability of Bail in Error.

Bail in error cannot surrender the principal, but must pay the money if judgment be affirmed. Anon. Lofft, 237.

As bail in error cannot surrender the principal, they are not entitled to relief though the principal become a bankrupt pending the writ of error. Southgate v. Braithwaite, 1 T. R. 624.

They are not liable for interest, although the original action was on a promissory note. Anon. 6 Price, 338.

Nor are they chargeable in an action upon their recognizance with meane profits, where they have not been ascertained by writ of inquiry, pursuant to 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8. Doe v. Reynolds (in error), 1 M. & S. 247.

If a defendant (the plaintiff in the action), upon judgment being affirmed, take in execution the body of the plaintiff in error, for the debt, damages, and costs in error, he does not thereby discharge the bail in error, but may sue them on their recognizance. Perkins v. Pettit, 2 B. & P. 440.

Bail in error, who were excepted to and did not justify, were relieved from proceedings against them, though no other bail had been put in; but they were made to pay the costs up to that time, the plaintiff having been induced by former cases to proceed against them. Gould v. Holmstrom, 7 East, 580; 3 Smith, 575.

I. WAREHOUSEMEN.

A warehouseman is only bound to take reasonable and common care of any commodity entrusted to his charge. Cailiff v. Danvers, Peake, 114—Kenyon.

His liability commences from the time the crane is applied to raise them into the warehouse; and it is no defence that they were injured by falling into the street, from the breaking of tackle, the carman who brought the goods having refused the offer of slings for further security. Thomas v. Day, 4 Esp. 262—Ellenb.

A warehouseman receiving goods from a consignee who has had actual possession of them, to be kept for his use, may nevertheless refuse to redeliver them, if they are the property of another. Ogle v. Atkinson, 5 Taunt. 759; 1 Marsh. 323.

Where an order is given previously to the delivery of goods to a bailee, carrier, or other person, to deal with them, when delivered, in a particular manner, to which he assents, and afterwards the goods are delivered to him accordingly; a duty arises on his part, on the receipt of the goods, to deal with them according to the order previously given and assented to; and the law infers an implied promise by him to perform such duty. Streeter v. Horlock, 1 Bing. 34.

Where A. hired a room in the house of B. at 2s. per week, for the purpose of depositing goods for safety, and kept the key of a padlock by which the room door was fastened, and the goods were stolen by one of B.'s family:—Held, that B. could not be sued as bailee for the value of the goods stolen. Peers v. Sampson, 4 D. & R. 636.

A warehouseman, who, on receiving an order from the seller of malt to hold it on account of the purchaser, gives a written acknowledgment that he so holds it, cannot set up a defence for not delivering it to the purchaser, that by the usage of trade the property in malt sold is not transferred till it is remeasured, and that before the malt in question was remeasured the seller became bankrupt. Stonard v. Dunkin, 2 Camp. 344—Ellenborough.

II. HIRERS OF PROPERTY.

1. Generally.

The hirer of goods—as in the case of musical instruments hired to be used at the Opera House—is not answerable for a loss by fire. Longman v. Calini, Abb. Ship. 270, n.—Kenyon.

The hirer of a carriage by the year, under a written agreement, binding the carriage-maker “to keep the same in perfect repair without any further charges whatever,” is not liable for repairs made necessary by accident, and not by the wilful default of the hirer. Reading v. Menham, 1 M. & Rob. 234—Denman.

Where a carriage is hired for a certain time, and sent back before the expiration of it, if the party of whom it was hired sell it within the time, he cannot recover his charge for the hire. Wright v. Melville, 3 C. & P. 542—Best.

III. OTHER BAILEES.

1. Generally.

The bailee of goods to be kept for hire is bound to take the same care of them as he would of his own; but if they are stolen by his servants he is not liable, without gross negligence on his part. Finucane v. Small, 1 Esp. 315—Kenyon.

A watchmaker is bound so to secure property placed in his hands in the way of his trade, as to protect it against depredations that may be committed by the persons in his employ. Therefore, where A. entrusted B. (who was a chronometer maker) with a chronometer to be repaired, and B. suffered his servant to sleep in the shop in which the chronometer was deposited; B. was held liable to A. for its value, B.'s servant having stolen it, and B. at the time, when the theft was committed, having deposited his watches in a more secure place than that in which the chronometer was left. Clarke v. Earnshaw, Gow, 30—Dallas.

A workman for hire is not only bound to guard the thing bailed to him against ordinary hazards, but likewise to exert himself to preserve it from any unexpected danger to which it may be exposed. Leck v. Maestaer, 1 Camp. 138—Ellenborough.

A. lent a picture to B. who wished to shew it to C.; B. without any previous communication and unknown to C. sends the picture to his house, where it was accidentally injured:—Held, that C. was not responsible for not keeping the picture safely. Lethbridge v. Phillips (Knt.), 2 Stark. 544—Abbott.

A., a general merchant, undertakes, voluntarily and without reward, to enter a parcel of goods the property of B., together with a parcel of his own of the same sort, at the Custom-house, for exportation, but makes the entry under a wrong denomination, whereby both parcels are seized. A., having taken the same care of the goods of B. as of his own, not having received any reward, and not being of a profession or employment which necessarily implied skill in what he had undertaken, is not liable to an action for the loss occasioned to B. Sheille v. Blackburne, 1 H. Black. 158.

If a thing be deposited by one with the authority of another, and received by the bailee to keep on the joint account of the two, one alone cannot lawfully demand it without the authority of the other, so as to maintain trover upon the bailee's refusal to deliver it. May v. Harvey, 13 East, 197.

I. STATUTES.

The statutes relative to bankers are,

6 Anne, c. 22, s. 9.

7 Anne, c. 7, s. 61.

15 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 5.

21 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 12.

39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 28, s. 15.

55 Geo. 3, c. 184, as to stamps.

7 Geo. 4, c. 46.

9 Geo. 4, c. 23.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, empowering certain corporations or co-partnerships to carry on the business of banking, it is enacted, that before any such corporation, &c., shall issue bills or notes, or take up money on such bills, &c., an account shall be made out by the secretary or other person, being one of the public officers next mentioned, containing, among other things, the names and places of a body of two or more members of such corporation, &c., who shall have been appointed public officers thereof, and in whose names the corporation shall sue and be sued; such account to be annually returned to the Stamp Office between certain days, and a copy thereof to be evidence of the appointment of such officers.

In an action brought by such officer on behalf of a banking company, the return to the Stamp Office is not the only admissible evidence of his being one of the public officers, but it may be proved aliunde. Edwards v. Buchanan, 3 B. & Adol. 788.

II. AUTHORITY AND DUTY.

Respecting Securities.—Bankers may pledge bills deposited with them by a customer, though such customer be a creditor, when the parties receiving the bills are unacquainted with that circumstance. Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 648; 2 Esp. 250.

So, they may negotiate them to such an extent as the necessary demands of the customer require, without his express authority. Thompson v. Giles, 3 D. & R. 733: S. C. not S. P. 2 B. & C. 422.

Where indorsed bills of exchange are deposited by a customer with a banker, the latter has the absolute power of disposing of them. Such absolute power, however, may be qualified by circumstances: as where the banker is agent for his country correspondent, to receive and pay bills for him, with an allowance for so doing; or, where, in an annual account stated between them, the banker has entered the bills as the property of the correspondent in the one case, considering him as a factor, and the bills as remitted for a particular purpose, viz. to be received and carried to account as cash when due, and his power over them limited to that object: in the second case, raising an express declaration of trust. Nor will it extend the power so restricted to agency, nor defeat such declaration of trust that the banker entered in his books the bills as cash, or that he so considered them, his own books not being evidence for him, though they might be against him. Ex parte Pearce, 1 Rose, 232; 19 Ves. jun. 25.

When a banker's acceptances exceed the cash balance in his hands, he holds collateral securities for value. Bosanquet v. Dudman, 1 Stark. 1—Ellenborough.

And he may recover against the acceptor of an accommodation bill (deposited with him as a collateral security before it became due), although the party who deposited the bill had it in his hands when it became due, and had received satisfaction from the drawer. Id.

Payment of Checks.—A banker in London, receiving bills from his correspondents in the country to whom they had been indorsed, to present for payment, is not guilty of negligence in giving up such bills to the acceptor upon receiving a check upon a banker for the amount, although it turn out that such check is dishonoured. Russell v. Hankey, 6 T. R. 12.

A banker is bound by law to pay a check drawn by a customer within a reasonable time after the banker has received sufficient funds belonging to the customer; and the latter may maintain an action of tort against the banker for refusing payment of a check under such circumstances, although he has not thereby sustained any actual damage. Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Adol. 415.

A. and B. severally kept cash at the same banking house. On the 13th of November, A. paid in a draft for 250*l.* drawn by B. in favour of the former, upon the bankers, to whom the latter was considerably indebted. The draft was received by the bankers' clerk without any thing being said respecting it, or any entry made of it in their books. In the course of the same day, the bankers discounted bills for B. to the amount of 1600*l.*, the produce of which they expressly appropriated to the charges of the day, consisting of bills accepted by him for 1342*l.*; two drafts for 50*l.* each, given to other persons; and the draft for 250*l.* in favour of A., which was presented before the latter drafts. The bills and the two 50*l.* drafts, were paid by the bankers on the same day, leaving a balance only of 137*l.* in their hands. On the morning of the 14th they wrote a letter to A., stating that they had not carried the draft for 250*l.* to his credit, but that they would "retain it by them in the hope of its being provided for;" and they promised B. that they would pay it when they had funds. On that day the bankers discounted other bills for B. to the amount of 699*l.*, the produce of which they specifically appropriated to claims upon him, amounting to 599*l.*; after which an unappropriated balance of 98*l.* remained in the banker's hands:—Held, that they were liable to A. for the whole amount of the 250*l.* draft in an action for money had and received, though they had not at any moment an unappropriated sum in their hands sufficient to cover the draft. Kilsby v. Williams, 1 D. & R. 476; 5 B. & A. 815.

Two several banking firms, carrying on business respectively in the same country town, were in the habit of exchanging notes and securities with each other, and settling their balance by a prescribed mode. One of the firms became bankrupt, and, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, each firm had in their possession notes and securities of the other to nearly the same amount. The provisional assignee of the bankrupt firm being apprized of this fact, presented and obtained payment of the notes of the solvent firm, partly at their bank, and partly from their agents in London, who did not know the situation of the parties:—Held, that the solvent firm might recover the amount of the notes, in an action for money had and received against such assignee. Edmeads v. Newman, 2 D. and R. 568; 1 B. & C. 418. See 7 D. & R. 523.

But where money was paid into a banking-house for the purpose of taking up a particular bill, which was then lying there for payment; and the banker's clerk said at the time, that he could not give up the bill till he had seen his master:—Held, that it was money had and received to the use of the owner and holder of the bill, and could not be applied by the bankers to the general account of the acceptor who had paid in the money. De Bernales v. Fuller, 14 East, 590, n.; 2 Camp. 426.

If bankers pay a cancelled check drawn by a customer under circumstances which ought to have excited their suspicion, and induced them to make inquiries before payment, they cannot take credit for the amount. Scholey v. Ramsbottom, 2 Camp. 485—Ellenborough.

Appropriation of Money.—Where bankers had discounted a bill for one of their customers, and on the morning of the day on which it became due wrote it off in his account, having no notice that he was then dead:—Held, that they might reimburse themselves out of funds belonging to him in their hands. Rogerson v. Ladbroke, 1 Bing. 98; 7 Moore, 412.

The plaintiff and defendant each kept an account with a banker at M. In October the plaintiff desired the defendant to pay in to his account a sum due to him for rent. The defendant wrote to the plaintiff, stating that he had caused the amount to be transferred to his account, and the plaintiff sent him a receipt by return of post; the sum, however, was not actually transferred until the 8th of December. On the 9th, notice of the transfer was sent to the plaintiff by post, which did not reach him till the 11th. On the 10th the banker stopped payment:—Held, that the transfer was equivalent to payment. Eyles v. Ellis, 12 Moore, 306.

C. draws a check on his bankers, payable to A. and B., assignees of D., or bearer, and writes the name of their bankers across it. B. who has another private account with the bankers, pays the check into that account:—Held, that the bankers are justified in applying it to that account; the drawers writing the names of the bankers of the payees of the check across it not being, according to the custom of trade, information to the bankers that the money is that of the payees. Stewart v. Lee, M. & M. 158—Tenterden.

Where bankers employed to receive dividends in the funds, had in their own books credited their employers with the dividends as received, and had allowed them to draw without having any other funds in their hands:—Held, that the bankers were bound by the entries so acted on, though not communicated, and that they could not set up as a defence, that the entries had been fraudulently made by one of the partners, the money never having been received by the house. Hume v. Bolland, R. & M. 371—Best.

Certain stock was vested in trustees, upon trust, amongst other things, to pay the dividends to A. during his life, and, after his death, upon trust for his wife and children. M. & Co. were the bankers of the trustees, and employed by them to receive the dividends. During the life of A. the amount of the dividends on the stock was regularly carried to the account of A. in the books of the firm, and drawn for and received by him. A. died on the 23d of January, 1824, and on his death a new account was opened with the trustees in the books of M. & Co.; and in that account credit was given to the trustees for dividends, amounting to 1403*l.* as received in April and July, 1824, and the trustees were debited with several sums, amounting to 225*l.*, paid by checks drawn upon the house, on the presumption that the dividends had been actually received. In point of fact, the above dividends had not been received by M. & Co.; F., a partner in that house, having, in the lifetime of A., sold and transferred the stock in question, by means of forged powers of attorney. F. continued, after this transfer, to enter in the day-book of M. & Co. the amounts of the half-yearly dividends, on the days when they would have become due, as if he had duly received the same at the Bank of England, which amounts were in the ordinary course of business regularly posted from such day-book to the credit of the trustees by the clerks of M. & Co. Commissions of bankrupt issued against the members of the firm of M. & Co. in September and October, 1824:—Held, that at the date of those commissions the bankrupts were not indebted to the trustees for the balance of the dividends appearing by the books to have been received. Hume v. Bolland, 1 C. & M. 130; 2 Tyr. 575.

Held, also, that although the entries in the books, coupled with the payments on account of the supposed dividends, were prima facie evidence against the banking firm that they had had and received the amount of the dividends to the use of the trustees; yet, that inasmuch as the transfer under the forged power was absolutely void, the property in the stock and dividends due thereon remained in the trustees; and that, as they were entitled to receive the dividends at the Bank of England, they could not treat the amount of those dividends as money had and received to their use by the bankers, although the bankers might be liable to an action on the case for deceit, in which damages might be recovered in proportion to the injury arising from their untrue representation that they had received the dividends for the use of the trustees. Id.

Other Things.]—Where money is paid into a bank on the joint account of persons not partners in trade, the bankers are not discharged by payment to one of those persons, without the authority of the other. Innes v. Stephenson, 1 M. & Rob. 145—Tenterden.

A member of a banking-house applied to for a loan may lend the money of the firm, and doing so the company may sue. Alexander v. Barker, 1 Price's P. C. 157; 2 C. & J. 133; 2 Tyr. 140.

H. F., who was trustee with some other persons of some property, was also partner in a banking-house. He forged a power of attorney from the trustees, authorizing the banking-house to sell stock in the funds, which was done, some of the partners doing some act towards the completion of the sale. The brokers paid the proceeds of the sale to the banker's account generally at their agents, and it was drawn out by H. F., who had the whole management of the banking-house intrusted to him by his partners. H. F. was afterwards executed for a similar forgery:—Held, that the money received by the banking-house constituted a debt due from them to the trustees. Note: the circumstances of H. F. being a partner, and also a trustee, were not taken into consideration. Stone v. Marsh, 6 B. & C. 551; 9 D. & R. 643; R. & M. 364: S. C. not S. P. 8 D. and R. 71.

The term "acceptance" in a banker's deposit note, means "demand;" and as the maker has no option to exercise, the note need not be left with him for acceptance. Sutton v. Toomer, 1 M. & R. 125; 7 B. & C. 416.

III. FAILURE OF BANKERS.

Payment of money into a banking-house, to be placed to the credit of another, upon a condition, the money in the meantime to stand in the bankers' books in the name of the party paying it in: it is at his risk, and the loss is his, if the bankers fail before the condition is complied with, though the other party had written to desire it to be paid in generally. Calley v. Short, Coop. C. C. 148.

Where goods were paid for by country bank-notes in the afternoon of a day, in the morning of which the bankers had stopped payment, without the knowledge of the vendor or vendee, and the former offered to return the notes to the latter, demanding payment of them:—Held; that the vendor should have promptly presented the notes to the insolvent bankers, and given notice of non-payment to the vendee according to the law-merchant, and by his neglecting to do so, he had made the notes his own. Camidge v. Allenby, 9 D. & R. 391.

IV. LIEN OF BANKERS.

Bankers have a lien upon bills or notes paid into their houses for the balance of a general account. Jourdaine v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. 66—Ken.

A customer lodges bills of exchange in the hands of his banker generally, and when the banker advances money to him, he applies it to the discount of such of the bills as happen to be nearest in value to the sum advanced, but without any special agreement to that effect: this does not invalidate the banker's general lien upon all the other bills in his hands, but he may retain them, in order to secure the payment of his general balance. Davis v. Bowsher, 5 T. R. 488.

A banker has a lien for the amount of his balance upon money securities paid in by a customer on his running account; and the banker's assignees, after his bankruptcy, may sue the drawer of one of those securities, made payable to bearer, who defended the action on behalf of the customer, and may recover against such drawer the amount of the balance; and this, notwithstanding an offer made to the assignees on the part of the customer before the action brought, that though he was not aware of the exact balance, if any were due, he was ready to pay it, on receiving back the security; for this was no tender of the balance to defeat the action. Scott v. Franklin, 15 East, 428.

A banker who has discounted bills for a customer, or accepted bills for his accommodation, has, while such bills remain unpaid, a lien on any negotiable securities of that customer, which may come to his hands, and may put the same in suit. And even where, taking into account the bills on both sides, the customer has a balance in his favour of a sum not equal to the amount of any one of them, this surplus cannot be appropriated to any one of the bills, in reduction of the claim of the banker suing any of the parties to the bill. Bolland v. Bygrave, R. & M. 271—Abbott.

The assignees of a banker, who, having fraudulently sold out stock belonging to a customer, and appropriated the proceeds, deposited the securities amongst those belonging to other persons, retain a lien upon such securities, notwithstanding they had been given up to the customer by the banker in contemplation of bankruptcy. Wilson v. Balfour, 2 Camp. 579—Ellenborough.

But a banker has no lien on munniments casually left in his shop, after he has refused to advance money on them as a security. Lucas v. Dorreia, 7 Taunt. 278; 1 Moore, 29.

I. STATUTES IN BANKRUPTCY.

Generally.—The statutes by which the law and practice of bankruptcy are now regulated are the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 47.

The bankrupt statutes do not bind the crown. Ex parte Russell, 19 Ves. jun. 165.

The general bankrupt act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, which repealed all former bankrupt acts, came into operation 1st September, 1825. A commission having been sued out September 8, 1825, against F., upon an act of bankruptcy committed by him in the July preceding:—Held, that it could not be supported. Maggs v. Hunt, 4 Bing. 212.

The 5 Geo. 4, c. 98, which repealed the former bankrupt acts, enacted, that after June, 1824, a bankrupt's certificate should not be received in evidence unless entered of record. The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, repealed the 5 Geo. 4, c. 98, from May 2, 1825, and the old statutes from September, 1825: it provided also, that its enactments respecting certificates should take effect from May 2, 1825, and that certificates on commissions issued after the act took effect, should be entered of record, "the present practice in bankruptcy" was, by s. 135, to be continued, unless when alterations were expressly declared. Where a commission was issued in January, 1825, and the certificate obtained in November, 1825:—Held, that it need not be entered of record. Tuttle v. Grimwood, 3 Bing. 493; 11 Moore, 432.

Stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81, is no repeal of statute 3 Geo. 4, c. 39, s. 2, by which executions on warrants of attorney, which are not filed within a certain time after execution, are declared void as against assignees of a bankrupt under a commission afterwards issued. Wilson v. Whittaker, M. & M. 8—Abbott.

The act of the 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 74, applies only to persons who were traders at the time of their decease, and not to persons who have left off trade before they died. Hitchon v. Bennett, 4 Madd. 181.

Retrospective Clauses.—In the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, the following clauses have been held to be retrospective:

54 } Bell v. Bilton, 4 Bing. 615; 1 M. & P.
55 } 574.

56 Ex parte Grundy, 1 Mont. & Mac. 293.

82 } Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180; 2 M. & P. 415; Terrington v. Hargreaves, 5 Bing. 489; 3 M. & P. 137.

87 } Terrington v. Hargreaves, 5 Bing. 489; 3 M. & P. 137.

108 } Cumming v. Wellsford, 6 Bing. 503; S. C. nom. Cumming v. Heale, 4 M. & P. 238.

Not retrospective.—The following clauses have been considered not to be retrospective:

73 Wombwell v. Laver, 2 Sim. 261.

92 } Key v. Cook, 2 M. & P. 720; S. C. nom. Key v. Goodwin, 6 Bing. 576.

132 Ex parte Sommon, 1 Mont. 253.

II. JURISDICTION IN BANKRUPTCY.

1. Court of Bankruptcy.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 1, a court of bankruptcy consisting of a chief judge, three other judges, and six commissioners, was established as a court of law and equity in all matters of bankruptcy: the court to consist of a court of Review, formed by the four judges, or any three of them: two subdivision courts, consisting of three commissioners, and the several courts of each of the commissioners. And see 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 135.

All existing commissions, transferred to the court of bankruptcy, to be duly registered in the registrar's office, in books to be kept for that purpose, and prosecuted before such commissioner as the court of Review should appoint. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxiv.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 47, His Majesty may direct the judges of the bankrupt court, other than the chief judge, to act in the insolvent debtors' court; and the insolvent court are empowered to order prisoners to be brought before one of the commissioners or a judge of the court of bankruptcy. By the same act, his Majesty may authorize any one or more of the judges of the court of bankruptcy to exercise the same jurisdiction and power in all respects as by the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, is given to three judges.

By section 8, the court of Review has the power of taxing costs.

2. Court of Review.

The court of Review has no jurisdiction to hear or rehear petitions which have been heard, or to make orders altering or affecting orders pronounced by the Lord Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor before the bankruptcy act, 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 56; but in cases pending, and not heard and disposed of at the date of the act, and upon new matters arising out of the petitions, and orders made by the Lord Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor, the court of Review has sole jurisdiction. Ex parte Langston, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 142.

The court of Review has no jurisdiction to hear petitions addressed to the Lord Chancellor. Re Appling, 1 Deac. & Chit. 1. But see Orders of 16 & 17 January, 1832.

The court of Review has no jurisdiction to hear a petition of appeal to the Lord Chancellor from an order of the Vice-Chancellor; nor a petition for a rehearing of a petition of appeal already heard by the Lord Chancellor; nor a cross petition of appeal to the Lord Chancellor, complaining of a particular part of the order of the Vice-Chancellor. Ex parte Benson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 324.

But it has jurisdiction to hear a petition to the Lord Chancellor for confirming a master's report, where the Lord Chancellor had made an order on a previous petition, referring the matters therein to the master; or a supplemental petition of appeal to the Lord Chancellor from an order of the Vice-Chancellor, where such petition is upon new grounds, which were not brought forward by the original petition, or by the petition of appeal; or a petition to the Lord Chancellor, praying only consequential directions on one part of an order made by the Vice-Chancellor, against which no petition of appeal had been presented. Ex parte Benson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 324.

A creditor, resting upon a common law lien, without proving under the commission previous to the bankruptcy court act, appeared as a respondent, in opposition to a petition before the Vice-Chancellor, who ordered that the matter should be referred to the commissioners, to ascertain the rights of the several parties, and that the creditor should have his costs. The creditor attended the inquiry before the commissioners, but did not draw up the order of the Vice-Chancellor:—Held, that this was not enough to bring him within the jurisdiction of the court of Review:—Held, also, that filing an affidavit is not a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction. Ex parte Reid, 1 Deac. & Chit. 250.

The court of Review has no direct power over the secretary of bankruptcy, who is an officer of the Lord Chancellor, and not of that court. Anon. 1 Deac. & Chit. 359: S. P. In re Fly, 1 Deac. & Chit. 249.

3. Lord Chancellor.

The Lord Chancellor has no jurisdiction to hear an original petition in bankruptcy since the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 30.

The jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy is distinct from that of the court of Chancery. Ex parte Lund, 6 Ves. jun. 782.

Proceedings in bankruptcy are not proceedings in equity. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 439.

On a motion for a prohibition to the Lord Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy, it appeared that the assignees had seized, as the property of the bankrupt, a farm belonging to J. S., and kept it a long time and mismanaged it; and that the Chancellor had referred it to the master, to take an account between J. S. and the assignees, in respect of such farm and mismanagement; and afterwards, upon his report, had ordered a certain sum to be paid to J. S. by the assignees, the commission having been previously superseded:—Held, first, that the jurisdiction of the Chancellor, sitting in bankruptcy, was not confined to the period during which the commission subsisted: secondly, that the Chancellor having power to order restitution pending the litigation, he had not exceeded his jurisdiction, in ordering the master to take an account as to the management of the farm, nor in making the assignees personally liable, beyond the funds in their hands, for such mismanagement: thirdly, that the Chancellor had jurisdiction over all effects taken under the commission, as well those of strangers as of a bankrupt, and over the assignees, for all acts done by them in their character as such under the commission: fourthly, that in cases where the Chancellor had jurisdiction generally, the court of King's Bench had no authority to revise his order: and fifthly, that no prohibition could be granted after the final order of the Chancellor, unless there were an original want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the proceedings: but the court of King's Bench did not decide whether they had an authority to direct a prohibition to the Chancellor, sitting in bankruptcy. Ex parte Cowan, 3 B. & A. 123.

The court had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver upon petition in bankruptcy. Ex parte Tupper, 1 Rose, 179.

There was no appeal from the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 211; 1 Rose, 288.

But there was no settled rule of the court to prevent the Lord Chancellor from re-hearing an appeal in bankruptcy. Ex parte Baker, 1 Mont. & Mac. 279.

The filing of an affidavit in bankruptcy was the swearing and carrying of it into the bankrupt office, it was then within the reach of the Lord Chancellor, should the purposes of justice at any time require the production of it. Ex parte Newton, 2 Rose, 19.

Where a stranger to the commission seeks relief under the Chancellor's jurisdiction in bankruptcy, he submits himself to it in all respects, and the Chancellor will enforce his orders against him. A point arising out of the question of proofs is within the jurisdiction. Ex parte Pearce, 1 Rose, 232; 19 Ves. jun. 25.

A stranger to this commission applying for and obtaining an order in bankruptcy, brought himself within the jurisdiction. Ex parte Bezzant, 1 Rose, 181.

III. WHO MAY BE BANKRUPTS.

1. Statute.

The following description of persons are mentioned in the statute as those who are subject to the bankrupt laws: agents, who make their living by buying and selling; bankers, bleachers, brokers, builders, calenderers, carpenters, cattle-salesmen, coffee-housekeepers; commodities, persons who make their living by the workmanship of — companies, members of, or subscribers to any incorporated commercial or trading company established by charter or act of parliament, as such not liable — dyers, factors, farmers, as such not liable — fullers, graziers, as such not liable; — goods, buyers and sellers of, those persons who seek their living by buying and letting for hire; hotel-keepers, inn-keepers, insurers of ships' freight or other matters against perils of the sea — common labourers, and workmen for hire, as such not liable — merchandize, using the trade of, by way of bargaining, bartering, commission, consignment, exchange, or otherwise, in gross or by retail; packers; parliament, persons having privilege of parliament, if traders within any of the other descriptions, are liable—printers, receivers of other mens' monies or estates into their trust or custody, salesmen of cattle or sheep, scriveners, shipwrights, tavern-keepers—taxes, receivers general of, as such not liable—victuallers, warehousemen, wharfingers, and workmen of goods, unless for hire. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

The statute extends to aliens, denizens, and women, both to make them subject thereto, and to entitle them to all the benefits given thereby. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 135.

Quære, whether a commission cannot issue against a person attainted, as he may be sued in a civil action even when attainted of treason? Ramsay v. McDonald, 1 W. Black. 30; S. C. nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

The Lord Chancellor would stop the progress of a commission against one who was not properly the object of it. In re Lewis, 2 Rose, 59.

Trespass lies against the assignees under a commission of bankruptcy, sued out against a person not liable to be a bankrupt, for entering a house. Perkin v. Procter, 2 Wils. 383.

2. Particular Persons.

(a) Executors.

An executor, who carries on the business for the benefit of the testator's children, may be a bankrupt. Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 88—Eldon.

Under the bankruptcy of an executor and trustee, directed by the will to carry on a trade, and a limited sum to be paid to him by the trustees for that purpose, the general assets beyond that fund are not liable. Ex parte Garland, 10 Ves. jun. 110.

Where a testator disposed of his property, and directed a trade, in which he was concerned, to be carried on after his death:—Held, that only the testator's capital in the trade was liable to the creditors of the trade who became such after the testator's death, and that they had no further claim upon his assets. Ex parte Richardson, 3 Madd. 138.

(b) Infants.

A commission of bankruptcy cannot be supported against a person under age. O'Brien v. Currie, 3 C. & P. 283—Burrough. S. P. Ex parte Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 494.

Such a commission is void, and not merely voidable. Belton v. Hodges, 9 Bing. 365; 2 M. & Scott, 496.

It was long since held that a person could not be a bankrupt by reason of a trading by him during his infancy. Stevens v. Jackson, 4 Camp. 164; 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106: S. P. Ex parte Moule, 14 Ves. jun. 603.

But it was considered that an infant might be a bankrupt where he had held himself out as an adult and traded as such: therefore a bankrupt praying to supersede his commission on the ground of infancy was left to his action, where he had traded two years as an adult. Ex parte Watson, 16 Ves. jun. 265.

A partnership of three becoming insolvent, and one being an infant, a joint commission of bankruptcy against the other two was superseded, as separate commissions ought to have been taken out. Ex parte Henderson, 4 Ves. jun. 163: S. P. Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 440.

A joint commission of bankruptcy, superseded on the ground of the infancy of one partner, on the petition of the assignees under a separate commission. Ex parte Barwis, 6 Ves. jun. 601.

(c) Married Women.

A wife being a sole trader in London is liable to a commission of bankruptcy, and her assignees shall come in paramount the assignees of the husband, though his was the prior bankruptcy. La Vie v. Philips, 1 W. Black. 570; 3 Burr. 1776.

The wife of a convict sentenced to transportation may be a trader and a bankrupt, although the husband is only on board the hulks, and she has occasional intercourse with him. Ex parte Franks, 7 Bing. 762; 1 M. & Scott, 1.

A commission having issued against a married woman, on a trading before marriage, it was superseded. Ex parte Mear, 2 Bro. C. C. 266.

(d) Lunatics.

A lunatic may be a bankrupt, if the act of bankruptcy be committed during a lucid interval. Anon. 13 Ves. jun. 590.

3. Requisites of Trading.

Trading in England.—One who has traded to England, whether native, denizen, or alien, though never a resident trader in England, but comes over here occasionally, and commits an act of bankruptcy, is an object of the bankrupt laws. Alexander v. Vaughan, Cowp. 398. And see Ex parte Smith, Cowp. 402.

A person residing in the Isle of Man, but coming from time to time to this country, and buying goods here, which were afterwards sold in that island, is a trader against whom a commission of bankrupt may issue in this country, although he only bought but never sold any goods here. Allen v. Cannon, 4 B. & A. 418.

A person residing in India, and trading there, and in the course of that trading drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, upon which he got a profit by the exchange, and in the course of that sort of dealing contracting debts in England, is a trader within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Ingliss v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

A trader in London purchases goods to be sold by A. and B., partners in trade in Dublin, and charges them to A. and B. at prime cost; this creates a debt due from B. in England, and makes him a trader here. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

A joint commission against two partners in England, another partner residing abroad, was superseded. Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 434.

During Operation of Statute.—A trading, which ceased before the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, took effect, will not support a commission issued after that time. Surtees v. Ellison, 9 B. & C. 750; 2 M. & R. 586.

A commission issued under that statute was ordered to be superseded, on the ground that there was no proof of any trading subsequently to the 1st September, 1825, when it came into operation. Ex parte Batten, 1 Mont. & Mac. 287.

A farmer and grazier had frequently, before September, 1825, and in some few instances after, purchased cattle with a view to resale, and not for the purpose of his farm. A commission having issued against him after September, 1825, it was held, in an action brought to try the validity of the commission, that the acts of buying before that period were evidence to explain the quality of the subsequent acts. Worth v. Budd, 2 B. & Adol. 172.

When Time presumed.]—Where a trader has been proved to have traded in the usual course once, he will be presumed to have continued to carry on his business in the same manner until the time of his bankruptcy. Heannay v. Birch, 1 Rose, 356; 3 Camp. 233.

Party ceased to trade.]—A man who has retired from business may become a bankrupt in respect of debts contracted during the period of his trading. Willoughby v. Thornton, 1 Selw. N. P. 175; S. P. Doe d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134; Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64; Ex parte Dewdney, 15 Ves. jun. 495.

So, if a trader cease to manufacture, but still continue to solicit orders and to execute them, and hold himself out to the world as capable of executing them. Wharam v. Routledge, 5 Esp. 235—Ellenborough.

A person who had formerly taken in goods on pledge, and had ceased to do so, but continued to sell the unredeemed pledges, is still a trader as a pawnbroker, and subject to the bankrupt laws. Rawlinson v. Pearson, 5 B. & A. 124.

Whether or not a trader has ceased his trading does not depend upon the mere discontinuance of it, or the absence of any specific act of trading, but whether there be an intention to exercise or resume it, and that is a question for a jury. Ex parte Patterson, 1 Rose, 402; S. P. Ex parte Cundy, 2 Rose, 357.

Where a party having manufactured goods for sale discontinues the sale almost entirely, and uses all his produce himself, but occasionally allows parties applying to have small quantities on payment, it is a question for the jury whether these sales are with the intention of continuing trade, or for the accommodation of the applicants; and in the latter case he ceases to be a trader. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500—Tenterden.

Where a lime-burner commenced the building a large mansion-house on his estate, and employed nearly all the bricks and lime made at the kiln, and considerable quantities of lime besides for that purpose, and from the time of commencing the building he continued to purchase chalk, but very nearly discontinued any sale of lime, except in some few instances, and generally under particular circumstances, as to be spread on the lands of tenants or neighbours, or to be used in the repairs of houses in the parish on some reason of urgent haste, and there were some instances in which no such explanation was given; but in every case the lime was paid for, and the whole quantity sold did not exceed five quarters, during a period in which the kiln had produced not less than three hundred quarters of lime, of which the rest was employed about the building; the question, whether this was a continuance of the trading, was held to depend upon its having been with intent to keep the trade in existence after the house was finished, or merely to accommodate the purchasers. Id.

The question, when a trader ceases to trade is, in all cases, purely for the consideration of the jury. Dance v. Wyatt, 4 M. & P. 201.

Profit on Act of Trading.]—The smallness of the profit is no consideration, and one act of buying and selling is sufficient to constitute a trader within the bankrupt laws. Newland v. Bell, Holt, 221—Gibbs.

Number of Acts of Trading.]—Whether or not a person is a trader, does not depend upon his occasionally doing acts of trading, but upon the intention generally so to get his living. Ex parte Patterson, 1 Rose, 402; S. P. Ex parte Maginnis, 1 Rose, 84; Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

Generally, the trifling amount of trading is immaterial, if there be an intention to continue the trading. Ex parte Moole, 14 Ves. jun. 603.

Therefore, the purchase of one lot of timber, with intent to sell again, will make a man a trader. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

Even if the timber be standing at the time of the purchase. Id.

Where a person engaged in the Greenland whale fishery made three purchases of oil, one of which he sold again:—Held, that it was a question for the judge to determine, whether these dealings constituted a trading within the meaning of the statute 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2. Gale v. Halfknight, 3 Stark. 56—Abbott.

So, trading, in the instance of an attorney buying and selling books, may be sufficient; the nature of the dealing, though small, being such as to manifest an intention to deal generally. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 211; 1 Rose, 288.

Illegal Trading.]—A smuggler, dealing in contraband goods, by buying and selling, is a trader within the meaning of the statute 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2, and therefore liable to a commission, although such buying and selling is illegal. Cobb v. Symonds, 1 D. & R. 111; 5 B. & A. 516.

A trader may be a bankrupt, although he has not taken out a licence necessary to legalize his trade. Saunderson v. Bowles, 4 Burr. 2064.

But a buying in connection with others, to carry on a system of fraud, is not a trading. Miliken v. Brendon, 1 C. & P. 380—Abbott.

4. Agents, Brokers, and Factors.

If one procure orders for goods—i. e. coals—having no stock, but buying from those who have, he making out bills to his customers in his own name, and being himself debited by the person he buys of, this is a trading within the bankrupt laws; but if he procure orders for another, and is by that other person paid a commission, the other person sending the goods to the customers, this was not a trading within the bankrupt laws, antecedent to the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Dee d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134—Abbott.

The word "brokers" includes not only brokers who buy and sell goods, but stock-brokers. Anon. Cullen, Bkt. Laws, 18.

And pawn-brokers. Rawlinson v. Pearson, 5 B. & A. 124.

And ship-brokers. Pott v. Turner, 6 Bing. 702; 4 M. & P. 551.

It was doubted whether an insurance-broker could be made a bankrupt. Ex parte Stevens, 4 Madd. 256.

5. Builders.

By the statute, builders are expressly made liable to be bankrupts. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2. But before that statute it was held, that

A builder who buys timber, which he works into the houses which he builds, and sells them when built, is not an object of the bankrupt laws. Clark v. Wisdom, 5 Esp. 147—Ellenborough.

Nor a person who builds a public theatre, to be held in shares, for which he was to be paid according to the measure and value, he being himself a proprietor of several shares, or by erecting public baths on the ground of which he was joint tenant in fee. Williams v. Stevens, 2 Camp. 300—Ellenborough.

6. Companies, Members of.

All members of public companies are, however, liable to the bankrupt laws, except members of or subscribers to any incorporated commercial or trading companies, established by charter or act of parliament. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92.

Before the statute it was held, that holders of stock in public companies were not liable to the bankrupt laws, in that character merely. Ex parte Bull, 15 Ves. jun. 357.

And several statutes had exempted the proprietors of stock in particular companies.

East-India stock, 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 44, s. 74.

Bank stock, 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 31, s. 42; 8 & 9 Will. 2, c. 20, s. 47; 8 Geo. 1, c. 8, s. 43.

7. Farmers.

Farmers, as such, are expressly excepted from being traders within the bankrupt law by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

A farmer buying and selling horses to an extent unauthorized by his character of farmer may be a bankrupt as a horse-dealer, although he may have so bought and sold without a licence to deal in horses. Ex parte Gibbs, 2 Rose, 38.

A person who buys any article for the purpose of mixing it with his own produce, with a view to sell the mixture more advantageously than his own produce could be sold unmixed, does not thereby become a trader. Patten v. Browne, 7 Taunt. 409.

Thus, a person who buys pigs or other stock with a view to a resale of them, as ancillary to the profitable occupation of his farm, and in the interval feeds them wholly or principally on the produce of his farm, does not thereby become a trader. Id.

A farmer bought rye-grass seed, mixed it with seed of his own growth, and sold the mixture; he bought pigs, put them on his farm, fed them on the stubbles, and resold them, some after a week, some after longer periods:—Held, that neither of these was an act of trading. Id.

Nor does a farmer, who occasionally buys hay, corn, horses, &c., with a view to sell again for profit, thereby become a trader. Stewart v. Ball, 2 N. R. 78. But see Bartholomew v. Sherwood, 1 T. R. 573, n.

A farmer and grazier, exercising also the business of a drover, by buying and selling cattle from time to time, beyond the occasions of his farms, was exempted from the operation of the bankrupt laws by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40. And the purchase of hay for the support of his cattle, and the sale of part of it again, because it was more than was required for their consumption, will not make him a trader. Bolton v. Sowerby, 11 East, 274.

One who bought cattle at one fair, kept them three or four days on his own ground, and drove them to another fair to sell, was held to be a drover within the meaning of stat. 5 Geo. 2. Mills v. Hughes, Bull. N. P. 39.

A., an officer in the army, retires to the country, where he rents a dwelling-house and three acres of land, buys pigs, and consumes part in his family, and sells the rest at a neighbouring market; he makes no show as a dealer, and is proved not to have bought more than fourteen pigs in one year:—Held, that he was a trader within the bankrupt laws. Newland v. Bell, Holt, 221—Gibbs.

Quære, whether a farmer who deals largely in sheep, and sells some at fairs from his own farm, and makes purchases and sells at the same fair at a profit and loss, and buys and sells others that had never been at any fair, be a trader within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40? Hale v. Small, 3 Moore, 58; 8 Taunt. 730. And see S. C. 4 Moore, 415; 2 B. & B. 25.

A cowkeeper whose transactions of buying and selling are incidental to the occupation of farmer, grazier or drover, was exempted from the operation of the bankrupt laws, by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40. Carter v. Deas, 1 Swanst. 64.

Buying standing crops of grass, cutting them down, and making them into hay, is a trading within the bankrupt law. Bloxham v. Graham, Peake's Add. Cas. 3—Kenyon.

8. Horse Dealers.

Buying and selling horses with an avowed intention to take out a licence, and become a dealer, is sufficient to constitute a trading within the bankrupt laws, however limited the trading, and though no licence has been actually taken out. Wright v. Bird, 1 Price, 20.

But a person who purchases dead horses for his dogs, and sells the skins and bones, does not thereby become a trader, although he might sell such skins at a profit. Summersett v. Jarvis, 6 Moore, 56; 3 B. & B. 2.

A. was a horse dealer and livery stable keeper: after his death, his widow carried on the business of the livery stable, but without any licence, and bought horses to let, which she occasionally sold to customers:—Held, a sufficient trading to support a commission of bankrupt against the widow. Martin v. Nightingale, 3 Bing. 421; 11 Moore, 305.

9. Inn, Hotel, Coffee-house, and Tavern-keepers.

By statute, all keepers of inns, taverns, hotels, or coffee-houses, and victuallers, are traders within the bankrupt laws. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

Under the statute it has been held, that the keeper of a private lodging-house, who also seeks a profit by furnishing her guests with provisions, is subject to the bankrupt laws as an hotel-keeper, although the provisions are set apart as the separate property of each guest. Smith v. Scott, 9 Bing. 14; 2 M. & Scott, 35.

Before the statute, an inn-keeper, or victualler, merely as such, was not a trader within the bankrupt laws. Saunderson v. Bowles, 4 Burr. 2064.

Neither was an innkeeper, selling wine and brandy, and other liquors, by the dozen, to customers out of his inn, necessarily a trader. Willett v. Thomas, 2 Chit. 651: S. P. Anon. Loft, 218.

But a publican who sold liquors out of his house in large quantities, to all persons who applied for them, was held to be a trader. Holme v. Bough, 1 Selw. N. P. 181—Ellenborough.

However inconsiderable the extent of such dealing, and the profits arising from it might be. Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

10. Manufacturers.

By the statute, all persons, who either for themselves, or as agents, or factors for others, seek their living by the workmanship of goods or commodities, are traders. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

If a man exercise a manufacture from the produce of his own land, as a necessary or usual mode of enjoying that produce, he shall not be considered as a trader, though he buy necessary ingredients to fit it for the market; but where the produce of the land is merely the raw material of the manufacture, and the manufacture not the necessary mode of enjoying the land, there he is a trader. Wells v. Parker (in error), 1 T. R. 34; 1 Bro. P. C. 545; 1 Bro. C. C. 178. And see S. C. 1 T. R. 783.

A person who rented a brick-ground, and made bricks thereon for public sale, was held subject to the bankrupt laws. Id.

But afterwards held, that a man, whether tenant or freeholder, who sells bricks made from the produce of his soil, is not a trader within the bankrupt laws; but he is if he purchases the materials of his manufacture. Ex parte Gallimore, 2 Rose, 424.

And in another case it was held, that a devisee for life of an estate, part of which was a brick-ground, making bricks there for sale generally, with a view to profit, was not a trader within the bankrupt laws, though he purchased the coals and some of the wood used in burning the bricks, and had occupied the same ground as a brick-maker for general sale before the estate came to him by devise: for this is but a more beneficial mode of enjoying his own estate, by carrying the soil to market in an ameliorated state; and it is not a buying of any commodity, to sell it again; nor does it fall within the principle of the bankrupt laws, which were levelled against those, who getting other men's goods into their hands obtain credit upon and consume the same. Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442; 3 Smith, 445; S. P. Ex parte Burgess, 2 Glyn & J. 183.

If a person manufacture bricks from his own estate, and, according to the usual mode of burning the clay into bricks, he buys chalk and burns it with the clay, not for the purpose of carrying on lime-burning as a business, but as the most convenient mode of burning the clay into bricks; it is not a trading, although the use of the chalk was not necessary for the manufacture of the bricks, and he subsequently sell the lime produced in the process. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500—Tenterden.

A person purchasing land for the purpose of making bricks from it, and selling them, and agreeing to pay 4s. per thousand bricks in part of the purchase money, and making and selling bricks accordingly, is not a trader. Hearne v. Rogers, 4 M. & R. 486; 9 B. & C. 577.

A brick-maker taking the earth off the waste, for which he afterwards paid a consideration, and selling the bricks, is a trader. Ex parte Harrison, 1 Bro. C. C. 173.

Other Persons.—One who buys a coal mine, and works it, and sells the coals, is not a trader within the statutes of bankruptcy. Port v. Torton, 2 Wils. 169: S. P. Wells v. Parker (in error), 1 T. R. 38.

Whether the owner of a colliery, borrowing a particular species of coal to render his own marketable, be a trader, is a question for a jury upon the intention. Ex parte Gallimore, 2 Rose, 424.

A person selling stone delivered from his own quarry, is not a trader. Ex parte Gardener, 1 Rose, 377; 1 M. & B. 45.

But a man may sell such timber as he cuts down on his own land, without subjecting himself to the bankrupt laws. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176.

If a person burn chalk, not the produce of his own land, and sell the lime, it is a trading. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263; 3 C. & P. 500—Tent.

But a person who burns chalk, the produce of his own land, and sells the lime, is not, it seems, a trader. Id.

A farmer, making lime from a lime pit, opened and worked before the commencement of his term, and selling the surplus beyond what he required for manure, is not a trader within the bankrupt laws. Ex parte Ridge, 1 Ves. & B. 360.

11. Merchants.

All persons using the trade of merchandize by way of bargaining, exchange, bartering, commission, consignment, or otherwise in gross or by retail, and all persons who either for themselves, or as agents, or factors for others, seek their living by buying and selling, are traders. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

12. Parliament, Members of.

If any trader, having privilege of parliament, shall commit any of the acts of bankruptcy mentioned in the statute, he may be a bankrupt like other persons; but is not subjected to arrest or imprisonment during the term of such privilege, except in cases made felony by the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 9.

13. Scriveners.

A scrivener within the bankrupt laws is one who, with an intention thereby to get a living, receives into his custody other men's money to be laid out on their account, according to the purpose for which it is deposited. The mode of his remuneration, whether by procuration fees, by a charge for commission, or otherwise, is a circumstance immaterial; the actual deposit of, and complete control over, the money of others till invested, and the intention thereby to get a living, being the essence of this species of trading. Ex parte Malkin, 2 Rose, 27; 2 Ves. & B. 31.

Again, a scrivener has been held to be a person intrusted with the money of his employer, and who, for commission, finds a borrower. Ex parte Bath, 1 Mont. 82; S. P. Yeo v. Allen, 3 Dougl. 214.

The strong probability is, that no person can now be the object of a commission as a scrivener. In re Lewis, 2 Rose, 59.

An attorney is not necessarily a scrivener. Ex parte Malkin, 2 Ves. & B. 175.

One who in the common course of his profession purchases and sells estates, negotiates loans, &c., is not a scrivener. Id.

Unless he has been in the habit of having money deposited with him for the purpose of laying it out on securities. Adams v. Malkin, 3 Camp. 534—Gibbs.

But an attorney whose principal business is in the transaction of annuities, for which he charges a commission, and who, in the course of obtaining them for those who employ him, receives large deposits of money, which he pays into a banker's hands in his own name, is not. Hurd v. Brydges, Holt, 654—Dallas.

An attorney, however, who becomes a general depositary of the money of his clients, and of other persons, which he invests on securities, charging, in addition to his fees for preparing the securities, a compensation (no matter by what name), and who unites this occupation with the business of a conveyancer, &c., is a scrivener. Hutchinson v. Gascoigne, Holt, 507—Wood.

A clerk in the custom-house, who receives debentures or securities for merchants, for which he receives the money, and has a commission on such receipts, and employs the money so received in discounting bills or notes for his own benefit, is not a scrivener within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Henson v. Harrison, 2 Esp. 555—Kenyon.

14. Ship-owners and Underwriters.

The owner of a share in a ship is not in that character subject to the bankrupt laws. Ex parte Bowes, 4 Ves. jun. 168.

Shareholders of a steam packet are not traders. Ex parte Wiswold, 1 Mont. 263.

Before the statute, an underwriter, merely in that character, could not be a bankrupt. Ex parte Bull, 15 Ves. jun. 355.

But now they are expressly made liable to the bankrupt laws by the description of persons insuring ships, or their freight, or other matters, against perils of the sea. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

15. Other Persons.

A schoolmaster buying books and shoes, and selling them at an advanced price to his scholars, is not a trader. Valentine v. Vaughan, Peake, 76—Kenyon.

The publisher of a newspaper, buying the whole daily impression from the proprietors, reselling it at a profit, and bearing the loss of such as remained unsold, is a trader within the bankrupt laws. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

A butcher is within the bankrupt laws. Dalby v. Smith, 4 Burr. 2148.

Quære, whether a scavenger, contracting with a parish for a valuable consideration for liberty to take the mud, dust, &c. is a trader? Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 217.

Semble, that a scavenger is not a trader. Ex parte Collins, 1 Rose, 373.

The owner of a colliery, buying articles and selling them to his own pitmen, is not a trader: nor a fisherman who buys occasionally fish to make up for market a cargo otherwise deficient. Ex parte Gallimore, 2 Rose, 424.

A fisherman buying fish of other boats at sea, and selling it on shore, is a trader; and if such be the usual practice of a particular class of fishermen, one of them who is proved to have done so once, will be presumed to have continued to carry on his business in the same manner till the time of his bankruptcy. Heaney v. Birch, 1 Rose, 356; 3 Camp. 233—Ellenborough.

Merely drawing bills on a person's own account, at the expense of paying a quarter per cent. commission, besides interest at 5 per cent. for their being discounted, and borrowing accommodation notes in exchange for his own to the same amount, will not make a man an object of the bankrupt laws. Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 745.

16. Proof of Trading.

The declarations of a bankrupt to a party with whom he is dealing, respecting his transactions in trade, are not evidence to prove the trading of such bankrupt. Brinley v. King, 1 C. & P. 646; S. C. nom. Bromley v. King, R. & M. 228—Best.

But declarations made by a party, of his object in buying a particular article, are admissible in evidence to prove his intention, and whether he thereby became a trader. Gale v. Halfknight, 3 Stark. 56—Abbott.

An acknowledgment by a person that he was in partnership with another as a trader, who afterwards became bankrupt, is sufficient to constitute a trading, although no acts of buying or selling were proved to have taken place during the partnership. Parker v. Barker, 3 Moore, 226; 1 B. & B. 9.

17. Decision of Question of Trading.

Whether a man is a trader within the bankrupt laws is a question of law, and not of fact. Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 752.

A trading to support a commission depends not upon the quantity, but upon the intention; and it is a question for a jury whether there is enough to evidence that intention. Ex parte Maginnis, 1 Rose, 84; S. P. Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

If a man buys, and represents himself as a dealer, and offers goods in exchange, it has been held, that it should be left to the jury to say whether he did not buy to sell again. Milliken v. Brandon, 1 C. & P. 380—Abbott.

IV. ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

1. Nature and Requisites generally.

Acts of Bankruptcy.—The following acts are specified in the statute as those which amount to acts of bankruptcy:—Any trader with intent to defeat, or delay his creditors, who shall depart this realm; or, being out of the realm, remain abroad; depart from his dwelling-house, or otherwise absent himself; begin to keep house; suffer himself to be arrested for a debt not due; yield himself to prison; suffer himself to be outlawed; procure himself to be arrested; procure his goods, money, or chattels to be attached, sequestered, or taken in execution; make, either within this realm or elsewhere, any fraudulent grant or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods or chattels, or surrender of his copyholds; or gift, delivery, or transfer of his goods or chattels, shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3.

The opinion that an act of bankruptcy is a crime no longer prevails. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 371; 4 M. & P. 36—Tindal.

A man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by the conduct of his agent, without his knowledge. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505—Tenterden.

Though a commission of bankruptcy is a matter of right, yet, where it has been taken out under circumstances of oppression, the court will examine into it strictly, and, if there should be no sufficient act of bankruptcy on the proceedings, will not sustain it by directing an inquiry as to any other acts. Ex parte Smith, 1 Rose, 147.

Must be before Commission issued.—A trader must be so before the act of bankruptcy; therefore a commission cannot be supported by an act of bankruptcy by lying in prison, unless the trading were before the imprisonment. Ex parte Lynch, 1 Mont. 453.

There must be a valid, subsisting, and complete act of bankruptcy, when the commission is sued out; it cannot be supported by relation to a preceding act of bankruptcy, but which was not complete when the commission was sued out. Glassington v. Rawlins, 4 Esp. 224; 3 East, 407. And see Oliver v. Johnson, 1 D. & R. 560; 5 B. & A. 908.

An act subsequent to the striking of the docket, but previous to the sealing of the commission, is sufficient. Ex parte Dufrene, 1 Rose, 333; 1 Ves. & B. 51; S. P. Simpson v. Sikes, 6 M. & S. 312.

And for this purpose a fraction of a day is admitted, by allowing evidence that the act, though on the same day, was previous to the issuing, i. e. the awarding and sealing the commission. Wydown's case, 14 Ves. jun. 80.

The act having been committed so recently before the commission sued out, and at such a distance from London that no knowledge of it could possibly have reached London at the time of suing, will not invalidate the commission. Hopper v. Richmond, 1 Stark. 507—Ellenb.

A docket struck without an act of bankruptcy, upon the belief by the creditor that one had been committed, will support a commission upon a subsequent act. Ex parte Webster, 2 Glyn & J. 252.

On an application to supersede a commission and issue another, the act of bankruptcy being subsequent to the date of the commission, the solicitor was required to state by affidavit why he took out a commission, which he could not support; pending that, the time having expired, another creditor obtained a supersedeas and a commission, under the apprehension of immediate extents; the bankruptcy was afterwards declared under the first commission, upon acts of bankruptcy found previously to its date, but the latter commission was preferred. Ex parte Mavor, 19 Ves. jun. 539.

A commission may be sustained by any act that can be proved antecedent to the commission. Ex parte Dufrene, 1 Rose, 333; 1 Ves. & B. 51.

A bankrupt cannot set up a prior secret act of bankruptcy to invalidate his commission, either at law or in equity. Rex v. Bullock, 2 Leach, C. C. 996; 1 Taunt. 71.

An act of bankruptcy prior to the one on which the commission is grounded, will not invalidate the commission, even though it be shewn that there was a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt existing at the time of such prior act of bankruptcy, whereon a better commission might have been sued out. Donovan v. Duff, 9 East, 21; S. C. nom. Kennett v. Duff, 2 Smith, 44. But see Doe d. Hunter v. Boulcot, 2 Esp. 595; Parker v. Manning, 2 Esp. 597; Miles v. Rawlins, 4 Esp. 194.

It is not to be presumed that a petitioning creditor had notice of an act of bankruptcy prior to the debt, although the fact appear on the face of the depositions. Thackrah v. Wood, 3 Stark. 141—Abbott.

After Party has ceased to trade.—The act of bankruptcy may be committed after the trading has ceased. Doe d. Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134—Abbott. S. P. Ex parte Bamford, 15 Ves. jun. 449.

So that it is during the existence of a petitioning creditor's debt, contracted while in trade. Ex parte Dewdney, 15 Ves. jun. 495; S. P. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. jun. 145.

A., not a trader, was indebted to B. to the amount of 100*l.*, and afterwards became a trader. After A. had ceased to be a trader (the debt to B. still existing), he committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that a commission might be supported upon B.'s debt. Baillie v. Grant, 2 M. & Scott, 193; 9 Bing. 121.

Operation of Statute.—A commission issued after the 1st September, 1825, when the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, took effect, will not be supported by proof of an act of bankruptcy committed before the passing of that act. Hewson v. Heard, 9 B. & C. 754, n.; 2 M. & R. 586; S. P. Palmer v. Moore, 9 B. & C. 754, n.; Maggs v. Hunt, 12 Moore, 357. And see Surtees v. Ellison, 9 B. & C. 750; 2 M. & R. 586; Ex parte Batten, 1 Mont. & Mac. 287; Worth v. Budd, 2 B. & Adol. 172; S. O. not S. P. 1 Dowl. P. C. 328.

Where a trader committed an act of bankruptcy, upon which a commission might have issued under the statutes then in force, but which were repealed, and the repealing statute was repealed, it was held sufficient to support a commission issued after the repeal of the repealing statute. Phillips v. Hopwood, 10 B. & C. 38.

Where committed.—The act of bankruptcy must be committed within England or Wales. Ex parte Smith, Cowp. 402. And see Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

Though the act must be committed in this country, yet a letter from a trader who has gone abroad in the course of his trade, connected with circumstances here, may be sufficient evidence of such act. Ex parte Hague, 1 Rose, 150.

2. Departing the Realm.

If a trader, whose house of trade is in Ireland, comes to England on business, and again quits this country to avoid an arrest, it is a departing the realm with intent to delay his creditors, sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

A trader who leaves England, and proceeds to Ireland, where he carries on trade with an honest intention, compatible with trade, does not thereby commit an act of bankruptcy. Windham v. Paterson, 2 Rose, 466; 1 Stark. 144.

If the necessary consequence of a trader's departing the realm is that his creditors must be delayed, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy. Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 279—Ellenb.

But a trader has a right to go abroad to look after his concerns, though his creditors may be thereby delayed, and it is no act of bankruptcy. Warner v. Barber, Holt, 175—Gibbs. S. P. Ex parte Mutrie, 5 Ves. jun. 574.

A commission cannot be sustained by residence abroad, where the departure was for a fair and proper purpose, and not with a view of defrauding creditors. Id.

But otherwise, if an apprehension of arrest be coupled with a justifiable motive. Id.

Departure from the realm, with a consequential delay of a creditor, is not an act of bankruptcy, without proof or necessary inference of an intention to delay at the instant of departure. Ex parte Osborne, 2 Ves. & B. 177; 1 Rose, 387.

Pressure of debts, though strong, is not conclusive evidence of an intention to delay creditors. Id.

Where a trader appointed to meet A. respecting some accounts in which B. was interested, and failed to do so, but left this country for France, leaving a letter for B., in which he stated that he should be back in ten days, and in the mean time would make proposals to the creditors; and on the following day he wrote another letter to B. from Calais, stating that the account current between them might be speedily settled; and a month afterwards he wrote another letter from Paris, stating that he was under the necessity of remaining in France:—Held, that the departing the realm and absence abroad, being a continuous act, these letters were admissible in evidence, and sufficient to establish an act of bankruptcy, by shewing the intent with which such trader departed. Rawson v. Haigh, 9 Moore, 217; 2 Bing. 99; 1 C. & P. 77. And see Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512.

3. Departing from Dwelling-house.

What a Departure.—A departure with an intent to delay is an act of bankruptcy, though no creditor be thereby in fact delayed. Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487; 3 Smith, 347; S. P. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

It is not alone sufficient that a creditor should be thereby delayed, but the departure must also have been with that intent. Fowler v. Padget, 7 T. R. 509; S. P. Aldridge v. Ireland, 1 Taunt. 273, n.; 3 Dougl. 397; Ex parte Osborne, 1 Rose, 387; 1 Ves. & B. 177.

• It is not sufficient that a sheriff's officer who comes to levy a fi. fa. on the trader's effects is refused admittance after the trader has left his house. Barnard v. Vaughan, 8 T. R. 149. And see Schooling v. Lee, 3 Stark. 149.

A. collusively assigns his house in town, stock, &c. to B., and retires to Paddington. B. takes possession, and carries on the business, concealing A.'s residence from his creditors. Three months afterwards a commission issues against A., under which the assignees take possession of the house, &c. as being still the property of A. In an action of trespass by B. against the assignees, held, that there was evidence to go to the jury of A.'s having committed an act of bankruptcy, by departing from his dwelling-house, or otherwise absenting himself. Young v. Wright, 2 Marsh. 233; 6 Taunt. 540.

The act of bankruptcy, by leaving his house to avoid a creditor, without collusion, is complete the instant of his departure; and therefore not affected by a subsequent residence with the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Gardner, 1 Ves. & B. 45; 1 Rose, 377.

Cause of Departure.—Leaving his house to avoid his creditors is a sufficient act of bankruptcy, though no creditor called in his absence. Hammond v. Hicks, 5 Esp. 139—Mansfield: S. P. Wydown's case, 14 Ves. jun. 86.

Rule for setting aside the verdict discharged.

A departure to avoid an arrest is an act of bankruptcy. Warner v. Barber, Holt, 175—Gibbs.

Though under the impression of a groundless apprehension. Ex parte Bamford, 15 Ves. jun. 447; S. P. Newman v. Stretch, M. & M. 338.

It is an act of bankruptcy where the trader absented himself from his house, where his creditors were, to avoid irritation and harsh language. Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603; 2 Rose, 275.

And where a trader departs from his dwelling-house on account of domestic dissensions, if he makes no arrangements for carrying on his business in his absence, and he foresees that, as a necessary consequence, his establishment must be broken up, and his creditors must be delayed, which events accordingly happen, he thereby commits an act of bankruptcy. Holroyd v. Whitehead, 3 Camp. 530; 2 Rose, 145; S. C. not S. P. 1 Marsh. 128; 5 Taunt. 444.

Semble, that in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy by departing from the dwelling-house, the departure must be with an absolute intent to delay creditors. If it be only with intent to delay creditors in case a particular event occurs, and that event does not occur, it is not an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

Time of Absence.—The length of absence is immaterial, as the act of bankruptcy is complete at the time of departure. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

A trader, having a counting-house in town, and a dwelling-house in the country, left the former, (to which he never returned), taking his books with him, and slept at his dwelling-house a few nights, when he finally left that also:—Held, that having quitted his counting-house without the animus revertendi, he began to absent himself from that day, within the meaning of the 13 Eliz. c. 7, s. 1, and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. Judine v. De Cossen, 1 N. R. 234.

What Dwelling-house.—A trader who has no settled house or counting-house, but takes up a temporary abode at a public-house in the place to which his business carries him, commits an act of bankruptcy by departing from such public-house with intent to delay his creditors. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

Where there were two partners, one of whom resided in Manchester and the other in London, and the London partner having left his own home without intent to delay his creditors, and having been a few days on a visit at Manchester, both of them left the house of business there to avoid an arrest, at the same time carrying their books of account along with them:—Held, that they both thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp. 314; 1 Rose, 362—Ellenb.

Proof of Intention.—A declaration by a bankrupt of his motives for absenting himself from his home, made at the time, is evidence in an action by the assignees against a creditor of the bankrupt in order to prove the act of bankruptcy. Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512.

But the declarations of a trader, made shortly after an absence, are not admissible to prove such absence an act of bankruptcy. Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & Rob. 210—Parke.

The declaration of a bankrupt on his return, that he had absented himself to avoid a writ against him, is sufficient evidence of an act of bankruptcy, without any other proof of the existence of the writ, or of the debt on which it was founded, or of the creditor of the bankrupt. Newman v. Stretch, M. & M. 338—Parke.

Where the act of bankruptcy is the absconding to avoid being arrested, general proof of his so absconding is sufficient, without shewing any writs to have actually issued. Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. 334—Kenyon.

Quære, whether a letter written by a bankrupt, within a few days after the supposed act of bankruptcy, is admissible in evidence? Sunderson v. Laforest, 1 C. & P. 46—Burrough.

But it seems that a letter, written by a bankrupt shortly after his absenting himself from his home, is evidence to shew his motive in going, but not to prove the fact of his absence. Ransom v. Haigh, 9 Moore, 217; 2 Bing. 99; 1 C. & P. 77.

Letters bearing post-marks before the act of bankruptcy, and found in the alleged bankrupt's possession after it, containing statements of matters material to the act of bankruptcy, are admissible, without calling the writer as evidence against the alleged bankrupt, to shew that he received intimation of these facts, though not to prove their truth. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505—Tenterden.

Where a trader, at the suggestion of his attorney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office, until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly, for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that what passed between the attorney and the trader was admissible in evidence, upon an issue whether the latter had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

Depositions taken before commissioners of bankrupt, stating that a trader promised to meet one of his creditors at the office of his solicitors, in order to give him security for a debt, but that he did not attend the appointment, but altogether absented himself, are not of themselves sufficient evidence of the commission of an act of bankruptcy under the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, as it was not stated that he absented himself with an intent to delay such creditor. Toleman v. Jones, 9 Moore, 24; S. C. nom. Tucker v. Jones, 2 Bing. 2.

The deposition of the witness should state an intention, or circumstances from which the court will necessarily infer it: the departure of a man under embarrassed circumstances is strong, but not conclusive evidence of intention. Ex parte Osborne, 2 Ves. & B. 177; 1 Rose, 387.

Whether a departing the dwelling-house be accompanied with an intent to delay a creditor, is a question of fact for a jury to decide upon all the circumstances. Aldridge v. Ireland, 1 Taunt. 273, n.; S. C. not S. P. 3 Dougl. 397.

4. Otherwise absenting himself.

(a) From what Place.

The words in stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3, are, "or otherwise to absent himself," which are the same as were used in the previous statutes, 13 Eliz. c. 7, and 1 Jac. 1, c. 15; which, it has been held, are not confined to an absenting from the dwelling-house, or any particular place.

Therefore, a trader's absenting himself from any place, with intent to delay a creditor, is an act of bankruptcy; and it is immaterial whether a creditor be actually delayed or not. Hallen v. Homer, 1 C. & P. 108—Park: S. P. Cambridge v. Alderson, 1 C. & P. 213; Curteis v. Willes, 6 D. & R. 224; R. & M. 58; 1 C. & P. 211.

Absenting, unless from the place of abode or of business, or to avoid a creditor, is not an act of bankruptcy. Bernasconi v. Farebrother, 10 B. & C. 549.

Where a man in the habit of frequenting the Exchange to collect news, left it at the sight of a creditor, desiring a friend to say he was not there, it was held an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

If a trader, fearful that he may receive an unpleasant letter from a creditor, quit his house, and desire the letter to be forwarded to him at a turnpike; and if the letter was unfavourable, it was not his intention to return; but, if favourable, it was his intention to proceed on his regular business; and the letter which is favourable is forwarded, and he proceed on his regular business, it is not an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

(b) What an Absenting.

A trader, who is not denied to his creditors calling for money, but who sees them, and pretends to go out to get money, and does not return, nor endeavour to get the money, making it only a pretext, commits an act of bankruptcy. Bigg v. Spooner, 2 Esp. 651—Kenyon.

A creditor called upon a bankrupt by appointment. The bankrupt left the room and did not return, and his wife told the creditor he had gone out:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in inferring that the bankrupt left the house for the purpose of avoiding his creditor. Charrington v. Brown, 11 Moore, 341.

A trader left a message at his house for a creditor, who had in his absence called for a debt, that he could spare no money, and would not pay him that day, and would go out of the way and stay till dinner time:—Held, that it was for the jury to consider, whether he absented himself to delay the creditor; and this evidence warranted their conclusion that he did not. Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603; 2 Rose, 275.

Where a trader went to his neighbour, and told him that he expected to be arrested, and, while he remained there, was informed that a sheriff's officer was going towards his house, upon which he concealed himself in the back room, and desired his neighbour to watch; and when told that the officer had gone past his house, and had left the street, immediately returned home:—Held, that this was an act of bankruptcy, within the words, "otherwise absenting himself, to the intent to delay creditors," although it appeared not only that no creditor was delayed, but that none could possibly be delayed. Chenoweth v. Hay, 1 M. & S. 676; S. C. nom. Chenoweth v. Hayley, 2 Rose, 137. And see Young v. Wright, 2 Marsh. 233; 6 Taunt. 540.

A trader being informed by the attorney of the petitioning creditor, that he had delivered a warrant to arrest him to a sheriff's officer, who was seeking him for the purpose of executing it, was advised by the same attorney to repair to his office, to avoid the publicity of being arrested in the street, which he did, and remained there a considerable time:—Held, that he had not committed an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the statutes. Mills v. Elton, 3 Price, 142.

Where a trader, at the suggestion of his attorney, called a meeting of his creditors, to be held at a given time and place, and on the morning of that day went to the attorney's office, and inquired of him, whether he could safely attend the meeting without being arrested for debt; the attorney having advised him to remain at the office, until it was ascertained whether the creditors would engage to give him a safe conduct; the trader remained at the office accordingly for upwards of two hours, to avoid being arrested by some or one of his creditors, until after the attorney had attended at and returned from the meeting:—Held, that he had committed an act of bankruptcy on that occasion. Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745.

Where a trader, on being arrested, was liberated on his undertaking to execute a bail-bond:—Held, that the omission to attend to execute the bail-bond did not amount to an act of bankruptcy. Schooling v. Lee, 3 Stark. 149—Abbott.

Where a trader, upon being arrested, escaped from the officer, and fled into the house of another, and was pursued by the officer, and inquired for at the house, but was denied, and the door kept fast, and, whilst he remained there, declared that he did it for fear of other creditors; and when it was dark, returned home to his own house, and gave directions to deny him to any one who called, and continued nearly a month in his bed-chamber:—Held, that this constituted an act of bankruptcy, under the words "otherwise absents himself." Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; 2 Rose, 100.

A trader abstaining from going to a particular place through the apprehension of process (whether such apprehension be well-founded or not), thereby "absents himself with intent to delay his creditors," and commits an act of bankruptcy. Robson v. Rolfe, 2 M. & Scott, 786; 9 Bing. 648.

If bankers close the doors and windows of the bank, it seems to be an act of bankruptcy by absents. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

One of three partners, bankers, left his house at Bath, and went to London to raise funds; and having failed in his efforts to do so, he remained there three days:—Held, that the jury were warranted in finding that he absented himself with an intent to delay his creditors. Id.

Where a trader at B. left her dwelling-house and went to London, for the purpose of persuading a creditor to withdraw his execution, and left word of the place to which she had gone, but, failing to procure the withdrawing of the execution, did not return to her dwelling-house:—Held, that this was no act of bankruptcy. Aldridge v. Ireland, 3 Dougl. 397; 1 Taunt. 273, n.

The mere failure to keep an appointment made with a creditor is not an act of bankruptcy. Key v. Shaw, 1 M. & Scott, 462; 8 Bing. 320; S. P. Tuleman v. Jones, 9 Moore, 24; S. C. nom. Tucker v. Jones, 2 Bing. 2.

So, it would seem that a breach of an appointment by a trader to call at his creditor's house to pay a debt, is not an act of bankruptcy. Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & Rob. 210—Parke.

A debtor appointing a time and place where he might meet and pay his creditors, and failing to keep the appointment, must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have absented himself with the intent to delay his creditors, and thereby commits an act of bankruptcy; and, in an action by a bankrupt against his assignees to try the validity of the commission, the plaintiff must give evidence to rebut the presumption, or he cannot maintain his action. Widger v. Browning, 9 D. & R. 306; S. C. not S. P. 2 C. & P. 523; M. & M. 27.

Where a man, in the habit of attending the Royal Exchange, broke an appointment he had made with a creditor to meet him there; or, (being the proprietor of a theatre), retired behind the scenes to avoid a sheriff's officer, at the same time giving orders to be denied to him:—Held, that each of these was an act of bankruptcy. Gimingham v. Laing, 2 Marsh. 236; 6 Taunt. 532; 2 Rose, 472.

5. Beginning to keep House.

(a) What a Denial.

Order to deny and Denial.—A general order to be denied to all comers, and a denial accordingly to some one in particular, is sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388; S. P. Macklow v. May, 1 Taunt. 479.

But an order to deny, without an actual denial, is not sufficient. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705; S. P. Wydown's case, 14 Ves. jun. 86.

Where a trader, being under apprehension of arrest, gave directions to his servant to deny him in case A., a sheriff's officer, called:—Held, that the sheriff's officer not having called, this of itself was not any evidence of a beginning to keep house. Id.

A denial, without any previous order to do so, is not an act of bankruptcy, although the trader subsequently approves of it. Ex parte Foster, 1 Rose, 50; 17 Ves. jun. 414.

A denial, with subsequent approbation, but the time not ascertained nor connected with the previous direction ten months before the commission, is not a sufficient act of bankruptcy. Id.

Where the order to be denied is on one day, and the denial on another, the act of bankruptcy is on the latter day. Hawkes v. Sands, 3 Dougl. 429.

If a trader hear himself denied to a creditor by one of his family, and he do not come forward, and his remaining quiescent is from an intention to delay the creditor, it is an act of bankruptcy, though he has given no directions to be denied. Smith v. Moon, M. & M. 458—Tindal.

Rule for new trial refused. Id.

Two traders in partnership left their shop, and told their shopman that they were going out to endeavour to get some bills of exchange discounted, and directed him to say that they were not in the way; or to make some excuse for them in case a creditor should call. On that and the following day, a creditor called, when they were both at home, and desired to see either the one or the other of them: when the shopman denied them without being authorized by them so to do:—Held, that the jury were warranted in concluding that they absented themselves with an intent to delay their creditors. Capper v. Desanges, 3 Moore, 4: S. C. nom. Deffe v. Desanges, 8 Taunt. 671.

Order to deny, and Retirement.]—An order to deny, with any act done, as retiring to an unusual part of the house, is an act of bankruptcy. Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & C. 705.

And if a trader withdraws from one part of his house, where he had before usually sat, and where there was free access to him, to a more retired part of it, to avoid personal application for money, by means whereof his creditors are prevented from importuning him; this will be an act of bankruptcy. Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271; 9 East, 491 c.—Ellenborough.

A trader, having been denied to a creditor who called for money, was, after a little time, seen peeping over his wife's shoulder. Upon another occasion, seeing a creditor coming, he retired behind a partition at the back of his shop, and his wife coming forward, said he was not at home:—Held, that a jury were properly directed to consider whether the trader "had kept his house; had wilfully secluded himself; that is, had withdrawn himself from a part of the house where he was likely to meet a creditor, to a more retired part." Key v. Shaw, 8 Bing. 320: 8 M. & Scott, 462.

Where an aged member of a banking firm was arrested on the 20th May, at his private dwelling, distant several miles from the house of business, for a partnership debt; and after the sheriff's officer was prevailed upon to withdraw, upon a promise of his executing a bail-bond when required, he reproached his servants for letting such persons into his house, and ordered them not to let any person into the house they did not know, stating that he was afraid of being arrested again: on the morning of the 21st, the servants did not open the door without ascertaining from the windows what persons required admission, and the outer gate of the house was kept locked; and it further appeared that on that day he removed from one apartment of the house to another, to avoid being seen by a person who called, whom he supposed to be a creditor:—Held, that he committed an act of bankruptcy on the 21st May, though no creditor was actually denied. Harvey v. Ramsbottom, 2 D. & R. 142; 1 B. & C. 55.

Denial by shutting up Doors.]—An act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house, may be by closing the doors, without change of place or denial to creditors. Cumming v. Bailey, 6 Bing. 363; 4 M. & P. 36.

If bankers close the doors and windows of the bank, and their customers cannot obtain admission, and the jury find that they are so closed, to exclude the customers, and the bankers remain within, it is an act of bankruptcy by beginning to keep house. Id.

Although neither of the partners lived in the banking-house. Id.

Overruling a previous case, in which it was held, that shutting up a banker's shop was not an act of bankruptcy by a partner residing in another place. Ex parte Mavor, 19 Ves. jun. 543.

Where one of several partners in a bank, who resided at the place of business, and was the only partner who transacted the business, (the others residing at a distance,) shut up the banking-house, and absented himself from it and stopped payment:—Held, that this was not evidence of a joint act of bankruptcy by all three. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. and S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

Denial at unseasonable Times.]—It is not an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to cause himself to be denied to a creditor calling by the debtor's appointment for payment on a Sunday. Ex parte Preston, 2 Rose, 21; 2 Ves. & B. 311.

So, a denial at a late hour, after retirement to rest, is not an act of bankruptcy. Hughes v. Gilman, 10 Moore, 480; 2 C. & P. 32.

If a trader is denied to a clerk of a creditor, at his shop, it appearing by the evidence that the shop was shut up for the evening, but at an earlier hour than usual; it is proper to be left to the jury to say, whether the bankrupt had himself denied, to delay his creditor, or whether it was because the clerk called at an unseasonable hour. Id.

An order given to the servants of a trader to deny him, on the ground of being busy, is sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Stafford v. Clarke, 1 C. & P. 27—Burrough.

But if a trader direct his servant, "that if any one should come whilst he was at dinner, or engaged in business, she should deny him:"—Held, that such instructions did not amount to a direction for a general denial; and, therefore, although a creditor called, and was denied, it was no act of bankruptcy. Shew v. Thomson, Holt, 159—Gibbs.

Nor, in a similar case, where the trader knew of the coming of a particular creditor. Smith v. Currie, 3 Camp. 349; 1 Rose, 364—Ellenb.

Where a trader ordered his servant to say, if any creditors called, that he was not at home, and he was accordingly denied, but was in bed ill at the time:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury, whether this was a beginning to keep house with an intent to commit an act of bankruptcy; and that they were warranted in finding that it was. Lazarus v. Waithman, 5 Moore, 313.

Intent of Denial.]—It is not essential that a creditor should actually be delayed. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388.

For the words in the statute 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2, "to the intent, or whereby his creditors shall or may be defeated or delayed," are to be read, "to the intent his creditors shall, or whereby (or that thereby) they may be defeated," &c. Har-

port, where the Lord Chancellor had made an order on a previous petition, referring the matters therein to the master; or a supplemental petition of appeal to the Lord Chancellor from an order of the Vice-Chancellor, where such petition is upon new grounds, which were not brought forward by the original petition, or by the petition of appeal; or a petition to the Lord Chancellor, praying only consequential directions on one part of an order made by the Vice-Chancellor, against which no petition of appeal had been presented. Ex parte Benson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 324.

A creditor, resting upon a common law lien, without proving under the commission previous to the bankruptcy court act, appeared as a respondent, in opposition to a petition before the Vice-Chancellor, who ordered that the matter should be referred to the commissioners, to ascertain the rights of the several parties, and that the creditor should have his costs. The creditor attended the inquiry before the commissioners, but did not draw up the order of the Vice-Chancellor:—Held, that this was not enough to bring him within the jurisdiction of the court of Review:—Held, also, that filing an affidavit is not a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction. Ex parte Reid, 1 Deac. & Chit. 250.

The court of Review has no direct power over the secretary of bankruptcy, who is an officer of the Lord Chancellor, and not of that court. Anon. 1 Deac. & Chit. 359: S. P. In re Fly, 1 Deac. & Chit. 249.

3. Lord Chancellor.

The Lord Chancellor has no jurisdiction to hear an original petition in bankruptcy since the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 30.

The jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy is distinct from that of the court of Chancery. Ex parte Lund, 6 Ves. jun. 782.

Proceedings in bankruptcy are not proceedings in equity. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 438.

On a motion for a prohibition to the Lord Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy, it appeared that the assignees had seized, as the property of the bankrupt, a farm belonging to J. S., and kept it a long time and mismanaged it; and that the Chancellor had referred it to the master, to take an account between J. S. and the assignees, in respect of such farm and mismanagement; and afterwards, upon his report, had ordered a certain sum to be paid to J. S. by the assignees, the commission having been previously superseded:—Held, first, that the jurisdiction of the Chancellor, sitting in bankruptcy, was not confined to the period during which the commission subsisted: secondly, that the Chancellor having power to order restitution pending the litigation, he had not exceeded his jurisdiction, in ordering the master to take an account as to the management of the farm, nor in making the assignees personally liable, beyond the funds in their hands, for such mismanagement: thirdly, that the Chancellor had jurisdiction over all effects taken under the commission, as well those of strangers as of a bankrupt, and over the assignees, for all acts done by them in their character as such under the commission: fourthly, that in cases where the Chancellor had jurisdiction generally, the court of King's Bench had no authority to revise his order: and fifthly, that no prohibition could be granted after the final order of the Chancellor, unless there were an original want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the proceedings: but the court of King's Bench did not decide whether they had an authority to direct a prohibition to the Chancellor, sitting in bankruptcy. Ex parte Cowan, 3 B. & A. 123.

The court had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver upon petition in bankruptcy. Ex parte Tupper, 1 Rose, 179.

There was no appeal from the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 211; 1 Rose, 288.

But there was no settled rule of the court to prevent the Lord Chancellor from re-hearing an appeal in bankruptcy. Ex parte Baker, 1 Mont. & Mac. 279.

The filing of an affidavit in bankruptcy was the swearing and carrying of it into the bankrupt office, it was then within the reach of the Lord Chancellor, should the purposes of justice at any time require the production of it. Ex parte Newton, 2 Rose, 19.

Where a stranger to the commission seeks relief under the Chancellor's jurisdiction in bankruptcy, he submits himself to it in all respects, and the Chancellor will enforce his orders against him. A point arising out of the question of proofs is within the jurisdiction. Ex parte Pearce, 1 Rose, 232; 19 Ves. jun. 25.

A stranger to this commission applying for and obtaining an order in bankruptcy, brought himself within the jurisdiction. Ex parte Bezzant, 1 Rose, 181.

III. WHO MAY BE BANKRUPTS.

1. Statute.

The following description of persons are mentioned in the statute as those who are subject to the bankrupt laws: agents, who make their living by buying and selling; bankers, bleachers, brokers, builders, calenderers, carpenters, cattle-salesmen, coffee-housekeepers; commodities, persons who make their living by the workmanship of — companies, members of, or subscribers to any incorporated commercial or trading company established by charter or act of parliament, as such not liable — dyers, factors, farmers, as such not liable — fullers, graziers, as such not liable; — goods, buyers and sellers of, those persons who seek their living by buying and letting for hire; hotel-keepers, innkeepers, insurers of ships' freight or other matters against perils of the sea — common labourers, and workmen for hire, as such not liable — merchandize, using the trade of, by way of bargaining, bartering, commission, consignment, exchange, or otherwise, in gross or by retail; packers; parliament, persons having privilege of parliament, if traders within any of the other descriptions, are liable—printers, receivers of other mens' monies or estates into their trust or custody, salesmen of cattle or sheep, scribes, shipwrights, tavern-keepers—taxes, receivers general of, as such not liable—victuallers, warehousemen, wharfingers, and workmen of goods, unless for hire. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2.

The statute extends to aliens, denizens, and women, both to make them subject thereto, and to entitle them to all the benefits given thereby. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 135.

Quære, whether a commission cannot issue against a person attainted, as he may be sued in a civil action even when attainted of treason? Ramsay v. McDonald, 1 W. Black. 30; S. C. nom. Ramsden v. Macdonald, 1 Wils. 217.

The Lord Chancellor would stop the progress of a commission against one who was not properly the object of it. In re Lewis, 2 Rose, 59.

Trespass lies against the assignees under a commission of bankruptcy, sued out against a person not liable to be a bankrupt, for entering a house. Perkin v. Procter, 2 Wils. 383.

2. Particular Persons.

(a) Executors.

An executor, who carries on the business for the benefit of the testator's children, may be a bankrupt. Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 88—Eldon.

Under the bankruptcy of an executor and trustee, directed by the will to carry on a trade, and a limited sum to be paid to him by the trustees for that purpose, the general assets beyond that fund are not liable. Ex parte Garland, 10 Ves. jun. 110.

Where a testator disposed of his property, and directed a trade, in which he was concerned, to be carried on after his death:—Held, that only the testator's capital in the trade was liable to the creditors of the trade who became such after the testator's death, and that they had no further claim upon his assets. Ex parte Richardson, 3 Madd. 138.

(b) Infants.

A commission of bankruptcy cannot be supported against a person under age. O'Brien v. Currie, 3 C. & P. 283—Burrough. S. P. Ex parte Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 494.

Such a commission is void, and not merely voidable. Belton v. Hodges, 9 Bing. 365; 2 M. & Scott, 496.

It was long since held that a person could not be a bankrupt by reason of a trading by him during his infancy. Stevens v. Jackson, 4 Camp. 164; 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106: S. P. Ex parte Moulé, 14 Ves. jun. 603.

But it was considered that an infant might be a bankrupt where he had held himself out as an adult and traded as such: therefore a bankrupt praying to supersede his commission on the ground of infancy was left to his action, where he had traded two years as an adult. Ex parte Watson, 16 Ves. jun. 265.

A partnership of three becoming insolvent, and one being an infant, a joint commission of bankruptcy against the other two was superseded, as separate commissions ought to have been taken out. Ex parte Henderson, 4 Ves. jun. 163: S. P. Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 440.

A joint commission of bankruptcy, superseded on the ground of the infancy of one partner, on the petition of the assignees under a separate commission. Ex parte Barwis, 6 Ves. jun. 601.

(c) Married Women.

A wife being a sole trader in London is liable to a commission of bankruptcy, and her assignees shall come in paramount the assignees of the husband, though his was the prior bankruptcy. La Vie v. Philips, 1 W. Black. 570; 3 Burr. 1776.

The wife of a convict sentenced to transportation may be a trader and a bankrupt, although the husband is only on board the hulks, and she has occasional intercourse with him. Ex parte Franks, 7 Bing. 762; 1 M. & Scott, 1.

A commission having issued against a married woman, on a trading before marriage, it was superseded. Ex parte Mear, 2 Bro. C. C. 266.

(d) Lunatics.

A lunatic may be a bankrupt, if the act of bankruptcy be committed during a lucid interval. Anon. 13 Ves. jun. 590.

3. Requisites of Trading.

Trading in England.—One who has traded to England, whether native, denizen, or alien, though never a resident trader in England, but comes over here occasionally, and commits an act of bankruptcy, is an object of the bankrupt laws. Alexander v. Vaughan, Cowp. 398. And see Ex parte Smith, Cowp. 402.

A person residing in the Isle of Man, but coming from time to time to this country, and buying goods here, which were afterwards sold in that island, is a trader against whom a commission of bankruptcy may issue in this country, although he only bought but never sold any goods here. Allen v. Cannon, 4 B. & A. 418.

A person residing in India, and trading there, and in the course of that trading drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, upon which he got a profit by the exchange, and in the course of that sort of dealing contracting debts in England, is a trader within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Ingliss v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

A trader in London purchases goods to be sold by A. and B., partners in trade in Dublin, and charges them to A. and B. at prime cost; this creates a debt due from B. in England, and makes him a trader here. Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270; 1 Camp. 152.

A joint commission against two partners in England, another partner residing abroad, was superseded. Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 434.

During Operation of Statute.—A trading, which for the remainder of two months:—Held, that this was a legal imprisonment, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Stevens v. Jackson, 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106; 4 Camp. 164; 2 Rose, 285.

An act of bankruptcy was considered committed by lying in prison for two months, though the party had the benefit of day rules during that period. Soames v. Watts, 2 C. & P. 400—Best.

For what Debt.—A penalty due to the crown was held to be a debt within the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2; therefore, where a trader lay in prison more than two months, being unable to pay Exchequer penalties for smuggling:—Held, that it was an act of bankruptcy. Cobb v. Symons, 5 B. & A. 516: S. C. not S. P. 1 D. & R. 111.

8. Escape from Prison.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 5, if any trader having been arrested, committed, or detained for debt, shall escape out of prison or custody, it shall be an act of bankruptcy from the time of the arrest, commitment, or detention.

Carrying a prisoner, by the permission of the sheriff, through another county, for the purpose of calling upon his attorney there, in his way to a judge's chambers, upon an habeas corpus, is not escaping within stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2, (in which the provision was nearly the same), so as to make the party a bankrupt. Rose v. Green, 1 Burr. 437; 2 Ld. Ken. 173.

9. Fraudulent Transfer.

(a) Statute.

The words of the statute are, "make, or cause to be made, either within this realm or elsewhere, any fraudulent grant or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods, or chattels;" "or make, or cause to be made, any fraudulent gift, delivery, or transfer of any of his goods or chattels;" and if done with intent to defeat or delay creditors, it is an act of bankruptcy. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3.

A conveyance by deed of all a trader's estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy, unless a commission issue within six months, provided certain forms be attended to. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 4.

The words "either within this realm or elsewhere" were inserted, because, under the previous statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, it had been held that a person resident in India, and trading there, drawing bills upon England for the value of other bills sent thither, did not commit an act of bankruptcy by assigning, while resident in India, all his effects in trust for creditors, in certain proportions. Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530. And see Ex parte Smith, Cowp. 402.

The word "fraudulent" applies to each of the words gift, delivery, and transfer. Cook v. Caldecott, 4 C. & P. 315; M. & M. 522—Tenterden.

The word "delivery" is of very general signification; but, being connected with the words "gift or transfer," it seems that, in interpretation, it must be confined to transactions of the same nature. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505—Tenterden.

(b) Of all Estate for all Creditors.

A deed, whereby a trader conveys all his property in trust to divide amongst his creditors, is an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. jun. 149: S. P. Ex parte Smith, 1 Ves. & B. 518.

Though the creditors, with whom such deed was in the first instance concerted, afterwards, and when it was executed, changed their purpose, unknown to the bankrupt, and intended to set it up as an act of bankruptcy. And such deed is operative, though it contain a proviso to be void, if the trustees think fit. Tuppenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

So, though there was in an assignment by partners a proviso to be void if all the creditors for above 20*l.* should not execute, or a commission of bankruptcy should issue within a certain time. Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. jun. 193; Rose, 213.

But otherwise, where the deed, being joint and not several, was never executed. Id.

So, although there is a proviso that it should be void if all the creditors should not execute it, and that in the meantime the acts of the trustees should be good. Back v. Gooch, 4 Camp. 232; Holt, 13—Gibbs. And see Antrom v. Chase, 15 East, 212.

So, though not executed by the trustees or the creditors. Id.

But otherwise, where not properly stamped. Whitwell v. Dimdale, Peake, 168—Kenyon.

So, although the assignment be made merely for the purpose of making an act of bankruptcy. Simpson v. Sikes, 6 M. & S. 295.

The execution by the debtor of a deed of trust, which is an act of bankruptcy, is not in the nature of an escrow before it is executed by the trustees. Id.

Proviso in a lease for re-entry, and that the lease should be void if the lessee assigned without licence. The lessee by deed assigned all his property, real and personal, to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, and was afterwards declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the deed of assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void. Doe d. Lloyd v. Powell, 8 D. & R. 35; 5 B. & C. 308.

Where a person conveyed all his property to a canal company, upon their advancing money to pay all his debts, it was held to be no act of bankruptcy. Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67.

(c) Of all Estate to a particular Creditor.

An assignment of all a trader's stock, though only by way of security, and for valuable consideration, is an act of bankruptcy. Hassell v. Simpson, 1 Dougl. 89, n.; 1 Bro. C. C. 99.

A conveyance made by a trader of his whole substance to a particular creditor, under which possession was not taken until it became necessary, to prevent the operation of the statute, was adjudged fraudulent and an act of bankruptcy. Worseley v. De Mattos, 1 Burr. 467; 2 Ld. Ken. 218: S. P. Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827.

So, though the trader afterwards continued to carry on his trade for three years, at the expiration of which time a commission issued against him. Pulling v. Tucker, 4 B. & A. 382. And see Hartley v. Smith, Buck, 368.

A bill of sale to a particular creditor, of all the effects of a trader, in trust to satisfy his debt, and to pay over the surplus (if any) to the trader, who then knew himself to be insolvent, is an act of bankruptcy, and of no effect as a conveyance, notwithstanding it was given by the trader when under arrest, at the suit of the particular creditor for a just debt, and followed by an immediate change of possession. Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 137: 3 Smith, 137: S. P. Butcher v. Easto, 1 Dougl. 295.

(d) Of part of Estate to a particular Creditor.

Must be voluntary.—A conveyance of part of a trader's property to a particular creditor, to be an act of bankruptcy within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3, must be voluntary, and given in contemplation of bankruptcy, both of which are necessary to make an act of bankruptcy by fraudulent conveyance. Gibbons v. Philipps, 7 B. & C. 529.

If a trader voluntarily give a bill of sale without pressure or demand, but when he is in such a situation that he must be supposed to anticipate that a bankruptcy will in all human probability follow, it is, it seems, an act of bankruptcy. Id.

But, if it be made under compulsion, and the party yield to fear, it is not a fraudulent preference. Reed v. Ayton, Holt, 503—Gibbs: S. P. Arbousin v. Hanbury, Holt, 575.

A transfer of goods in satisfaction of a bona fide debt, made voluntarily and in contemplation of bankruptcy, is an act of bankruptcy, and not protected by the eighty-first section, though made more than two months before a commission issues. Bevan v. Nunn, 9 Bing. 107; 2 M. & Scott, 132.

What Transfers are within the Statute.—It was held under the former statutes, that a pretended sale of part of a trader's goods to a particular creditor, or any other contrivance not in the course of trade, but calculated merely to give a fraudulent preference, and to defeat the equality of the bankrupt laws, was void; though the delivery of the goods to such creditor, and his assent to the transaction, was complete before any act of bankruptcy committed: but that such pretended sale was not in itself an act of bankruptcy, any more than any other fraudulent transaction, which was not by deed. Rust v. Cooper, Cowp. 629. And see Alderson v. Temple, 4 Burr. 2235; Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117; Lofft, 472; Gayner's case, 1 Burr. 477; and Compton v. Bedford, 1 W. Black. 362.

But it is now held, that the words of the present statute being so much more extensive, a fraudulent sale is an act of bankruptcy. Cook v. Caldecott, M. & M. 522; 4 C. & P. 215—Tenterden.

But it has been said, that, to constitute an act of bankruptcy by a fraudulent sale, the fraud must be known by the buyer. Id.

A sale of goods at such a price, and under such circumstances, that the buyer ought to know the trader is selling to raise money in fraud of his creditors, is an act of bankruptcy, and the buyer is liable to the assignees in trover for the value of the goods. Id.

Where A. and B., being in embarrassed circumstances, conveyed to C. all the machinery in their mills, and all the machinery to be substituted in lieu thereof, to secure 3029l. 9s. 7d., with interest, defeasible, however, upon the payment of that sum with interest, by instalments of 50l. in each succeeding month, but had other property:—Held, that this was not per se an act of bankruptcy, but that it should have been left to the jury to say whether the conveyance was a fraudulent preference. Balme v. Hutton, 2 Y. & J. 101.

A fraudulent delivery of goods is not an act of bankruptcy unless it be in the nature of a gift or transfer; so, when goods are removed with intent to delay a creditor, but the party to whose custody they are given has no claim given to him over them, this is not an act of bankruptcy. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 273; 3 C. & P. 505—Tenterden.

A rule for a new trial was obtained, but afterwards discharged. Id.

At all events such delivery of goods by his agent carrying on his business without his direction, is no act of bankruptcy. Id.

A builder was employed in building on the land of a proprietor; and, upon disagreeing as to the construction of the contract, the proprietor claimed to consider the builder as a debtor, on account of certain advances made to him to an extent which the builder denied, and the builder's son, who principally managed the work, removed goods to the premises of a person for safe custody, and to secure them from being taken by the proprietor, and the builder approved the discontinuance of the works, but did not direct or know of the removal of the goods, it was held not to be an act of bankruptcy. Id.

A gift of money is not within sect. 3 of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Abell v. Daniel, M. & M. 370—Tent.

A bill of exchange is a chattel, and within that statute, and a fraudulent delivery or transfer of such bill by a trader to a creditor constitutes an act of bankruptcy. Cumming v. Bailey, 4 M. & P. 36; 6 Bing. 363.

If a trader fraudulently inclose in a letter to a creditor a bill of exchange, it is an act of bankruptcy, without evidence that the bill ever came to the hands of the creditor, or that he would have accepted it. Id.

What Conveyances within former Statutes.—A deed, whereby a debtor, being pressed, conveys estates in trust, to sell, and to pay the pressing creditor, with a further trust to pay his debts to certain relatives, in order to give them an undue preference, in contemplation of bankruptcy, was an act of bankruptcy. Morgan v. Horseman, 3 Taunt. 241; 1 Rose, 334. And see Young v. Wright, 2 Marsh. 233; 6 Taunt. 540.

But the deed was valid, so far as related to the protection of the urgent creditor. Id.

Quære, whether void for the residue? Id.

An assignment of a lease, part of a bankrupt's estate, made in contemplation of bankruptcy, to some of the creditors, was an act of bankruptcy. Devon v. Watts, 1 Dougl. 86. And see Lenton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47; and Shaw v. Jackman, 4 East, 210.

So, an assignment of all stock in trade, together with two leasehold houses, to a creditor by way of mortgage, was an act of bankruptcy, and rendered void the mortgage both of the houses and of the goods. Law v. Skinner, 2 W. Black. 996.

(e) In case of Partnership.

Where partners, by deed, assigned all their partnership effects, &c. to trustees for the benefit of their creditors, and some of the separate creditors of one partner did not assent to it, the assignment was held to be fraudulent and void, and an act of bankruptcy. Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T.R. 140.

So, an assignment of partners by deed of all their property in trust for their creditors, with a proviso to be void if all the creditors for above 20% should not execute, or a commission of bankrupt should issue within a certain time, was an act of bankruptcy. Secus when the deed being a joint and not a several one was never executed. Dutton v. Morrison, 1 Rose, 213; 17 Ves. jun. 193.

Where one partner makes a fraudulent grant by deed to another partner, it is an act of bankruptcy in the former, but not in the latter. Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. 68—Kenyon.

And where two partners join in an assignment of property as security for a debt, and one of whom has at the time committed an act of bankruptcy, it is void as to a moiety only. Id.

A partnership which existed between A. and B. was dissolved by mutual consent. A., being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, after the dissolution conveyed them to trustees for sale or mortgage, and empowered them to execute such conveyances as they should think fit, for the purpose of converting his said estates into money, in order to enable him to carry on his trade, and to pay his creditors their debts; and it was agreed, that such conveyances might be made and executed by the trustees with or without the concurrence of A., and that they should be seised or interested in the money arising from such sale or mortgage. At the time this deed was executed, A. had stock in trade, and other personal effects to a considerable amount, independently of the partnership assets, which were not sufficient to pay the partnership debts. The trustees were not creditors of either

A. or his partner. A. and his partner afterwards gave C. & Co., who were not creditors of either, a power of attorney to make demands of every description, to examine and settle all the accounts, together with other powers to act for them, they agreeing to ratify whatever should be done under it. A deed was afterwards prepared by A. and his trustees, for the purpose of conveying all his freehold and leasehold estates previously conveyed to D. & Co. to sell or mortgage, with a view to raise 130,000*l.*, and 40,000*l.* in negotiable bills of exchange, and to indemnify the drawers and acceptors from the payment thereof; but these sums were not advanced, nor were the bills drawn, or any other act done under the latter deed:—Held, that neither the execution of the first conveyance to his trustees, nor the power of attorney, under these circumstances, constituted an act of bankruptcy by A. Berney v. Davison, 4 Moore, 126; 1 B. & B. 408.

So, where such partners, being in insolvent circumstances, stopped payment on the 15th of February, 1819, and dissolved their partnership on that day: and A. being separately possessed of freehold and leasehold estates, conveyed the whole of them on the same day, by indentures of lease and release, to trustees in trust for sale or mortgage, for the purpose of converting such estates into money, it being convenient to A. to raise money at an early period: and subsequently to this conveyance, A. and B. gave a power of attorney to C. & Co. to recover all debts which should be due to them, together with full powers for them to act:—Held, that these circumstances did not constitute an act of bankruptcy by A. Berner v. Vyner, 4 Moore, 322; 1 B. & B. 482.

(f) Other Conveyances.

Every grant and conveyance which a court of equity would declare fraudulent, was held to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Jacob v. Shepherd, 1 Burr. 417: S. P. Unwin v. Oliver, 1 Burr. 481.

To invalidate a deed it is not necessary to shew that the party was insolvent; the question is, whether the deed was made to hinder and delay his creditors, by placing the property out of their reach? Richards v. Smallwood, Jacob, 557.

A fraudulent judgment and execution, though void against creditors, is not in itself an act of bankruptcy. Clavey v. Hayley, Cowp. 427.

An agreement for a secret execution, after which the debtor was to retain possession of the goods, though void against creditors, is not, of itself, an act of bankruptcy. Anmer v. Spatwood, Loft, 114.

An agreement to accept a composition, where there is no assignment of the trader's effects, is not an act of bankruptcy. Jelly v. Wallis, 3 Esp. 228—Kenyon.

Quære, whether a fraudulent assignment of a policy of insurance upon the trader's life be an act of bankruptcy? Grogan v. Cook, 2 B. & P. 230.

Whether an assignment by deed of book debts is an act of bankruptcy depends upon what other effects the trader had. Ex parte Richardson, 14 Ves. jun. 186.

A conveyance by deed to a child, though declared to be void under stat. 1 Jac. 1, if made when a trader is insolvent, is fraudulent, and an act of bankruptcy. Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. 68—Kenyon.

An ante-nuptial settlement may be an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Mayor, 1 Mont. 292.

(g) Who estopped from setting up the Act.

Parties who were privies, and had assented to a deed of assignment, could not set it up as an act of bankruptcy. Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 594.

A. assigns all his estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, and B. also makes a like assignment to trustees, two of whom are trustees under A.'s assignment; A., at the instance of his trustees, sues out a commission of bankrupt against B., the act relied upon being B.'s assignment:—Held, that the commission, being that of A.'s trustees, who were privies and parties to B.'s deed of assignment, could not be supported. Ex parte Kilner, Buck, 104.

A commission of bankrupt being sued out upon the petition of a creditor, who had not concurred in a deed of conveyance, and who, together with others who had so concurred, was chosen assignee;—Held, that it was no objection to an action brought by them as assignees, for the recovery of part of the bankrupt's estate, that some of them had concurred in such deed. Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

For such estoppel applies only to the petitioning creditor, who originates the commission. Id.

The assignees of a bankrupt, though neither of them are petitioning creditors, cannot avail themselves of an act of bankruptcy, of which the petitioning creditor would be estopped from availing himself. Tope v. Hockin, 9 D. & R. 881; 7 B. & C. 101.

If the petitioning creditor knew of and acquiesced under a deed of trust which amounted to an act of bankruptcy, though he did not execute, it will not support the commission. Ex parte Cusackwell, 19 Ves. jun. 233; 1 Rose, 315.

10. Fraudulent Surrender of Copyholds.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 3, if any trader shall make a fraudulent surrender of any of his copyhold lands or tenements, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, it is an act of bankruptcy.

This was previously held not to be an act of bankruptcy, because it was said it could not be done with intent to defeat or delay creditors, as they could not have execution of copyhold lands. Ex parte Cockshott, 3 Bro. C. C. 502.

11. Filing Declaration of Insolvency.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 6, making a declaration of insolvency in writing, signed by the trader, and attested by an attorney, and filed with the secretary of bankrupts, shall be an act of bankruptcy.

And by s. 7, no commission grounded on such an act shall be invalid, by reason of the declaration having been concerted or agreed upon between the bankrupt and any creditor, or other person.

12. Filing Petition to Insolvent Court.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 13, filing a petition in the Insolvent Debtor's Court is an act of bankruptcy, provided the trader is declared bankrupt before the time of hearing in the Insolvent Debtor's Court.

According to the practice of the Insolvent Debtor's Court, the petition of the insolvent is signed by him in prison, and there delivered to the provisional assignee of the court:—Held, that the petition is not filed within the meaning of the 13th section of the statute 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy, until it reaches its final destination—the custody of the proper officer in the office. Garlick v. Sangster, 2 M. & Scott, 68.

13. Giving Money or Security to Petitioning Creditor.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, if, after a docket struck, a trader shall pay money to the person who struck it, or give security or satisfaction for his debt, or any part of it, whereby he might receive more in the pound than the other creditors, such payment, gift, delivery, satisfaction, or security, shall be an act of bankruptcy.

This provision is nearly similar to one contained in the previous statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24, under which it has been held, that where a petitioning creditor was holder of a bill accepted by the bankrupt, payment after the commission was an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Thompson, 1 Ves. jun. 157.

And that it was equally an act of bankruptcy, although it was uncertain at the time, whether the person taking the payment would in fact receive more than the other creditors. Ex parte Paxton, 15 Ves. jun. 463.

14. Concerted Act of Bankruptcy.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 7, no commission granted on an act of bankruptcy, by filing a declaration of insolvency, shall be invalid by reason of such declaration having been concerted or agreed upon between the bankrupt and a creditor, or other person.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 42, no commission shall be superseded or fiat annulled, or adjudication reversed, by reason of concert between the petitioning creditor, his solicitor or agent, and the bankrupt, his solicitor or agent.

Though a concerted commission or fiat is protected by the latter statute, a concerted act of bankruptcy is still a nullity. Marshall v. Barkworth, 1 Nev. & M. 279.

Before the statutes it was held, that a concerted act of bankruptcy could not support a commission. Stewart v. Rickman, 1 Esp. 108—Kenyon. And see Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 594; and Field v. Bellamy, Bull. N. P. 39.

Even though it be for the benefit of the creditors that it should proceed. Ex parte Brookes, Buck, 257.

In one case, a commission on a concerted act of bankrupt was superseded with costs, though carried on bona fide and without collusion. Ex parte Gouthwaite, 1 Rose, 87. And see Ex parte Bimmer, 1 Madd. 250.

But a concerted act of bankruptcy is not objectionable, where the creditor who avails himself of it is not privy to it. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. jun. 145.

Therefore, where a trader denied himself for the express purpose of becoming a bankrupt, but such denial was made without the knowledge of, or any previous concert with the petitioning creditor, it was considered unobjectionable. Roberts v. Teasdale, Peake, 27—Kenyon.

Where A., B., and C., were traders, and they employed an attorney, who was likewise employed by D. a creditor of their firm, and the attorney advised A., B., and C., to become bankrupts; and in order to procure an act of bankruptcy he took D. with him to the respective houses of A., B., and C., having first concerted with them that they should respectively deny themselves when D. called:—Held, that although D. was not privy to such denial, yet, inasmuch as the attorney was the agent of D. as well as of A., B., and C., and accompanied him for the purpose of procuring such denials, that such denials therefore were fraudulent acts of bankruptcy, and could not support a commission under which D. was the petitioning creditor. Prosser v. Smith, Holt, 442—Burrough.

Nor was an assignment of such traders' effects to their foreman, concerted with the same attorney, allowed to be an act of bankruptcy. Id.

A concerted commission will be superseded at the costs of the solicitor and petitioning creditor; and if a commission be taken out upon an act, proved at the trial of an issue to have been concerted with the petitioning creditor, and the solicitor, the court will supersede it, and will not direct another issue to try the validity of the commission with liberty to prove other acts. Ex parte Prosser, Buck, 77.

Though a commission of bankruptcy cannot stand upon a concerted act of bankruptcy, it may be supported if any other act of bankruptcy, not liable to that objection, has been committed, and the privity of the bankrupt is no objection. Ex parte Edmonson, 7 Ves. jun. 303.

Though subsequent to the affidavit of belief. Ex parte Dufrene, 1 Ves. & B. 56; 1 Rose, 333.

Affidavits, that merely state hearsay and belief as to a commission being concerted, are not alone sufficient to induce the court to direct an issue; but if they are corroborated by circumstances of suspicion attending the case, an issue will be directed. The jurisdiction in bankruptcy extends to every person fraudulently engaged in issuing a commission. Ex parte Boyle, Buck, 247.

15. Members of Parliament.

Traders having privilege of parliament may be bankrupts upon any of the ordinary acts of bankruptcy. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 9.

If traders, having privilege of parliament, do not pay, secure, or compound with a creditor, or enter into a bond, within one month after service of a summons, and not appearing to an action, they commit an act of bankruptcy from the time of the service of the summons. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 10.

So, a trader, having privilege of parliament, disobeying an order of any court of equity, or in bankruptcy or lunacy, for payment of money after service, and a peremptory day fixed, will thereby commit an act of bankruptcy. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 11.

There was a similar clause in the statutes 4 Geo. 3, c. 33, and 45 Geo. 3, c. 124; under the former of which it was held, that the act of bankruptcy created by that statute must in some of its circumstances be proved by a creditor; a creditor therefore admitted to prove them; but as the necessity alone justifies this exception from the rule, his testimony could not be received as to facts of which evidence could be obtained from other sources. Ex parte Harcourt, 2 Rose, 203.

Where a person of a given character, and under certain circumstances, is brought within the bankrupt laws, the adjudication of the commissioners ought to proceed upon the direct evidence before them, that the person is of the character and within the circumstances required, and not upon a deposition incorporating the substance of an affidavit, in which (in another court) those essentials have been attested. Id.

Semble, it ought to appear upon the deposition as an ingredient of the act of bankruptcy, that the summons which ought to be served on the trader M. P. was taken out after the affidavit was filed upon record. Id.

Under the 45 Geo. 3, c. 124, it was held, that a trader having privilege of parliament, by not paying money under an order of court, committed an act of bankruptcy. Read v. Phillips, 16 Ves. jun. 437.

To prove an act of bankruptcy under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, by a trader, who is a member of parliament, not paying or securing to a creditor a debt of 100l. after the suing out of a writ of summons, &c. it is not absolutely necessary to call the creditor. Burton v. Green, 3 C. & P. 306—Tenterden.

16. Joint Commissions.

To support a joint commission of bankrupt, there must be separate acts of bankruptcy by each partner. Allen v. Hartley, 4 Dougl. 20.

Where one of three partners in a banking concern, who resided at the place where the banking-house was, and was the only partner who transacted the business, the other two residing at a distance from it, absented himself from the banking house, shut it up and stopped payment:—Held, that this was not evidence of a joint act of bankruptcy by all three. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

17. Proof of Act of Bankruptcy.

(a) Before Commissioners.

Who may prove.]—Semble, that a creditor may prove the act of bankruptcy before the commissioners. Rex v. Bullock, 2 Leach, C. C. 996; 1 Taunt. 71.

A creditor has been held in equity not to be a competent witness to prove the act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Osborne, 2 Ves. & B. 177; 1 Rose, 387.

In one case the commissioners were permitted, under particular circumstances, to receive an affidavit of the act of bankruptcy made before a master extraordinary. In re Wood, 1 Rose, 298.

In another case the act of bankruptcy was not permitted to be proved by affidavit, although the same person had regularly proved the same act of bankruptcy, under a prior separate commission against him and his partners. Ex parte Rowe, 2 Rose, 339.

How Proof Made.]—A bankrupt is bound to disclose to the commissioners all the circumstances relating to his property, notwithstanding such disclosure may tend to establish an act of bankruptcy. Pratt's case, 1 Glyn & J. 58.

A petitioning creditor, under a separate commission against A., ordered to exhibit the proceedings under that commission, in order to aid the proof of an act of bankruptcy by A. under a subsequent joint commission against A. and B. Ex parte Harrison, 2 Glyn & J. 135.

There is a jurisdiction in bankruptcy to compel witnesses to attend the commissioners to prove the act of bankruptcy, reserving just exceptions. Ex parte Higgins, 11 Ves. jun. 8.

A person having a deed in his possession, that in effect amounts to an act of bankruptcy by one of the parties, may be ordered to attend the commissioners with it, without prejudice to any objection being taken before them as to disclosure of confidential communications. Ex parte Treacher, Buck, 17: S. P. Ex parte Cavokwell, 19 Ves. jun. 233; 1 Rose, 313.

Witnesses to prove the act of bankruptcy not having obeyed the summons of the commissioners, an order was made that they should attend. Ex parte Lund, 6 Ves. jun. 781.

A witness to an act of bankruptcy ordered to attend the commissioners, and prove, under penalty of costs for disobedience. Ex parte Gardner, 2 Rose, 107; 1 Ves. & B. 74: S. P. Ex parte Jones, 17 Ves. jun. 379.

(b) In Actions.

Declarations of Bankrupt.]—The declarations of a bankrupt as to any particular matter or deed which may constitute an act of bankruptcy, if made after the deed done, are not evidence. Rabson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. 233—Ellenborough.

In order to let in the declaration of the bankrupt, in proving an act of bankruptcy, what the bankrupt says must be connected or contemporaneous with the act. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 373.

A trader being pressed for payment of a debt by the attorney of a creditor, promised to give him a security on the following day; instead of which he left his place of residence, and immediately afterwards gave securities to another creditor, a relation. On his return home, at the expiration of nearly a month, the attorney of the former creditor, in the course of conversation, asked him what security he had given his relation; to which he replied, "he did not know:"—Held, that the declarations of the debtor in that conversation were admissible in evidence to support an alleged act of bankruptcy in giving the securities to his relation, by way of fraudulent preference, and to shew the conduct of the party giving them; although it was objected that the conversation took place in the absence of the person to whom the securities were given; and at too great a distance of time (a month) from the completion of the transaction—Gaselee, J. diss. Ridley v. Gyde, 2 M. & Scott, 448; 9 Bing. 349.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, the bankrupt may allow his attorney before the bankruptcy to give in evidence privileged communications, though offered as proof of the act of bankruptcy. Merle v. Moore, R. & M. 390; 2 C. and P. 275—Best.

In trespass against the sheriff and an execution creditor for seizing goods of A., which the plaintiffs claimed as assignees under a joint commission against A. and B., the plaintiffs in support of the joint commission gave evidence of acts and declarations of B., for the purpose of shewing that he had become a bankrupt:—Held, that this evidence was inadmissible; and that the court, in granting a new trial on this ground, could not limit the inquiry on such second trial to the question of B.'s bankruptcy. Bernasconi v. Farebrother, 2 B. & Adol. 372.

Who may be Witnesses.]—The bankrupt cannot be called to explain an act upon which the assignees rely as an act of bankruptcy. Sayer v. Garnet, 9 Bing. 103; 4 M. and P. 734.

Nor to explain an equivocal act of bankruptcy. Hoffman v. Pitt, 5 Esp. 22—Ellenborough.

Though in one case it was held that a bankrupt is an admissible witness to explain a doubtful act, which may be or not an act of bankruptcy; as whether an arrest relied upon as a concerted and fraudulent one was so or not. Oxlade v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Esp. 287—Kenyon.

A creditor is a witness to prove an act of bankruptcy, if he releases the assignees. Keopes v. Chapman, Peake, 19—Kenyon.

Depositions.]—The commission and proceedings are inadmissible evidence of an act of bankruptcy for the purpose of defeating a conveyance. Whitworth v. Graham, 2 Rose, 364.

Where the proceedings are produced, the act of bankruptcy, found under the proceedings shall be sufficient for the plaintiff, without proof of an actual act of bankruptcy. Pearson v. Fletcher, 5 Esp. 90—Ellenborough.

A deposition in which it is stated that the deponent saw the bankrupt execute an assignment of all his effects to a trustee, for the benefit of his creditors, is sufficient evidence of an act of bankruptcy, without producing the deed of assignment itself, such deposition being in evidence amongst the other proceedings under statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10. Kay v. Stead, 2 Stark. 200—Wood.

The depositions of the act of bankruptcy, when recorded according to 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 41, are evidence, in an action at law, to prove the precise time when the act of bankruptcy was committed, if specified therein. Jonson v. Wilson, 1 Dougl. 257.

An objection to the insufficiency of depositions to establish an act of bankruptcy must be made at the trial. Jacobs v. Latour, 2 M. & P. 20; 5 Bing. 131.

If no objection is made at the trial, it is not any ground for a new trial. Id.

The defendant, though he has given no notice to dispute, may nevertheless give evidence to disprove the act of bankruptcy. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556; 2 Rose, 269.

In an action by assignees, where no notice has been given to dispute, a deposition stating that the bankrupt absented himself, and that the bankrupt had admitted that he absented himself for the purpose of avoiding his creditors, but not specifying the time of such admission, is not prima facie evidence to prove the act of bankruptcy. Marsh v. Meager, 1 Stark. 353—Ellenb.

Upon an order to proceed to trial upon two issues, to try the validity of the commission, the plaintiff to give notice in writing to the bankrupt of the acts intended to be relied on at the trial:—Held, that the petitioner in his notice must specify the acts relied on, the times when they were committed, and the witness who will be called to prove them. Ex parte Bogen, Buck, 137.

V. PETITIONING CREDITOR.

1. Who may be.

Agents.]—A factor, who sells goods in his own name, without a del credere commission, is a good petitioning creditor against the purchaser, although he has merely communicated the name of the purchaser to his principal. Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 185; 2 Rose, 286—Ellenborough.

But he ceases to be so, when the principal has agreed with him to consider the purchaser as his debtor, and has taken steps for recovering the debt directly from the purchaser. Id.

Aliens and Traders in an Enemy's Country.]—A commission of bankrupt founded on the petition of a British subject resident here, for a debt due to himself and partners, also British subjects, but resident and carrying on trade in an enemy's country, is bad. McConnell v. Hector, 3 B. & P. 113. And see De Metton v. De Mello, 12 East, 234; 2 Camp. 420; Kensington v. Inglis, East, 275.

Even though he be naturalized in a neutral state. O'Mealey v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 482—Ellenborough.

The residence of a British subject in an enemy's country for the purpose of a trade, licensed by the government of this country, is not a disability to take out a commission. Ex parte Baglehole, 18 Ves. jun. 525; 1 Rose, 271.

The debt of such a person would be good to support the commission, if the residence be not shewn to be an adhering to the enemy. Roberts v. Hardy, 3 M. & S. 533; 2 Rose, 457.

Creditors who have signed Composition Deeds.]—If a trader commit an act of bankruptcy by assigning all his stock in trade to A., who is a party to the deed of assignment, A. cannot be a petitioning creditor grounded on that act of bankruptcy. Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 49—Ellenborough. And see Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 594.

Nor a creditor, who, without executing, has assented to the deed, by approving of acts done under it by the trustees. Back v. Gooch, 4 Camp. 232; Holt, 13—Gibbs: S. P. Hicks v. Burfitt, 4 Camp. 235, n. And see Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230; 1 Smith, 33.

So, of an absolute bill of sale. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Madd. 599.

If the petitioning creditor has acted under the deed, although he may not have executed it, he cannot avail himself of it as an act of bankruptcy, and will be liable for the costs. Ex parte Caswell, 1 Rose, 313; 19 Ves. jun. 233.

Where a creditor, being ignorant that an act of bankruptcy had been committed by his debtor, executed a composition deed for the amount of his debt, and received a dividend under it:—Held, that he might still become a petitioning creditor in respect of the original debt. Dox & Pitcher v. Anderson, 5 M. & S. 161; 1 Stark. 262.

Where a commission was sued out upon the petition of a trustee of an equitable creditor who had signed a composition deed, the court superseded the commission. Ex parte Bather, Buck, 426.

If, at a meeting of creditors, one of the creditors dissent from the execution of a deed of assignment—quære, whether he can issue a commission upon it? Ex parte Bayley, 1 Mont. & Mac. 438.

If, by a composition deed, an insolvent assign to four trustees, all his goods, for the benefit of his creditors, provided the trustees and the creditors on or before a given day prove their debts, if required, and execute the deed, and there is a covenant by the trustees and creditors that they will not arrest, implead, or prosecute the debtor, or any of his goods, chattels, lands, or tenements, on account of their debts, and on such suing or prosecution the deed shall be a discharge; and the deed is executed by two only of the trustees; the debt of a trustee who has executed it is extinguished, and he cannot sue out a commission on it. Small v. Marwood, 9 B. & C. 300; 4 M. & R. 181.

Executors.]—One of three executors may by himself be a good petitioning creditor on a debt due to the testator. Treasure v. Jones, 1 Selw. N. P. 265.

A commission may be taken out by an executor before he has obtained probate. Ex parte Paddy, 3 Madd. 241; Buck, 235.

So, a commission may be supported on a debt due to the petitioning creditor in the character of executor, although he had not obtained a probate on a sufficient stamp at the time when the commission issued, if he afterwards, before adjudication, obtain a valid probate, for that has relation back to the testator's death. Rogers v. James, 7 Taunt. 147; 2 Marsh. 425.

Husband and Wife.—A husband alone cannot be the petitioning creditor to support a commission, in respect of a debt composed partly of a sum of money due to him in his own right, and partly of a sum due to his wife dum sola. Ramsay v. George, 1 M. & S. 176; 1 Rose, 108.

But the husband alone may sue out a commission upon a note given to the wife dum sola. Ex parte Barber, 1 Glyn & J. 1.

Infants.—An infant cannot be a petitioning creditor, because he cannot enter into the necessary bond. Ex parte Barrow, 3 Ves. jun. 554.

A commission cannot be supported upon a petitioning creditor's debt, made up of debts due to several persons, if one of them be an infant and a separate creditor of the trader. Ex parte Morton, Buck, 42.

Partners.—One partner cannot be a petitioning creditor against another, unless the debt be such as he might maintain an action upon. Windham v. Patterson, 1 Stark. 144; 2 Rose, 466—Ellenborough. And see Marson v. Barber, Gow, 17.

But it is no objection that the petitioning creditor was in partnership with the bankrupt in a particular transaction, provided the debt does not arise out of that particular transaction. Id.

If one of three partners undertake to provide for two bills drawn by the three, and accepted by a fourth person, such three partners cannot be petitioning creditors on a commission against the acceptor, although the conduct of the partner may, as against his co-partners, have been fraudulent. Richmond v. Heapy, 1 Stark. 202: S. C. not S. P. 4 Camp. 207—Ellenborough.

A commission cannot be supported on the petition of one only of two partners to whom a joint debt is due. Buckland v. Newsome, 1 Taunt. 477; 1 Camp. 474.

Other Persons.—Creditors having collateral securities for their debts may still be petitioning creditors,—as mortgagees. Ex parte Jackson, 5 Ves. jun. 357; Ex parte Topham, 1 Madd. 38.

Holder of warrants of attorney. Miles v. Roselyns, 4 Esp. 194—Ellenborough.

Judgment creditors. Bryant v. Withers, 2 M. & S. 123; 2 Ross, 8.

Holder of bills or notes. Ex parte Douthat, 4 B. & A. 67.

By a private act of parliament, intituled "An Act to enable the Norwich Union Society to sue in the name of their secretary, and to be sued in the names of their directors, treasurer, and secretary," that society were empowered to commence and prosecute all actions and suits in the name of their secretary as the nominal plaintiff:—Held, that it did not empower the secretary to sue out a commission of bankruptcy on behalf of the society, against a person indebted to them as a society. Guthrie v. Fisk, 5 D. & R. 24; 3 B. & C. 178; 3 Stark. 153.

If a creditor has received and transferred a bill of exchange, the holder of the bill is the proper petitioning creditor. Ex parte Botten, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 412.

The having proved under a former invalid commission, will not of itself prevent a man from being a petitioning creditor. Beardmore v. Shaw, 1 N. R. 263.

But the debt of a creditor, who has joined in a petition to supersede a prior commission, and proved his debt under a second commission, coupled with an act of bankruptcy prior to that on which the second commission is founded, may be set up to defeat such second commission, by a defendant in an action at the suit of the assignees under that commission. Id.

Semble, that an uncertificated bankrupt can petition for a commission if his assignees make no claim to the debts. Ex parte Cartwright, 2 Rose, 230.

But a bankrupt who has not paid 15s. in the pound under a second commission, although he has obtained his certificate under it, cannot be a petitioning creditor. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Mont. & M. 44.

A party who has been discharged twice under the insolvent act, and is afterwards bankrupt, and not paid 15s. in the pound, cannot have property, and therefore cannot be a petitioning creditor. Ex parte Mascarnas, 1 Deac. & Chit. 507.

Assignees may sue out a commission in respect of a debt due to their bankrupt. Ex parte Blakey, 1 Glyn & J. 197.

So, though one of the assignees be a solvent partner of the bankrupt, if the debt be a partnership debt. Id.

A petitioning creditor who has neglected to prosecute a commission, shall not have another. Ex parte Masterman, 2 Rose, 443.

2. Duty of Petitioning Creditor.

To attend Meeting for Adjudication.—The presence of the petitioning creditor at the meeting to declare the party a bankrupt, is required by a general order of Lord Rosslyn, 26th of November, 1798. Ex parte Edwards, 18 Ves. jun. 318.

Such attendance is not dispensed with on the ground of inconvenience to himself. Ex parte Williamson, 1 J. & W. 240.

A distance of 80 miles is not a cause for non-attendance. Ex parte Cox, 1 Mont. 390; 1 Deac. & Chit. 205.

A distance of 200 miles allowed. Ex parte Ross, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 265; 1 Deac. & Chit. 552.

The petitioning creditor to a separate commission against A. will not be compelled to attend to give evidence in support of a subsequent joint commission against the same party and his co-partner. Ex parte Stones, 1 Glyn & J. 7.

Other Matters.]—The petitioning creditor is bound to give every information in his power upon every subject which comes within his knowledge as petitioning creditor. Ex parte Graves, 1 Glyn & J. 86.

A petitioning creditor is bound to be assistant to the commission in all its stages; therefore, where a petitioning creditor had declared a commission to be invalid, he was held liable for the costs of inquiries occasioned by that declaration. Ex parte Glossop, 2 Rose, 386.

He is responsible for the production of a bill of exchange upon the direct proof of which his debt has been established. Id.

In one case, the petitioning creditor was directed to have the management of the defence to an action brought by the bankrupt, to try the validity of his commission, but the assignee to be fully indemnified. Ex parte Stewart, 2 Rose, 6.

3. Liability of Petitioning Creditor.

(a) Generally.

The petitioning creditor is to sue for and prosecute the commission at his own costs until the choice of assignees. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 14.

By statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 25, the petitioning creditor was liable to pay the costs and expenses incurred in suing out and prosecuting a commission, until the assignees were chosen; therefore it was held on that statute, that an action for the expenses of suing out and prosecuting a commission, till the choice of assignees, could not be maintained against the petitioning creditor and another person jointly, who had been appointed assignees. Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 275—Ellenborough.

A petitioning creditor cannot petition to be paid his taxed bill by a removed assignee, unless he charges collusion. In re Gibson, 1 Glyn & J. 303.

Where an attorney is employed by one person to sue out a commission on the petition of another person, the person so employing the attorney, and not the petitioning creditor, is the person liable to pay the attorney the costs of suing out the commission. Pocock v. Russell, 4 C. & P. 14; S. C. nom. Pocock v. Russen, M. & M. 357—Tenterden.

Quære, if an attorney can guarantee the petitioning creditor against the costs of the commission, on condition of being employed as solicitor to the commission? Gillett v. Rippon, M. & M. 406—Tenterden. And see Murray v. Reeves, 8 B. & C. 421.

It is a contempt of the great seal for a petitioning creditor to strike a docket at the instance of a solicitor who undertakes to prove the act of bankruptcy, and to guarantee him against any expenses he may be put to by issuing the commission; and the court therefore will not, upon the petition of such a creditor, tax the solicitor's bill of costs. Ex parte Wilson, Buck, 306.

The assignees, after the trial of an action commenced by them, where it appeared that there was not a sufficient trading to support the commission, and after acts under the commission, presented a petition to have the commission superseded, and that all costs and expenses incurred might be paid by the petitioning creditor:—Held, that the application came too late, and that the petitioning creditor was not responsible. Ex parte Paul, 1 Mont. & Mac. 185.

The Chancellor had not jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order the petitioning creditor to pay the solicitor's bill up to the choice of assignees. Ex parte —, Buck, 475.

Rule as to the liability of the original petitioning creditor for costs upon substitution of a petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Cousins, 2 Glyn & J. 270.

A petitioning creditor was allowed his costs of resisting an application to supersede the commission out of the bankrupt's estate. Ex parte Bottomley, 5 Madd. 91.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 32, in actions against the petitioning creditor, either alone or jointly with others, for any thing done under the commissioner's warrant, proof of the fact of his being so is sufficient, in the same manner, and to the same extent as if he had himself committed the act.

VI. PETITIONING CREDITOR'S DEBT.

1. Amount.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 15, the petitioner's debt, if a single debt, due to one creditor, or more, being partners, must amount to 100*l.* or upwards: if due to two separate creditors to 150*l.* or upwards; and if due to three or more separate creditors to 200*l.* or upwards.

A commission sued out upon the affidavits of four petitioning creditors, whose debts did not appear upon the face of those affidavits to amount to 200*l.*, was not void under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 23; the provision respecting such affidavits being directory only, and not conditional. Hill v. Neale, 2 N. R. 196.

Quære, whether proof of a debt of 161*l.* to one of the petitioning creditors, there being more than three, will support a commission? Smith v. Miles, 1 T. R. 475.

2. Time of accruing.

(a) Whilst Bankrupt a Trader.

A party must be a trader at the time of the petitioning creditor's debt; but if that was contracted while he was a trader, and he leave off trade, he may still become a bankrupt. Dec. 1

Barnard v. Lawrence, 2 C. & P. 134—Abbott: S. P. Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64.

But if the debt be contracted whilst he is in trade, and a bond be given for it afterwards, it is sufficient. Id.

And a debt contracted before a man entered into trade is sufficient. Butcher v. Easto, 1 Dougl. 293.

A commission may be supported on a debt accruing before the bankrupt became a trader, and an act of bankruptcy committed after he has ceased to be a trader. Baile v. Grant, 9 Bing. 121; 2 M. & Scott, 193.

(b) Before Act of Bankruptcy.

Generally.]—Although the petitioning creditor's debt must have accrued, and be due at the time of the act of bankruptcy, it need not then be payable; for a person who has given credit to a trader upon valuable consideration for any sum payable at a certain day, which may not have arrived at the time of the act of bankruptcy, may, nevertheless, be a petitioning creditor in respect of such debt, whether he shall have any security in writing, or otherwise, for such sum or not. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 15.

The debt must be a subsisting debt at the time of the act of bankruptcy upon which the commission is grounded; it is not sufficient that the debt accrued before the commission was sued out. Moss v. Smith, 1 Camp. 489—Ellenborough.

And rule for a new trial was refused. Id.

And that fact should appear upon the deposition. Lawson v. Robinson, 1 Stark. 456—Ellenb. S. P. Clarke v. Askep, 1 Stark. 457; Key v. Cook, 2 M. & P. 720. And see Thackrah v. Wood, 3 Stark. 141.

Where C. before the act of bankruptcy, accepted, for the accommodation of the bankrupt, a bill drawn by him, and, after the act of bankruptcy, paid the amount of the bill to T. S., to whom it had been negotiated:—Held, that such payment did not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Holding, 1 Glyn & J. 97.

Upon proof that a good debt once existed, the law will presume that it continued down to the time of the bankruptcy. Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 50—Ellenborough.

But in a late case the contrary was held. Gresley v. Price, 2 C. & P. 48—Abbott.

If it be necessary to prove a good petitioning creditor's debt on the 20th May, it is not sufficient to shew that on the 29th of January previous, a sum of 700*l.* was due, and that there were receipts and payments afterwards; but it must be proved that on the specific day as much as 100*l.* was owing. Id.

It is prima facie evidence that a promissory note was in existence before an act of bankruptcy, that it is proved to have been in existence before the docket is struck, and bears date on the face of it before the act of bankruptcy. Obbard v. Betham, M. & M. 486—Tenterden.

The date of a promissory note made by a bankrupt is prima facie evidence to shew that the note existed before the act of bankruptcy was committed. Taylor v. Kinloch, 1 Stark. 175—Ellenb.

But no declaration by the bankrupt, whether oral or written, subsequent to his bankruptcy, would be admissible in evidence to prove this. Id.

If, in an action against the sheriff, the defendant do not give notice to dispute the requisites to support the commission, and the assignees give evidence of an act of bankruptcy committed between the sale and issuing the commission, it seems that they must prove the petitioning creditor's debt before the act of bankruptcy:—the judges equally divided. Norman v. Booth, 10 B. & C. 703.

On Bills not due.]—Where the petitioning creditor's debt is a bill drawn by the bankrupt, and indorsed to the petitioning creditor, evidence must be adduced that it was indorsed before the suing out of the commission. Rose v. Rowcroft, 4 Camp. 245—Gibbs: S. P. Dixon v. Evans, 6 T. R. 59, overruling Anon. 2 Wils. 135; Bingley v. Mallison, 3 Dougl. 333.

So, where the debt arises on a note indorsed, or a bill accepted by the bankrupt, evidence must be given that the indorsement or acceptance was prior to the act of bankruptcy: the mere production of the instrument bearing an earlier date is insufficient. Coele v. Harris, M. & M. 141—Tenterden.

But if the course of dealing between the parties raises the presumption that the petitioning creditor received the bill before the act of bankruptcy, it is prima facie sufficient. Id.

The petitioning creditor's debt did not amount to 100*l.* at the time of the act of bankruptcy, but was increased to a little more than 100*l.* by a note of the bankrupt, due at that time, being indorsed to him before he petitioned for the commission; this debt was deemed sufficient to support the commission. Glaister v. Hewer, 7 T. R. 498.

Bills to the amount of 100*l.* drawn and issued by a trader before an act of bankruptcy, but becoming due afterwards, are sufficient, when due, to found a petition for a commission against him. Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213; 1 Rose, 102.

But note, the bankrupt was in fact indebted to different persons at the time of the act of bankruptcy in more than 100*l.* even allowing the rebate of interest upon the bills, calculated back to that period. Id.

So, where A., having drawn a bill for 148*l.* in favour of B., to whom he was previously indebted to that amount, committed an act of bankruptcy before the bill became due, or had been presented for acceptance:—Held, that such bill was a good petitioning creditor's debt, although it appeared that it had been duly presented and paid by the acceptors subsequently to the commission. Ex parte Douthat, 4 B. & A. 67.

If two persons exchange acceptances, and, before the bills are mature, one of the acceptors commits an act of bankruptcy, there is not such a debt due from him to the other as will sustain a commission before the other has paid his own acceptance. Serrett v. Austin, 4 Taunt. 200; 2 Rose, 112.

Semble, that evidence of the mere fact of a bankrupt having drawn or indorsed a bill for 100*l.*, and of its being over-due in the hands of a holder, is not of itself sufficient proof of a petitioning creditor's debt, without shewing a default by the acceptor. Giles v. Powell, 2 C. & P. 259—Best.

So, where the petitioning creditor's debt was created by his giving a check to the bankrupt on his bankers:—Held, that payment of the check must be proved, it not being sufficient, especially as the bankrupt's papers had come to the hands of the petitioning creditor, to prove that the check came to his hands again, and that the bankers, the day after the date of it, paid on his account to the bankers of the bankrupt a sum corresponding in amount with the check. Bleasby v. Crossley, 3 Bing. 430; 11 Moore, 327; 2 C. & P. 213.

A. purchases coals of B., and agrees to give him a bill for part of the purchase, payable at two months: A. afterwards sends to B. a paper purporting to be a bill accepted by him, with a blank left for the name of B. as the drawer. B. keeps the paper, but does not fill up the blank till after he had sued out a commission against A.:—Held, that the bill did not constitute a valid petitioning creditor's debt, and that B. having elected to keep the bill could not prove his debt. Ex parte Farenden, Buck, 34.

By deed of the 10th of June, 1780, made on the marriage of the bankrupt, his estate was limited to himself for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to T. G. for 500 years, in trust, in case the wife should die in the lifetime of her husband without issue between them, to raise by sale or mortgage, after the death of the husband, 300*l.*, and pay the same as the wife should by deed or will appoint; in June, 1809, the bankrupt borrowed 500*l.*, and, for securing the same, he and his wife, after levying a fine, together with T. G., executed a mortgage of the estate, and the bankrupt gave T. G. his promissory note for 200*l.*, payable on demand, as part of the sum of 300*l.* secured by the settlement:—Held, that the note was not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Page, 1 Glyn & J. 100.

It has been doubted whether a debt founded upon notes of a country banker, payable on demand, where no demand had been made, is sufficient to support a commission. Simpson v. Sykes, 6 M. & S. 295.

Where there was a debt due for money had and received, and the same was secured by a note on an improper stamp, the debt was held sufficient to support a sequestration in Scotland. Geddes v. Mowat, 1 Glyn & J. 414.

Where Credit not expired.—Before the late statute, only such persons as had written securities for their debts could be petitioning creditors, by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 22, where the debt was not actually payable at the time of the act of bankruptcy; accordingly it was held, that a debt due upon an executory contract would not be good to found a commission, unless it was upon a written security. Ex parte White, 3 Ves. & B. 130. But see 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 15.

Therefore, a debt due for goods, where the credit was not expired, was not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Cox v. Cripps, 9 East, 504.

Goods sold, payable for, by the custom of the trade, two months after the sale, did not create a debt to support a commission, until the time of credit had elapsed. Ex parte Roberts, 1 Madd. 72; 2 Rose, 378.

Nor was a debt for goods sold upon an agreement to be paid for by a present bill, payable at a future day. Hoskins v. Duperoy, 9 East, 498; 6 Esp. 58. But see Henbest v. Brown, Peake, 54.

Where goods were sold to be paid for by a bill at four months, and no bill was given, there was not a good petitioning creditor's debt arising from this sale for the seller to support a commission against the purchaser, till the four months had expired. Cothay v. Murray, 1 Camp. 235—Ellenborough.

Upon a sale of goods at six or nine month's credit, the purchaser, by not paying at the end of six months, made his election to take credit for the nine months, and there was no debt to support a commission till the nine months were expired. Price v. Nixon, 5 Taunt. 338; 2 Rose, 438.

If a party agree to take a work which is to be published in eighteen months, at intervals of two months, the debt due for the numbers delivered is sufficient. Mavor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2 C. & P. 91.

A debt for money lent on mortgage, payable after six months' notice, such notice not to expire before a certain day, is a good petitioning creditor's debt, without any notice given, and more than six months before that day. Hill v. Harris, M. & M. 448—Tenterden.

(c) Another Act of Bankruptcy.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 19, no commission shall be deemed invalid by reason of any act of bankruptcy prior to the debt of the petitioning creditor, provided there be a sufficient act of bankruptcy subsequent to such debt.

Neither the bankrupt, nor any person claiming from him by assignment, subsequent to the commission, shall be permitted in an action at law to question the validity of such commission, and recover from assignees the property of the bankrupt taken under it, by proving an act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt prior to the petitioning creditor's debt; though it be also shewn that there was a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt existing at the time of such prior act of bankruptcy, whereon a better commission might have been sued out. Donovan v. Duff, 9 East, 21: S. C. nom. Kennet v. Duff, 2 Smith, 44: S. P. Bryant v. Withers, 2 M. & S. 123, 131; 2 Rose, 8; Parker v. Manning, 2 Esp. 598, n.

Though it is shewn that an act of bankruptcy has been committed, the party impeaching the existing commission, must shew a petitioning creditor's debt then legally subsisting to support a commission. Miles v. Rawlins, 4 Esp. 194—Ellenborough.

The creditors at large of a bankrupt, represented by the assignees, cannot avail themselves of an act of bankruptcy prior to the one on which the commission is founded, but which the petitioning creditor could not take advantage of, on account of being privy to it, inasmuch as the assignees derive all their rights under the commission from the petitioning creditor. Tope v. Hockin, 7 B. & C. 101; 9 D. & R. 881.

3. Must not be discharged.

A., a creditor of B. to the amount of 115*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*, took his bill for 20*l.* on C., who had not then, nor afterwards, any effects of B. in his hands: the bill, when due, was dishonoured, and no notice thereof was given by A. to B.:—Held, that A.'s demand was not discharged; but that his debt would support a commission against B. Bickerdike v. Bellman, 1 T. R. 405.

A creditor to the amount of 112*l.* previous to the bankruptcy, receiving 50*l.* after notice of an act of bankruptcy, is not thereby precluded from suing out a commission, for by that act he waives his claim to the payment; and he may still retain the money in his hands for the credit of the estate. Mann v. Shepherd, 6 T. R. 79.

If there is a good petitioning creditor's debt at the time of the act of bankruptcy, after which payments are made and credits given, but there is 100*l.* due, though if the payments are applied in order of time, they will be sufficient to discharge the balance due at the time of the act of bankruptcy, there is a good petitioning creditor's debt. Shaw v. Harvey, M. & M. 526—Tenterden.

A debt which the creditor has covenanted with the debtor not to sue him for, is not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Small v. Marwood, 4 M. & R. 181; 9 B. & C. 300.

If a bill of sale of goods be given in satisfaction of a bond debt, and it is afterwards discovered that the obligor had previously committed an act of bankruptcy, the obligee may abandon the bill of sale, and sue out a commission against the obligor, and a co-obligor cannot plead this bill as an accord and satisfaction. Hall v. Smallwood, Peake's Add. Cas. 13—Kenyon.

Where the consignee transfers bills of lading to a creditor, as a security for his debt, and the consignor stops the goods in transitu, the consignor may issue a fiat against the consignee on his original debt. Ex parte Ashton, 2 Deac. & Chit. 5.

4. Must be maintainable by Action.

(a) Parties.

To support a commission, where there is only one petitioning creditor, there must be a debt due to him separately, for which he could maintain an action at law in his own name. Buckland v. Newsome, 1 Taunt. 477; 1 Camp. 474.

Therefore, one of two obligees is not by himself a good petitioning creditor against the obligor. Id.

The debt must be due from the bankrupt in his own right, and not in autre droit, as executor or otherwise. Pattison v. Banks, Cowp. 540.

(b) Statute of Limitations.

A debt which could not be recovered in an action against a plea of the statute of limitations, nor in equity by analogy to it, will not be a good petitioning creditor's debt to support a bankruptcy. Ex parte Dewdney, 15 Ves. jun. 479.

Where the plaintiff sued two partners in K. B., in 1812, for a debt of 1000*l.*, and one of them being abroad, writs were issued against him with a view to outlawry; but a commission having issued against the other partner resident in this country, the proceedings as to the outlawry were suspended, and the absent partner never returned to this country, except by touching at Deal, in 1814, for a mere temporary purpose, on his passage from one foreign port to another; and, in 1821, the plaintiff commenced a fresh action in K. B. against him for the same debt; but, being unable to arrest him, issued a commission against him in that year; and he afterwards brought an action against the plaintiff to try the validity of the commission, but, previously to the trial, the latter entered up continuances in the action commenced in 1812:—Held, that, at the time of issuing the commission, the debt was a good petitioning creditor's debt, and sufficient to support such commission. Gregory v. Hurrill, 8 Moore, 189; 1 Bing. 324. And see S. C. 6 Moore, 525; 3 B. & B. 212; 5 B. & C. 341; 8 D. & R. 270.

A debtor to a bankrupt, when sued by his assignee, cannot set up the statute of limitations as an objection to the petitioning creditor's debt. Id.

Objection, that the petitioning creditor's debt was of more than ten years' standing, cannot be taken advantage of by a third person, where the bankrupt submitted to the commission. Quantock v. England, 5 Burr. 2628; 2 W. Black. 702.

Where a verdict is found for the plaintiff in an action by assignees, on a contract entered into with a bankrupt before his bankruptcy, it is no ground for setting aside the verdict, that it did not appear that 100*l.* of the petitioning creditor's debt was contracted within six years before the suing out of the commission. Mavor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2; 2 C. & P. 91.

(c) Insolvent's Discharge.

A creditor of an insolvent trader may, after his discharge under the 53 Geo. 3, c. 102, take out a commission of bankruptcy against him; and his debt, although included in the insolvent's schedule, will be a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt. Jellis v. Mountford, 4 B. & A. 256. And see Beardmore v. Shaw, 1 N. R. 263.

A creditor whose debt had been omitted in the schedule filed in the Insolvents' Court by an insolvent who had obtained his discharge, might maintain a commission founded on that debt. Ex parte Shuttleworth, 2 Glyn & J. 68.

(d) Debts due on Judgments.

A plaintiff, in an action, for a breach of promise of marriage, having recovered above 100l. damages against a trader, who, between verdict and judgment, committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the debt due upon the judgment after it was entered up, was not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Charles, 14 East, 197; 1 Rose, 372; 16 Ves. jun. 256. And see Buss v. Gilbert, 2 M. & S. 70.

It is no objection to a commission when the petitioning creditor's debt is on a judgment, that, prior to presenting a petition for a commission, the petitioning creditor had not relinquished his judgment. Bryant v. Withers, 2 Rose, 8; 2 M. & S. 123.

A debt for money lent, due to a creditor at the time when an act of bankruptcy is committed by the debtor, is sufficient to support a commission against him, though afterwards, and before petitioning for such commission, the creditor obtains judgment against him for a sum of money including such debt. Id.

A judgment creditor, who has taken his debtor in execution, cannot afterwards sue out a commission against him upon the same debt. Cohen v. Cunningham, 8 T. R. 123.

A petitioning creditor, who, shortly before the commission, had taken out execution against the bankrupt for part of the debt on which the commission issued, was ordered to furnish the assignees with the particulars of his debt, and the time at which it was contracted, in aid of an action brought by the assignees against the sheriff impeaching the execution, on the ground of its being overreached by an act of bankruptcy, which was available against the execution, if a competent part of the petitioning creditor's debt was contracted before it. Ex parte Glover, 2 Glyn & J. 60.

(c) Other Cases.

Arising from Awards.—A sum awarded by arbitrators may constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt. Dawce v. Holdsworth, Peake, 64—Kenyon.

If the award be not bad on the face of it. Ex parte Lowndes, 1 Mont. 24.

Or the submission void. Antram v. Chace, 15 East, 209; 1 Rose, 344.

Money due for Costs.—Taxed costs upon a judgment as in case of a nonsuit under a rule of court, do not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt; such costs being recoverable only by attachment, in the nature of execution. Ex parte Stevenson, 1 M. & M. 262.

Debts arising out of equitable Rights.—A commission cannot be taken out upon an equitable debt. Ex parte Sutton, 11 Ves. jun. 163: S. P. Ex parte Hawthorn, 1 Mont. 132.

Therefore a claim founded on a decree of a court of equity, for interest in a suit for a specific performance of an agreement, is not sufficient. Carpenter v. Thornton, 3 B. & A. 52.

Nor is a claim arising out of an equitable mortgage a good debt. Ex parte Yonge, 3 Ves. & B. 31; 2 Rose, 40.

For Interest.—Interest cannot be added to the principal sum due on a bill, so as to constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt, unless specially made payable on the face of the bill. Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 305: S. P. In re Burgess, 2 Moore, 745; 8 Taunt. 660.

Even though the bill be noted and protested according to the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17. Ex parte Greenway, Buck, 412.

Attorney's Bills.—A solicitor may sue out a commission upon his debt for costs, without, as in the case of an action, having delivered his bill one month previous thereto, under stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 22. Ex parte Sutton, 11 Ves. jun. 163.

But it is quite of course after the commission to refer such bill to the Master to be taxed. Ex parte Howell, 1 Rose, 312.

For his debt must be afterwards examined. Ex parte Steele, 16 Ves. jun. 166.

Where a commission is taken out upon a debt due to a solicitor for costs, any creditor may have the bill of costs taxed, if the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy was not concluded. Ex parte Prideaux, 1 Glyn & J. 28.

Other Cases.—A debt founded on an illegal consideration is not a good petitioning creditor's debt. Wells v. Girling, 1 B. & B. 447; 4 Moore, 78.

Where A. deposits with B. goods to be sold, and, on a sale being effected, the profits, after deducting the cost price, &c. are to be equally divided between them; but the loss, if any, is to be borne exclusively by A.; if B. effect a sale and receive the money, the debt due from him to A. is sufficient to support a commission against B. Marson v. Barber, Gow, 17—Dallas.

A delivery of saltpetre to the bankrupt, a refiner, to be refined, and no demand made till after bankruptcy:—Held, not to constitute a debt within the meaning of the bankrupt laws. Assen Lofft, 341.

5. Proof under Fiat.

If a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt on bills be legally proved at a meeting of commissioners, who thereupon declare the acceptor a bankrupt, the subsequent loss of the bill affords no ground to impugn the commission in an action by the assignee for conversion of goods belonging to the estate. Poeley v. Millard, 1 Tyr. 391; 1 C. & J. 411.

The deposition of a petitioning creditor, that the bankrupt was indebted to him upon and by virtue of certain bills, at and before the date and suing forth of the commission, which bills appeared by a schedule underwritten to have been drawn and indorsed by the bankrupt, is not sufficient, as it should have been shown that the bills were indorsed to the petitioning creditor before the act of bankruptcy. Key v. Cook, 2 M. & P. 720.

Where the petitioner swore positively to a debt, and was contradicted by the bankrupt, there being no other evidence, an issue was directed, at the trial of which the bankrupt and the petitioner were to be examined. Ex parte Williamson, Buck, 546.

6. Proof in Actions.

Declarations of Bankrupt.]—Declarations made by a bankrupt before and after the issuing of a commission against him, are inadmissible in evidence to shew that it was founded in fraud. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 5 Moore, 129; 2 B. & B. 388.

A declaration made by a bankrupt, previous to his bankruptcy, "that he did not owe 10*l.* to any one, and inquired whether a friendly commission could not be issued out against him," is admissible in evidence, to shew a collusion between the bankrupt and petitioning creditor to create a debt, although the latter was not an assignee under the commission. Thomson v. Bridges, 2 Moore, 376.

To prove a petitioning creditor's debt, an account signed by the bankrupt, charging himself with a balance brought over on a day before the bankruptcy, is not admissible evidence, without positive proof that the bankrupt allowed the account before the bankruptcy. Hoare v. Coryton, 4 Taunt. 560; 2 Rose, 158.

An acknowledgment by the bankrupt, that, before the act of bankruptcy, he owed the petitioning creditor above 100*l.*, made before the suing out of the commission, is evidence to prove the petitioning creditor's debt. Downton v. Cross, 1 Esp. 168—Kenyon.

In an action by assignees, entries made by the bankrupt in his books before the act of bankruptcy, are good evidence to prove the petitioning creditor's debt. Watts v. Thorpe, 1 Camp. 376—Ellenborough.

In an action by a bankrupt against the petitioning creditor, to try the validity of the commission, proof that the bankrupt and petitioning creditor attended the second meeting of the commissioners, and discussed before them the debt due to the petitioning creditor, and produced their accounts, and that the bankrupt objected to part of the petitioning creditor's account, and the commissioners ticked off such items in it as they allowed, and struck a balance of 169*l.*, was held to be evidence to be left to the jury, of an implied admission by the bankrupt, from his conduct and demeanour before the commissioners, that such a balance was due, but not of an adjudication by them, by their own authority, or of an award made by them with the consent of parties; and therefore, where it had been so left to the jury, the Court granted a new trial. Jarrett v. Leonard, 2 M. & S. 265; 2 Rose, 262.

An acknowledgment of a debt by a trader, made after an act of bankruptcy, though before the issuing of the commission, is not admissible in evidence, in an action by his assignees, to prove the petitioning creditor's debt. Smallcombe v. Bruges, M'Clel. 45; 13 Price, 136.

Creditors.]—An affidavit to procure a commission of bankruptcy, in which the party swears that the party is indebted to the deponent in the sum of 100*l.* and upwards, and is become bankrupt, is, as against the deponent, conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy in any ulterior proceedings. Ledbetter v. Salt, 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597; S. P. Harmer v. Davis, 1 Moore, 390; 7 Taunt. 577; Gervis v. Wootton Canal Company, 5 M. & S. 76; Gibbons v. Phillips, 7 B. & C. 529.

In an action against the sheriff for a false return to a fi. fa., where the defence rests on the validity of a commission of bankruptcy, if it appears that the assignees are the real parties, a declaration by one of them, who was the petitioning creditor, made subsequently to the suing out of the commission, that the bankrupt did not owe him 100*l.*, is admissible evidence on the part of the plaintiff. Dowden v. Fowle, 4 Camp. 38; 2 Rose, 283—Dampier.

An admission respecting his debt, made by the petitioning creditor, is admissible evidence in an action in which the validity of the commission of bankruptcy comes in question. Young v. London (Sheriffs), 6 Esp. 121—Mansfield.

And assignee having released his claim as a creditor on the estate, is a competent witness to support the petitioning creditor's debt, as he merely stands in the situation of trustee to such estate. Tomlinson v. Wilkes, 5 Moore, 172; 2 B. & B. 397. And see Ward v. Wilkinson, 4 B. & A. 410.

A creditor under a former commission of bankruptcy, to whom the bankrupt made a promise to pay, is an incompetent witness to prove the petitioning creditor's debt under a second commission. Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 736—Eyre.

Depositions.]—In an action for goods sold, by the assignees of A., against whom a commission was sued out on the petition of the assignees of B., and no notice being given to dispute the validity of the commission:—Held, under the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, that the production of the proceedings under A.'s commission was sufficient evidence of the petitioning creditor's debt, without the defendant's going into any evidence of the validity of B.'s commission, or that the petitioning creditors were his assignees. Skaise v. Howard, 4 D. & R. 37; 2 B. & C. 560.

But depositions taken under a commission are not conclusive evidence of such debt under that statute. Cooper v. Mackin, 8 Moore, 536; 1 Bing. 426. And see Foster v. Compton, 2 Stark. 364.

In trover by assignees against the sheriff and an execution creditor, where the defendants had given notice under the statute that they intended to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt: proof by the plaintiffs that one of the defendants, the execution creditor, had proved his debt, is no proof of the petitioning creditor's debt, either against the sheriff or such execution creditor. Rankin v. Horner, 16 East, 191.

In an action by assignees, if no notice have been given under the 49 Geo. 3, the petitioning creditor's debt is sufficiently proved by his deposition. Biase v. Randall, 3 Camp. 493—Lawrence.

Where a petitioning creditor's debt is proved by the depositions under the provisions of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92, it is not competent for the defendant to prove that such petitioning creditor's debt was a fraudulent contrivance between the bankrupt and the petitioning creditor. Young v. Timmins, 1 C. & J. 148; 1 Tyr. 15.

7. Substitution.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 18, if, after adjudication, the petitioning creditor's debt shall be found insufficient, the Chancellor, on the application of any creditor who has proved a debt incurred not anterior to the petitioning creditor's debt, and sufficient to support the commission, may order the commission to be proceeded in.

This is applicable to a case not only of deficiency in the amount, but to an original defect in the nature of the debt. Ex parte Hall, 1 Mont. & Mac. 39.

The debt must be found insufficient before the Chancellor can order a new debt to be substituted. Muskett v. Drummond, 10 B. & C. 153.

Quære, whether an order of substitution is sufficient to support the commission in an action commenced by the assignees against a debtor before the order is made? Id.

An order was made by the Chancellor, whereby, after reciting a petition to him by one of the assignees, he ordered, that, if the commissioners should be satisfied that such assignee had proved under the commission against B. a debt sufficient to support the commission, contracted not anterior to the petitioning creditor's debt, the commission should be proceeded in:—Held, that this was not a valid order, inasmuch as it did not find, or call upon the commissioners to find, that the original petitioning creditor's debt was insufficient. Id.

The debt should be expunged before the application to the court for the substitution of another debt to support the commission. Ex parte Chapell, 2 Glyn & J. 131.

But, although a previous application to the commissioners be required, an order by them to expunge the petitioning creditor's debt is not absolutely necessary. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 44.

Quære, whether an order of the Court of Review in bankruptcy (under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 18, and the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 2), for substituting another debt to support a commission, in lieu of that of the original petitioning creditor, can be used to the prejudice of a party who has already brought an action, in which he seeks to impeach the validity of the commission by reason of the insufficiency of the petitioning creditors debt? Aireton v. Davis, 3 M. & Scott, 138.

8. Under joint and separate Fiats.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 16, any creditor whose debt is sufficient to entitle him to petition for a commission against all the partners of a firm, may petition against one or more of such partners.

A joint creditor is a good petitioning creditor for a separate commission. Ex parte Elton, 3 Ves. jun. 239: S. P. Ex parte Deodney, 15 Ves. jun. 499. And see Ex parte Ackerman, 14 Ves. jun. 604; Ex parte Chandler, 9 Ves. jun. 35.

9. Forfeiture.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 8, every petitioning creditor receiving money, gift, delivery, satisfaction, or security for his debt, after a docket struck, whereby he may receive more than the other creditors, forfeits his whole debt, and must repay or deliver up such money, &c. to such person as the commissioners shall appoint, for the benefit of the creditors.

This is similar to the enactment in 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 25.

Under the 5 Geo. 2, it was held, that a creditor, by compromising his debt after having struck a docket, forfeited the debt. Ex parte Gedge, 3 Ves. jun. 349.

So, where he received his debt from the bankrupt with the knowledge of two or three of the creditors. Ex parte Brine, Buck, 108.

Security or satisfaction taken after a docket struck, not followed by a commission, though it cannot be retained, and may amount to contempt, was not within the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24: the original debt therefore not forfeited. Ex parte Browne, 15 Ves. jun. 472.

Under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24, the creditor forfeited the whole of his debt, whether the composition made by him extended to the whole, or to a part only. Ex parte Vernon, 2 Cox, 61.

And the forfeiture took place as well under a commission founded on any other act of bankruptcy, as upon the act thereby created. Id.

W. & T. arrested M. & S. for debt, and shortly afterwards issued a commission against them; but, after proving their debt, abandoned the commission in order to proceed against the bail in the action. They then obtained the joint note of H. (one of the bail), and of M. & S., and compelled H. to pay the note; soon after which a second commission issued against S. as surviving partner of M. After giving this note, the bail took an assignment from M. & S. of all their stock in trade, &c. as an indemnity against the consequences of becoming bail: Held, that none of these circumstances operated as a forfeiture of the debt of W. & T. within the meaning of the 8th section of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Ex parte Green, 1 Deac. & Chit. 230.

Quære, whether, in case of such a forfeiture of the debt by the petitioning creditor, the court of bankruptcy can order him to pay over the amount to the assignees? Id.

A petition by an assignee, praying that the petitioning creditor under a prior commission, who had received a sum of money from the bankrupt on condition of not proceeding with such commission, and had accordingly abandoned such commission, might refund the money so received, was dismissed by the Chancellor with costs, on the ground that the court had not jurisdiction. Ex parte Marshall, 2 Glyn & J. 53.

VII. DOCKET.

1. Affidavit of Petitioning Creditor.

Statutes.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 13, the pe-petitioning creditor must make an affidavit before a master ordinary or extraordinary in Chancery of the truth of his debt before a commission issues.

And the same is necessary for a fiat; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 12.

The provision requiring an affidavit, on striking a docket, that the party is bankrupt, is directory only, and the commission would be valid without any such affidavit. Simpson v. Sikes, 6 M. & S. 311: S. P. Wydown's case, 14 Ves. jun. 80.

A docket is not to be struck without a solid ground of belief that an act of bankruptcy has been committed. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. jun. 145.

Swearing.]—It was held to be an objection to the affidavit that it was sworn before the solicitor to the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Elford, 2 Glyn & J. 65. And see Ex parte White, 1 Mont. & Mac. 44.

But where there are two dockets, the one which is founded on an affidavit not sworn before the solicitor will be preferred. Anon. 1 Mont. 137.

A docket on an affidavit sworn in Ireland was refused. Id.

An affidavit upon which a commission has issued cannot be re-sworn to correct an error in it, a new docket must be struck. In re Rutledge, 2 Rose, 369.

By whom made.]—Where partners are petitioning creditors, one of them may make the affidavit. Ex parte Peel, Buck, 457: S. P. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 291; 2 Rose, 172: Coop. C. C. 99.

One of several assignees may make the affidavit alone in respect of a debt due to their bankrupt. Ex parte Blakey, 1 Glyn & J. 197.

So, though such assignee be a solvent partner of the bankrupt. Id.

Defects in.]—Where, in a joint affidavit by two petitioning creditors, the amount of one of the debts was incorrectly stated, it was ordered that a supplemental affidavit should be made without new bonds. Ex parte Maugham & Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 365.

An omission to state a judgment obtained for the debt, originally by specialty or simple contract, forms no objection to the commission. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 211; 1 Rose, 288: S. P. Bryant v. Withers, 2 Rose, 8; 2 M. & S. 123.

Where a petitioning creditor made affidavit of his debt as for goods sold and delivered, although at the time he had entered up judgment in an action for the goods; upon an application for a supersedeas, it was contended that he had not made affidavit of the "truth and reality of his debt," but the objections were overruled. Id.

2. Bond of Petitioning Creditor.

Statutes.]—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 13, the petitioning creditor must also give a bond to the Chancellor in the penalty of 200*l.*, conditioned for proving his debt as well before the commissioners as upon any trial at law when necessary, and for proving an act of bankruptcy, and to proceed on the commission.

And the same is necessary for a fiat, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 12.

And if the debt be not really due, or if no act of bankruptcy be proved, or if the commission was taken out fraudulently or maliciously, the Chancellor may, on petition of the bankrupt, upon examination, order satisfaction for the damage, and, for the better recovery of the same, assign the bond to the bankrupt, who may sue on it in his own name. Id.

It is not necessary that the bond and affidavit should be of the same date. Ex parte Maugham & Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 365.

By whom given.]—The bond is to be given by the petitioning creditor who makes the affidavit. Ex parte Barrow, 3 Ves. jun. 554.

Where partners are petitioning creditors, the practice is for one of them to make the affidavit of the debt, and the partner making the affidavit alone enters into the bond to the great seal. Ex parte Peele, Buck, 457: S. P. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 2 Rose, 172; 19 Ves. jun. 291; Coop. C. C. 99.

So it may be given by one only of several assignees for a debt due to the bankrupt. Ex parte Blakey, 1 Glyn & J. 197.

Even where the obligor is a solvent partner of the bankrupt as well as his assignee. Id.

And where husband and wife are petitioning creditors, the bond is given by the husband alone. Ramsay v. George, 1 M. & S. 176; 1 Rose, 108.

The husband must join in a docket by a feme covert upon a debt due to her in autre droit. Ex parte Mogg, 2 Glyn & J. 397.

3. Assignment of Bond.

The jurisdiction in bankruptcy to assign the bond, being with reference to the bankrupt confined to the case of malice, and conclusive, the Lord Chancellor, in a case of strong suspicion only, would not assign the bond, but superseded the commission with costs, without prejudice to an action. Ex parte Lane, 11 Ves. jun. 415.

The assignment of the bond by the Chancellor is conclusive evidence of fraud or malice, in an action brought on such bond; it is not necessary to state in a declaration on such bond, that the commission was fraudulently or maliciously sued out. Smith v. Broomhead, 7 T. R. 300: S. P. Holmes v. Wainwright, 1 Swans. 20.

Where a commission was taken out fraudulently or maliciously, the Chancellor might, under stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, order a specific sum, by way of damages, to be paid by the petitioning creditor to the bankrupt, or assign the bond given by the former, and enable the latter to recover the whole penalty of the bond. Id.

And it seems that such a bond is not within the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, by which a jury is to assess damages: because, by the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, the damages are to be ascertained by the Lord Chancellor; although he may assist his conscience, by directing an inquiry before a master, or an issue at law. Smitley v. Edmonson, 3 East, 22. And see Brown v. Chapman, 3 Burr. 1418; 1 W. Black. 427.

In an action by the assignee of the bond, assigned by the Chancellor to a creditor of the bankrupt, on the ground of the commission having been sued out fraudulently, wherein the defendant by his plea set forth the order for the assignment, whereby it appeared that he had previously ordered a certain sum, received by the defendant of the bankrupt, to be refunded, and further ordered the bond to be assigned to the plaintiff, and the costs of the petition to be paid by the defendant; and the plea averred payment before the suing out of the plaintiff's writ of the particular sum mentioned, and the costs, in satisfaction of the damages sustained by the bankrupt's estate, and that neither the plaintiff nor the bankrupt's estate had sustained any other damage ultra the sums so paid to the plaintiff:—Held, that such plea was no answer to the action; for, by such order of the Lord Chancellor, must be understood that the whole penalty of the bond was assigned to the plaintiff, as creditor and assignee of the estate under a second commission, (and therefore a party grieved by the first fraudulent commission), by way of satisfaction, in damages for the injury sustained. But it was also considered to be competent to the Lord Chancellor to review his former order, even after judgment for the plaintiff for the whole penalty, and to direct the whole, or any part of such penalty, to be applied accordingly. Id.

An action on the case is a waiver of a right of action on the bond, and to restore that right the agreement of the parties must be unequivocal. Holmes v. Wainwright, 1 Swans. 20.

A creditor aggrieved by the issuing of a fraudulent commission could not, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 23, call for an assignment of the bond given to the Chancellor. Ex parte Bumford, 2 Madd. 1.

Where the conduct of the petitioning creditor, though improper in swearing to a bankruptcy which he could not establish, was not such as to justify an assignment of the bond, upon which the whole penalty must be recovered, the Lord Chancellor would have ordered it to stand as a security for the costs to be ascertained in an issue, but the creditor having become a bankrupt, to obviate the objection that the costs so ascertained would be a debt liquidated after the bankruptcy, a specific sum was named. Ex parte Rimene, 14 Ves. jun. 600.

The correctness of the bond cannot be disputed at Nisi Prius. Felke v. Scudder, 3 C. & P. 232—Best.

4. Several Applications for Dockets.

Where two or more persons apply at the same time to strike a docket, and both are equally prepared, the preference is given by lot; but where only one is prepared the commission was issued to him. Order, Eldon, 13th April, 1815.

And where instructions to strike a docket were received from the country on a Sunday by a solicitor, who, before the bankrupt office opened on the following morning received similar instructions from another client, it was held that they must draw lots, as according to the course upon two applications at the same instant. Haye's case, 13 Ves. jun. 197.

Where two or more dockets are struck, the first regular docket in the office has the priority. Ex parte Stocker, 1 Glyn & J. 249.

The drawing of lots, as directed in the order in bankruptcy of the 29th December, 1806, only applies to those cases where both parties are at the time prepared to issue a commission forthwith. Where one party was not prepared to certify respecting the intended commissioners, as required by the order of the 25th July, 1817, the other was held entitled to the commission. Ex parte Hardman, 1 J. & W. 293.

If, after drawing lots in the bankrupt office, it is discovered that two of the commissioners named by the party in whose favour the lot fell are creditors, the court will prefer the other docket. Ex parte Kemp, 1 Mont. 257.

An affidavit not sworn before the solicitor preferred where there are two dockets. Anon. 1 Mont. 136.

A commission ordered at a private seal, will, in the vacation, be preferred. Ex parte Atkinson, 1 Mont. 137.

Where, from the hurry of business, the clerk at the bankrupt office omitted to make the entry of an application for a docket, (according to the directions of the general order), previously to the application of another solicitor, the first solicitor was held to be nevertheless entitled to the commission. Anon. 2 Rose, 323.

If two dockets are struck, one omitting to state that the bankrupt traded in London, and the other giving a perfect description, the court will prefer the perfect description, although the majority of trade and creditors are in the country, where both commissions were intended to be worked. Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. 260.

Where a party in the country applied to strike a docket, and issue a fiat, on the 14th January, on papers sent from Worcester, the day after the issuing of the orders of the 12th January, which papers used the word "commission" instead of "fiat," and, upon the application being refused at the office, the papers were sent back to the country to be altered, and in the mean time another party applied for and struck a docket:—Held, that the first applicant was entitled to the fiat upon his amended papers. Ex parte Leckmere, 1 Deac. & Chit. 10.

A solicitor, having struck a docket, ordered within the regular time a commission to be sealed, but, through the mistake of his clerk, the fees were not paid to the secretary. Another solicitor then struck a docket against the same bankrupt. The Lord Chancellor held, that the mistake of the clerk was a sufficient ground for the court to uphold the first commission, as the general order, 29th Dec. 1806, ought not to be construed too strictly. Ex parte Slatford, Buck, 1: S. P. Ex parte Evans, 1 Rose, 162.

A docket struck after the Vice-Chancellor had pronounced an order for the superseding of a commission against the same party, on the production of the necessary consents, but before the order was drawn up or the consents produced, held regular. Ex parte Bower, 1 Glyn & J. 262.

5. Fiats in Town or Country.

Under stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, the commissions were the same in effect, whether to be worked in the country or in town; and under that statute it was held that leave of the court must be obtained to issue a country commission against a London trader. Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. 260.

Now, the fiat in town cases authorizes the petitioning creditor to prosecute his complaint in the court of bankruptcy, or in country cases before such other persons as may be nominated in the fiat, as commissioners for that purpose. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, ss. 12 & 14.

Unless there be a competition for a town or country commission, the court would not interfere. Ex parte Bowdler, 1 Rose, 48.

Where all the creditors lived in London except two, a London fiat was directed instead of the country commission already issued, which last was ordered to be impounded. Ex parte Johnson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 221.

Where a bankrupt has houses of business at L. and M., the majority of creditors living at M., an order is necessary to obtain a country commission at M. Ex parte Wood, 1 Deac. & Chit. 410.

An affidavit in support of an application that a town fiat might be annulled, and a country commission issue in lieu thereof, stating "that the major part in number of the creditors resided at B., and although the bankrupt resided in L., yet it would be a great saving to the estate to allow this course," is not sufficient, as the majority mentioned in the affidavit might be produced merely by the smallest difference in amount or value. Ex parte Leonard, 2 Deac. & Chit. 182.

It was not sufficient upon an application to seal a commission, as a country commission, for the affidavit to state that the major part in value of the creditors did not live within fifty miles of London, and that the major part of the creditors resided at a certain town in the country. In re Child, Buck, 425.

VIII. FIAT OR COMMISSION.

1. Issuing.

Statutes.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 12, power is given to the Chancellor to issue a commission of bankruptcy on a petition in writing of any creditor of a trader who has committed an act of bankruptcy.

Now, in all similar cases, by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 12, the Chancellor is to issue his fiat in lieu of a commission, which authorizes the creditor to prosecute his complaint in the court of Bankruptcy, or before the persons mentioned in the fiat. The creditor is to proceed by petition, and to file an affidavit of his debt, and give a bond, as was before required by law.

All laws and statutes, rules and orders, relating to bankruptcy, to extend as far as applicable to fiats, as if every fiat were a commission. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 16.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 13, all fiats are to be filed and entered of record in the court of Bankruptcy.

Every fiat to be prosecuted in the court of bankruptcy is to be filed of record in the registrar's office within seven days from the date thereof, and no appointment for the opening of any such fiat shall be made until it shall have been so filed. Reg. Gen., H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 D. & C. xxv.

Proof of a commission having issued under the "great seal of Great Britain and Ireland," was no variance from an averment that it issued under the "great seal of Great Britain." Res v. Bullock, 2 Leach, C. C. 996; 1 Taunt. 71.

Where bankruptcy is pleaded, the date of the commission, if it is subsequent to the date of the debt sued for, shall be sufficient for the defendant to rely on, at least sufficient to entitle the defendant to call on the plaintiff to prove an antecedent act of bankruptcy. Pearson v. Fletcher, 5 Esp. 90—Ellenborough.

Within what Time.—The general order of December 29th, 1806, which directed that a commission should be sealed at the next public seal, in case there should be one within seven days, meant that it should be sealed at the next immediate seal, without any discretion on the part of the bankrupt office to defer it till another seal within seven days. In re Lambert, 1 Rose, 258.

A commission must have been sealed within four days after the docket, though within less than seven days. Ex parte Hyne, 19 Ves. jun. 61.

When the fourth day after a docket struck was a holiday, the practice of the bankrupt office was to permit a docket to be struck upon the first application the next day, as, though the office was shut, the party might apply at the clerk's residence. Ex parte Cooper, 12 Ves. jun. 418.

An application for a commission on the evening of the fourth day from striking the docket, immediately before eight o'clock, the hour before shutting the office, was sufficient within the order. Nichols's case, 19 Ves. jun. 616.

Where a docket was struck on the 10th, but the commission was not bespoken till the 16th, on which day another creditor applied to strike a docket, but after the first commission was bespoken:—Held, that the first creditor's right to have his commission issue was preferable to that of the second. In re Graham, Buck, 529.

If a petitioning creditor did not proceed to issue the commission till after a month had elapsed from the striking of the docket, he must have made an affidavit that the debt had not been satisfied before the commission could be issued. Ex parte Buckley, Buck, 367.

A commission ordered to be opened near four months after its date; the delay arising from the bankrupt, not the petitioning creditor. Harrison's case, 3 Ves. & B. 174.

Enlargement of Time.—Time of opening a fiat enlarged, where the witness in support of the bankruptcy keeps out of the way. Ex parte Fox, 1 Deac. & Chit. 572; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 264.

Particularly where it was by concert with the bankrupt. In re Hayes, 1 Glyn & J. 255.

But the time for opening a fiat will not be enlarged on the application of the petitioning creditor, to give time to effect a composition, although the court might interpose on a petition by the bankrupt for that purpose. Ex parte Downton, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 264; 1 Deac. & Chit. 111; S. P. In re Moody, 2 Deac. & Chit. 210.

Under special circumstances the time was enlarged, and a petition was answered for the same day on which the order was applied for. Ex parte Moody, 1 Deac. & Chit. 34.

Where a fiat was not prosecuted in due time, on account of a mistake in the name of the bankrupt, an order is necessary to enable the same party to sue out a new fiat. Ex parte Edwards, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 263; 1 Deac. & Chit. 531.

Where the time expired through the contrivance of the bankrupt, the petitioning creditor obtained leave to strike a new docket. In re Matthews, 1 Deac. & Chit. 35.

In a case of emergency, a petition will be answered instant. Id.

Where a bankrupt resided so far off, that, before his signature to a petition to enlarge the time (to which he assented) could be obtained, the time for opening the fiat would expire, his solicitor was allowed to sign the petition on his behalf. Ex parte Craddock, 1 Deac. & Chit. 487.

By and to whom.—An attorney of K. B. may sue out a commission of bankruptcy without being a solicitor in Chancery. Wilkinson v. Diggle, 2 D. & R. 302; 1 B. & C. 158; And see Ford v. Webb, 3 B. & B. 241; 7 Moore, 54.

For, any person, not a solicitor, may take out a commission. Ex parte Smith, 19 Ves. jun. 473.

Upon making an appointment for opening a fiat, the registrar shall, in the presence of the attorney or solicitor, write upon the face of the fiat the name of the commissioner before whom the same is to be opened. Reg. Gen. in bank. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxv.

Each fiat shall be prosecuted before the commissioner so appointed, unless otherwise especially ordered by the Court of Review, or one of the judges thereof. Reg. Gen. in bank. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxv.

Where a commission (issued before the new act) had been transferred to one commissioner, and a fiat against the same bankrupt had been directed to another, the court ordered the commission to be transferred to the commissioner to whom the fiat was directed. In re Knox, 1 Deac. & Chit. 317.

A commission directed to new commissioners could not issue after judgment by another list of commissioners against the bankruptcy. Ex parte Nicholls, 2 Glyn & J. 266.

2. Operation of Commission.

(a) Generally.

An instrument, although the great seal has been affixed to it, is inoperative while it remains in the hands of the Lord Chancellor; but a delivery to a messenger, although the instrument is not taken out of the bankrupt office, is a delivery to the party. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Rose, 380; 1 Ves. & B. 34.

Quere, whether the striking a docket merely can be considered the issuing a commission within the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24, a penal clause? Ex parte Paxton, 15 Ves. jun. 462.

The effect of a commission is, that the creditor suing it out thereby elects to proceed for his debt under the commission, and not by action; and relinquishes his proceedings by action if he has taken any. Ex parte Prowse, 1 Glyn & J. 92.

And, if necessary, he may be enjoined from proceeding at law. Ex parte Bozannet, 1 Rose, 184.

Before 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, a commission had no effect in passing the property of a bankrupt, unless there was an assignment. Warner v. Barber, 2 Moore, 71; 8 Taunt. 176.

The bankrupt represented his estate until assignees were chosen. Ex parte Moline, 19 Ves. jun. 217.

A commission differs from an execution in vesting all rights and possibilities of the bankrupt, the latter passes only what the sheriff seizes. Ex parte Brown, 2 Ves. jun. 68.

The committee of the person of a lunatic is not to be removed in consequence of his bankruptcy. Ex parte Proctor, 1 Swans. 531.

Whether, in general, bankruptcy revokes a submission to arbitration is not settled—Per Lord Tenterden. Marsh v. Wood, 9 B. & C. 659; 4 M. & R. 504. And see Snook v. Hellyer, 2 Chit. 43; Andrews v. Palmer, 4 B. & A. 250.

Bankruptcy is not a forfeiture under a clause in a will against alienation. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 2 Rose, 445; Coop. C. C. 259.

Nor is it a revocation of a devise of realty. Charman v. Charman, 14 Ves. jun. 580.

The bankruptcy of one partner operates as a dissolution of the partnership. Crawshaw v. Collins, 15 Ves. jun. 218.

A power of attorney to execute the indorsement of a sale on a ship's register, when she returns home, is not revoked by the bankruptcy of the party giving the power. Dixon v. Esart, Buck, 94.

A London house guaranteed certain payments to be made by a Paris house. The solvency of the Paris house becoming doubtful, the London house duly authorized the creditor to act according to the best of his discretion in the settlement of the affairs; the creditor, accordingly, went to Paris, and entered into a composition for the debt with the Paris house. After the departure of the creditor from England, and previous to the composition, a commission of bankruptcy issued against the London house, of which fact the parties to the composition were ignorant:—Held, that the bankruptcy did not determine the authority. Ex parte Mac Donnell, Buck, 399.

A covenant not to sue, arrest, impound, or prosecute a debtor, or his goods or chattels, lands or tenements, on account of a debt, extends to the issuing of a commission, which is a species of suit and proceeding against the goods of the bankrupt. Small v. Marwood, 9 B. & C. 300; 4 M. & R. 181.

3. Form of Commission.

(a) Statement of Trading.

It is not necessary, under the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, that the particular species of trading should be set forth in the commission; and it was held that a commission would be good, if, instead of calling them bankers, the bankrupts had been described as esquires or gentlemen. Bernasconi v. Farebrother, 10 B. & C. 549.

So, where a commission stated that "A. and B., bankers, being traders according to the provisions of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, some time since became bankrupts, within the intent and meaning of that statute:"—Held, a sufficient allegation that the bankrupts had traded, and had committed an act of bankruptcy since the passing and within the operation of that statute. Bernasconi v. Glengall, (Earl), 1 M. & R. 326.

And where the business of a banker had ceased before the 6 Geo. 4, the word "banker" was considered as descriptive of the person only, and it was held that the commission might be supported by evidence of other trading. Id.

So, although a trader was described in the commission as a money scrivener only, and the general words "dealer and chapman" were omitted; yet it was considered competent to a plaintiff to support the commission by proof of any species of trading. Smith v. Sandilands, Gow, 171—Holroyd.

Where a commission was issued against a trader, describing him as "a dealer in cattle, and seeking his trade of living by buying and selling," without the words "dealer and chapman;" and at the trial of an action of trespass brought by him against the assignees under the commission, evidence was received of a dealing in hops, and a verdict was found for the defendants as such assignees, which was afterwards set aside, and a new trial granted, on the ground that it might operate as a surprise on the plaintiff:—Held, on a second trial, that such evidence was properly admitted, as the words "dealer in cattle" were descriptive of the person only; and that the general statement that the bankrupt got his living by "buying and selling," was sufficient to admit evidence of any trading whatever. Hale v. Small, 4 Moore, 415; 2 B. & B. 25, overruling S. C. 3 Moore, 58; 8 Taunt. 730.

Where commission and affidavit described the bankrupt only as a waterman, it was supported by the statement that he got his living by buying and selling. Ex parte Herbert, 2 Ves. & B. 399.

"Dealer and chapman" is a sufficient description of trading to support a commission. Id.

A fraudulent misdescription of the trading is a ground for staying the certificate. Ex parte Tanner, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 391.

(b) Description of Bankrupt.

His Name.—The bankrupt should have been described correctly by his name; therefore a commission against a person by the name of Laidlon, was superseded at the instance of a creditor who had taken out a commission by his right name of Laidlow, although the bankrupt had used as well one name as the other. But quære, whether the commission would have been superseded at the instance of the bankrupt himself? Ex parte Schofield, 2 Rose, 246.

An order was made for a commission against James Stevenson, otherwise Stephenson, in an urgent case. Stevenson's case, 19 Ves. jun. 277.

A commission against A., describing him to be partner with B., is a separate commission. Ex parte Woodmason, 1 Cox, 308.

If a commission issue against a man by a wrong name, under which he obtains his certificate, while the commission remains unsuperseded, a plea of bankruptcy to an action brought against him by his right name will be supported by production of the certificate, and proof that he is really the person against whom the commission issued. Stevens v. Elizee, 3 Camp. 256; 1 Rose, 360—Ellenborough.

A commission issues against a man of the name of "Wicks," under which name he traded, and contracted debts, although "Knox" was his real name. Two years afterwards, and before the bankrupt had passed his last examination under the commission, a fiat is issued against him by his right name, the commission was preferred to the subsequent fiat. Ex parte Sambourne, 2 Deac. & Chit. 22. And see Ex parte Smith, 2 Rose, 25.

His Residence.—It was necessary that the bankrupt should be described of the place where he was generally known. Ex parte Shadbolt, 1 Mont. 89.

And it was held that a commission wholly omitting to describe the bankrupt of the place where he had chiefly been known as a trader was bad, though his last place of trading were correctly described. Ex parte Parry, 2 Glyn & J. 225.

So, the omission to describe the bankrupt as of the place where he actually traded, was considered fatal. Ex parte Beadles, 2 Glyn & J. 243.

Where the bankrupts were described as "late of the Kent Road, coal merchants," and it appeared that they had quitted that trade in 1826, and had since been separately engaged in farming:—Held, that the description was insufficient, and that the commission should be superseded. Ex parte Day, 1 Mont. & Mac. 208.

A commission will not be superseded on account of a misdescription of the bankrupt, if he is well known as described in the commission. Ex parte Horsley, 2 Madd. 11.

Bankrupts should be described in the commission according to their legal or known description; where the bankrupts were described as of Iron Wharf, London and Wolverhampton, they having no residence or establishment at Wolverhampton, the commission was superseded. Ex parte Beckwith, 1 Glyn & J. 20.

If a bankrupt be described in the commission as he described himself in carrying on his trade, and, according to the popular description of his residence, the commission will not be superseded, because it happens not to be the legal description of his residence. Ex parte Wride, 2 Glyn & J. 99.

"L. H. M., of Finsbury Square, in the city of London," instead of the county of Middlesex, is not a material misdescription. Ex parte Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

(c) Amendment.

A fiat cannot be altered or amended after it has been opened. Ex parte Todd, 1 Mont. 455; 1 Deac. & Chit. 321: S. P. Ex parte Thwaites, 13 Ves. jun. 825.

Nor could a commission be resealed, even to correct a mere clerical error, after any dealing upon it, as if it had been opened. Fisher's case, 10 Ves. jun. 190: S. P. In re Stephenson, Mont. 116; Ex parte Horrocks, 1 Glyn & J. 368. But see 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 98.

A petition to have the teste altered and a commission resealed, under which no proceedings had taken place, in order to let in a subsequent act of bankruptcy, was dismissed. Ex parte Cheeswright, 1 Rose, 228; 18 Ves. jun. 480.
